``atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti ... pe ....

atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatÄ• rammaá¹‡akathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. navamavaggo

(90) 7. vitakkÄ• nupatitakathÄ•

<562> sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vicÄ• rÄ• nup pÄ«tÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ sukhÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ dukkhÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ somanassÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ doma upekkhÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ \Ne 337/ saddhÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ vÄ«riyÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ satÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• nupatitaá¹ƒ rÄ• gÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ dosÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anottappÄ• nupatitan
... pe ....

sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atthi avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ
haÃ±ci atthi avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitaâ€™â€™ nti \Se 443/.

sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atthi avitakko avicÄ• ro samÄ• dh atthi avitakko avicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nu sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu tayo samÄ• dhÄ« vuttÄ• bhagava samÄ• dhi, avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi, avitakko avicÄ• ro samÄ• dhÄ«ti {DN III 305, tayo samÄ• dhÄ« vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• --- savitakko savicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi, avitakko vicÄ• ra avicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitaâ€™â€ vitakkÄ• nupatitakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. navamavaggo

(91) 8. vitakkavipphÄ• rasaddakathÄ•

<563> sabbaso \Be 304/ vitakkayato vicÄ• rayato vitakkavipphÄ• ro saddoti? Ä• mantÄ• . s phassavipphÄ• ro saddo, sabbaso vedayato \Ee 414/ vedanÄ• vipphÄ• ro saddo, sabbaso s saddo, sabbaso cetayato cetanÄ• vipphÄ• ro saddo, sabbaso cintayato cittavipphÄ• ro \Ne

sarato sativipphÄ• ro saddo, sabbaso pajÄ• nato \Se 444/ paÃ±Ã±Ä• vipphÄ• ro saddoti? n
....

sabbaso vitakkayato vicÄ• rayato vitakkavipphÄ• ro saddoti? Ä• mantÄ• . vitakkavipphÄ• r sotasmiá¹ƒ paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati sotassa Ä• pÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... vitakkavipphÄ• ro saddo na sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyo na sotasmiá¹ƒ paá¹-ihaÃ±Ã±ati na sotassa Ä•
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci vitakkavipphÄ• ro saddo na sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyo na sotasmiá¹ƒ paá¹-ihaÃ± Ä• gacchati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbaso vitakkayato vicÄ• rayato vitakkavipphÄ• r vitakkavipphÄ• rasaddakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. navamavaggo

(92) 9. na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• tikathÄ•

<564> na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aphassakassa vÄ• cÄ• avedanakassa v acetanakassa vÄ• cÄ• acittakassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu saphass savedanakassa vÄ• cÄ• sasaÃ±Ã±akassa vÄ• cÄ• sacetanakassa vÄ• cÄ• sacittakassa saphassakassa vÄ• cÄ• ... pe ... sacittakassa vÄ• cÄ• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``na yath vÄ• cÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

na \Be 305/ \Se 445/ \Ee 415/ yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entass (Ee), anÄ• vajjantassa (Ce Se Katthaci) Kv 484 passitabbaá¹ƒ} vÄ• cÄ• ... pe ... anÄ• bhog appaá¹‡idahantassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa vÄ•
... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa vÄ• cÄ• Ä• b paá¹‡idahantassa vÄ• cÄ• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• â€™â€™ na \Ne 339/ yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vÄ• cÄ• cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• saha ekuppÄ• dÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci vÄ• cÄ• cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• cittena sahajÄ• no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . na bhaá¹‡itukÄ• mo bhaá¹‡ati, na kathetukÄ• m Ä• lapati, na voharitukÄ• mo voharatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu bhaá¹‡itukÄ• kathetukÄ• mo katheti, Ä• lapitukÄ• mo Ä• lapati, voharitukÄ• mo voharatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
bhaá¹‡ati, kathetukÄ• mo katheti, Ä• lapitukÄ• mo Ä• lapati, voharitukÄ• mo voharati, no ca ``na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<565> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atthi

bhaá¹‡issÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡ati, ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kathessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ t
Ä• lapissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ Ä• lapati, ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ voharissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi koci ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡issÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡ ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ voharissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ voharati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``na
vÄ• cÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

na yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. navamavaggo

(93) 10. na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammantikathÄ•

<566> na \Be 306/ yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aphassakassa kÄ• yakam kÄ• yakammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu saphassakassa kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ ... p kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saphassakassa kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sacittakass re vattabbe --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammaâ€™â€™ nti.

na \Ne 340/ yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entassa kÄ• yakam appaá¹‡idahantassa kÄ• yakammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entass
... paá¹‡idahantassa kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa kÄ• yakamm paá¹‡idahantassa kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yak

na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ cittasamuá¹-á¹-hÄ cittena saha ekuppÄ• danti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 447/. haÃ±ci \Ee 417/ kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ cittasa sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ cittena saha ekuppÄ• daá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . na abhikkamitukÄ• mo abhikkamati, na p paá¹-ikkamati, na Ä• loketukÄ• mo Ä• loketi, na viloketukÄ• mo viloketi, na samiÃ±jitukÄ• m pasÄ• retukÄ• mo pasÄ• retÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... nanu abhikkamitukÄ• mo ab paá¹-ikkamitukÄ• mo paá¹-ikkamati, Ä• loketukÄ• mo Ä• loketi, viloketukÄ• mo viloketi, sam pasÄ• retukÄ• mo pasÄ• retÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci abhikkamitukÄ• mo abhikkamati ... pe pasÄ• reti, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammaâ€™â€™ nti.

<567> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nan gacchissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aÃ±Ã±atra gacchati ... pe ... ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pasÄ• ressÄ• mÄ«â€ pasÄ• retÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi koci ``aÃ±Ã±atra \Be 307/ gacchissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ pe ... ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pasÄ• ressÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pasÄ• reti, tena vata re vattab kÄ• yakammaâ€™â€™ nti.

na yathÄ• cittassa kÄ• yakammantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

9. navamavaggo

(94) 11. atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatasamannÄ• gatakathÄ•

<568> atÄ«tena \Se 448/ \Ne 341/ samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atÄ«taá¹ƒ niruddha vipariá¹‡ataá¹ƒ atthaá¹…gataá¹ƒ abbhatthaá¹…gatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \Ee 418/ atÄ«ta vipariá¹‡ataá¹ƒ atthaá¹…gataá¹ƒ abbhatthaá¹…gataá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atÄ«ten ti.

anÄ• gatena samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ajÄ• taá¹ƒ abhÅ«taá¹ƒ asa anabhinibbattaá¹ƒ apÄ• tubhÅ«tanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ajÄ• taá¹ƒ abhÅ«taá anibbattaá¹ƒ anabhinibbattaá¹ƒ apÄ• tubhÅ«taá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``anÄ• gatena

<569> atÄ«tena rÅ«pakkhandhena samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatena rÅ«pakkhandhena saman rÅ«pakkhandhena samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ«hi rÅ«pakkhandhehi samannÄ• gatoti?
atÄ«tehi paÃ±cahi khandhehi samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatehi paÃ±cahi khandhehi samannÄ• khandhehi samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . pannarasahi khandhehi samannÄ• gatoti? na hev

atÄ«tena cakkhÄ• yatanena samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatena cakkhÄ• yatanena samannÄ• ga samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ«hi cakkhÄ• yatanehi samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab 449/ dvÄ• dasahi Ä• yatanehi samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatehi dvÄ• dasahi Ä• yatanehi saman dvÄ• dasahi Ä• yatanehi samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . chattiá¹ƒsÄ• yatanehi samannÄ• ga
pe ....

atÄ«tÄ• ya cakkhudhÄ• tuyÄ• samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatÄ• ya cakkhudhÄ• tuyÄ• samann cakkhudhÄ• tuyÄ• samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Be 308/ \Ee 419/. tÄ«hi cakkhudhÄ• tÅ«h vattabbe ... pe ... atÄ«tÄ• hi aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasahi dhÄ• tÅ«hi samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatÄ• hi aá samannÄ• gato \Ne 342/, paccuppannÄ• hi aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasahi dhÄ• tÅ«hi samannÄ• gatoti?
catupaÃ±Ã±Ä• sadhÄ• tÅ«hi samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atÄ«tena cakkhundriyena samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatena cakkhundriyena samannÄ• gato, p samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ«hi cakkhundriyehi samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe bÄ• vÄ«satindriyehi samannÄ• gato, anÄ• gatehi bÄ• vÄ«satindriyehi samannÄ• gato, pacc samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . chasaá¹-á¹-hindriyehi samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

<570> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatehi samannÄ• gatoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . na aá¹-á¹-havimokkhajhÄ• yÄ« catunnaá¹ƒ jhÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ nikÄ• malÄ• bhÄ« navannaá¹ƒ anu 450/ lÄ• bhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi aá¹-á¹-havimokkhajhÄ• yÄ« catunnaá¹ƒ jhÄ• nÄ• navannaá¹ƒ anupubbavihÄ• rasamÄ• pattÄ«naá¹ƒ lÄ• bhÄ«, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``atÄ« samannÄ• gatoâ€™â€™ ti.

atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatasamannÄ• gatakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

navamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

Ä• nisaá¹ƒsadassÄ• vissa saá¹ƒyojanÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• naá¹ƒ, amatÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, anusayÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , evamevaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, atÄ«tÄ• nÄ sabbaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ vitakkÄ• nupatitaá¹ƒ, sabbaso vitakkayato vicÄ• rayato vitakkavipphÄ• ro yathÄ• cittassa vÄ• cÄ• , tatheva kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatehi samannÄ• gatoti.

á¹• 11 10. dasamavaggo

(95) 1. nirodhakathÄ•

<571> upapattesiye \Ee 421/ \Ne 343/ paÃ±cakkhandhe aniruddhe kiriyÄ• paÃ±cakkhandh
Ä• mantÄ• . dasannaá¹ƒ khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, dasa khandhÄ• sammukh 451/ \Be 309/? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dasannaá¹ƒ khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dv samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

upapattesiye paÃ±cakkhandhe aniruddhe kiriyÄ• cattÄ• ro khandhÄ• uppajjantÄ«ti? Ä• m khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, nava khandhÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gaccha
... navannaá¹ƒ khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, nava khandhÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• va dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na heva upapattesiye paÃ±cakkhandhe aniruddhe kiriyÄ• Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . c samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, cha khandhÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ khandhÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, cha khandhÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchan

phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab

<572> upapattesiye \Ee 422/ paÃ±cakkhandhe niruddhe maggo uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• laá¹…kato maggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

nirodhakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(96) 2. rÅ«paá¹ƒ maggotikathÄ•

<573> maggasamaá¹…gissa \Se 452/ \Ne 344/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• ramma
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• Ä• bhogo samannÄ• hÄ• ro manasikÄ• ro cetanÄ• patthanÄ• paá¹‡idhÄ«
... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ
anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi; no ca vata re vattabbe ``maggasamaá¹…gissa rÅ«paá¹ƒ maggoâ€™â€™ ti.

sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ..
vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ
anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi; no ca vata re vattabbe maggoâ€™â€™ ti.

sammÄ• kammanto \Be 310/ ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá
... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä•
... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 423/. haÃ±ci anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ
no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggoâ€™â€™ ti.

<574> sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi maggo, sÄ• ca sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• .
Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggo, sÄ• ca sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-an 453/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi maggo, sÄ• ca sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggo, so Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• saá¹…kappo sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... pe ... sammÄ• sati ... pe ....

sammÄ• samÄ• dhi maggo, so ca sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... pa sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggo, sÄ• ca sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... p hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi maggo, so ca sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä•
paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggo, so ca sÄ
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggo, sÄ• ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi maggo, sÄ• ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggo, sÄ• ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• va paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... sammÄ• maggo, so ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hev
....

sammÄ• kammanto \Se 454/ ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggo, so ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, na pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi ... sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... sammÄ• vÄ
... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi maggo, so ca anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe .
vattabbe ... pe ....

<575> na \Be 311/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``maggasamaá¹…gissa rÅ«paá¹ƒ maggoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• sammÄ• kammanto sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• san vata re vattabbe --- ``maggasamaá¹…gissa rÅ«paá¹ƒ maggoâ€™â€™ ti.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ maggotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(97) 3. paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa maggakathÄ•

<576> paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa \Ne 346/ atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ
uppannavatthukÄ• uppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• uppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa a nanu paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• purejÄ• tavatthukÄ• purejÄ• tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ajjhattikavatth

asambhinnavatthukÄ• asambhinnÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• nÄ• nÄ• vatthukÄ• nÄ• nÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä gocaravisayaá¹ƒ \Se 455/ paccanubhonti, na asamannÄ• hÄ• rÄ• uppajjanti, na amanasikÄ abbokiá¹‡á¹‡Ä• uppajjanti, na apubbaá¹ƒ acarimaá¹ƒ uppajjanti, na aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa s nanu paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• anÄ• bhogÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä•
--- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<577> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhu Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti?

paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti?
paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? Ä• ma ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva su vattabbe --- ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€

<578> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa \Be 312/ atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ
atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ee 426/ \Se 456/ phassaá¹ƒ Ä Ä• rabbha ... saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha \Ne 347/ ... cetanaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... cittaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
... kÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... saddaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ± Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggab manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuvi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti?
manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phass Ä• rabbha ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... vedanaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<579> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• â vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ• na nimitta nÄ• nubyaÃ±janaggÄ• hÄ« ... pe ... sotena saddaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• ... pe ... ghÄ• nena gandhaá¹ƒ jivhÄ• ya rasaá¹ƒ sÄ• yitvÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusitvÄ• na nimittaggÄ nÄ• nubyaÃ±janaggÄ• hÄ«â€™â€™ ti! {MN I 349; AN a IV 37} attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti.

paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa maggakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(98) 4. paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• kusalÄ• pi akusalÄ• pÄ«tikathÄ•

<580> paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• \Ee 427/ kusalÄ• pi akusalÄ• pÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu paÃ
uppannavatthukÄ• uppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä•

uppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• kusalÄ• pi aku paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• \Ne 348/ purejÄ• tavatthukÄ• purejÄ• tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ajjhattikav
asambhinnavatthukÄ• asambhinnÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• nÄ• nÄ• vatthukÄ• nÄ• nÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä paccanubhonti, na asamannÄ• hÄ• rÄ• uppajjanti, na amanasikÄ• rÄ• uppajjanti, na abbol apubbaá¹ƒ acarimaá¹ƒ uppajjanti, na aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa samanantarÄ• uppajjanti, nanu anÄ• bhogÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• anÄ• bhogÄ• , no ca vata re v ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• kusalÄ• pi akusalÄ• pÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<581> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±a hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti?
paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. cakkhuÃ suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca \Se cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? natthi. ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca rÅ« cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 428/. haÃ±ci ``cak uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttanto, no ca vata re vattabbe --- `` suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti.

<582> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi á Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... cittaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... ca
... kÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... saddaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppaj
vattabbe ... pe ....

manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampi, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ Ä• r cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampi, cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ Ä 459/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampi, manoviÃ±Ã± atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalam cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gataá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampi, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbl
... pe ... kÄ• yaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha \Ne 349/ ... saddaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha \Be 314/ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-hal uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampi, cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä
... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<583> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• kusalÄ• pi akusalÄ• pÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu cakkhunÄ• \Ee 429/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ• nimittagg nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti ... pe ... sotena saddaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• ... pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti ... pe ... na nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti? Ä• m paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• kusalÄ• pi akusalÄ• pÄ«ti.

paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• kusalÄ• pi akusalÄ• pÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(99) 5. sÄ• bhogÄ• tikathÄ•

<584> paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• sÄ• bhogÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• uppannÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• uppannavatthukÄ• vattabbe --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• sÄ• bhogÄ• â€™â€™ ti. nanu paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä purejÄ• tÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ajjhattikavatthukÄ• bÄ• hirÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• asambhinnavatthukÄ nÄ• nÄ• vatthukÄ• nÄ• nÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• na aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa gocaravisayaá¹ƒ pacca uppajjanti, na amanasikÄ• rÄ• uppajjanti, na abbokiá¹‡á¹‡Ä• uppajjanti, na apubbaá¹ƒ aca nanu paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• na aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa samanantarÄ• uppajjantÄ«ti? Ä• m na aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa samanantarÄ• uppajjanti, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``paÃ±caviÃ± ti.

<585> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ne 350/ sÄ• bhoganti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡a uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá¹ƒ Ä• rabb Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuÃ±ca \Ee 430/ paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡a pe ... cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva su haÃ±ci ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attl re vattabbe --- ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca suÃ±Ã±ataÃ±ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™

cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ sÄ• bhoganti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Se 461/ atÄ uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ sÄ• bhoganti? Ä• man cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppa vattabbe ... pe ... manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ sÄ• bhogaá¹ƒ, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ata Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ sÄ• bhogaá¹ƒ, cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±ataá hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ee 431/ sÄ• bhogaá¹ƒ, manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ sÄ• bhogaá¹ƒ, cakkhuviÃ±Ã Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ sÄ• bhogaá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakk sÄ• bhogaá¹ƒ, cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ Ä hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<586> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• sÄ• bhogÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . n
``idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ• nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti ... pe ... na nim
pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusitvÄ• nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti ... pe ... na nimittaggÄ• h attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• sÄ• bhogÄ• ti ... pe ....

sÄ• bhogÄ• tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(100) 6. dvÄ«hisÄ«lehikathÄ•

<587> maggasamaá¹…gÄ« \Se 462/ \Ne 351/ dvÄ«hi sÄ«lehi samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• phassehi dvÄ«hi vedanÄ• hi dvÄ«hi saÃ±Ã±Ä• hi dvÄ«hi cetanÄ• hi dvÄ«hi cittehi \Be 316/
vÄ«riyehi dvÄ«hi satÄ«hi dvÄ«hi samÄ• dhÄ«hi dvÄ«hi paÃ±Ã±Ä• hi samannÄ• gatoti? na h maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena sÄ«lena samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggasamaá¹…gÄ« vedanÄ• ya lokiyÄ• ya paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya lokiyÄ• ya cetanÄ• ya lokiyena cittena lokiyÄ• ya sadd lokiyÄ• ya satiyÄ• lokiyena samÄ• dhinÄ• lokiyÄ• ya paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya samannÄ• gatoti? na h maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca sÄ«lena samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . ma lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca phassena samannÄ• gato ... pe ... lokiyÄ• ya ca lokuttarÄ• ya ca samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena sÄ«lena sam maggasamaá¹…gÄ« puthujjanoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<588> maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyÄ• ya sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ya samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• .
sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... maggasamaá¹…gÄ« samannÄ• gatoti \Se 463/? Ä• mantÄ• . maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena sammÄ• saá¹…kapp sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mena ... pe ... lokiyÄ• ya sammÄ• satiyÄ• ... pe ... lokiyena sammÄ• sam hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena sammÄ• kammantena ... pe ... loki samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyÄ• ya sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• ... pe samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyÄ• ya ca lokuttarÄ• ya ca sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ya samannÄ• gatoti?
352/ lokiyÄ• ya ca lokuttarÄ• ya ca sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ va
maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyÄ• ya ca lokuttarÄ• ya ca sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ya samannÄ• gatoti?
ca lokuttarena ca sammÄ• saá¹…kappena ... pe ... lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca sammÄ• vÄ•
... lokiyÄ• ya ca lokuttarÄ• ya ca sammÄ• satiyÄ• ... pe ... lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca samm samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

maggasamaá¹…gÄ« \Be 317/ lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca sammÄ• kammantena ... pe ... sa samannÄ• gatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyÄ• ya ca lokuttarÄ• ya ca sammÄ• hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«v Ä• mantÄ• \Se 464/. maggasamaá¹…gÄ« lokiyena ca lokuttarena ca sammÄ• saá¹…kappe lokuttarena ca sammÄ• samÄ• dhinÄ• samannÄ• gatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<589> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``maggasamaá¹…gÄ« dvÄ«hi sÄ«lehi samannÄ• gatoâ€™â€™ ti niruddhe maggo uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dussÄ«lo khaá¹‡á¸• asÄ«lo chinnasÄ«lo maggaá vattabbe ... pe ... tena hi maggasamaá¹…gÄ« dvÄ«hi sÄ«lehi samannÄ• gatoti.

dvÄ«hisÄ«lehikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(101) 7. sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikantikathÄ•

<590> sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikanti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ ... pe ... nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... cakkhÄ•
... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hev
... sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikanti? Ä• mantÄ• . phasso acetasikoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Ne 353/ ...
acetasikanti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... saddhÄ• vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sati ... pe ... samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• acetasikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ va
....

phasso cetasikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ cetasikanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ
... pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... saddhÄ• ... pe ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sati ... pe ... samÄ• dhi ... pe paÃ±Ã±Ä• cetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ cetasikanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<591> sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aniá¹-á¹-haphalanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe iá¹-á¹-haphalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci iá¹-á¹-haphalaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sÄ«laá nti.

saddhÄ• \Be 318/ iá¹-á¹-haphalÄ• , saddhÄ• cetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ iá¹-á¹-hap cetasikanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sati ... pe ... samÄ• dhi ... pe ...
iá¹-á¹-haphalÄ• , paÃ±Ã±Ä• cetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ iá¹-á¹-haphalaá¹ƒ, sÄ«laá¹ƒ
vattabbe ... pe ....

sÄ«laá¹ƒ iá¹-á¹-haphalaá¹ƒ, sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikanti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 435/. saddhÄ• iá¹-á¹-ha

acetasikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ«laá¹ƒ iá¹-á¹-haphalaá¹ƒ, sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikan vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sati ... pe ... samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• iá¹-á¹-haphalÄ• , paÃ±Ã±Ä•
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<592> sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aphalaá¹ƒ avipÄ• kanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ...
savipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saphalaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sÄ nti ... pe ....

cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ avipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ avipÄ• k vattabbe ... pe ... sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 466/ ... pe ... rÅ«pÄ• yatan phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ avipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ a
vattabbe ... pe ....

sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ savipÄ
... pe ... sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ•
rÅ«pÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ acetasikaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kanti? na heva

<593> sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• acetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi acetasikÄ• ti? na h sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• \Ee 436/ acetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... pe ... samm
... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi acetasikoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• kammanto .
acetasikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi acetasikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sam acetasikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... sammÄ• sati ... s
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi cetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• cetasikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ va
sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi cetasikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo 467/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... pe ...
sammÄ• samÄ• dhi cetasikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• cetasikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatt cetasikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo cetasikoti? na hevaá

<594> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«le uppajjitvÄ• hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikanti.

sÄ«laá¹ƒ acetasikantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(102) 8. sÄ«laá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«tikathÄ•

<595> sÄ«laá¹ƒ \Ee 437/ \Ne 355/ na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ ... nibbÄ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ«la cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . phasso na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... p cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... cetanÄ• ... saddhÄ• ...
... samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

phasso cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattal
... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... cetanÄ• \Se 468/ ... saddhÄ• ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... sati ... samÄ• dhi ... pe
cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe

<596> sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi na cittÄ• vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• saá¹…ka sammÄ• sati ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... p sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 43 cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ« sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... sammÄ• sati ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi

hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattÄ« pe ... sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sam cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sammÄ• saá¹…kappo \Ne 356/ ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... sammÄ• sati ... pe ... sammÄ• s Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo cittÄ• nup
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<597> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sÄ«laá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«le dussÄ«lo hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi sÄ«laá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«ti.

sÄ«laá¹ƒ na cittÄ• nuparivattÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(103) 9. samÄ• dÄ• nahetukathÄ•

<598> samÄ• dÄ• nahetukaá¹ƒ \Ee 439/ sÄ«laá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . samÄ• d vedanÄ• vaá¸• á¸• hati, saÃ±Ã±Ä• vaá¸• á¸• hati, cetanÄ• vaá¸• á¸• hati, cittaá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸ vaá¸• á¸• hati, vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hati, sati vaá¸• á¸• hati, samÄ• dhi vaá¸• á¸• hati, paÃ±Ã
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

samÄ• dÄ• nahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . latÄ• viya vaá¸• á¸• hati, rukkho viya vaá¸• á¸• hati, tiá¹‡aá¹ƒ viya vaá¸• á¸• hati, muÃ±japuÃ±jo viya vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«
... pe ....

<599> samÄ• dÄ• nahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ«laá¹ƒ samÄ• d vitakkentassa byÄ• pÄ• davitakkaá¹ƒ vitakkentassa vihiá¹ƒsÄ• vitakkaá¹ƒ vitakkentassa sÄ« Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be vattabbe ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• mantÄ• . kusalÄ• kusalÄ• \Ne 357/ sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukk sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ•
Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``cattÄ• rimÄ• ni, bhikkhave, s katamÄ• ni cattÄ• ri? nabhaÃ±ca, bhikkhave, pathavÄ« ca --- idaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ suvidÅ« tasmÄ• sataá¹ƒ dhammo asabbhi Ä• rakÄ• â€™â€™ ti. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee
--- ``kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ•
Ä• gacchantÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<600> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``samÄ• dÄ• nahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«â€™â€™ ti?
bhagavatÄ• --- ``Ä• rÄ• maropÄ• vanaropÄ• ... pe ... dhammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«lasampannÄ•
ti. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi samÄ• dÄ• nahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ« samÄ• dÄ• nahetukathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(104) 10. viÃ±Ã±atti sÄ«lantikathÄ•

<601> viÃ±Ã±atti sÄ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• . pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ• veramaá¹‡Ä«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ v adinnÄ• dÄ• nÄ• veramaá¹‡Ä«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• mesumicchÄ• cÄ• rÄ• vattabbe \Se 471/ ... pe ... musÄ• vÄ• dÄ• veramaá¹‡Ä«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... surÄ• merayamajjapamÄ• daá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• veramaá¹‡Ä«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

abhivÄ• danaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ, paccuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ, aÃ±jalikammaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ, sÄ
Ä• sanÄ• bhihÄ• ro \Ne 358/ sÄ«laá¹ƒ, seyyÄ• bhihÄ• ro sÄ«laá¹ƒ, pÄ• dodakÄ• bhihÄ• ro pÄ• dakathalikÄ• bhihÄ• ro sÄ«laá¹ƒ, nhÄ• ne piá¹-á¹-hiparikammaá¹ƒ sÄ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• veramaá¹‡Ä«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... surÄ• merayamajjapamÄ• daá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• v
vattabbe ... pe ....

<602> na \Be 322/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``viÃ±Ã±atti sÄ«laâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . dussilyanti?
... pe ... tena hi viÃ±Ã±atti sÄ«lanti.

viÃ±Ã±atti sÄ«lantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

10. dasamavaggo

(105) 11. aviÃ±Ã±atti dussilyantikathÄ•

<603> aviÃ±Ã±atti dussilyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• toti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• mesumicchÄ• cÄ• roti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... mus vattabbe ... pe ... surÄ• merayamajjapamÄ• daá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ..

pÄ• pakammaá¹ƒ samÄ• diyitvÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadantassa puÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca apuÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca ub vattabbe ... pe ... puÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca apuÃ±Ã±aÃ±ca ubho vaá¸• á¸• hantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 4
... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dvin
... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalÄ• kusalÄ• \Ee hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ• dhammÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä
... pe ....

kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ•
Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu \Ee 443/ vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``cattÄ• rimÄ• ni, bhik suvidÅ«ravidÅ«rÄ• ni \Ne 359/! katamÄ• ni cattÄ• ri? nabhaÃ±ca, bhikkhave, pathavÄ« ca - suvidÅ«ravidÅ«raá¹ƒ ... pe ... tasmÄ• sataá¹ƒ dhammo asabbhi Ä• rakÄ• â€™â€™ ti. atthe
tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡h dhammÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<604> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``aviÃ±Ã±atti dussilyaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu pÄ• pakam Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci pÄ• pakammaá¹ƒ samÄ• dinno Ä• si, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``aviÃ±Ã aviÃ±Ã±atti dussilyantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

dasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

upapattesiye \Be 323/ paÃ±cakkhandhe aniruddhe kiriyÄ• paÃ±cakkhandhÄ• uppajjanti, n maggo, paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa atthi maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹ paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• sÄ• bhogÄ• , maggasamaá¹…gÄ« dvÄ«hi sÄ«lehi samannÄ• gato cittÄ• nuparivatti, samÄ• dÄ• nahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ \Se 474/ vaá¸• á¸• hatÄ«ti, viÃ±Ã±attisÄ dussilyanti.

dutiyo paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sako.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

niyÄ• masaá¹…gahagatÄ• nisaá¹ƒsatÄ• ca nirodhoti {niyÄ• ma saá¹…gahagatÄ• nisaá¹ƒs nirodho maggasamaá¹…gissa paÃ±cavokÄ• rabhavoti (Ce Se Katthaci), niyÄ• ma saá¹…ga paÃ±cavokÄ• rabhavo maggasamaá¹…gissa no paÃ±cavokÄ• rabhavo (Ee) }.

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(106-108) 1-3. tissopi anusayakathÄ•

<605> anusayÄ• \Ee 444/ \Ne 360/ abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• katÄ• kiri
nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-kÄ• mogho kÄ• mayogo kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ akusalanti? Ä• akusaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ paá¹-ighapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ
abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ paá¹-ighapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-ighasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ akusalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo akusaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ

mÄ• nÄ• nusayo \Be 324/ abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . mÄ• no mÄ• napariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... mÄ• no mÄ• napariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ mÄ• nas Ä• mantÄ• . mÄ• nÄ• nusayo akusaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

diá¹-á¹-hÄ• nusayo \Ee 445/ abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-hogho diá¹-á¹-hiyo diá¹-á¹-hipariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb diá¹-á¹-hi diá¹-á¹-hogho diá¹-á¹-hiyogo diá¹-á¹-hipariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisaá¹ƒyojana Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-hÄ• nusayo akusaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

vicikicchÄ• nusayo abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . vicikicchÄ• vicikicchÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹
vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Ne 361/ vicikicchÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• nÄ«varaá Ä• mantÄ• . vicikicchÄ• nusayo akusaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

bhavarÄ• gÄ• nusayo abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . bhavarÄ• go bhavarÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... bhavarÄ• go bhavarÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ bhavarÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ akusalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . bhavarÄ• gÄ• nusayo akusaloti? na h avijjÄ• nusayo abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-h avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ...

avijjÄ• yogo \Se 476/ avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• nusayo \Ee 446/ akusaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<606> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``anusayÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . puthujjano ku vattamÄ• ne ``sÄ• nusayoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalÄ• kusalÄ• dhammÄ• Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... tena hi anusayÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti. puthujjano vattamÄ• ne ``sarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalÄ• kusalÄ• dhammÄ• sa na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... tena hi rÄ• go abyÄ• katoti.

<607> anusayÄ• \Be 325/ ahetukÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatan
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo ahetukoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ•
kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ahetukanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ sahetukanti? Ä sahetukoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo ... pe ... mÄ• nÄ• nusayo ... diá vicikicchÄ• nusayo ... bhavarÄ• gÄ• nusayo ... avijjÄ• nusayo ahetukoti? Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ avijjÄ• saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ahetukanti \Ne vattabbe \Se 477/ ... pe ... avijjÄ• \Ee 447/ avijjogho ... pe ... avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ sahetu Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• nusayo sahetukoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<608> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``anusayÄ• ahetukÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . puthujjano kusalÄ ``sÄ• nusayoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . anusayÄ• tena hetunÄ• sahetukÄ• ti? na tena hi anusayÄ• ahetukÄ• ti. puthujjano kusalÄ• byÄ• kate citte vattamÄ• ne ``sarÄ• goâ€ Ä• mantÄ• . rÄ• go tena hetunÄ• sahetukoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... tena hi rÄ• go a

<609> anusayÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá
phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-kÄ• marÄ• gasaá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ kÄ• mogho kÄ• mayogo kÄ• macchandanÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ citta
... pe ... kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• macchandanÄ«vara Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo cittasampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<610> kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . katamakkhandhapariyÄ• pann saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannoti. saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho \Ee 448/ cittavippayuttoti?
vattabbe. saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• kkhandho saÃ±Ã±
na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo \Se 478/ saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• panno cittavippayuttoti? Ä saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• panno cittavippayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• m saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• panno cittasampayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusa cittasampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• panno cittavippayutto, kÄ• marÄ• g \Ne 363/ cittasampayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto e na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . v
saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab

<611> paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo mÄ• nÄ• nusayo diá¹-á¹-hÄ• nusayo vicikicchÄ• nusayo bhavarÄ
cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavipp hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... avijjÄ• \Ee 449/ avijjogho avijjÄ• yogo avijjÄ• nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ cit Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• nusayo cittasampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<612> avijjÄ• nusayo cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . katamakkhandhapariyÄ• pannoti?
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannoti. saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho cittavippayuttoti? na hevaá
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• kkhandho saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhan

hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

avijjÄ• nusayo saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• panno cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... av saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . avijjÄ• nusayo sa cittasampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

avijjÄ• nusayo \Be 327/ saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• panno cittavippayutto, avijjÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . saá¹…khÄ cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe.

saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . v
saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? na \Ee 450/ hevaá

<613> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``anusayÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . puthujjano vattamÄ• ne ``sÄ• nusayoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . anusayÄ• tena cittena samp vattabbe. tena hi anusayÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• ti. puthujjano kusalÄ• byÄ• kate citte vattamÄ• vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÄ• go tena cittena sampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi rÄ• tissopi anusayakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(109) 4. Ã±Ä• á¹‡akathÄ•

<614> aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡e \Se 480/ vigate Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayutte citte vattamÄ• ne na vattabbaá¹ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÄ• ge vigate na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``vÄ«tarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatta aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡e vigate Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayutte citte vattamÄ• ne na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä vigate ... mohe vigate ... kilese vigate na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``nikkilesoâ€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ
....

rÄ• ge vigate vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``vÄ«tarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡e vigate vattamÄ• ne vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä«â€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dose \B vigate ... kilese vigate vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``nikkilesoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡e vig citte vattamÄ• ne vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä«â€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<615> aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡e \Be 328/ vigate Ã±Ä• á¹‡avippayutte citte vattamÄ• ne vattabbaá¹ƒ -- Ä• mantÄ• \Ne 365/. atÄ«tena Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä« niruddhena vigatena paá¹-ipassac

na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

Ã±Ä• á¹‡akathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(110) 5. Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavippayuttantikathÄ•

<616> Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Se 481/ cittavippayuttanti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ cakkh phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavippayuttanti? Ä paÃ±Ã±indriyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• balaá¹ƒ sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi dhammavicayasambojjhaá¹…go ci vattabbe ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±indriyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±Ä• balaá¹ƒ sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi dham cittasampayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittasampayuttanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe

Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavippayuttanti? Ä• mantÄ• . katamakkhandhapariyÄ• pannanti \Ee 452/?
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannanti. saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho cittavippayuttoti? na heva
saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• kkhandho saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhan hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannaá¹ƒ cittavipp paÃ±Ã±Ä• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• cittavippayuttÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• cittasampayuttÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ saá cittasampayuttanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapari cittavippayuttaá¹ƒ, paÃ±Ã±Ä• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• \Se 482/ cittasampa saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vat saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . ve
saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandho ekadeso cittasampayutto ekadeso cittavippayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab

<617> na \Ne 366/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavippayuttaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ•
cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« ``Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä«â€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . Ã±Ä• sampayuttanti? na \Ee 453/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavippayuttanti.

arahÄ• \Be 329/ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« ``paÃ±Ã±avÄ• â€™â€™ ti vattabboti dissati}? Ä• mantÄ• . paÃ±Ã±Ä• tena cittena sampayuttÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi cittavippayuttÄ• ti.

Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cittavippayuttantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(111) 6. idaá¹ƒ dukkhantikathÄ•

<618> ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti Ã±Ä• Ä• mantÄ• . ``ayaá¹ƒ dukkhasamudayoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``ayaá¹ƒ dukkhasa
pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sat
nti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``ayaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ b dukkhanirodhoâ€™â€™ ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? na \Se 483/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .
nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ•
vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``ayaá¹ƒ maggoâ€™â€™ ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ va

``ayaá¹ƒ samudayoâ€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``ayaá¹ƒ samudayoâ€™â€™ ti Ã
Ä• mantÄ• . ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€ pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... ``ayaá¹ƒ \Ee 454/ nirodhoâ€™â€™ ti ... ``ayaá¹ƒ vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``ayaá¹ƒ maggoâ€™â€™ ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mant vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? na heva

<619> ``idaá¹ƒ \Ne 367/ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ a pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sat
nti Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... `` aniccaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti Ã±Ä• á¹‡a
vattabbe ... pe ....

``idaá¹ƒ \Be 330/ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti Ã± Ä• mantÄ• . ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ anattÄ• â€™â na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``idaá¹ƒ duk Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vedanÄ• \Se 484/ ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ã±Ä• á¹‡a
vattabbe ... pe ....

``rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Ee 455/ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â
pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``idaá¹ƒ
Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…k
``viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ anic
pavattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``idaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

``rÅ«paá¹ƒ anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti

Ä• mantÄ• . ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€
pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... ``v anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ anattÄ• â€™â€™ ti Ã±Ä Ä• mantÄ• . ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato na ca ``dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti Ã
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<620> ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sato ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti Ã±Ä• Ä• mantÄ• . ``iâ€™â€™ ti {Ä«ti (Se Ee) } ca ``daâ€™â€™ nti ca ``duâ€™â€™ ti {dÅ«ti (Se ca Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pavattatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

idaá¹ƒ dukkhantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(112) 7. iddhibalakathÄ•

<621> iddhibalena \Se 485/ \Ee 456/ \Ne 368/ samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä Ä• yu, iddhimayikÄ• sÄ• gati, iddhimayiko so attabhÄ• vappaá¹-ilÄ• bhoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatt iddhibalena \Be 331/ samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atÄ«taá¹ƒ kap anÄ• gataá¹ƒ kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... iddhibalena samann tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dve kappe tiá¹-á¹-heyya, tayo kappe tiá¹-á¹-heyya, cattÄ• ro k tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... iddhibalena samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹ sati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vasese tiá¹-á¹-heyya, asati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vasese tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? sa jÄ«vitÄ• vasese tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti. haÃ±ci sati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vasese tiá¹-á¹-heyya, no ca va ``iddhibalena samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti. asati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vas mato tiá¹-á¹-heyya, kÄ• laá¹…kato tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<622> iddhibalena samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . uppanno phass iddhiyÄ• paggahetunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... uppannÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ... uppann
... pe ... uppannÄ• cetanÄ• ... pe ... uppannaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ ... uppannÄ• saddhÄ• ... uppann uppannÄ• sati ... uppanno samÄ• dhi \Ee 457/ ... pe ... uppannÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• mÄ• nirujjhÄ paggahetunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

iddhibalena samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ niccaá¹ƒ hot paggahetunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ niccaá¹ƒ hotÅ«ti labbhÄ• iddhiyÄ• paggahetunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

iddhibalena samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . jÄ• tidhammÄ• sattÄ•
\Ne 369/ iddhiyÄ• paggahetunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... jarÄ• dhammÄ• sattÄ• mÄ•
... byÄ• dhidhammÄ• sattÄ• mÄ• byÄ• dhiyiá¹ƒsÅ«ti ... pe ... maraá¹‡adhammÄ• sattÄ• iddhiyÄ• paggahetunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<623> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``iddhibalena samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• â€™â€™ t bhagavatÄ• --- ``yassa kassaci, Ä• nanda, cattÄ• ro iddhipÄ• dÄ• bhÄ• vitÄ• bahulÄ«katÄ anuá¹-á¹-hitÄ• paricitÄ• susamÄ• raddhÄ• , so Ä• kaá¹…khamÄ• no kappaá¹ƒ vÄ• tiá¹-á¹-vÄ• â€™â€™ ti {DN II 166; SN c V 822; Ud 51}! attheva \Be 332/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . ten samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti.

<624> iddhibalena \Se 487/ samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu ``catunnaá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ natthi koci pÄ• á¹-ibhogo samaá¹‡o vÄ• brÄ• hm brahmÄ• vÄ• koci vÄ• lokasmiá¹ƒ! katamesaá¹ƒ catunnaá¹ƒ? jarÄ• dhammo ``mÄ• jÄ«rÄ pÄ• á¹-ibhogo \Ee 458/ samaá¹‡o vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o vÄ• devo vÄ• mÄ• ro vÄ• brahmÄ• byÄ• dhidhammo ``mÄ• byÄ• dhiyÄ«â€™â€™ ti ... pe ... maraá¹‡adhammo ``mÄ• mÄ«yÄ pana tÄ• ni pubbe katÄ• ni pÄ• pakÄ• ni kammÄ• ni saá¹ƒkilesikÄ• ni ponobbhavikÄ• ni {po sadarÄ• ni {nissÄ• rÄ• ni (Ce Ee Katthaci), dukkhudrayÄ• ni (Se) } dukkhavipÄ• kÄ• ni Ä• y jÄ• tijarÄ• maraá¹‡iyÄ• ni tesaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko ``mÄ• nibbattÄ«â€™â€™ ti natthi koci pÄ• á¹-ib brÄ• hmaá¹‡o vÄ• devo vÄ• mÄ• ro vÄ• brahmÄ• vÄ• koci vÄ• lokasmiá¹ƒ. imesaá¹ƒ kh dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ natthi koci pÄ• á¹-ibhogo samaá¹‡o vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o vÄ• devo vÄ• mÄ lokasmiâ€™â€™ nti {AN a IV 182}. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ - samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

iddhibalakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(113) 8. samÄ• dhikathÄ•

<625> cittasantati \Se 488/ samÄ• dhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atÄ«tÄ• cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti?
370/ ... pe ... cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . anÄ• gatÄ• cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti?
... pe ... cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atÄ«taá¹ƒ niruddhaá¹ƒ anÄ• gataá¹ƒ a haÃ±ci atÄ«taá¹ƒ niruddhaá¹ƒ anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ajÄ• taá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``cittasant ti.

<626> ekacittakkhaá¹‡iko \Be 333/ samÄ• dhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asama hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« ... pe ... ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡as jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« ... kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« ... pe ... akusalac

... rÄ• gasahagatacittasamaá¹…gÄ« ... pe ... dosasahagatacittasamaá¹…gÄ« ... pe ... moha
... pe ... anottappasahagatacittasamaá¹…gÄ« samÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ...

cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . akusalacittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatta rÄ• gasahagatÄ• ... pe ... dosasahagatÄ• ... pe ... mohasahagatÄ• ... pe ... anottappasaha samÄ• dhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ \Se 489
kho, Ä• vuso nigaá¹‡á¹-hÄ• , pahomi aniÃ±jamÄ• no kÄ• yena, abhÄ• samÄ• no vÄ• caá¹ƒ {rattidivÄ• ni (Katthaci) } ekantasukhaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaá¹ƒvedÄ« viharituâ€™â€™ nti {MN I 180}!
Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi cittasantati samÄ• dhÄ«ti.

samÄ• dhikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(114) 9. dhammaá¹-á¹-hitatÄ• kathÄ•

<627> dhammaá¹-á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphan
... pe ... tÄ• ya á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya tÄ• yeva natthi dukkhassan natthi vaá¹-á¹-upacchedo, natthi anupÄ• dÄ• parinibbÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ..

rÅ«passa \Ee 460/ á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphan vattabbe ... pe ... tÄ• ya á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya tÄ• yeva natthi du natthi vaá¹-á¹-upacchedo, natthi anupÄ• dÄ• parinibbÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ..

vedanÄ• ya \Be 334/ á¹-hitatÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya á¹-hitatÄ• ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• na
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya á¹-hitatÄ• parinippha vattabbe ... pe ... tÄ• ya á¹-hitatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya \Se 490/ tÄ• yeva dukkhassantakiriyÄ• , natthi vaá¹-á¹-upacchedo, natthi anupÄ• dÄ• parinibbÄ• nanti? na hev
....

dhammaá¹-á¹-hitatÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

11. ekÄ• dasamavaggo

(115) 10. aniccatÄ• kathÄ•

<628> aniccatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya aniccatÄ• ya aniccatÄ• parinippha
... pe ... tÄ• ya aniccatÄ• ya aniccatÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya tÄ• yeva natth natthi vaá¹-á¹-upacchedo, natthi anupÄ• dÄ• parinibbÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe.

jarÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya jarÄ• ya jarÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? na \Ee 461/
... tÄ• ya jarÄ• ya jarÄ• parinipphannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ• ya tÄ• yeva natthi dukkhassant vaá¹-á¹-upacchedo, natthi anupÄ• dÄ• parinibbÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ parinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . tassa maraá¹‡assa maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ parinipphann tassa maraá¹‡assa maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ parinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . tassa tasseva natthi dukkh vaá¹-á¹-upacchedo, natthi anupÄ• dÄ• parinibbÄ• nanti? na \Se 491/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe

<629> rÅ«paá¹ƒ parinipphannaá¹ƒ, rÅ«passa aniccatÄ• atthÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aniccatÄ• p aniccatÄ• atthÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... rÅ«paá¹ƒ parinipphannaá¹ƒ, rÅ«passa jar Ä• mantÄ• . jarÄ• parinipphannÄ• , jarÄ• ya jarÄ• atthÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ parinipphannaá¹ƒ, rÅ«passa bhedo atthi, antaradhÄ• naá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• parinipphannaá¹ƒ, maraá¹‡assa bhedo atthi, antaradhÄ• naá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabl

vedanÄ• \Be 335/ ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ parini viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa aniccatÄ• atthÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aniccatÄ• parinipphannÄ• , aniccatÄ• y hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ parinipphannaá¹ƒ, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa jarÄ• att parinipphannÄ• , jarÄ• ya jarÄ• atthÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ \Ee 462/ parinipphannaá¹ƒ, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa bhedo atthi, antaradhÄ• n maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ parinipphannaá¹ƒ, maraá¹‡assa bhedo atthi, antaradhÄ• naá¹ƒ atthÄ«ti? na he aniccatÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .
....

ekÄ• dasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

anusayÄ• \Ne 373/ abyÄ• katÄ• , ahetukÄ• , cittavippayuttÄ• , aÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡e \Se 492/ viga cittavippayuttaá¹ƒ, yattha sadde {yattha saddo (Ce), yathÄ• saddaá¹ƒ (?) } Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ pa samannÄ• gato kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyya, cittasantati samÄ• dhi, dhammaá¹-á¹-hitatÄ• , anicc

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(116) 1. saá¹ƒvaro kammantikathÄ•

<630> saá¹ƒvaro \Ee 463/ kammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhundriyasaá¹ƒvaro cakkhukamman
... sotindriyasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... ghÄ• nindriyasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... jivhindriyasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ...
kÄ• yindriyasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kÄ• yindriyasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhundriyasaá¹ƒvaro cakkhukamm pe ... kÄ• yindriyasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotindriyasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... ghÄ pe ... jivhindriyasaá¹ƒvaro jivhÄ• kammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... manindriyasaá¹ƒv na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

manindriyasaá¹ƒvaro manokammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhundriyasaá¹ƒvaro cakkhukammar
... manindriyasaá¹ƒvaro manokammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotindriyasaá¹ƒvaro \Be 336/ ... pe ...
... jivhindriyasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... kÄ• yindriyasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb

<631> asaá¹ƒvaro kammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhundriyaasaá¹ƒvaro cakkhukammanti \Se 4
pe ... sotindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... ghÄ• nindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... jivhindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro .
kÄ• yindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? na \Ee 464/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kÄ• yindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro \Ne 374/ kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhundriyaasaá¹ƒvaro ca vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• yindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotindriyaasaá¹ƒva ghÄ• nindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... jivhindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro jivhÄ• kammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab manindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro manokammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

manindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro manokammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhundriyaasaá¹ƒvaro cakkhukamm pe ... manindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro manokammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... ghÄ pe ... jivhindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro ... pe ... kÄ• yindriyaasaá¹ƒvaro kÄ• yakammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ va

<632> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹ƒvaropi asaá¹ƒvaropi kammaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nan ``idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ disvÄ• nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti ... pe ... na nim
sotena saddaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• ... pe ... manasÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• ya nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hoti nimittaggÄ• hÄ« hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi saá¹ƒvaropi asaá saá¹ƒvaro kammantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(117) 2. kammakathÄ•

<633> sabbaá¹ƒ \Se 494/ kammaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbÄ• \Ee 465/ cetanÄ• vattabbe ... pe ... sabbÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetan vattabbe ... pe ... sabbÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti \Be 337/? Ä• mantÄ• . kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ•
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sabbÄ• \Ne 375/ cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• k hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sabbÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• a vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sabbÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ vattabbe ... pe ... sabbÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• arÅ«pÄ• v cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<634> vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ• avipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• k re vattabbe --- ``sabbÄ• cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ• avipÄ• kÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ vattabbe --- ``sabbÄ• \Se 495/ cetanÄ• savipÄ• kÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• apariyÄ• pannÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• ka 466/. haÃ±ci apariyÄ• pannÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ• avipÄ• kÄ• , no ca vata re va
savipÄ• kÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

kÄ• mÄ• vacarÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ• avipÄ• arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• cetanÄ• avipÄ• kÄ• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sab savipÄ• kÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<635> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sabbaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu ``nÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, saÃ±cetanikÄ• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ katÄ• naá¹ƒ upacitÄ• naá¹ƒ a byantibhÄ• vaá¹ƒ vadÄ• mi, taÃ±ca kho diá¹-á¹-heva dhamme upapajje {upapajjaá¹ƒ (AN c pariyÄ• yeâ€™â€™ ti {AN c 10.217}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi sabbaá¹ƒ kam kammakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(118) 3. saddo vipÄ• kotikathÄ•

<636> saddo \Be 338/ \Ne 376/ vipÄ• koti? Ä• mantÄ• . sukhavedaniyo dukkhavedaniyo ad sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayutto, dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayutto \Se 496/, adukkha sampayutto, phassena sampayutto, vedanÄ• ya sampayutto, saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya sampayutto, cet sampayutto, sÄ• rammaá¹‡o; atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• Ä• bhogo samannÄ• hÄ• ro mana paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu na sukhavedaniyo na dukkhavedaniyo ... p natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \Ee 467/ na sukhav anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti.

phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso sukhavedaniyo ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-an paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddo vipÄ• ko, saddo sukhavedaniyo ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

saddo vipÄ• ko, saddo na sukhavedaniyo ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso na sukhavedaniyo, na dukkhavedaniyo natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<637> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saddo vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagava katattÄ• upacitattÄ• ussannattÄ• vipulattÄ• brahmassaro hoti karavikabhÄ• á¹‡Ä«â€™â€ attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 497/. tena hi saddo vipÄ• koti.

saddo vipÄ• kotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(119) 4. saá¸·Ä• yatanakathÄ•

<638> cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Be 339/ \Ne 377/ vipÄ• koti? Ä• mantÄ• . sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ du sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹ haÃ±ci \Ee 468/ na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹ paá¹‡idhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti ... pe ....

phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso sukhavedaniyo ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-an

paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sukhavedaniya
sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• ramm Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso na sukhaveda
anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

<639> sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ•
498/ vipÄ• koti? Ä• mantÄ• . sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• v paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• ramm tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... p anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, no ca vata re vattabb ``kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti.

phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso sukhavedaniyo ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-an paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ sukhavedaniyaá atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Ne 378/ ... pe ... kÄ
vipÄ• ko, kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tass
... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 469/. phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso na sukhavedaniyo ... pe ...
tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<640> na \Be 340/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¸·Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . n kammassa katattÄ• uppannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saá¸·Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ kammassa katattÄ vattabbe --- ``saá¸·Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti.

saá¸·Ä• yatanakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(120) 5. sattakkhattuparamakathÄ•

<641> sattakkhattuparamo \Se 499/ puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . n
... pitÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... arahÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... duá¹-á¹-hena cittena tathÄ• gatas uppÄ• ditaá¹ƒ ... saá¹…gho bhinnoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . abhabbo antarÄ• na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... abhabbo antarÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ abhisametunti? Ä• mantÄ• . m
... pitÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... arahÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... duá¹-á¹-hena cittena tathÄ• gatas

uppÄ• ditaá¹ƒ ... saá¹…gho bhinnoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<642> sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi so n niyamena sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb 470/ te satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ... pe ... sammappadhÄ• nÄ• ... iddhipÄ• dÄ• ... indriyÄ• ... ba yehi bojjhaá¹…gehi sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? na hevaá¹

<643> natthi so niyamo yena niyamena sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ haÃ±ci natthi so \Se 500/ niyamo yena niyamena sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattup vata re vattabbe --- ``sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoâ€™â€™ ti natthi \Be 341/ te satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ... bojjhaá¹…gÄ• yehi bojjhaá¹…gehi sattakkhattupa sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci natthi te bojjhaá¹…gÄ• yehi bojjhaá¹…

puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyato, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sattakkhattuparamo pugg sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoâ€™â€™ ti.

<644> sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sakadÄ• vattabbe ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• miniyamenÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arahattaniyamen
vattabbe ... pe ....

katamena niyamenÄ• ti? sotÄ• pattiniyamenÄ• ti. sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattu
Ä• mantÄ• . ye keci sotÄ• pattiniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamanti, sabbe te sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niy
... pe ....

<645> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoâ€™
471/. nanu so sattakkhattuparamoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci so sattakkhattuparamo, tena vata ``sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyatoâ€™â€™ ti.

sattakkhattuparamakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(121) 6. kolaá¹…kolakathÄ•

<646> na \Se 501/ \Ne 380/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kolaá¹…kolo puggalo kolaá¹…kolatÄ• niyatoâ nanu so kolaá¹…koloti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci so kolaá¹…kolo, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``kola kolaá¹…kolatÄ• niyatoâ€™â€™ ti.

kolaá¹…kolakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(122) 7. ekabÄ«jÄ«kathÄ•

<647> na \Be 342/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``ekabÄ«jÄ« puggalo ekabÄ«jitÄ• niyatoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• ekabÄ«jÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci so ekabÄ«jÄ«, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``ekabÄ«jÄ« pugg ekabÄ«jitÄ• niyatoâ€™â€™ ti.

ekabÄ«jÄ«kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(123) 8. jÄ«vitÄ• voropanakathÄ•

<648> diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyyÄ• ti? Ä• ma puggalo saÃ±cicca mÄ• taraá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyya ... pe ... pitaraá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyya \ arahantaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyya ... pe ... duá¹-á¹-hena cittena tathÄ• gatassa lohitaá¹ƒ uppÄ saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ bhindeyyÄ• ti? na \Ee 472/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . c satthari agÄ• ravoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dhamme ... pe ... saá¹…ghe ... pe ... sikk agÄ• ravoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

nanu diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo satthari sagÄ• ravoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci diá¹-á¹-hisamp sagÄ• ravo, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ voropeyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti. nanu diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo dhamme ... pe ... saá¹…ghe ... p sagÄ• ravoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo sikkhÄ• ya sagÄ• ravo, no c ``diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<649> diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo satthari agÄ• ravoti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-hisampanno p ohadeyya omutteyya niá¹-á¹-hubheyya buddhathÅ«pe apabyÄ• mato {asabyÄ• kato (Ce Ka hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

diá¹-á¹-hisampanno \Be 343/ puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyyÄ• ti? Ä• m bhagavatÄ• --- ``seyyathÄ• pi, bhikkhave, mahÄ• samuddo á¹-hitadhammo velaá¹ƒ nÄ• tiva bhikkhave, yaá¹ƒ mayÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ sikkhÄ• padaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±attaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ mama sÄ

nÄ• tikkamantÄ«â€™â€™ ti {Vin II 385; AN c 8.20; Ud 45}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• \ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeyyÄ• a jÄ«vitÄ• voropanakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(124) 9. duggatikathÄ•

<650> diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa \Se 503/ \Ne 382/ puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«ti? Ä• ma puggalo Ä• pÄ• yike rÅ«pe rajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo Ä•
ca vata re vattabbe --- ``diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«â€™â€™

diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-hisampann
... pe ... gandhe ... rase ... phoá¹-á¹-habbe ... pe ... amanussitthiyÄ• tiracchÄ• nagatitthiyÄ• nÄ• gakaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya methunaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ paá¹-iseveyya, ajeá¸·akaá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hey paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyya, hatthigavassavaá¸·avaá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyya ... tittiravaá¹-á¹-akamorak kapiÃ±jalaá¹ƒ (Se Ke Ee) } paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci diá¹-á¹-hisampanno tittiravaá¹-á¹-akamorakapiÃ±jaraá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``diá¹-á¹-h puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<651> diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo
rajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahato pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, arahÄ• Ä• pÄ• yike rÅ«pe rajjeyyÄ• t pe ... diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo Ä gandhe ... rase ... phoá¹-á¹-habbe ... pe ... tittiravaá¹-á¹-akamorakapiÃ±jaraá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡ Ä• mantÄ• \Se 504/ \Ee 474/. arahato \Be 344/ pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, arahÄ• tittiravaá¹-á¹-ak paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

arahato pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, na ca arahÄ• Ä• pÄ• yike rÅ«pe rajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹ puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, na ca diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo Ä• pÄ• yike rÅ«pe rajjey
... pe ... arahato pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, na ca arahÄ• Ä• pÄ• yike sadde ... pe ... gandhe ... pe phoá¹-á¹-habbe ... pe ... amanussitthiyÄ• tiracchÄ• nagatitthiyÄ• nÄ• gakaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya meth paá¹-iseveyya, ajeá¸·akaá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyya, kukkuá¹-asÅ«karaá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyya, h paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyya ... pe ... tittiravaá¹-á¹-akamorakapiÃ±jaraá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyyÄ• ti? Ä• n diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, na ca diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo tittiravaá¹-á¹-akamorakapiÃ±jaraá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡heyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<652> {aá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• nulomaá¹ƒ paravÄ• dÄ«pucchÄ• lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ. tathÄ• pÄ• yaá¹ƒ

purimÄ• yo ca imissaá¹ƒ duggatikathÄ• yaá¹ƒ paravÄ• dissÄ• ti gahetabbÄ• viya dissanti} n ``diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-upapajjeyya ... pe ... tiracchÄ• nayoniá¹ƒ upapajjeyya ... pettivisayaá¹ƒ upapajjeyyÄ• ti? na h tena hi diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«ti.

duggatikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

12. dvÄ• dasamavaggo

(125) 10. sattamabhavikakathÄ•

<653> na \Se 505/ \Ee 475/ vattabbaá¹ƒ ``sattamabhavikassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• dugg sattamabhaviko puggalo nirayaá¹ƒ upapajjeyya, tiracchÄ• nayoniá¹ƒ upapajjeyya, pettivisay na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi sattamabhavikassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggatÄ«ti.

sattamabhavikakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

dvÄ• dasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

saá¹ƒvaro \Be 345/ kammaá¹ƒ tatheva asaá¹ƒvaro, sabbakammaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kaá¹ƒ, saddo vipÄ• ko, sattakkhattuparamo puggalo sattakkhattuparamatÄ• niyato, kolaá¹…kolapuggalo k ekabÄ«jÄ« puggalo ekabÄ«jitÄ• niyato, diá¹-á¹-hisampanno puggalo saÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hisampannassa puggalassa pahÄ«nÄ• duggati, tatheva sattamabhavikassÄ• ti.

13. terasamavaggo

(126) 1. kappaá¹-á¹-hakathÄ•

<654> kappaá¹-á¹-ho \Ee 476/ \Ne 384/ kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kappo ca s loke uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... kappaá¹-á¹-ho \Se 506/ kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-he kappo ca saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti saá¹…gho ca bhijjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kappaá¹-á¹-h tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kappo ca saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti kappaá¹-á¹-ho ca kappaá¹-á¹-hiyaá¹ƒ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kappo ca s kappaá¹-á¹-ho ca puggalo kÄ• laá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<655> kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atÄ«taá¹ƒ kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-he kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-hey dve kappe tiá¹-á¹-heyya ... tayo kappe tiá¹-á¹-heyya ... cattÄ• ro kappe tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? na

... pe ....

<656> kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappe á¸• ayh aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ lokadhÄ• tuá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«ti. mato gacchati, vehÄ• saá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«ti? mato gac kappaá¹-á¹-hiyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ aparÄ• pariyavepakkanti? na \Ee 477/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... p gacchatÄ«ti (?) ayaá¹ƒ hi paravÄ• dissa paá¹-iÃ±Ã±Ä• yeva, Kv 621-623 navamapantiyaá¹ gacchatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• {vehÄ• saá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«ti (?) ayaá¹ƒ hi paravÄ• dissa paá¹-iÃ±Ã± navamapantiyaá¹ƒ viya}. kappaá¹-á¹-ho iddhimÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kappaá¹-Ä• mantÄ• . kappaá¹-á¹-hena \Be 346/ chandiddhipÄ• do bhÄ• vito vÄ«riyiddhipÄ• do bhÄ• vÄ«maá¹ƒsiddhipÄ• do bhÄ• vitoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<657> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•

``Ä• pÄ• yiko \Se 507/ nerayiko, kappaá¹-á¹-ho saá¹…ghabhedako.

vaggarato adhammaá¹-á¹-ho, yogakkhemÄ• padhaá¹ƒsati.

saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ samaggaá¹ƒ bhetvÄ• na {bhinditvÄ• (Ce Katthaci) }, kappaá¹ƒ nirayamhi pac 354; AN c 10.39; It 18} ||

attheva \Ne 385/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi kappaá¹-á¹-ho kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• ti.

kappaá¹-á¹-hakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(127) 2. kusalapaá¹-ilÄ• bhakathÄ•

<658> kappaá¹-á¹-ho kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ na paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kappaá¹-á¹-ho Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kappaá¹-á¹-ho dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadeyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``kappaá¹ na paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

kappaá¹-á¹-ho kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ na paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kappaá¹-á¹-ho cÄ«var
piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ dadeyya ... pe ... senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... pe ... gilÄ• napaccayabhes dadeyya \Ee 478/ ... khÄ• danÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... bhojanÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹

vandeyya ... cetiye mÄ• laá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya ... gandhaá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya ... vilepanaá¹ƒ Ä• ropey abhidakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ {padakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ (Ee) } kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kappaá¹-á¹-ho abhidakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ kareyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``kappaá¹-á¹-ho kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ na paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti ... pe ....

<659> kappaá¹-á¹-ho \Se 508/ \Be 347/ kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ ... pe ... arÅ«pÄ• vaca lokuttaraá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ paá¹-ilabheyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kusalapaá¹-ilÄ• bhakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(128) 3. anantarÄ• payuttakathÄ•

<660> anantarÄ• payutto \Ne 386/ puggalo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkameyyÄ• ti? Ä• man sammattaniyÄ• maÃ±ca ubho okkameyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... anantarÄ• payu sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkameyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ payuttaá¹ƒ kukku vippaá¹-isÄ• riyaá¹ƒ janitanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ payuttaá¹ƒ kukkuccaá¹ƒ vippaá¹-isÄ• riyaá¹ƒ janitaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``anantarÄ• payutto puggalo samm okkameyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<661> anantarÄ• payutto \Ee 479/ puggalo abhabbo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamitunti? Ä voropitÄ• ... pitÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... arahÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... duá¹-á¹-hena cittena ta lohitaá¹ƒ uppÄ• ditaá¹ƒ ... saá¹…gho bhinnoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

anantarÄ• payutto puggalo taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaá¹ƒharitvÄ• kukkuccaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivinode
\Se 509/ paá¹-ivinetvÄ• {paá¹-ivinodetvÄ• (Ce Ee Katthaci) } abhabbo sammattaniyÄ• maá mÄ• tÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropitÄ• ... pitÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito ... pe ... saá¹…gho bhinnoti? na hev
....

anantarÄ• payutto puggalo taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaá¹ƒharitvÄ• kukkuccaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivinode
paá¹-ivinetvÄ• abhabbo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamitunti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu taá¹ƒ kamm kukkuccaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivinoditaá¹ƒ vippaá¹-isÄ• riyaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivinÄ«tanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci taá paá¹-isaá¹ƒhaá¹-aá¹ƒ kukkuccaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivinoditaá¹ƒ vippaá¹-isÄ• riyaá¹ƒ \Be 348/ paá¹-ivinÄ re vattabbe --- ``anantarÄ• payutto puggalo taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ paá¹-isaá¹ƒharitvÄ• kukkuccaá vippaá¹-isÄ• riyaá¹ƒ paá¹-ivinetvÄ• abhabbo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamituâ€™â€™ nti.

<662> anantarÄ• payutto puggalo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkameyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu payutto Ä• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ payutto Ä• si, no ca vata re vattabbe puggalo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkameyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

anantarÄ• payuttakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(129) 4. niyatassa niyÄ• makathÄ•

<663> niyato \Ee 480/ niyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . micchattaniyato sammattani sammattaniyato micchattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? na \Se 510/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ...

niyato niyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . pubbe maggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetvÄ• pacchÄ• niy vattabbe ... pe ... pubbe sotÄ• pattimaggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetvÄ• pacchÄ• sotÄ• pattiniyÄ• maá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... pubbe sakadÄ• gÄ• mi ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mi ... pe ... arahattamaggaá¹ƒ bh arahattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

pubbe satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... sammappadhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... iddhipÄ• daá¹ƒ ... indriyaá¹ƒ bojjhaá¹…gaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetvÄ• pacchÄ• niyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ...

<664> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``niyato niyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . bhabbo dhammaá¹ƒ nÄ• bhisametunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi niyato niyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamatÄ« niyatassa niyÄ• makathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(130) 5. nivutakathÄ•

<665> nivuto \Be 349/ \Ne 388/ nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ratto rÄ• gaá¹ƒ jaha jahati, mÅ«á¸·ho mohaá¹ƒ jahati, kiliá¹-á¹-ho kilese jahatÄ«ti? na \Ee 481/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe rÄ• gena rÄ• gaá¹ƒ jahati, dosena dosaá¹ƒ jahati, mohena mohaá¹ƒ jahati, kilesehi kilese ja
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÄ• go cittasampayutto, maggo cittasampayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ...
cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... rÄ• go akusalo, maggo
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ•

Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<666> kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibh sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``catt
suvidÅ«ravidÅ«rÄ• ni! katamÄ• ni cattÄ• ri? nabhaÃ±ca, bhikkhave, pathavÄ« ca --- idaá¹ƒ
suvidÅ«ravidÅ«raá¹ƒ ... pe ... tasmÄ• sataá¹ƒ dhammo asabbhi Ä• rakÄ• â€™â€™ ti. atthe
tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kusalÄ• kusalÄ• ... pe ... sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ

nivuto nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``so evaá¹ƒ sa parisuddhe pariyodÄ• te anaá¹…gaá¹‡e vigatÅ«pakkilese mudubhÅ«te kammaniye á¹-hite Ä khayaÃ±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ya cittaá¹ƒ abhininnÄ• metÄ«â€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• .
``nivuto nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ... pe ....

<667> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``nivuto nÄ«varaá¹‡aá¹ƒ jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu v ``tassa evaá¹ƒ jÄ• nato evaá¹ƒ passato \Ee 482/ kÄ• mÄ• savÄ• pi cittaá¹ƒ vimuccati ... pe .
389/ cittaá¹ƒ vimuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti \Se 512/? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi nivuto jahatÄ«ti.

nivutakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(131) 6. sammukhÄ«bhÅ«takathÄ•

<668> sammukhÄ«bhÅ«to \Be 350/ saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ratto rÄ• gaá¹ƒ jahati, mÅ«á¸·ho mohaá¹ƒ jahati, kiliá¹-á¹-ho kilese jahatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... r rÄ• gaá¹ƒ jahati, dosena dosaá¹ƒ jahati, mohena mohaá¹ƒ jahati, kilesehi kilese jahatÄ«ti? r
... pe ....

rÄ• go cittasampayutto, maggo cittasampayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ...
cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... rÄ• go akusalo, maggo
kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ•
Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<669> kusalÄ• kusalÄ• ... pe ... sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . na ``cattÄ• rimÄ• ni, bhikkhave, suvidÅ«ravidÅ«rÄ• ni! katamÄ• ni cattÄ• ri? nabhaÃ±ca, bhikk idaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ suvidÅ«ravidÅ«raá¹ƒ ... pe ... tasmÄ• sataá¹ƒ dhammo asabbhi Ä• ra suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kusalÄ• kusalÄ• ... pe ... sammukhÄ«bh

Ä• gacchantÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

sammukhÄ«bhÅ«to \Ee 483/ saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagav samÄ• hite \Ne 390/ citte ... pe ... Ä• savÄ• naá¹ƒ khayaÃ±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ya cittaá¹ƒ abhininnÄ• suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sammukhÄ«bhÅ«to saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ jaha

<670> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sammukhÄ«bhÅ«to saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• ma bhagavatÄ• --- ``tassa evaá¹ƒ jÄ• nato evaá¹ƒ passato kÄ• mÄ• savÄ• pi cittaá¹ƒ vimuccati avijjÄ• savÄ• pi cittaá¹ƒ vimuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi sam saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti.

sammukhÄ«bhÅ«takathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(132) 7. samÄ• panno assÄ• detikathÄ•

<671> samÄ• panno \Be 351/ assÄ• deti, jhÄ• nanikanti jhÄ• nÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mant jhÄ• nassa Ä• rammaá¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... taá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ tassa jhÄ• nas Ä• mantÄ• . tena phassena taá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ phusati, tÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya taá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ ve taá¹ƒ saÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ saÃ±jÄ• nÄ• ti, tÄ• ya cetanÄ• ya taá¹ƒ cetanaá¹ƒ ceteti, tena cittena taá tena vitakkena taá¹ƒ vitakkaá¹ƒ vitakketi, tena vicÄ• rena taá¹ƒ vicÄ• raá¹ƒ vicÄ• reti \Se 51 taá¹ƒ pÄ«ti piyÄ• yati, tÄ• ya satiyÄ• taá¹ƒ satiá¹ƒ sarati, tÄ• ya paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya taá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

jhÄ• nanikanti \Ee 484/ cittasampayuttÄ• , jhÄ• naá¹ƒ cittasampayuttanti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvin pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

jhÄ• nanikanti akusalaá¹ƒ, jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• n 391/ kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ• dhammÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti

<672> kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibh
sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``cattÄ
suvidÅ«ravidÅ«rÄ• ni! katamÄ• ni cattÄ• ri? nabhaÃ±ca, bhikkhave, pathavÄ« ca --- idaá¹ƒ
suvidÅ«ravidÅ«raá¹ƒ ... pe ... tasmÄ• sataá¹ƒ dhammo asabbhi Ä• rakÄ• â€™â€™ ti. atthe
tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡h
dhammÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<673> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``samÄ• panno assÄ• deti, jhÄ• nanikanti jhÄ• nÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• a vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu vivicceva kÄ• mehi vivicca akusalehi dh jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati, so taá¹ƒ assÄ• deti taá¹ƒ nikÄ• meti tena ca vittiá¹ƒ Ä• paj vitakkavicÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ vÅ«pasamÄ• ... pe ... dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• na catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati \Be 352/, so taá¹ƒ assÄ• deti taá¹ƒ nikÄ• meti \ vittiá¹ƒ Ä• pajjatÄ«â€™â€™ ti {AN a IV 123}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi samÄ• jhÄ• nanikanti jhÄ• nÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• ti.

samÄ• panno assÄ• detikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(133) 8. asÄ• tarÄ• gakathÄ•

<674> atthi \Ee 485/ asÄ• tarÄ• goti? Ä• mantÄ• . dukkhÄ• bhinandino sattÄ• , atthi keci du pihenti esanti gavesanti pariyesanti, dukkhaá¹ƒ ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ \Ne pe ... nanu sukhÄ• bhinandino sattÄ• , atthi keci sukhaá¹ƒ patthenti pihenti esanti gavesanti sukhaá¹ƒ ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sukhÄ• bhinandino sattÄ• , atthi pihenti esanti gavesanti pariyesanti, sukhaá¹ƒ ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hanti, no ca vata re vattabb asÄ• tarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti.

atthi asÄ• tarÄ• goti? Ä• mantÄ• . dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya rÄ• gÄ• nusayo anuseti, sukhÄ• anusetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya rÄ• gÄ• nusayo anus paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo anusetÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya rÄ• gÄ• nusayo paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo anuseti, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi asÄ• tarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti.

<675> na \Se 516/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atthi asÄ• tarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vutta
evaá¹ƒ anurodhavirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno yaá¹ƒ kiÃ±ci vedanaá¹ƒ vedayati sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• d adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• , so taá¹ƒ vedanaá¹ƒ abhinandati abhivadati ajjhosÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-ha mahÄ• taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khaye}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi asÄ• tarÄ• goti.

asÄ• tarÄ• gakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(134) 9. dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• tikathÄ•

<676> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• \Be 353/ \Ee 486/ abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• ka

nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... gandhataá¹‡hÄ• ..
... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• akusalÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá¹‡hÄ• akusalÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab
... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• akusalÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá¹‡hÄ• akusalÄ• ti?
vattabbe ... pe ....

<677> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu taá¹‡hÄ• akusalÄ• vuttÄ• bh taá¹‡hÄ• akusalÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• aby dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu lobho akusalo vutto bhagavatÄ• , dha haÃ±ci lobho akusalo vutto bhagavatÄ• , dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho, no ca vata re vattabbe -- abyÄ• katÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<678> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 487/. rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• lobho a vattabbe ... pe ... dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho abyÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• lobho abyÄ• katoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• lobho akusaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho akusaloti? na hevaá saddataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• lobho akusaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<679> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• \Be 354/ abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ•
ponobbhavikÄ• nandÄ«rÄ• gasahagatÄ• tatratatrÄ• bhinandinÄ«, seyyathidaá¹ƒ --- kÄ• m vibhavataá¹‡hÄ• â€™â€™ ti {Vin I 14; DN II 400}! attheva suttantoti \Se 518/? Ä• mantÄ• .
--- ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<680> na \Ne 394/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sÄ• dhammataá¹‡hÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• a dhammataá¹‡hÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

13. terasamavaggo

(135) 10. dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayotikathÄ•

<681> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• \Ee 488/ na dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• na vattabbe ... pe ... dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... rasataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoti? na hevaá¹ƒ va

rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá¹‡hÄ• dukkhasamudayoti? na saddataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... gandhataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... rasataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá¹‡hÄ• dukkhasamudayoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabl

<682> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu taá¹‡hÄ• dukkhasamu
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci taá¹‡hÄ• dukkhasamudayo \Se 519/ vutto bhagavatÄ• , no ca vata re v ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoâ€™â€™ ti. dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamuda dukkhasamudayo \Be 355/ vutto bhagavatÄ• , dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobhoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ± bhagavatÄ• , dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na du <683> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho, na dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• lobho na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dhammataá¹‡hÄ• \Ee 489/ lobho, na dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• m pe ... gandhataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... rasataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• lobho, na d

hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«pataá¹‡hÄ• lobho dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammataá¹‡hÄ• lobho dukkhasam
... pe ... saddataá¹‡hÄ• ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbataá¹‡hÄ• lobho dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• ma lobho dukkhasamudayoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<684> dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• -
ponobbhavikÄ• nandÄ«rÄ• gasahagatÄ• tatratatrÄ• bhinandinÄ«, seyyathidaá¹ƒ --- kÄ• m vibhavataá¹‡hÄ• â€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``dh dukkhasamudayoâ€™â€™ ti.

<685> na \Se 520/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä dhammataá¹‡hÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sÄ• dhammataá¹‡hÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- `
dukkhasamudayoâ€™â€™ ti.

dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

terasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

kappaá¹-á¹-ho \Ee 490/ kappaá¹ƒ tiá¹-á¹-heyya, kappaá¹-á¹-ho kusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ na paá¹-il anantarÄ• payutto puggalo sammattaniyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkameyya, niyato niyÄ• maá¹ƒ okkamat jahati, sammukhÄ«bhÅ«to saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ jahati, jhÄ• nanikanti, asÄ• tarÄ• go, dhammataá dhammataá¹‡hÄ• na dukkhasamudayoti.

14. cuddasamavaggo

(136) 1. kusalÄ• kusalapaá¹-isandahanakathÄ•

<686> akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Be 356/ \Ee 491/ \Ne 396/ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«lanti? Ä• m uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va kusalassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``yÄ• akusalassa up
... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va kusalassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«â€™ kusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entassa {anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-antassa (Ce Ee Katthaci), anÄ• vajjantassa ( 521/ ... pe ... appaá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu kusalaá¹
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci ku
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«laâ€™â€™ nti.

<687> akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• . akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ a uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalaá¹ƒ ayoniso manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabl kusalaá¹ƒ yoniso manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kusalaá¹ƒ yoniso manasik vata re vattabbe --- ``akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«laâ€™â€™ nti.

akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• masaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya anan uppajjati, byÄ• pÄ• dasaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya anantarÄ• abyÄ• pÄ• dasaÃ±Ã±Ä• uppajjati, vihiá¹ƒsÄ avihiá¹ƒsÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• uppajjati, byÄ• pÄ• dassa \Ee 492/ anantarÄ• mettÄ• uppajjati, vih karuá¹‡Ä• uppajjati, aratiyÄ• anantarÄ• muditÄ• uppajjati, paá¹-ighassa anantarÄ• upekh
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<688> kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Ne 397/ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• . yÄ• kusala Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va akusalassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya \Se 522/ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-an
paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Be 357/ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``yÄ• kusal

Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va akusalassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ti? Ä• mantÄ• . akusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... appaá¹‡idahantassa upp vattabbe ... pe ... nanu akusalaá¹ƒ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa u Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci akusalaá¹ƒ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppa vattabbe --- ``kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«laâ€™â€™ nti.

<689> kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalaá¹ƒ yoniso ma
Ä• mantÄ• . akusalaá¹ƒ yoniso manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... na manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci akusalaá¹ƒ ayoniso manasikaroto uppajjati,
--- ``kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«laâ€™â€™ nti.

kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«lanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nekkhammasaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya a uppajjati, abyÄ• pÄ• dasaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya \Ee 493/ anantarÄ• byÄ• pÄ• dasaÃ±Ã±Ä• uppajjati, anantarÄ• vihiá¹ƒsÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• uppajjati, mettÄ• ya anantarÄ• byÄ• pÄ• do uppajjati, kar vihiá¹ƒsÄ• uppajjati, muditÄ• ya anantarÄ• arati \Se 523/ uppajjati, upekkhÄ• ya anantarÄ•
uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<690> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, kusalamÅ«la akusalamÅ«laâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu yasmiá¹ƒyeva vatthusmiá¹ƒ rajjati tasmiÃ±Ã± yasmiá¹ƒyeva vatthusmiá¹ƒ virajjati tasmiÃ±Ã±eva vatthusmiá¹ƒ rajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ vatthusmiá¹ƒ rajjati tasmiÃ±Ã±eva vatthusmiá¹ƒ virajjati, yasmiÃ±Ã±eva vatthusmiá¹ƒ virajja 398/ vatthusmiá¹ƒ rajjati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati kusala kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandahati akusalamÅ«laâ€™â€™ nti.

kusalÄ• kusalapaá¹-isandahanakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(137) 2. saá¸·Ä• yatanuppattikathÄ•

<691> saá¸·Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ \Be 358/ apubbaá¹ƒ acarimaá¹ƒ mÄ• tukucchismiá¹ƒ saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• sabbaá¹…gapaccaá¹…gÄ« ahÄ«nindriyo mÄ• tukucchismiá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vat upapattesiyena cittena cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . upapattesiyena saá¹‡á¹-hanti, pÄ• dÄ• saá¹‡á¹-hanti, sÄ«saá¹ƒ saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, kaá¹‡á¹‡o saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, n mukhaá¹ƒ saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, dantÄ• saá¹‡á¹-hantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

upapattesiyena \Se 524/ \Ee 494/ cittena sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... p jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . upapattesiyena cittena hatthÄ• saá¹‡á¹-ha saá¹‡á¹-hanti, sÄ«saá¹ƒ saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, kaá¹‡á¹‡o saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, nÄ• sikÄ• saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, dantÄ• saá¹‡á¹-hantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<692> mÄ• tukucchigatassa pacchÄ• cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . mÄ• tu cakkhupaá¹-ilÄ• bhÄ• ya kammaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... mÄ• tukucchig sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• ma mÄ• tukucchismiá¹ƒ jivhÄ• paá¹-ilÄ• bhÄ• ya kammaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ...

mÄ• tukucchigatassa \Ne 399/ pacchÄ• kesÄ• lomÄ• nakhÄ• dantÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ« uppajja mÄ• tukucchismiá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hipaá¹-ilÄ• bhÄ• ya kammaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe .

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``mÄ• tukucchigatassa pacchÄ• kesÄ• lomÄ• nakhÄ• dantÄ• aá¹-á¹-h Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ kalalaá¹ƒ hoti, kalalÄ• hoti abbudaá¹ƒ.

abbudÄ• jÄ• yate pesi {pesÄ« (Se Ke Ee) }, pesi nibbattate {nibbattatÄ« (Ce Se, SN a I 235 Katthaci) } ghano.

ghanÄ• pasÄ• khÄ• jÄ• yanti, kesÄ• lomÄ• nakhÄ• pi ca ||

``yaÃ±cassa \Be 359/ bhuÃ±jati mÄ• tÄ• , annaá¹ƒ pÄ• naÃ±ca bhojanaá¹ƒ.

tena so tattha yÄ• peti, mÄ• tukucchigato naroâ€™â€™ ti {SN a I 235} ||

attheva \Se 525/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi mÄ• tukucchigatassa pacchÄ• kesÄ• lom aá¹-á¹-hÄ« uppajjantÄ«ti.

saá¸·Ä• yatanuppattikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(138) 3. anantarapaccayakathÄ•

<693> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa \Ee 495/ anantarÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? A cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va sotaviÃ
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa \Ne 400/ anantarÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjati, na vattabba
cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va sotaviÃ
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-en appaá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... nanu sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti, Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<694> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa anantarÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ rÅ«panimittaá¹ƒ manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti \Se 526/? Ä• mantÄ• . sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ rÅ
uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡aÃ±Ã±eva na aÃ±Ã±Ä• rammaá¹‡anti? Ä• mar
rÅ«pÄ• rammaá¹‡aÃ±Ã±eva na aÃ±Ã±Ä• rammaá¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

cakkhuÃ±ca paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhuÃ±c ca uppajjati sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

cakkhuÃ±ca \Be 360/ paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``cak ca uppajjati sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? natthi. ``cakkhuÃ±ca paá uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci ``cak ca uppajjati cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttanto, no ca vata re vattabbe -- paá¹-icca rÅ«pe ca uppajjati sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti.

cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa anantarÄ• sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . taÃ±
taá¹ƒ sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<695> sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa anantarÄ• ghÄ• naviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjati ... pe ... ghÄ• anantarÄ• \Ne 401/ jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjati ... pe ... jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa ana kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . yÄ• jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa uppÄ• dÄ paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idh vattabbe ... pe ... jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa anantarÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjati, na jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va kÄ• yav
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ anÄ
... pe ... appaá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kÄ
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjati, no ca vata re vattabbe ---

``jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa anantarÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<696> jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa \Ee 497/ anantarÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ rasanimittaá¹ƒ manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kÄ• yaviÃ± manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ rasÄ• rammaá¹‡aÃ±Ã±eva na aÃ±Ã±Ä• rammaá¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ rasÄ• rammaá¹‡aÃ±Ã±eva na aÃ±Ã±Ä• rammaá¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

jivhaÃ±ca paá¹-icca rase ca uppajjati jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . jivhaÃ±ca paá¹ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

jivhaÃ±ca paá¹-icca rase ca uppajjati kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``jivhaÃ±ca paá kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva \Se 528/ suttantoti? natthi. ``jivhaÃ±ca \Be 361 uppajjati jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci ``jivha uppajjati jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti --- attheva suttantoti, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ` paá¹-icca rase ca uppajjati kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti.

jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa \Ne 402/ anantarÄ• kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• ma jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<697> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa samanantarÄ• u nanu atthi koci naccati gÄ• yati vÄ• deti, rÅ«paÃ±ca passati, saddaÃ±ca \Ee 498/ suá¹‡Ä• t rasaÃ±ca sÄ• yati, phoá¹-á¹-habbaÃ±ca phusatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi koci naccati g rÅ«paÃ±ca passati, saddaÃ±ca suá¹‡Ä• ti, gandhaÃ±ca ghÄ• yati, rasaÃ±ca sÄ• yati, phoá tena vata re vattabbe --- ``paÃ±caviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä• aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa samanantarÄ• up anantarapaccayakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(139) 4. ariyarÅ«pakathÄ•

<698> ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• yÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ k kusalÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Se 529/ ... pe ... mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• abyÄ• katÄ• ti? Ä• mant abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ anÄ• savaá¹ƒ asaá¹ƒyojaniyaá¹ƒ aganthaniyaá¹ƒ anoghaniyaá¹ƒ ayoganiyaá aparÄ• maá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ anupÄ• dÄ• niyaá¹ƒ asaá¹ƒkilesiyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesiyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• sÄ• savÄ• saá¹ƒyojaniyÄ saá¹ƒkilesiyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ sÄ• savaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒyojaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... saá¹ƒki

vattabbe ... pe ....

<699> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``yaá¹ƒ kiÃ±ci, bhikkhave, rÅ«paá¹ƒ cattÄ• ri mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• ni ca
mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be 362/ upÄ• dÄ• yarÅ«paâ€™â€™ nti \Ne 403/ {MN I 347; AN c 1 Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• dÄ• yÄ• ti.

ariyarÅ«pakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(140) 5. aÃ±Ã±o anusayotikathÄ•

<700> aÃ±Ã±o kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti \Se 530/? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... svev kÄ• marÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sveva kÄ• marÄ• gÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ kÄ• m
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

aÃ±Ã±o paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ paá¹-ighapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã± paá¹-ighapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... taÃ±Ã±eva paá¹-ighaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ paá¹-ighapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sveva paá¹-ighÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ paá¹-ighapariyu
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

aÃ±Ã±o mÄ• nÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ mÄ• napariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±o m mÄ• napariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sveva mÄ• no taá¹ƒ mÄ• napari Ä• mantÄ• . sveva mÄ• nÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ mÄ• napariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb

aÃ±Ã±o \Ee 500/ diá¹-á¹-hÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hipariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hipariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ• va diá¹-á¹-hi ta diá¹-á¹-hipariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sveva diá¹-á¹-hÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hipariyu
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

aÃ±Ã±o vicikicchÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ± aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ• va vicikicch vicikicchÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sveva vicikicchÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ vicikicchÄ• p
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

aÃ±Ã±o \Be 363/ \Se 531/ bhavarÄ• gÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhavarÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• n bhavarÄ• go aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ bhavarÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sv bhavarÄ• gapariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sveva bhavarÄ• gÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ bhavarÄ
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

aÃ±Ã±o avijjÄ• nusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±Ä• av avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ• va avijjÄ• taá¹ƒ avijjÄ• pariy Ä• mantÄ• . sveva avijjÄ• nusayo taá¹ƒ avijjÄ• pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe .

<701> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``aÃ±Ã±o anusayo aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti? Ä puthujjano kusalÄ• byÄ• kate citte vattamÄ• ne ``sÄ• nusayoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mar ``pariyuá¹-á¹-hitoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi aÃ±Ã±o anusayo aÃ±
pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti. puthujjano kusalÄ• byÄ• kate citte vattamÄ• ne ``sarÄ• goâ€™â€™ t ``pariyuá¹-á¹-hitoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi aÃ±Ã±o rÄ• go aÃ±Ã pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• nanti.

aÃ±Ã±o anusayotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(141) 6. pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ cittavippayuttantikathÄ•

<702> pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ \Se 532/ cittavippayuttanti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá
pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ cittav Ä• mantÄ• . natthi sarÄ• gaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ sadosaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ samohaá¹ƒ \Ne 405/ cittaá¹ƒ ... p cittaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ cittanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu atthi sarÄ• gaá¹ƒ cit sadosaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ samohaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ ... pe ... akusalaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ citta haÃ±ci atthi sarÄ• gaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ sadosaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ samohaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ ... pe ... akusalaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒkiliá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ cittavippayut pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ cittavippayuttantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(142) 7. pariyÄ• pannakathÄ•

<703> rÅ«parÄ• go \Be 364/ \Ee 502/ rÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pann

samÄ• pattesiyo upapattesiyo diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, samÄ• pattesiyena cittena
diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagato sahajÄ• to saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho sampayutt ekavatthuko ekÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu \Se 533/ na samÄ• patt diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, na samÄ• pattesiyena cittena na upapattesiyena cittena n
diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagato sahajÄ• to saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho sampayutt ekavatthuko ekÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci na samÄ• pattesiyo na upapattesiyo n diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro ... pe ... ekÄ• rammaá¹‡o, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«p anuseti, rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti ... pe ....

rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddarÄ saddadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ a rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . gandharÄ• go ... pe ... rasarÄ• go ... pe ... phoá¹
phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatt saddarÄ• go \Ne 406/ saddadhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saddadhÄ• tupariyÄ• p rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™

... pe ... gandharÄ• go ... pe ... rasarÄ• go ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbarÄ• go \Ee 503/ phoá¹-á¹-anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe .

<704> arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ upapattesiyo diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, samÄ• pattesiyena cittena upapattesiyena c diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagato sahajÄ• to saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho sampayutt ekavatthuko \Be 365/ ekÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... nanu na samÄ• pat na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, na samÄ• pattesiyena cittena ... pe ... ekÄ• rammaá¹‡ samÄ• pattesiyo na upapattesiyo ... pe ... ekÄ• rammaá¹‡o, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``arÅ« arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti.

arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sadd saddadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹
arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . gandharÄ• go ... pe ... rasarÄ• go ... pe ... phoá
phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatt saddarÄ• go saddadhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saddadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™ arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ vattabbe ... pe ... gandharÄ• go ... pe ... rasarÄ• go ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbarÄ• go phoá¹-á¹-anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• .

arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? na

....

<705> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pan arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu kÄ• kÄ• madhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• madhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuse 407/, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ•
arÅ«padhÄ• tuá¹ƒ anuseti arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti.

pariyÄ• pannakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(143) 8. abyÄ• katakathÄ•

<706> diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• kataá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• byÄ• ka cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• yatananti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... diá¹-á 366/ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-higatasampayutto phasso abyÄ• katoti? na hevaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttÄ• \Ee 505/ vedanÄ• pe ... cetanÄ• ... pe ... cittaá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

diá¹-á¹-higatasampayutto \Se 536/ phasso akusaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ akusala vattabbe ... pe ... diá¹-á¹-higatasampayuttÄ• vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• cetanÄ• cittaá¹ƒ akusala diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ akusalanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<707> diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aphalaá¹ƒ avipÄ• kanti? na hevaá¹ƒ va saphalaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saphalaá¹ƒ savipÄ• kaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vatt ``diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti.

diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiparamÄ• ni vajjÄ• ni {
vuttÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiparamÄ• ni vajjÄ• ni vuttÄ• n vattabbe --- ``diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti.

diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ \Ne 408/ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``micc vaccha, akusalÄ• {akusalaá¹ƒ (MN II 194) }, sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi kusalÄ• â€™â€™ {kusalaá 194}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• ka diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu \Ee 506/ vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``micc ahaá¹ƒ, puá¹‡á¹‡a, dvinnaá¹ƒ gatÄ«naá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ gatiá¹ƒ vadÄ• mi --- nirayaá¹ƒ vÄ

vÄ• â€™â€™ ti {MN II 79}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``diá¹-abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti.

<708> na \Se 537/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• .
--- `` `sassato lokoâ€™ ti kho, vaccha, abyÄ• katametaá¹ƒ, `asassato lokoâ€™ ti kho, vacch `antavÄ• lokoâ€™ ti kho, vaccha, abyÄ• katametaá¹ƒ, `anantavÄ• lokoâ€™ ti kho, vaccha jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sarÄ«raâ€™ nti kho, vaccha ... pe ... `aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ sarÄ 367/, vaccha ... pe ... `hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™ ti kho, vaccha ... pe ... `na h paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™ ti kho, vaccha ... pe ... `hoti ca na ca hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ mara vaccha ... pe ... `neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™ ti kho, vaccha, ab nti {SN b IV 416, thokaá¹ƒ pana visadisaá¹ƒ}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi diá¹-á¹ abyÄ• katanti.

diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``micchÄ• diá¹-purisapuggalassa yaÃ±ceva kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ yathÄ• diá¹-á¹-hisamattaá¹ƒ samÄ• dinnaá¹ƒ
... yaÃ±ca manokammaá¹ƒ, yÄ• ca cetanÄ• , yÄ• ca patthanÄ• , yo ca paá¹‡idhi, ye ca saá dhammÄ• aniá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya akantÄ• ya amanÄ• pÄ• ya ahitÄ• ya dukkhÄ• ya saá¹ƒvattantÄ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nt abyÄ• katakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

14. cuddasamavaggo

(144) 9. apariyÄ• pannakathÄ•

<709> diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ \Ee 507/ \Ne 409/ \Se 538/ apariyÄ• pannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggo sotÄ• pattimaggo sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ, sakadÄ• gÄ• mimaggo sakadÄ• gÄ• miphalaá¹ƒ, anÄ arahattamaggo arahattaphalaá¹ƒ, satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ sammappadhÄ• naá¹ƒ iddhipÄ• do bojjhaá¹…goti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<710> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ apariyÄ• pannaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . puth vÄ«tarÄ• goâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``vigatadiá¹-á¹-hiyoâ€™â€™ ti vattabboti? n hi diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ apariyÄ• pannanti.

apariyÄ• pannakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

cuddasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

akusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Be 368/ paá¹-isandahati kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ paá¹-isandah saá¸·Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ chaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akÄ• yÄ• , ariyarÅ«paá¹ƒ mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ upÄ• c pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ, pariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ cittavippayuttaá¹ƒ, yathÄ• dhÄ• tu taÃ±Ã±eva diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataá¹ƒ, diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ apariyÄ• pannanti.

15. pannarasamavaggo

(145) 1. paccayatÄ• kathÄ•

<711> paccayatÄ• \Se 539/ \Ee 508/ vavatthitÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• hetu, Ä• mantÄ• \Ne 410/. haÃ±ci vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• hetu, so ca adhipati, tena vata re vattabbe --- `` adhipatipaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu chandÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, sahajÄ• ta ti.

<712> nanu vÄ«riyÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``adhipatipaccayena p sahajÄ• tapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu vÄ«riyÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca indriyanti? Ä• m
vÄ«riyÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca indriyaá¹ƒ, tena vata r ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, indriyapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu vÄ«riyÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca maggaá¹…gant vÄ«riyÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, tena ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, maggapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

<713> nanu \Be 369/ \Se 540/ cittÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipatÄ«t haÃ±ci cittÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ` paccayo, sahajÄ• tapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu cittÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, so ca Ä• hÄ• roti? Ä• mant sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, so ca Ä• hÄ• ro, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``adh Ä• hÄ• rapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu cittÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca indriyanti? Ä• mant \Ne 411/ sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca indriyaá¹ƒ, tena vata re vattab ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, indriyapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

<714> nanu vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipatÄ«ti? Ä• mar
sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``adhipatipaccayena p
sahajÄ• tapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca indriyanti?
vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca indriyaá¹ƒ, tena v ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, indriyapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati, taÃ±ca maggaá¹…
vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• dhipati sahajÄ• tÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ adhipati \Se 541/, taÃ±ca maggaá
--- ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, maggapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

<715> nanu ariyaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• uppajjati paccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• , taÃ±cÄ• ra haÃ±ci ariyaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• uppajjati paccavekkhaá¹‡Ä• , taÃ±cÄ• ramma vattabbe --- ``adhipatipaccayena paccayo, Ä• rammaá¹‡apaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

<716> nanu purimÄ• purimÄ• kusalÄ• dhammÄ• pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ kus anantarapaccayena paccayo, sÄ• ca Ä• sevanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \Be 370/ \Ee 510/dhammÄ• pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ anantarapac tena vata re vattabbe --- ``anantarapaccayena paccayo, Ä• sevanapaccayena paccayoâ€™

nanu purimÄ• purimÄ• akusalÄ• dhammÄ• pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ akusalÄ• anantarapaccayena paccayo, sÄ• ca Ä• sevanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci purimÄ• purimÄ• pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ anantarapaccayena pa vata re vattabbe --- ``anantarapaccayena paccayo, Ä• sevanapaccayena paccayoâ€™â€™ nanu \Ne 412/ purimÄ• purimÄ• kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchim dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ anantarapaccayena paccayo, sÄ• ca \Se 542/ Ä• sevanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• .

kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• dhammÄ• pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ pacchimÄ• naá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• byÄ• katÄ• naá¹ƒ paccayo, sÄ• ca Ä• sevanÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``anantarapaccayena paccayo, Ä• s paccayoâ€™â€™ ti.

<717> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paccayatÄ• vavatthitÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . hetupaccayen

Ä• rammaá¹‡apaccayena paccayo hoti, anantarapaccayena paccayo hoti, samanantarapac hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi paccayatÄ• vavatthitÄ• ti.

paccayatÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(146) 2. aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±apaccayakathÄ•

<718> avijjÄ• paccayÄ• va saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…khÄ• rapaccayÄ• p nanu avijjÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rena sahajÄ• tÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 511/. haÃ±ci avijjÄ• saá¹…kh re vattabbe --- ``avijjÄ• paccayÄ• pi saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , saá¹…khÄ• rapaccayÄ• pi avijjÄ• â€™

taá¹‡hÄ• paccayÄ• va upÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``upÄ• dÄ• napaccayÄ• pi taá¹‡ taá¹‡hÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nena sahajÄ• tÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci taá¹‡hÄ• upÄ• dÄ• nena \Be vattabbe --- ``taá¹‡hÄ• paccayÄ• pi upÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, upÄ• dÄ• napaccayÄ• pi taá¹‡hÄ• â€™

<719> ``jarÄ• maraá¹‡apaccayÄ• \Se 543/, bhikkhave, jÄ• ti, jÄ• tipaccayÄ• bhavoâ€™â€ \Ne 413/? natthi. tena hi avijjÄ• paccayÄ• va saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• , na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…kh avijjÄ• â€™â€™ ti. taá¹‡hÄ• paccayÄ• va upÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``upÄ• dÄ• n

``viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡apaccayÄ• , bhikkhave, nÄ• marÅ«paá¹ƒ, nÄ• marÅ«papaccayÄ• pi viÃ±Ã± thokaá¹ƒ pana visadisaá¹ƒ} --- attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi avijjÄ• paccayÄ• pi sa saá¹…khÄ• rapaccayÄ• pi avijjÄ• ; taá¹‡hÄ• paccayÄ• pi upÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ, upÄ• dÄ• napac aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±apaccayakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(147) 3. addhÄ• kathÄ•

<720> addhÄ• parinipphannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«panti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedan
... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atÄ«to ad parinipphannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«panti \Ee 512/? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... anÄ• gato a parinipphannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«panti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paccuppanno \Se

parinipphannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«panti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atÄ«taá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ atÄ«to addhÄ paÃ±caddhÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... anÄ• gataá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ anÄ• gato addhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . anÄ• gatÄ• paÃ±caddhÄ• ti? na heva paccuppannaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Ne 414/ vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ paccuppannÄ• paÃ±caddhÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atÄ«tÄ• paÃ±cakkhandhÄ• \Be 372/ atÄ«to addhÄ• , anÄ• gatÄ• paÃ±cakkhandhÄ• anÄ
paÃ±cakkhandhÄ• paccuppanno addhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . pannarasaddhÄ• ti \Ee 513/? na h atÄ«tÄ• ni dvÄ• dasÄ• yatanÄ• ni atÄ«to addhÄ• , anÄ• gatÄ• ni dvÄ• dasÄ• yatanÄ• ni an dvÄ• dasÄ• yatanÄ• ni paccuppanno addhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . chattiá¹ƒsa addhÄ• ti? na heva

atÄ«tÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasa dhÄ• tuyo atÄ«to addhÄ• , anÄ• gatÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasa dhÄ• tuyo paccuppannÄ• aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasa dhÄ• tuyo paccuppanno addhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . catupaÃ±Ã
vattabbe ... pe ....

atÄ«tÄ• ni bÄ• vÄ«satindriyÄ• ni atÄ«to addhÄ• , anÄ• gatÄ• ni bÄ• vÄ«satindriyÄ• ni anÄ
bÄ• vÄ«satindriyÄ• ni paccuppanno \Se 545/ addhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . chasaá¹-á¹-hi addhÄ•
pe ....

<721> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``addhÄ• parinipphannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ bhikkhave, kathÄ• vatthÅ«ni! katamÄ• ni tÄ«á¹‡i? atÄ«taá¹ƒ vÄ• , bhikkhave, addhÄ• naá¹ƒ katheyya --- `evaá¹ƒ ahosi atÄ«tamaddhÄ• naâ€™ nti; anÄ• gataá¹ƒ vÄ• , bhikkhave, addhÄ katheyya --- `evaá¹ƒ bhavissati anÄ• gatamaddhÄ• naâ€™ nti; etarahi vÄ• , bhikkhave, pac Ä• rabbha kathaá¹ƒ katheyya --- `evaá¹ƒ hoti etarahi paccuppannaâ€™ nti. imÄ• ni kho, bhi kathÄ• vatthÅ«nÄ«â€™â€™ ti {AN a III 68; DN III 305}. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena parinipphannoti.

addhÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(148) 4. khaá¹‡alayamuhuttakathÄ•

<722> khaá¹‡o \Ee 514/ \Ne 415/ parinipphanno, layo parinipphanno, muhuttaá¹ƒ parinipph

rÅ«panti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... viÃ±Ã
vattabbe ... pe ....

<723> na \Be 373/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``muhuttaá¹ƒ parinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá ``tÄ«á¹‡imÄ• ni, bhikkhave, kathÄ• vatthÅ«ni! katamÄ• ni tÄ«á¹‡i? atÄ«taá¹ƒ vÄ• , bhikkhav kathaá¹ƒ katheyya --- `evaá¹ƒ ahosi atÄ«tamaddhÄ• naâ€™ nti; anÄ• gataá¹ƒ \Se 546/ vÄ• Ä• rabbha kathaá¹ƒ katheyya --- `evaá¹ƒ bhavissati anÄ• gatamaddhÄ• naâ€™ nti; etarahi v paccuppannaá¹ƒ addhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kathaá¹ƒ katheyya --- `evaá¹ƒ hoti etarahi paccup bhikkhave, tÄ«á¹‡i kathÄ• vatthÅ«nÄ«â€™â€™ ti. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi m parinipphannanti.

khaá¹‡alayamuhuttakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(149) 5. Ä• savakathÄ•

<724> cattÄ• ro Ä• savÄ• anÄ• savÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggo phalaá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ, sotÄ
... pe ... bojjhaá¹…goti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<725> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``cattÄ• ro Ä• savÄ• anÄ• savÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthaÃ±Ã±eva Ä
Ä• savehi te Ä• savÄ• sÄ• savÄ• hontÄ«ti? na \Ee 515/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi cattÄ• r

Ä• savakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(150) 6. jarÄ• maraá¹‡akathÄ•

<726> lokuttarÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttaranti? Ä• mantÄ• . magg sotÄ• pattimaggo sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…goti \Se 547/? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe sotÄ• pattimaggassa jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ sotÄ• pattimaggoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... s jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ sotÄ• pattimaggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattiphalassa jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Be 374/ ... pe ... sakadÄ• gÄ• mimaggassa ... pe ... sakadÄ• gÄ• miphala anÄ• gÄ• mimaggassa ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• miphalassa ... pe ... arahattamaggassa jarÄ• mara na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arahattamaggassa jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ arahattamaggoti? Ä• m jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ arahattaphalanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• naá¹ sammappadhÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ ... iddhipÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ ... indriyÄ• naá¹ƒ ... balÄ• naá¹ƒ ... bojjha jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ bojjhaá¹…goti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<727> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``lokuttarÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttarant na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi lokuttaranti.

jarÄ• maraá¹‡akathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(151) 7. saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitakathÄ•

<728> saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti \Ee 516/ \Ne 417/ lokuttarÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
sotÄ• pattimaggo sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…goti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<729> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti \Se 548/ lokuttarÄ• ti? Ä hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi lokuttarÄ• ti.

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(152) 8. dutiyasaÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitakathÄ•

<730> saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti lokiyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«panti? na hevaá¹ƒ
... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• mÄ vattabbe ... pe ... rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• ti? na h
pe ....

<731> na \Be 375/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti lokiyÄ• ti? Ä• m hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi lokiyÄ• ti.

dutiyasaÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(153) 9. tatiyasaÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitakathÄ•

<732> saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ \Ee 517/ \Ne 418/ samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• t

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa mÄ• raá¹‡antiyo phasso, mÄ• raá¹‡antiyÄ•
saÃ±Ã±Ä• , mÄ• raá¹‡antiyÄ• cetanÄ• \Se 549/, mÄ• raá¹‡antiyaá¹ƒ cittanti? na hevaá¹ƒ v
saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa mÄ• raá¹‡antiyo phasso, mÄ• raá¹‡antiyÄ•
saÃ±Ã±Ä• , mÄ• raá¹‡antiyÄ• cetanÄ• , mÄ• raá¹‡antiyaá¹ƒ cittanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci n
saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa mÄ• raá¹‡antiyo phasso, mÄ• raá¹‡antiyÄ•
saÃ±Ã±Ä• , mÄ• raá¹‡antiyÄ• cetanÄ• , mÄ• raá¹‡antiyaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabb ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi saÃ±
samÄ• pannassa phasso vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• cetanÄ• cittanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe
saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa phasso vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• cetanÄ• citta kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• , avedanakassa kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• ... pe ... acittakassa kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• ti?
... pe ... nanu saphassakassa kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• ... pe ... sacittakassa kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• ti? Ä• saphassakassa kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• ... pe ... sacittakassa kÄ• laá¹ƒ kiriyÄ• , no ca vata re vatta ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . saÃ±Ã±Ä• kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ kameyya, satthaá¹ƒ kameyya, aggi kameyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ \Ee 518/ samÄ• pannassa kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ na kameyya, satth aggi na kameyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \Be 376/ saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pa kameyya, satthaá¹ƒ na kameyya, aggi na kameyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• v samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ \Ne 419/ samÄ• panno kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . s samÄ• pannassa kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ kameyya, satthaá¹ƒ kameyya, aggi kameyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<733> saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
niyato saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? natthi. haÃ±ci
niyÄ• mena niyato saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyya, no ca ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• panno na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti.

<734> cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi so n cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• ti? natthi. haÃ±ci natthi so niyÄ• cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« na kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``cakkh kÄ• laá¹ƒ kareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

tatiyasaÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(154) 10. asaÃ±Ã±asattupikakathÄ•

<735> saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti \Se 551/ asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa alobho kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Ee 519/, adoso ku kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, saddhÄ• vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ sati samÄ• dhi paÃ±Ã±Ä• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa alobho kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Be 377/, adoso ku paÃ±Ã±Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci natthi saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa al 420/ kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, amoho kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ, saddhÄ• vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ sati samÄ• dhi paÃ±Ã±
--- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi saÃ±Ã±Ä samÄ• pannassa phasso vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• cetanÄ• cittanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe
saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa phasso vedanÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• cetanÄ• citta maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ... pe ... acittakassa maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ...
maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ... pe ... sacittakassa maggabhÄ• vanÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saphass
... sacittakassa maggabhÄ• vanÄ• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhas asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti \Se 552/ asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ye ke samÄ• pajjanti, sabbe te asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<736> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• â€™ idhÄ• pi asaÃ±Ã±Ä« tatrÄ• pi asaÃ±Ã±Ä«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci idhÄ• pi asaÃ±Ã±Ä« tatrÄ• vattabbe --- ``saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti asaÃ±Ã±asattupikÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

asaÃ±Ã±asattupikakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

15. pannarasamavaggo

(155) 11. kammÅ«pacayakathÄ•

<737> aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ \Ee 520/ kammaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±o kammÅ«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±o ph aÃ±Ã±Ä• vedanÄ• , aÃ±Ã±o vedanÅ«pacayo; aÃ±Ã±Ä• saÃ±Ã±Ä• , aÃ±Ã±o saÃ±Ã±Å«pa aÃ±Ã±o cetanÅ«pacayo; aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±o cittÅ«pacayo; aÃ±Ã±Ä• saddhÄ• , a aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±o vÄ«riyÅ«pacayo; aÃ±Ã±Ä• sati, aÃ±Ã±o satÅ«pacayo \Be aÃ±Ã±o samÄ• dhÅ«pacayo; aÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , aÃ±Ã±o paÃ±Ã±Å«pacayo; aÃ±Ã±o rÄ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ anottappaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±o anottappÅ«pacayoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<738> aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ \Se 553/ kammaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±o kammÅ«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kammÅ«pa
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kammÅ«pacayo kammena sahajÄ• toti, Ä• mantÄ• . kusalena kammena sahajÄ• to kamm
vattabbe ... pe ....

kusalena kammena sahajÄ• to kammÅ«pacayo kusaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• y kammÅ«pacayo sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dukkhÄ adukkhamasukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttena kammena sahajÄ• to kammÅ«pacayo adu sampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<739> kammÅ«pacayo kammena sahajÄ• toti? Ä• mantÄ• . akusalena kammena sahajÄ• t
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

akusalena kammena sahajÄ• to kammÅ«pacayo akusaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . sukhÄ• ya \Ee 521
kammena sahajÄ• to kammÅ«pacayo sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vat vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... adukkhamasukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttena kammena sahajÄ• to vedanÄ• ya sampayuttoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<740> kammaá¹ƒ cittena sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ, kammaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . kamm
kammÅ«pacayo sÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kammÅ«pacayo cittena sa kammÅ«pacayo anÄ• rammaá¹‡oti \Se 554/? Ä• mantÄ• . kammaá¹ƒ cittena sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ,
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kammaá¹ƒ \Be 379/ cittena sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ, cittaá¹ƒ bhijjamÄ• naá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ bhijjatÄ«ti? Ä cittena sahajÄ• to, cittaá¹ƒ bhijjamÄ• naá¹ƒ kammÅ«pacayo bhijjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb kammÅ«pacayo cittena sahajÄ• to, cittaá¹ƒ bhijjamÄ• naá¹ƒ kammÅ«pacayo na bhijjatÄ«ti?

cittena sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ, cittaá¹ƒ bhijjamÄ• naá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ na bhijjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabl

<741> kammamhi kammÅ«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . taÃ±Ã±eva kammaá¹ƒ so kammÅ«pacay
....

kammamhi kammÅ«pacayo, kammÅ«pacayato vipÄ• ko nibbattatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . taÃ±Ã± kammÅ«pacayo, so kammavipÄ• koti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kammamhi kammÅ«pacayo, kammÅ«pacayato vipÄ• ko nibbattati, vipÄ• ko sÄ• rammaá¹‡ sÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kammÅ«pacayo anÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? Ä• ma anÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<742> aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±o kammÅ«pacayoti, Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhaga ekacco sabyÄ• bajjhampi abyÄ• bajjhampi {sabyÄ• pajjhampi abyÄ• pajjhampi (Katthaci) M kÄ• yasaá¹…khÄ• raá¹ƒ abhisaá¹…kharoti, sabyÄ• bajjhampi abyÄ• bajjhampi vacÄ«saá¹…
manosaá¹…khÄ• raá¹ƒ abhisaá¹…kharoti, so sabyÄ• bajjhampi abyÄ• bajjhampi kÄ• yasaá sabyÄ• bajjhampi \Se 555/ abyÄ• bajjhampi vacÄ«saá¹…khÄ• raá¹ƒ ... pe ... manosaá¹…kh sabyÄ• bajjhampi abyÄ• bajjhampi lokaá¹ƒ upapajjati. tamenaá¹ƒ sabyÄ• bajjhampi abyÄ• b upapannaá¹ƒ samÄ• naá¹ƒ sabyÄ• bajjhÄ• pi abyÄ• bajjhÄ• pi phassÄ• phusanti. so sabyÄ phassehi phuá¹-á¹-ho samÄ• no sabyÄ• bajjhampi abyÄ• bajjhampi vedanaá¹ƒ vedeti vokiá seyyathÄ• pi manussÄ• ekacce ca devÄ• ekacce \Ne 423/ ca vinipÄ• tikÄ• . iti kho, puá¹‡á upapatti hoti, yaá¹ƒ karoti tena upapajjati, upapannametaá¹ƒ phassÄ• phusanti. evampÄ• h `kammadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• \Be 380/ sattÄ• â€™ ti vadÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti {MN II 81}. attheva sutt vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±o kammÅ«pacayoâ€™â€™ ti.

kammÅ«pacayakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

pannarasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

paccayatÄ• \Ee 523/ vavatthitÄ• , paá¹-iccasamuppÄ• do, addhÄ• , khaá¹‡o layo muhuttaá anÄ• savÄ• , lokuttarÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ jarÄ• maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttarÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• v lokuttarÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhasamÄ• patti lokiyÄ• , saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ s sveva maggo asaÃ±Ã±asattupapattiyÄ• \Se 556/, aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±o kammÅ« tatiyo paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sako.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

anusayÄ• , saá¹ƒvaro, kappo, mÅ«laÃ±ca vavatthitÄ• ti.

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(156) 1. niggahakathÄ•

<743> paro \Ee 524/ parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ ``mÄ• dussiâ€™â€™, ``mÄ• muyhiâ€™â€™, ``mÄ• kilissÄ«â€™â€™ ti niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«t paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa uppanno phasso ``mÄ• niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paro parassa uppannÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ...
... uppannÄ• cetanÄ• ... uppannaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ ... uppannÄ• saddhÄ• ... uppannaá¹ƒ vÄ«riy uppannÄ• sati ... uppanno samÄ• dhi ... pe ... uppannÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• ``mÄ• nirujjhÄ«â€™â
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro \Be 381/ parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa atthÄ• ya rÄ• dosaá¹ƒ pajahati ... pe ... anottappaá¹ƒ pajahatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa atthÄ• ya maggaá¹ƒ bh satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…gaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti \Se 557/? na hevaá¹ƒ paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa atthÄ• ya dukkhaá¹ƒ pa pajahati, nirodhaá¹ƒ sacchikaroti, maggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±o \Ee 525/ aÃ±Ã±assa kÄ• rak dukkhaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±o karoti aÃ±Ã±o paá¹-isaá¹ƒvedetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``attanÄ• va kataá¹ƒ pÄ• paá¹ƒ, attanÄ• saá¹ƒkilissati.

attanÄ• akataá¹ƒ pÄ• paá¹ƒ, attanÄ• va visujjhati.

suddhi asuddhi paccattaá¹ƒ, nÄ• Ã±Ã±o aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ visodhayeâ€™â€™ ti {Dhp 165} ||

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡h

<744> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
atthi vasÄ«bhÅ«tÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi balappattÄ• , atthi vasÄ«bhÅ«tÄ• , tena vat parassa cittaá¹ƒ niggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

niggahakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(157) 2. paggahakathÄ•

<745> paro \Se 558/ \Ne 425/ parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro paras
â€™â€™ ``mÄ• dussi, â€™â€™ ``mÄ• muyhi, â€™â€™ ``mÄ• kilissÄ«â€™â€™ ti pagga
... pe ... paro \Be 382/ parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa alobh janeti ... adosaá¹ƒ kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ \Ee 526/ janeti ... amohaá¹ƒ kusalamÅ«laá¹ƒ janeti ... sa vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ janeti ... satiá¹ƒ janeti ... samÄ• dhiá¹ƒ janeti ... paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ janetÄ«ti? na hevaá pe ... paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa uppanno phasso paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paro parassa uppannÄ• vedanÄ• ... pe ..
``mÄ• nirujjhÄ«â€™â€™ ti paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa atthÄ• ya rÄ• gaá¹ƒ pa pajahati ... mohaá¹ƒ pajahati ... pe ... anottappaá¹ƒ pajahatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa atthÄ• ya maggaá¹ƒ b satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ bhÄ• veti ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…gaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa atthÄ• ya dukkhaá¹ƒ p maggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro \Se 559/ parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±o aÃ±Ã±assa kÄ• ra dukkhaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±o karoti aÃ±Ã±o paá¹-isaá¹ƒvedetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``atta pÄ• paá¹ƒ ... pe ... nÄ• Ã±Ã±o aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ visodhayeâ€™â€™ ti. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mar vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<746> na \Ne 426/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• balappattÄ• , atthi vasÄ«bhÅ«tÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi balappattÄ• , atthi vasÄ«bhÅ« vattabbe --- ``paro parassa cittaá¹ƒ paggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

paggahakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(158) 3. sukhÄ• nuppadÄ• nakathÄ•

<747> paro \Be 383/ parassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro parassa dukkhaá hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paro parassa dukkhaá¹ƒ na anuppadetÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paro par 560/ anuppadetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paro parassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«ti? Ä attano sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadeti, aÃ±Ã±esaá¹ƒ sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadeti, tassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppade
... pe ... paro parassa nevattano, na aÃ±Ã±esaá¹ƒ, na tassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«ti? Ä• m parassa nevattano, na aÃ±Ã±esaá¹ƒ, na tassa sukhaá¹ƒ \Ee 528/ anuppadeti, no ca vata re parassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

paro parassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±o aÃ±Ã±assa kÄ• rako, paraá¹.
aÃ±Ã±o karoti aÃ±Ã±o paá¹-isaá¹ƒvedetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<748> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``paro parassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . n etadavoca --- ``bahÅ«naá¹ƒ vata no bhagavÄ• dukkhadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ apahattÄ• , bahÅ«n sukhadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ upahattÄ• , bahÅ«naá¹ƒ vata no bhagavÄ• akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ no bhagavÄ• kusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ upahattÄ• â€™â€™ ti {MN II 148 laá¹-ukikopa Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi paro parassa sukhaá¹ƒ anuppadetÄ«ti.

sukhÄ• nuppadÄ• nakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(159) 4. adhigayhamanasikÄ• rakathÄ•

<749> adhigayha \Se 561/ \Ne 427/ manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena cittena taá¹ƒ cittaá hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... tena cittena taá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ pajÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Be 384/. t cittaá¹ƒ ``cittaâ€™â€™ nti pajÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... tena cittena taá¹ƒ ``cittaâ€™â€™ nti pajÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . taá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ tassa cittassa Ä• rammaá¹‡a
vattabbe ... pe ....

taá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ tassa cittassa Ä• rammaá¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena phassena taá¹ƒ phassaá¹ƒ vedanÄ• ya ... pe ... tÄ• ya saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya ... tÄ• ya cetanÄ• ya ... tena cittena ... tena vitakke vicÄ• rena ... tÄ• ya pÄ«tiyÄ• ... tÄ• ya satiyÄ• ... tÄ• ya paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya taá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ p
vattabbe ... pe ....

<750> atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ n hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``an manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ sa
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ n hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, paccuppannaá¹ƒ
manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ sa
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atÄ«taá¹ƒ \Se 562/ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™
paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe
``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti \Ne 428/ manas ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... p cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<751> anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ n
530/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, atÄ«t manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ sa
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, paccuppan nti manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

anÄ• gataá¹ƒ \Be 385/ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™
paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe
``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasi karoti, pacc ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... p
cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<752> paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto \Se 563/, atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``a karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti mana ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dvinn samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™
\Ee 531/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paccuppannaá¹ƒ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasikar ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... d samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paccuppannaá¹ƒ \Ne 429/ ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... pacc ``paccuppannaâ€™â€™ nti manasikaronto, atÄ«taá¹ƒ ``atÄ«taâ€™â€™ nti manasi karoti, a ``anÄ• gataâ€™â€™ nti manasi karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tiá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ..
samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<753> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``adhigayha manasi karotÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá

``sabbe saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• aniccÄ• ti, yadÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya passati.

atha nibbindati dukkhe, esa maggo visuddhiyÄ• ||

``sabbe saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• dukkhÄ• ti, yadÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya passati.

atha nibbindati dukkhe, esa maggo visuddhiyÄ• ||

``sabbe \Se 564/ dhammÄ• anattÄ• ti, yadÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya passati.

atha nibbindati dukkhe, esa maggo visuddhiyÄ• â€™â€™ ti {Dhp 277-279} ||

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi adhigayha manasi karotÄ«ti.

adhigayhamanasikÄ• rakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(160) 5. rÅ«paá¹ƒ hetÅ«tikathÄ•

<754> rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Be 386/ \Ee 532/ hetÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . alobho hetÅ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab
... pe ... amoho hetu ... lobho hetu ... doso hetu ... moho hetÅ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Ne 430/ hetÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ..

hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ...
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, n
--- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ hetÅ«â€™â€™ ti.

<755> alobho hetu sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä•
sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

... amoho hetu ... lobho hetu ... doso hetu ... moho hetu sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Se 565/ hetu sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ hetu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä•
anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe hetu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \ amoho hetu ... lobho hetu ... doso hetu ... moho hetu anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹
paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<756> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ hetÅ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu mahÄ• bhÅ«tÄ•
{upÄ• dÄ• rÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ (Ce Ee Katthaci) } upÄ• dÄ• yahetÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci mahÄ upÄ• dÄ• yahetu, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ hetÅ«â€™â€™ ti.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ hetÅ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(161) 6. rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukantikathÄ•

<757> rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Be 387/ sahetukanti? Ä• mantÄ• . alobhahetunÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Ne 431/ ... pe ... amohahetunÄ• ti ... pe ... lobhahetunÄ• ... pe ... dosahetunÄ• ... pe ... mo
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Se 566/ sahetukanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, n
--- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukaâ€™â€™ nti.

<758> alobho sahetuko sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti
sahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na heva
... adoso \Ee 534/ sahetuko ... pe ... amoho ... saddhÄ• ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... sati ... samÄ• dhi ... lobho ... doso ... moho ... mÄ• no ... diá¹-á¹-hi ... vicikicchÄ• ... thinaá¹ƒ ... uddhaccaá¹ƒ ... a ... anottappaá¹ƒ sahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡
rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«
... pe ....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idh

sahetuko anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ
rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idh sahetuko ... pe ... anottappaá¹ƒ sahetukaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-a paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<759> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu rÅ«paá¹ƒ sa Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci rÅ«paá¹ƒ sappaccayaá¹ƒ, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetuka rÅ«paá¹ƒ sahetukantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(162) 7. rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalÄ• kusalantikathÄ•

<760> rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Be 388/ \Ne 432/ kusalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \Ee 535/ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-an ca vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalaâ€™â€™ nti.

<761> alobho kusalo sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä
kusalaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹

adoso kusalo ... pe ... amoho kusalo ... pe ... saddhÄ• ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... sati ... samÄ• dhi ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• kusalÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti?
kusalaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹

rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«
kusalo anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• \Se 568/ ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na h
....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«
kusalo ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• kusalÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<762> rÅ«paá¹ƒ akusalanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• .
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ...

433/? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡ vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ akusalaâ€™â€™ nti ... pe ....

<763> lobho akusalo sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä
rÅ«paá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti
... pe ... doso ... moho ... mÄ• no ... pe ... anottappaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti \Be 389/? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ sÄ• ram
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ akusalo anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ
rÅ«paá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ moho ... pe ... anottappaá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ•
na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<764> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nan vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ vacÄ«ka vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalÄ• kusalantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(163) 8. rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• kotikathÄ•

<765> rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• koti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ dukkhavedaniyaá¹ƒ a 537/, sukhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttaá¹ƒ, dukkhÄ• ya vedanÄ• ya sampayuttaá¹ƒ, adukk vedanÄ• ya sampayuttaá¹ƒ, phassena sampayuttaá¹ƒ ... pe ... cittena sampayuttaá¹ƒ, sÄ• r Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu na sukhavedaniy dukkhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá haÃ±ci na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ na dukkhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi tas pe ... paá¹‡idhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti.

<766> phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso sukhavedaniyo dukkhavedaniyo ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡o \ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, rÅ«paá¹ƒ sukhaved dukkhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡i
vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko \Be 390/, rÅ«paá¹ƒ na sukhavedaniyaá¹ƒ na dukkhavedaniyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . phasso vipÄ• ko, phasso n dukkhavedaniyo ... pe ... anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ
vattabbe ... pe ....

<767> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu kammassa ka cittacetasikÄ• dhammÄ• vipÄ• koti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kammassa katattÄ• uppannÄ• c tena vata re vattabbe --- ``kammassa katattÄ• uppannaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• kotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(164) 9. rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarantikathÄ•

<768> atthi \Ee 538/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacaranti? Ä• mantÄ• . samÄ• pattesiyaá¹ƒ upapatte
diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ, samÄ• pattesiyena cittena upapattesiyena cittena
diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagataá¹ƒ \Ne 435/ sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsaá¹-á 571/ ekuppÄ• daá¹ƒ ekanirodhaá¹ƒ ekavatthukaá¹ƒ ekÄ• rammaá¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab samÄ• pattesiyaá¹ƒ na upapattesiyaá¹ƒ na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ, na samÄ• p upapattesiyena cittena na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagataá¹ƒ sahajÄ• t sampayuttaá¹ƒ ekuppÄ• daá¹ƒ ekanirodhaá¹ƒ ekavatthukaá¹ƒ ekÄ• rammaá¹‡anti? Ä• man
samÄ• pattesiyaá¹ƒ na upapattesiyaá¹ƒ na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ, na samÄ• p
... ekÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacaraâ€™â€™ n

<769> atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ arÅ«pÄ• vacaranti? Ä• mantÄ• . samÄ• pattesiyaá¹ƒ upapattesiyaá¹ƒ
diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ, samÄ• pattesiyena cittena upapattesiyena cittena
diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagataá¹ƒ sahajÄ• taá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ s ekanirodhaá¹ƒ ekavatthukaá¹ƒ ekÄ• rammaá¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu na s upapattesiyaá¹ƒ na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• raá¹ƒ, na samÄ• pattesiyena cittena \Be 3 ekÄ• rammaá¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci na samÄ• pattesiyaá¹ƒ na upapattesiyaá¹ƒ ... pe ...
ekÄ• rammaá¹‡aá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ arÅ«pÄ• vacaraâ€™â€™ nt

<770> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ arÅ«pÄ• vacar
nanu kÄ• mÄ• vacarakammassa katattÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacaranti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±c rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ \Se 572/ \Ee 539/, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«pÄ• vacaraka rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ, arÅ«pÄ• vacarakammassa katattÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ arÅ«pÄ• vacaraâ€™â€™ rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacarÄ• rÅ«pÄ• vacarantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

16. soá¸·asamavaggo

(165) 10. rÅ«pÄ• rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannakathÄ•

<771> rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . samÄ• pattesiyo upapattes diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, samÄ• pattesiyena cittena upapattesiyena cittena diá¹-á¹-cittena \Ne 436/ sahagato sahajÄ• to saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho sampayutto ekuppÄ• do ekanirodho e ekÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu na samÄ• pattesiyo na upapattesiyo diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, na samÄ• pattesiyena cittena ... pe ... ekavatthuko ekÄ• r
haÃ±ci na samÄ• pattesiyo na upapattesiyo na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, na samÄ•
... ekavatthuko ekÄ• rammaá¹‡o, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupari

<772> rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddarÄ• go saddadhÄ• tu vattabbe ... pe ... rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . gandharÄ• go ...
... phoá¹-á¹-habbarÄ• go phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe saddarÄ• go \Se 573/ \Be 392/ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saddadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... gan rasarÄ• go ... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbarÄ• go na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 540/. rÅ«parÄ• go na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™

pe ....

<773> arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . arÅ«parÄ• go na vattabb
``arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ Ä• mantÄ• . samÄ• pattesiyo upapattesiyo diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, samÄ• pattesi cittena diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagato sahajÄ• to saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho sam ekanirodho ekavatthuko ekÄ• rammaá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu na samÄ• p na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, na samÄ• pattesiyena cittena ... pe ... ekavatthuko ekÄ
haÃ±ci na samÄ• pattesiyo na upapattesiyo na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• ro, na samÄ• upapattesiyena cittena na diá¹-á¹-hadhammasukhavihÄ• rena cittena sahagato sahajÄ• to s ekuppÄ• do ekanirodho ekavatthuko ekÄ• rammaá¹‡o, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``arÅ«parÄ arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti.

<774> arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . saddarÄ• go saddadhÄ• hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? Ä• mantÄ• . gandh
... pe ... phoá¹-á¹-habbarÄ• go phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

saddarÄ• go na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saddadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arÅ ``arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... gandharÄ• go ... p
... phoá¹-á¹-habbarÄ• go na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``phoá¹-á¹-habbadhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? na \Ee 541/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe

<775> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• panno, arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«pa Ä• mantÄ• . nanu kÄ• marÄ• go kÄ• madhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoti \Be 393/? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ± kÄ• madhÄ• tupariyÄ• panno, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ•
arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti.

rÅ«parÄ• go rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• panno arÅ«parÄ• go arÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannotikath rÅ«pÄ• rÅ«padhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

soá¸·asamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

cittaniggaho, cittapaggaho, sukhÄ• nuppadÄ• naá¹ƒ, adhigayha manasikÄ• ro, rÅ«paá¹ƒ he rÅ«paá¹ƒ kusalampi akusalampi, rÅ«paá¹ƒ vipÄ• ko, atthi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ atthi arÅ«pÄ• vacaraá¹ƒ, sabbe kilesÄ• kÄ• madhÄ• tupariyÄ• pannÄ• ti.

á¹• 11 17. sattarasamavaggo

(166) 1. arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayakathÄ•

<776> atthi \Ee 542/ \Ne 438/ arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi arahato apuÃ± vattabbe ... pe ... natthi arahato apuÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«
vattabbe ... pe ....

<777> atthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• puÃ±Ã±Ä• bhisaá¹…khÄ• ra Ä• neÃ±jÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• raá¹ƒ abhisaá¹…kharoti, gatisaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karoti kammaá¹ƒ karoti, issariyasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karoti, adhipaccasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ {Ä• dhipaccasaá¹ƒvattanikaá¹ƒ (?) } kammaá¹ƒ karoti, mahÄ• bhogasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kam mahÄ• parivÄ• rasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karoti, devasobhagyasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kam manussasobhagyasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<778> atthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• Ä• cinÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ v apacinÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Be 394/ ... pe ... arahÄ• pajahatÄ«ti ... pe ... arahÄ• pe ... arahÄ• visinetÄ«ti ... pe ... arahÄ• ussinetÄ«ti ... pe ... arahÄ• vidhÅ«petÄ«ti \Se 576 arahÄ• sandhÅ«petÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu \Ee 543/ arahÄ• nevÄ• cinÄ• apacinitvÄ• á¹-hitoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• nevÄ• cinÄ• ti nÄ• pacinÄ• ti apacinitvÄ• vattabbe --- ``atthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu arahÄ• neva pajahati na upÄ• diyati pajahitvÄ• á¹-hito, neva visineti na ussineti visin neva vidhÅ«peti na sandhÅ«peti vidhÅ«petvÄ• á¹-hitoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• neva vidhÅ«petvÄ• á¹-hito, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoâ€™â€™

<779> natthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadeyyÄ• ti? Ä• dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadeyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``natthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoâ€™â€™ t arahÄ• cÄ«varaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... pe ... piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ dadeyya ... senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ dadey gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• raá¹ƒ dadeyya ... khÄ• danÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... bhojanÄ pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... cetiyaá¹ƒ vandeyya ... cetiye mÄ• laá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya ... gandhaá¹ƒ vilepanaá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya ... pe ... cetiyaá¹ƒ abhidakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ {padakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ (?) } kareyy haÃ±ci arahÄ• cetiyaá¹ƒ abhidakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ kareyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``natthi arah puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayoâ€™â€™ ti.

atthi arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(167) 2. natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«tikathÄ•

<780> natthi \Se 577/ arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi arahantaghÄ• takoti? n
... atthi arahantaghÄ• takoti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi \Be 395/ \Ee 544/ arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«ti?
... pe ... natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . yo arahantaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropeti, sati jÄ«vitÄ• vasese jÄ«vitÄ• voropeti, asati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vasese jÄ«vitÄ• voropetÄ«ti? sati j jÄ«vitÄ• vasese jÄ«vitÄ• voropetÄ«ti. haÃ±ci sati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vasese jÄ«vitÄ• voropeti vattabbe --- ``natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«â€™â€™ ti. asati jÄ«vite jÄ«vitÄ• vasese jÄ«vit arahantaghÄ• takoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<781> natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahato kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ na kameyya, s na kameyyÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu arahato kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ kameyya \Ne 44 aggi kameyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahato kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ kameyya, satthaá¹ƒ kameyya re vattabbe --- ``natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«â€™â€™ ti.

arahato kÄ• ye visaá¹ƒ na kameyya, satthaá¹ƒ na kameyya, aggi na kameyyÄ• ti? Ä• mant
arahantaghÄ• takoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<782> atthi \Se 578/ arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- saÃ±cetanikÄ• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ katÄ• naá¹ƒ upacitÄ• naá¹ƒ appaá¹-isaá¹ƒveditvÄ• by kho diá¹-á¹-heva dhamme upapajjaá¹ƒ vÄ• apare vÄ• pariyÄ• yeâ€™â€™ ti. attheva sutta tena hi natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«ti.

natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccÅ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(168) 3. sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammatotikathÄ•

<783> sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kammampi kammatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe kammatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbamidaá¹ƒ pubbekatahetÅ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ \Be 396/ vattabbe ... kammatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammavipÄ• katoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<784> sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammavipÄ• katoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kammavipÄ• kena pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ han pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• to saphaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . kammavipÄ• ko saphaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe aphaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• to aphaloti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

kammavipÄ• kena \Ne 441/ adinnaá¹ƒ Ä• diyeyya ... pe ... musÄ• bhaá¹‡eyya ... pisuá¹‡aá pharusaá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡eyya ... samphaá¹ƒ palapeyya ... sandhiá¹ƒ chindeyya ... nillopaá¹ƒ harey ekÄ• gÄ• rikaá¹ƒ kareyya ... paripanthe tiá¹-á¹-heyya ... paradÄ• raá¹ƒ gaccheyya ... gÄ• ma kareyya ... nigamaghÄ• takaá¹ƒ kareyya ... kammavipÄ• kena dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadeyya ... cÄ«var piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ dadeyya ... senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ dadeyya ... gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ Ä• mantÄ• . gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• ro saphaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . kammavipÄ• ko s
... pe ... kammavipÄ• ko aphaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• ro aphalo
... pe ....

<785> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammatoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ

``kammunÄ• vattatÄ« {vattati (Ee Katthaci, MN II 460), vattate (?) } loko, kammunÄ• vatta Katthaci, MN II 460), vattate (?) } pajÄ• .

kammanibandhanÄ• sattÄ• , rathassÄ• á¹‡Ä«va yÄ• yato {MN II 460; Sn 659} ||

``kammena kittiá¹ƒ labhate pasaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ, kammena jÄ• niÃ±ca vadhaÃ±ca bandhaá¹ƒ.

taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ nÄ• nÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ viditvÄ• ,

kasmÄ• vade natthi kammanti lokeâ€™â€™ ti ||

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi ``sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammatoâ€™â€™ ti.

sabbamidaá¹ƒ kammatotikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(169) 4. indriyabaddhakathÄ•

<786> indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva \Be 397/ dukkhanti? Ä• mantÄ• . indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva \Se saá¹…khataá¹ƒ paá¹-iccasamuppannaá¹ƒ \Ee 547/ \Ne 442/ khayadhammaá¹ƒ vayadhamm nirodhadhammaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anindriya saá¹…khataá¹ƒ paá¹-iccasamuppannaá¹ƒ khayadhammaá¹ƒ vayadhammaá¹ƒ virÄ• gadham vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anindriyabaddhaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khata khayadhammaá¹ƒ vayadhammaá¹ƒ virÄ• gadhammaá¹ƒ nirodhadhammaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• ma
--- ``indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti.

anindriyabaddhaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khataá¹ƒ paá¹-iccasamuppannaá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariá¹‡Ä na dukkhanti? Ä• mantÄ• . indriyabaddhaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariá¹‡Ä• dukkhanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

indriyabaddhaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammaá¹ƒ, taÃ±ca du {idaá¹ƒ-pucchÄ• dvayena purimapucchÄ• dvayassa purato bhavitabbaá¹ƒ}? Ä• mantÄ• . an saá¹…khataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammaá¹ƒ, taÃ±ca dukkhanti {idaá¹ƒ-pucchÄ• dvay purato bhavitabbaá¹ƒ}? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<787> indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva dukkhanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``anindriyabaddhaá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci yadaniccaá¹ 15} vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- anindriyabaddhaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``indr dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti.

<788> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva dukkhaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . yathÄ pariÃ±Ã±Ä• ya bhagavati brahmacariyaá¹ƒ vussati, evamevaá¹ƒ anindriyabaddhassa dukkh brahmacariyaá¹ƒ vussatÄ«ti \Se 581/? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... yathÄ• indriyabaddhaá pariÃ±Ã±Ä• taá¹ƒ na puna uppajjati \Ee 548/, evamevaá¹ƒ anindriyabaddhaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ p uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva dukkhanti.

indriyabaddhakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(170) 5. á¹-hapetvÄ• ariyamaggantikathÄ•

<789> á¹-hapetvÄ• \Be 398/ \Ne 443/ ariyamaggaá¹ƒ avasesÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• dukkhÄ• dukkhoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dukkhasamudayopi dukkhoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tÄ«á¹‡ev hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... tÄ«á¹‡eva ariyasaccÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu cattÄ• ri ariyasa bhagavatÄ• --- dukkhaá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudayo, dukkhanirodho, dukkhanirodhagÄ• minÄ« pa cattÄ• ri ariyasaccÄ• ni vuttÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• --- dukkhaá¹ƒ, dukkhasamudayo, dukkhanirod paá¹-ipadÄ• ; no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``tÄ«á¹‡eva ariyasaccÄ• nÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

dukkhasamudayopi dukkhoti? Ä• mantÄ• . kenaá¹-á¹-henÄ• ti? aniccaá¹-á¹-hena. ariyamag ariyamaggo dukkhoti? na \Ee 549/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

ariyamaggo anicco, so ca na dukkhoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dukkhasamudayo anicco, so ca na duk vattabbe ... pe ... dukkhasamudayo anicco, so ca dukkhoti? Ä• mantÄ• . ariyamaggo anicco
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<790> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``á¹-hapetvÄ• ariyamaggaá¹ƒ avasesÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• dukkhÄ sÄ• dukkhanirodhagÄ• minÄ« paá¹-ipadÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sÄ• dukkhanirodhagÄ• vattabbe --- ``á¹-hapetvÄ• ariyamaggaá¹ƒ avasesÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• dukkhÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

á¹-hapetvÄ• ariyamaggantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(171) 6. na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tikathÄ•

<791> na \Ne 444/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™
saá¹…gho Ä• huneyyo pÄ• huneyyo dakkhiá¹‡eyyo aÃ±jalikaraá¹‡Ä«yo anuttaraá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saá¹…gho Ä• huneyyo pÄ• huneyyo \Be 399/ dakkhiá¹‡eyyo aÃ±jalikar puÃ±Ã±akkhettaá¹ƒ lokassa, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•
aá¹-á¹-hapurisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci cattÄ purisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• \Se 583/ \Ee 550/ vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• , tena vata re vattab dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•
saá¹…ghassa dÄ• naá¹ƒ dentÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi keci saá¹…ghassa dÄ• naá¹ƒ d
--- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti. nanu atthi keci saá¹…ghass
... piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ denti ... senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ denti ... gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• ra khÄ• danÄ«yaá¹ƒ denti ... bhojanÄ«yaá¹ƒ denti ... pe ... pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹ƒ dentÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• saá¹…ghassa pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹ƒ denti, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•

``Ä• hutiá¹ƒ jÄ• tavedova, mahÄ• meghaá¹ƒva medanÄ«.

saá¹…gho samÄ• dhisampanno, paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• ti dakkhiá¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti ||

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti.

<792> saá¹…gho \Ne 445/ dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggo paá¹ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(172) 7. na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«tikathÄ•

<793> na \Ee 551/ \Se 584/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«â€™â€™
saá¹…gho Ä• huneyyo pÄ• huneyyo dakkhiá¹‡eyyo aÃ±jalikaraá¹‡Ä«yo anuttaraá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã

Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saá¹…gho Ä• huneyyo ... pe ... anuttaraá¹ƒ \Be 400/ puÃ±Ã±akkhettaá¹ vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu ca
aá¹-á¹-ha purisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci cattÄ
purisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho visodhetÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu att dÄ• naá¹ƒ datvÄ• dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhentÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi keci saá¹…gh dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhenti, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ

nanu atthi keci saá¹…ghassa cÄ«varaá¹ƒ datvÄ• ... pe ... piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ datvÄ• ... pe datvÄ• ... gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• raá¹ƒ datvÄ• ... khÄ• danÄ«yaá¹ƒ datvÄ• ... pe ... pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹ƒ \Ne 446/ datvÄ• dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhentÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci saá¹…ghassa pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹ƒ datvÄ• dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhenti, tena vata re vattabbe --- visodhetÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<794> saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggo \Ee 552/ visodheti, phal
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodhetÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(173) 8. na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jatÄ«tikathÄ•

<795> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• m saá¹…ghabhattÄ• ni karonti, uddesabhattÄ• ni karonti, yÄ• gupÄ• nÄ• ni karontÄ«ti? Ä• ma saá¹…ghabhattÄ• ni karonti, uddesabhattÄ• ni karonti, yÄ• gupÄ• nÄ• ni karonti, tena vata r ``saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

na \Be 401/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä bhagavatÄ• --- ``gaá¹‡abhojanaá¹ƒ paramparabhojanaá¹ƒ atirittabhojanaá¹ƒ anatirittabhoja Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``gaá¹‡abhojanaá¹ƒ paramparabhojanaá¹ƒ atir anatirittabhojanaá¹ƒâ€™â€™, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• da na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•

vuttÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• --- ambapÄ• naá¹ƒ, jambupÄ• naá¹ƒ \Se 586/, cocapÄ• naá¹ƒ, mocap {madhupÄ• naá¹ƒ (Ce Se Ke Ee) Vin I 300 pana passitabbaá¹ƒ} muddikapÄ• naá¹ƒ, sÄ• luk phÄ• rusakapÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci aá¹-á¹-ha pÄ• nÄ• ni vuttÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• --- a cocapÄ• naá¹ƒ, mocapÄ• naá¹ƒ, madhukapÄ• naá¹ƒ, muddikapÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ee 553/, sÄ• luka tena vata re vattabbe --- ``saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<796> saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . maggo bhuÃ±jati piva phalaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jati pivati khÄ• dati sÄ• yatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jatÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(174) 9. na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…ghassadinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalantikathÄ•

<797> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• .
pÄ• huneyyo dakkhiá¹‡eyyo aÃ±jalikaraá¹‡Ä«yo anuttaraá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±akkhettaá¹ƒ lokassÄ• t saá¹…gho Ä• huneyyo ... pe ... anuttaraá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±akkhettaá¹ƒ lokassa, tena vata re vattab dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu ca purisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci cattÄ• ro puris purisapuggalÄ• \Se 587/ dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``s mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti.

<798> na \Be 402/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• n bhagavatÄ• --- ``saá¹…ghe, gotami, dehi, saá¹…ghe te dinne ahaÃ±ceva pÅ«jito bhavissÄ• {MN III 376}. attheva \Ee 554/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahap na \Ne 448/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ---

``yajamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ manussÄ• naá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±apekkhÄ• na pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ.

karotaá¹ƒ opadhikaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, kattha dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalanti ||

``cattÄ• ro ca paá¹-ipannÄ• , cattÄ• ro ca phale á¹-hitÄ• .

esa saá¹…gho ujubhÅ«to, paÃ±Ã±Ä• sÄ«lasamÄ• hito ||

``yajamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ manussÄ• naá¹ƒ, puÃ±Ã±apekkhÄ• na pÄ• á¹‡inaá¹ƒ.

karotaá¹ƒ opadhikaá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, saá¹…ghe dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti {SN a I 2

``eso hi saá¹…gho vipulo mahaggato, esappameyyo udadhÄ«va sÄ• garo.

ete hi seá¹-á¹-hÄ• naravÄ«rasÄ• vakÄ• {narasÄ«hasÄ• vakÄ• (Katthaci) },

pabhaá¹…karÄ• dhammamudÄ«rayanti ||

``tesaá¹ƒ sudinnaá¹ƒ suhutaá¹ƒ suyiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, ye saá¹…ghamuddissa dadanti dÄ• naá¹ƒ.

sÄ• \Se 588/ dakkhiá¹‡Ä• saá¹…ghagatÄ• patiá¹-á¹-hitÄ• ,

mahapphalÄ• lokavidÅ«na vaá¹‡á¹‡itÄ• ||

``etÄ• disaá¹ƒ yaÃ±Ã±amanussarantÄ• , ye vedajÄ• tÄ• vicaranti {viharanti (Ce Katthaci) } loke.

vineyya maccheramalaá¹ƒ samÅ«laá¹ƒ,

aninditÄ• saggamupenti á¹-hÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti {Vv 645, 754} ||

attheva \Ee 555/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalanti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(175) 10. na vattabbaá¹ƒ buddhassadinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalantikathÄ•

<799> na \Be 403/ \Ne 449/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nt dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ aggo, dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-ho, dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ pamokkho, dvipadÄ• naá pavaro asamo asamasamo appaá¹-isamo appaá¹-ibhÄ• go appaá¹-ipuggaloti? Ä• mantÄ• .
aggo, dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ seá¹-á¹-ho, dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ pamokkho, dvipadÄ• naá¹ƒ uttamo, dvipa asamasamo appaá¹-isamo appaá¹-ibhÄ• go appaá¹-ipuggalo, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``buc mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi koci b sÄ«lena samÄ• dhinÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• yÄ• ti? natthi \Se 589/. haÃ±ci natthi koci buddhena sam samÄ• dhinÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``buddhassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vutta

``nayimasmiá¹ƒ vÄ• loke parasmiá¹ƒ \Ee 556/ vÄ• pana, buddhena seá¹-á¹-ho ca samo ca vijjati.

yamÄ• huneyyÄ• naá¹ƒ aggataá¹ƒ gato,

puÃ±Ã±atthikÄ• naá¹ƒ vipulapphalesinaâ€™â€™ nti {Vv 1047} ||

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi buddhassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalanti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ buddhassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

17. sattarasamavaggo

(176) 11. dakkhiá¹‡Ä• visuddhikathÄ•

<800> dÄ• yakatova \Ne 450/ dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . na paá¹-iggÄ• hakÄ• Ä• huneyyÄ• pÄ• huneyyÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• aÃ±jalikaraá¹‡Ä«yÄ• anu lokassÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Be 404/. haÃ±ci atthi keci paá¹-iggÄ• hakÄ• Ä• huneyyÄ• pÄ• hu aÃ±jalikaraá¹‡Ä«yÄ• anuttaraá¹ƒ puÃ±Ã±akkhettaá¹ƒ lokassa, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``d visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoâ€™â€™ ti.

dÄ• yakatova dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 590/. nanu cattÄ
aá¹-á¹-ha purisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci cattÄ
purisapuggalÄ• dakkhiá¹‡eyyÄ• vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``dÄ• yaka no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoâ€™â€™ ti.

dÄ• yakatova dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu \Ee 557/ atthi dÄ• naá¹ƒ datvÄ• dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhentÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi keci sotÄ• par dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhenti, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``dÄ• yakatova dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhati, paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoâ€™â€™ ti.

nanu atthi keci sakadÄ• gÄ• missa ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• missa ... pe ... arahato dÄ• naá¹ƒ dat Ä• rÄ• dhentÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi keci arahato dÄ• naá¹ƒ datvÄ• dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä vattabbe --- ``dÄ• yakatova dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoâ€™â€™ ti.

<801> paá¹-iggÄ• hakato dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±o aÃ±Ã±assa kÄ• ral sukhadukkhaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±o karoti aÃ±Ã±o paá¹-isaá¹ƒvedetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .

dÄ• yakatova dÄ• naá¹ƒ visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhag 451/ kho imÄ• , Ä• nanda, dakkhiá¹‡Ä• visuddhiyo! katamÄ• catasso? atthÄ• nanda, dakk visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakato; atthÄ• nanda, dakkhiá¹‡Ä• paá¹-iggÄ• hakato visujjhati, no atthÄ• nanda, dakkhiá¹‡Ä• dÄ• yakato ceva visujjhati paá¹-iggÄ• hakato ca; atthÄ• nanda, dÄ• yakato visujjhati, no paá¹-iggÄ• hakato. imÄ• kho, Ä• nanda, catasso dakkhiá¹‡Ä• visu 381}. attheva \Be 405/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``dÄ• yakatova dÄ•
paá¹-iggÄ• hakatoâ€™â€™ ti.

dakkhiá¹‡Ä• visuddhikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

sattarasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

atthi \Se 592/ \Ee 558/ arahato puÃ±Ã±Å«pacayo, natthi arahato akÄ• lamaccu, sabbamida indriyabaddhaÃ±Ã±eva dukkhaá¹ƒ, á¹-hapetvÄ• ariyamaggaá¹ƒ avasesÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• ti, saá¹…gho dakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ visodheti, saá¹…gho bhuÃ±jati saá¹…ghassa dinnaá¹ƒ mahapphalaá¹ƒ, atthi dÄ• naá¹ƒ visuddhiyÄ• ti {visujjhatÄ«ti (Se) }.

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(177) 1. manussalokakathÄ•

<802> na \Ee 559/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â

buddhavutthÄ• ni cetiyÄ• ni Ä• rÄ• mavihÄ• ragÄ• manigamanagarÄ• ni raá¹-á¹-hÄ• ni jana atthi buddhavutthÄ• ni cetiyÄ• ni Ä• rÄ• mavihÄ• ragÄ• manigamanagarÄ• ni raá¹-á¹-hÄ• ni vattabbe --- ``buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ
jÄ• to, bodhiyÄ• mÅ«le abhisambuddho, bÄ• rÄ• á¹‡asiyaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• dhammacakkaá 452/ cetiye Ä• yusaá¹…khÄ• ro ossaá¹-á¹-ho, kusinÄ• rÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• parinibbutoti? Ä bhagavÄ• lumbiniyÄ• jÄ• to ... pe ... kusinÄ• rÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• parinibbuto, tena vata re bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ
--- ``ekamidÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, samayaá¹ƒ ukkaá¹-á¹-hÄ• yaá¹ƒ viharÄ• mi subhagavane \Be 406/ {DN II 91}; ``ekamidÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, samayaá¹ƒ uruvelÄ• yaá¹ƒ viharÄ• mi aja paá¹-hamÄ• bhisambuddhoâ€™â€™ ti {AN a IV 21}; ``ekamidÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, samaya veá¸·uvane kaá¸·andakanivÄ• peâ€™â€™ ti {DN II 180}; ``ekamidÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, sam viharÄ• mi jetavane anÄ• thapiá¹‡á¸• ikassa Ä• rÄ• meâ€™â€™ ti \Ee 560/; ``ekamidÄ• ha vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ viharÄ• mi mahÄ• vane kÅ«á¹-Ä• gÄ• rasÄ• lÄ• yaâ€™â€™ nti {DN III 11}! at tena hi buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«ti.

<803> buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu bhagavÄ• lok lokaá¹ƒ abhibhuyya viharati anupalitto lokenÄ• ti {AN a IV 36}? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci bhagavÄ saá¹ƒvaá¸• á¸• ho, lokaá¹ƒ abhibhuyya viharati anupalitto lokena, no ca vata re vattabbe --- manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

manussalokakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(178) 2. dhammadesanÄ• kathÄ•

<804> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desitoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• desitoti. abhinimmito jino satthÄ• sammÄ• sambuddho sabbaÃ±Ã±Å« sabbadassÄ• vÄ« dh dhammappaá¹-isaraá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

na \Ne 453/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desitoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ Ä• nandena desitoti. Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando jino satthÄ• sammÄ• sambuddho sabbaÃ±Ã±Å dhammappaá¹-isaraá¹‡oti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<805> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desitoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•
bhagavatÄ• --- ``saá¹ƒkhittenapi kho ahaá¹ƒ, sÄ• riputta, dhammaá¹ƒ deseyyaá¹ƒ; vitthÄ• r ahaá¹ƒ, sÄ• riputta, dhammaá¹ƒ deseyyaá¹ƒ; saá¹ƒkhittavitthÄ• renapi kho ahaá¹ƒ, sÄ• ripu deseyyaá¹ƒ; aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• ro ca dullabhÄ• â€™â€™ ti {AN a III 33 sÄ• riputtasutte}! attheva tena hi buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desitoti.

<806> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desitoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•
`` `abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• yÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, dhammaá¹ƒ desemi, no anabhiÃ±Ã±Ä• ya; sanidÄ• r desemi, no anidÄ• naá¹ƒ \Se 595/; sappÄ• á¹-ihÄ• riyÄ• haá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, dhammaá¹ƒ des tassa {yaÃ±cassa (Ce Ee Katthaci) } mayhaá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• ya dhammaá¹ƒ des sanidÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ desayato no anidÄ• naá¹ƒ, sappÄ• á¹-ihÄ• riyaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ d karaá¹‡Ä«yo ovÄ• do karaá¹‡Ä«yÄ• anusÄ• sanÄ«; alaÃ±ca pana vo, bhikkhave, tuá¹-á¹-h alaá¹ƒ somanassÄ• ya --- sammÄ• sambuddho bhagavÄ• , svÄ• kkhÄ• to dhammo, suppaá imasmiÃ±ca pana veyyÄ• karaá¹‡asmiá¹ƒ bhaÃ±Ã±amÄ• ne dasasahassilokadhÄ• tu akam attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desitoti.

dhammadesanÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(179) 3. karuá¹‡Ä• kathÄ•

<807> natthi buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi buddhassa bhagavato 562/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... natthi buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . natth muditÄ• ... pe ... upekkhÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi buddhassa bhagavato mettÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti pe ... atthi buddhassa \Se 596/ bhagavato muditÄ• ... pe ... upekkhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi b karuá¹‡Ä• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

natthi \Be 408/ buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . bhagavÄ• akÄ• ruá¹‡ikoti pe ... nanu bhagavÄ• kÄ• ruá¹‡iko lokahito lokÄ• nukampako lokatthacaroti? Ä• mantÄ• . h lokahito lokÄ• nukampako lokatthacaro, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``natthi buddhassa bhaga ti ... pe ....

natthi buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu bhagavÄ• mahÄ• karuá¹‡Ä• Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci bhagavÄ• mahÄ• karuá¹‡Ä• samÄ• pattiá¹ƒ samÄ• pajji, no ca vata re buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti.

<808> atthi buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . bhagavÄ• sarÄ• goti? na hev natthi buddhassa bhagavato karuá¹‡Ä• ti.

karuá¹‡Ä• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(180) 4. gandhajÄ• tikathÄ•

<809> buddhassa \Ee 563/ bhagavato uccÄ• rapassÄ• vo ativiya aÃ±Ã±e gandhajÄ• te adh Ä• mantÄ• . bhagavÄ• gandhabhojÄ«ti? na \Se 597/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu bhaga bhuÃ±jatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci bhagavÄ• odanakummÄ• saá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jati, no ca vata re bhagavato uccÄ• rapassÄ• vo ativiya aÃ±Ã±e gandhajÄ• te adhiggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

buddhassa bhagavato uccÄ• rapassÄ• vo ativiya aÃ±Ã±e gandhajÄ• te adhiggaá¹‡hÄ• tÄ« buddhassa bhagavato uccÄ• rapassÄ• vaá¹ƒ nhÄ• yanti vilimpanti ucchÄ• denti {uccÄ• rent peá¸·Ä• ya paá¹-isÄ• menti karaá¹‡á¸• Ä• ya nikkhipanti Ä• paá¹‡e pasÄ• renti, tena ca gan karontÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

gandhajÄ• tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(181) 5. ekamaggakathÄ•

<810> ekena \Be 409/ ariyamaggena cattÄ• ri sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni sacchikarotÄ«ti? Ä• phassÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... catunnaá¹ƒ saÃ±Ã±Ä• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ ariyamaggena cattÄ• ri sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni sacchikarotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattima vattabbe ... pe ... sakadÄ• gÄ• mi ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggenÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ..

katamena maggenÄ• ti? arahattamaggenÄ• ti. arahattamaggena sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ vic sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• saá¹ƒ \Se 598/ jahatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arahattamagg sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ vicikicchaá¹ƒ sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• saá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . na saá¹ƒyojanÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• naá¹ƒ sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . h saá¹ƒyojanÄ• naá¹ƒ pahÄ• naá¹ƒ sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ \Ne 456/ bhagavatÄ• , no ca ``arahattamaggena sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ vicikicchaá¹ƒ sÄ«labbataparÄ• mÄ• saá¹ƒ jahatÄ

arahattamaggena oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• daá¹ƒ jahatÄ«ti
... arahattamaggena oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• daá¹ƒ jahatÄ«
kÄ• marÄ• gabyÄ• pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ tanubhÄ• vaá¹ƒ sakadÄ• gÄ• miphalaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ bhaga
kÄ• marÄ• gabyÄ• pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ tanubhÄ• vaá¹ƒ sakadÄ• gÄ• miphalaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ bhaga
``arahattamaggena oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gaá¹ƒ oá¸·Ä• rikaá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• daá¹ƒ jahatÄ«

arahattamaggena aá¹‡usahagataá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gaá¹ƒ aá¹‡usahagataá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ• daá¹ƒ j
... pe ... arahattamaggena aá¹‡usahagataá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gaá¹ƒ aá¹‡usahagataá¹ƒ byÄ• pÄ•
\Ee 565/. nanu kÄ• marÄ• gabyÄ• pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ anavasesappahÄ• naá¹ƒ anÄ• gÄ• mipha Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci kÄ• marÄ• gabyÄ• pÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ anavasesappahÄ• naá¹ƒ anÄ• gÄ• m vata re vattabbe --- ``arahattamaggena aá¹‡usahagataá¹ƒ kÄ• marÄ• gaá¹ƒ aá¹‡usahagata jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<811> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``ekena ariyamaggena cattÄ• ri sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni sacchikar bhagavatÄ• sotÄ• pattimaggo bhÄ• vitoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 599/ \Be 410/. bhagavÄ• sotÄ•
... pe ... bhagavatÄ• sakadÄ• gÄ• mi ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggo bhÄ• vitoti? Ä• mantÄ• . I
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<812> bhagavÄ• ekena ariyamaggena cattÄ• ri sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni sacchikaroti, sÄ• v cattÄ• ri sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni sacchikarontÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• vakÄ• buddhassa bhag anadhigataá¹ƒ adhigacchanti asacchikataá¹ƒ sacchikarontÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .

ekamaggakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(182) 6. jhÄ• nasaá¹…kantikathÄ•

<813> jhÄ• nÄ• \Ne 457/ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paá¹-hamÄ• \Ee 566/saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... jhÄ• nÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• n catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paá¹-hamÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . yÄ• paá¹-ham Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va dutiyassa jhÄ• nassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-a paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paá¹-hamÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamati, na vattabbaá¹ƒ \Se 600/ --- ``yÄ uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va dutiyassa jhÄ• nassa uppÄ• dÄ• y paá¹‡idhÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa up paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entass paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``paá¹-hamÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ saá¹…kamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ... pe ....

paá¹-hamÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ• me Ä• dÄ«navato manasi
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ \Ee 567/ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ savitakkaá¹ƒ savicÄ• ranti? Ä• mantÄ• \Be 411/. dutiya savitakkaá¹ƒ savicÄ• ranti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paá¹-hamÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• dutiyaá¹ƒ jh saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . taÃ±Ã±eva paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• na
pe ....

<814> dutiyÄ• \Ne 458/ jhÄ• nÄ• tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . yÄ• uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va tatiyassa jhÄ• nassa uppÄ• dÄ• y
paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

dutiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamati, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``yÄ• dutiyassa jh Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va tatiyassa jhÄ• nassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-a paá¹‡idhÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 601/. tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entassa up appaá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``dutiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

dutiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ vitakkavicÄ• re Ä• dÄ«navato na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ sappÄ«tikanti? Ä• mantÄ• . tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ sappÄ«tikanti? na \E
... pe ... dutiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . taÃ±Ã±eva d tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<815> tatiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . yÄ• tatiyas
Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va catutthassa jhÄ• nassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

tatiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamati, na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``yÄ• tatiyassa j Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, sÄ• va catutthassa jhÄ• nassa uppÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á paá¹‡idhÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ anÄ• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati appaá¹‡idahantassa \Se 602/ uppajjatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu catutthaá¹ƒ j Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa \Ne 459/ uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . h catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-entassa uppajjati ... pe ... paá¹‡idahantassa uppajjati, no vattabbe --- ``tatiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

tatiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá manasikaroto uppajjatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ pÄ«tiá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ«navato man
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ sukhasahagatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ sukhasahagata vattabbe ... pe ... tatiyÄ• jhÄ• nÄ• catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ta jhÄ• naá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<816> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``jhÄ• nÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…kamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . n
``idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu vivicceva kÄ• mehi ... pe ... catutthaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja
{AN a II 13; a IV 163}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi jhÄ• nÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…ka jhÄ• nasaá¹…kantikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(183) 7. jhÄ• nantarikakathÄ•

<817> atthi \Se 603/ jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi phassantarikÄ• ... pe ... atthi saÃ
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antar
jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi \Ne 460/ jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa catutthassa ca jhÄ• n
jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ
jhÄ• nassa tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi \Ee 570/ jhÄ• nantarikÄ• , no ca vata re va jhÄ• nantarikÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

tatiyassa \Be 413/ ca jhÄ• nassa catutthassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa catutthassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• , no ca vata ``atthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<818> paá¹-hamassa ca jhÄ• nassa dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare atthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti jhÄ• nassa tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare atthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... p paá¹-hamassa ca jhÄ• nassa dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare atthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• m jhÄ• nassa catutthassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare \Se 604/ atthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ v

dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ
jhÄ• nassa dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ..

tatiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa catutthassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• man
jhÄ• nassa dutiyassa ca jhÄ• nassa antare natthi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ..

<819> avitakko \Ne 461/ vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . savitakk
jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . avitakko \Ee 571/ avicÄ•
jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

savitakko savicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi na jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . avitakko vicÄ• ramatto s
jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

avitakko avicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi na jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . avitakko vicÄ• ramatto sa
na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<820> dvinnaá¹ƒ jhÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-uppannÄ• namantare avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• avitakke vicÄ• ramatte samÄ• dhimhi vattamÄ• ne paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ niruddhaá¹ƒ d paá¹-uppannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci avitakke vicÄ• ramatte \Be 414/ samÄ• dhimhi vattam jhÄ• naá¹ƒ niruddhaá¹ƒ dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-uppannaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- `` paá¹-uppannÄ• namantare avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti.

<821> avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi na jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . avitakko vicÄ•
paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ..

jhÄ• nanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi jhÄ• nantarikÄ•

<822> avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu tayo samÄ•
savitakko savicÄ• ro samÄ• dhi, avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi, avitakko avicÄ• ro samÄ Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci tayo samÄ• dhÄ« vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• --- savitakko ... pe ... avicÄ• ro sa vattabbe \Ee 572/ --- ``avitakko vicÄ• ramatto samÄ• dhi jhÄ• nantarikÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

jhÄ• nantarikakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(184) 8. saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«tikathÄ•

<823> samÄ• panno \Ne 462/ saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . samÄ• panno cakkhun sotena ... pe ... ghÄ• nena ... pe ... jivhÄ• ya ... pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusatÄ«
vattabbe ... pe ....

samÄ• panno \Se 606/ saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…g
vattabbe. nanu samÄ• dhi manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci sam manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``samÄ• panno saddaá¹ƒ sua

samÄ• dhi manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa, sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« saddaá¹ƒ
samÄ• dhi manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gissa, sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« saddaá¹ƒ
--- ``samÄ• panno saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti \Be 415/. samÄ• dhi manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹ sotaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡asamaá¹…gÄ« saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ phassÄ•
cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samodhÄ• naá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<824> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``samÄ• panno saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . n saddo kaá¹‡á¹-ako vutto bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 573/. haÃ±ci paá¹-hamassa jhÄ• na bhagavatÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``samÄ• panno saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<825> paá¹-hamassa jhÄ• nassa saddo kaá¹‡á¹-ako vutto bhagavatÄ• ti, samÄ• panno sad Ä• mantÄ• . dutiyassa jhÄ• nassa vitakko vicÄ• ro kaá¹‡á¹-ako vutto bhagavatÄ• , atthi tass
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

paá¹-hamassa jhÄ• nassa saddo kaá¹‡á¹-ako vutto bhagavatÄ• ti, samÄ• panno saddaá¹ƒ tatiyassa jhÄ• nassa pÄ«ti kaá¹‡á¹-ako ... pe ... catutthassa jhÄ• nassa assÄ• sapassÄ• so
... Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ samÄ• pannassa \Se 607/ rÅ«pasaÃ±Ã±Ä• kaá¹‡á¹-ako

samÄ• pannassa Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• kaá¹‡á¹-ako ... Ä• kiÃ±caÃ±Ã±Ä• viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aÃ±cÄ• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• kaá¹‡á¹-ako ... nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yata Ä• kiÃ±caÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanasaÃ±Ã±Ä• kaá¹‡á¹-ako ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• vedayitanirodhaá¹ƒ samÄ• p kaá¹‡á¹-ako vutto bhagavatÄ• , atthi tassa saÃ±Ã±Ä• ca vedanÄ• cÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatta

saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

18. aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo

(185) 9. cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«tikathÄ•

<826> cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«ti? na he rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ paá¹-ivijÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? na \Ee pe ... rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ paá¹-ivijÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ant vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi cakkhussa Ä• vaá¹-á¹ paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu natthi cakkhussa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe .. Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci natthi cakkhussa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, no ca vata re vatta rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

sotena saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• tÄ«ti ... pe ... ghÄ• nena gandhaá¹ƒ ghÄ• yatÄ«ti ... pe ... jivhÄ• y ... pe ... kÄ• yena \Se 608/ phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ p vattabbe ... pe ....

rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ phusatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ paá¹-ivijÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? na he rÅ«pena rÅ«paá¹ƒ paá¹-ivijÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ manoviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi kÄ• yassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu natthi kÄ• yassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? natthi kÄ• yassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``kÄ• yena p phusatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ... pe ....

<827> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«â€™â€™ ti ... pe ... ``kÄ• yena p phusatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu \Ee 575/ vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave rÅ«paá¹ƒ passati ... pe ... kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusatÄ«â€™â€™ ti {MN I 349; AN passitabbÄ•) }! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passati ... pe . phoá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ phusatÄ«ti.

cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passatÄ«tikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

aá¹-á¹-hÄ• rasamavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

buddho bhagavÄ• manussaloke aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si, buddhena bhagavatÄ• dhammo desito, nat karuá¹‡Ä• , buddhassa bhagavato uccÄ• rapassÄ• vo ativiya \Se 609/ aÃ±Ã±e gandhajÄ• t ariyamaggena cattÄ• ri sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalÄ• ni sacchikaroti, jhÄ• nÄ• jhÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…ka samÄ• panno saddaá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• ti, cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ passati kÄ• yena phoá¹-á¹-habbaa

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(186) 1. kilesajahanakathÄ•

<828> atÄ«te \Be 417/ \Ee 576/ kilese jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . niruddhaá¹ƒ nirodheti, vigata
khÄ«á¹‡aá¹ƒ khepeti, atthaá¹…gataá¹ƒ atthaá¹…gameti, abbhatthaá¹…gataá¹ƒ abbhatthaá¹ vattabbe ... pe ... atÄ«te kilese jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atÄ«taá¹ƒ niruddhanti? Ä• mant niruddhaá¹ƒ \Ne 465/, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atÄ«te kilese jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. atÄ«te k Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atÄ«taá¹ƒ natthÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atÄ«taá¹ƒ natthi, no ca vata re v kilese jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<829> anÄ• gate kilese jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ajÄ• taá¹ƒ ajaneti, asaÃ±jÄ• taá¹ƒ asaÃ±jan anibbatteti, apÄ• tubhÅ«taá¹ƒ apÄ• tubhÄ• vetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... anÄ• gate Ä• mantÄ• . nanu anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ajÄ• tanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• gataá¹ƒ ajÄ• taá¹ƒ, no ``anÄ• gate kilese jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti \Se 610/. anÄ• gate kilese jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nan Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• gataá¹ƒ natthi, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``anÄ• gate kilese jahatÄ

<830> paccuppanne \Ee 577/ kilese jahatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ratto rÄ• gaá¹ƒ jahati, duá¹-á¹-h mÅ«á¸·ho mohaá¹ƒ jahati, kiliá¹-á¹-ho kilese jahatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... rÄ• ger jahati, dosena dosaá¹ƒ jahati, mohena mohaá¹ƒ jahati, kilesehi kilese jahatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ
....

rÄ• go cittasampayutto, maggo cittasampayuttoti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvinnaá¹ƒ cittÄ• naá¹ƒ samo
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

rÄ• go akusalo, maggo kusaloti? Ä• mantÄ• . kusalÄ• kusalÄ• sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«nap kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ibhÄ• gÄ• dhammÄ• sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? na kusalÄ• kusalÄ• \Be 418/ sÄ• vajjÄ• navajjÄ• hÄ«napaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• kaá¹‡hasukkasappaá¹-ib

sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``cattÄ
suvidÅ«ravidÅ«rÄ• ni! katamÄ• ni cattÄ• ri? nabhaÃ±ca, bhikkhave, pathavÄ« ca --- idaá¹ƒ
suvidÅ«ravidÅ«raá¹ƒ ... pe ... tasmÄ• sataá¹ƒ dhammo asabbhi Ä• rakÄ• â€™â€™ ti. atthe
tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kusalÄ• kusalÄ• ... pe ... sammukhÄ«bhÄ• vaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchantÄ

<831> na \Ne 466/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atÄ«te kilese jahati, anÄ• gate kilese jahati, paccuppan jahatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi kilese jahatÄ«ti \Se 611/? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe kilese jahati, anÄ• gate kilese jahati, paccuppanne kilese jahatÄ«ti.

kilesajahanakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(187) 2. suÃ±Ã±atÄ• kathÄ•

<832> suÃ±Ã±atÄ• \Ee 578/ saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . animi saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . appaá¹‡ihito saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandh vattabbe ... pe ... animittaá¹ƒ na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannaâ€™ suÃ±Ã±atÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- ``saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• â€™â€™ ti? na he appaá¹‡ihito na vattabbo --- ``saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• ``saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• â€™â€™ ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . saá¹…khÄ• rakkhand paá¹-iccasamuppanno na khayadhammo na vayadhammo na virÄ• gadhammo na nirodhad na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandho anicco saá¹…khato paá¹-iccasa vayadhammo virÄ• gadhammo nirodhadhammo vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ pe ... vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammo \Se 612/, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<833> rÅ«pakkhandhassa \Be 419/ suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ti saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhassa \Ee 579/ suÃ±Ã±atÄ• \Ne 467/ rÅ«pakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ•
... vedanÄ• kkhandhassa ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhassa ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhassa s saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhassa suÃ±Ã± viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhassa suÃ±Ã±atÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- ``rÅ«pakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ
rÅ«pakkhandhassa suÃ±Ã±atÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- ``saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ•

... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhassa suÃ±Ã±atÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- ``vedanÄ• kkhandhapari saÃ±Ã±Ä• kkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• â€™â€™ viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡akkhandhassa suÃ±Ã±atÄ• na vattabbÄ• --- ``saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ
vattabbe ... pe ....

<834> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• â€™â€™ ti bhagavatÄ• --- ``suÃ±Ã±amidaá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• attena vÄ• attaniyena vÄ• Ä• neÃ±jasappÄ• ye}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakk suÃ±Ã±atÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(188) 3 sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalakathÄ•

<835> sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalaá¹ƒ \Se 613/ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ \Ee 580 saraá¹‡aá¹ƒ parÄ• yaá¹‡aá¹ƒ accutaá¹ƒ amatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ• maÃ±Ã asaá¹…khataá¹ƒ, nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dve tÄ• á¹‡Ä• ni ... pe ... antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá

<836> sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalaá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ asaá¹…khat
... pe ... sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ saá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalaá¹ƒ saá¹…khatan
....

sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ \Be 420/ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattimaggo asaá¹…khato pe ... sotÄ• pattimaggo saá¹…khatoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ saá¹…khatanti? na h
....

sakadÄ• gÄ• miphalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• miphalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... arahattaphalaá¹ƒ asaá¹…kh arahattamaggo asaá¹…khatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... arahattamaggo saá¹…khatoti?
arahattaphalaá¹ƒ saá¹…khatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sotÄ• pattiphalaá¹ƒ asaá¹…khataá¹ƒ, sakadÄ• gÄ• miphalaá¹ƒ ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• miphalaá arahattaphalaá¹ƒ asaá¹…khataá¹ƒ, nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . paÃ±ca asa vattabbe ... pe ... paÃ±ca asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . paÃ±ca tÄ• á¹‡Ä• ni ... pe ... an
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(189) 4. pattikathÄ•

<837> patti \Se 614/ asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ tÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ leá¹‡aá¹ƒ sa accutaá¹ƒ amatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... patti asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹ dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ
... antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<838> cÄ«varassa \Ne 469/ patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... ama vattabbe ... pe ... cÄ«varassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na \Ee 582/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tassa ... pe ... senÄ• gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• rassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ amatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• rassa patti asaá¹ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dve a Ä• mantÄ• . dve tÄ• á¹‡Ä• ni ... pe ... antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

cÄ«varassa \Be 421/ patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ... pe ... piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tassa ... pe ... senÄ• sana gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• rassa \Se 615/ patti asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹ asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... paÃ±ca asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ
... antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<839> paá¹-hamassa jhÄ• nassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• (evaá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retabbaá¹ƒ
tatiyassa jhÄ• nassa ... catutthassa jhÄ• nassa ... Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanassa ... viÃ±Ã± Ä• kiÃ±caÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanassa ... nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanassa ... sotÄ• pattimag sakadÄ• gÄ• mimaggassa ... sakadÄ• gÄ• miphalassa ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggassa ... anÄ• gÄ
... arahattaphalassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... accutaá¹ƒ am vattabbe ... pe ... arahattaphalassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sotÄ• pattimaggassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ... sotÄ• pattiphalassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ... ara asaá¹…khatÄ• ... arahattaphalassa patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ... nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti?
asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nava asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ•
antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<840> na \Ne 470/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- patti asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . patti rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Se 6 saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi patti asaá pattikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(190) 5. tathatÄ• kathÄ•

<841> sabbadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ tathatÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe .
vattabbe ... pe ... sabbadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ tathatÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…kha dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dve \Ee 584/ asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti?
... pe ... antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<842> rÅ«passa rÅ«patÄ• , nanu rÅ«patÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ ..
vattabbe ... pe ... rÅ«passa rÅ«patÄ• , nanu rÅ«patÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹.
asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dve asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . c
antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

vedanÄ• ya vedanatÄ• , nanu vedanatÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ya saÃ±Ã±atÄ• , nanu saÃ±Ã saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ saá¹…khÄ• ratÄ• , nanu saá¹…khÄ• ratÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ass viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡atÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... amatanti? na hevaá
....

rÅ«passa rÅ«patÄ• , nanu rÅ«patÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡assa viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡atÄ• , nanu v asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ asaá¹…khatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . cha asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? na h \Ne 471/ asaá¹…khatÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cha tÄ• á¹‡Ä• ni ... pe ... antarikÄ• vÄ• ti? na h
....

<843> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sabbadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ tathatÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• tathatÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ ... vedanÄ• ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? na h tena hi sabbadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ tathatÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• ti.

tathatÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(191) 6. kusalakathÄ•

<844> nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya \Be 423/ Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá vattabbe --- ``nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<845> alobho kusalo sÄ• rammaá¹‡o, atthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? Ä
nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idh
... pe ... adoso \Se 618/ kusalo ... pe ... amoho kusalo ... pe ... saddhÄ• ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... sat
samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• kusalÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... p Ä• mantÄ• . nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• sÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , atthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... p
vattabbe ... pe ....

nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹ 472/. alobho kusalo anÄ• rammaá¹‡o, natthi tassa Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe ... paá¹‡idhÄ«ti? n
... pe ... nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• ... pe Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 586/. adoso kusalo ... pe ... amoho kusalo ... pe ... saddhÄ• ... vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ .. samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• kusalÄ• anÄ• rammaá¹‡Ä• , natthi tÄ• ya Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ• .
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<846> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu kusalÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu nibbÄ
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu anavajjÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``nibbÄ• nadhÄ• kusalakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(192) 7. accantaniyÄ• makathÄ•

<847> atthi puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . mÄ• tughÄ• tako accantaniy arahantaghÄ• tako ... pe ... ruhiruppÄ• dako \Se 619/ ... pe ... saá¹…ghabhedako accantaniy
vattabbe ... pe ....

<848> atthi \Be 424/ puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . accantaniyatassa p uppajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci accantaniyatassa puggalassa vicikicchÄ• uppajjeyya, n ``atthi puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

accantaniyatassa puggalassa vicikicchÄ• nuppajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . pahÄ«nÄ• ti? na h

pahÄ«nÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattimaggenÄ• ti? na \Ee 587/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sa 473/ ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggena ... pe ... arahattamaggenÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... p

katamena maggenÄ• ti? akusalena maggenÄ• ti. akusalo maggo niyyÄ• niko khayagÄ• mÄ
... asaá¹ƒkilesikoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu akusalo maggo aniyyÄ• niko ... pe ...
saá¹ƒkilesikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci akusalo maggo aniyyÄ• niko ... pe ... saá¹ƒkilesiko, no c
--- ``accantaniyatassa puggalassa vicikicchÄ• akusalena maggena pahÄ«nÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<849> sassatadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hi uppajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• ma sassatadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hi uppajjeyya, no ca vata re vatt puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

sassatadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hi nuppajjeyyÄ• ti \Se 620/? Ä• hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... pahÄ«nÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattimaggenÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ va sakadÄ• gÄ• mimaggena ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggena ... pe ... arahattamaggenÄ• ti? na h

katamena maggenÄ• ti? akusalena maggena. akusalo maggo ... pe ... no ca vata re \Ee 58 ``sassatadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hi akusalena maggena pahÄ«

<850> ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa sassatadiá¹-á¹-hi uppajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• ma ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa sassatadiá¹-á¹-hi uppajjeyya, no ca vata re vatt puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa sassatadiá¹-á¹-hi nuppajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• vattabbe ... pe ... pahÄ«nÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . sotÄ• pattimaggenÄ• ti \Be 425/? na hevaá¹ƒ va
... sakadÄ• gÄ• mimaggena ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggena ... pe ... arahattamaggenÄ• ti? n
....

katamena maggenÄ• ti? akusalena maggenÄ• ti. akusalo maggo ... pe ... no ca vata re vatt ``ucchedadiá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• niyatassa puggalassa sassatadiá¹-á¹-hi akusalena maggena pahÄ«

<851> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atthi puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ•
--- ``idha, bhikkhave, ekacco puggalo samannÄ• gato hoti ekantakÄ• á¸·akehi akusalehi dha bhikkhave puggalo (AN b 7.15) } sakiá¹ƒ nimuggo \Se 621/ nimuggova hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti {AN suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena \Ee 589/ hi atthi puthujjanassa accantaniyÄ• matÄ• ti.

<852> vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, ekacco puggalo samannÄ• gato hoti eka

dhammehi, so sakiá¹ƒ nimuggo nimuggova hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti katvÄ• tena ca kÄ• raá¹‡ena accantaniyÄ• matÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, ekacco pug nimujjatÄ«â€™â€™ ti {AN b 7.15}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbakÄ• laá¹ƒ ummujjit
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, ekacco puggalo samannÄ• gato hoti ekantakÄ• dhammehi, so sakiá¹ƒ nimuggo nimuggova hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- katvÄ• tena ca kÄ• raá¹‡e accantaniyÄ• matÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``idha, bhikkhave, ekacco pug
hoti, ummujjitvÄ• vipassati viloketi, ummujjitvÄ• patarati, ummujjitvÄ• patigÄ• dhappatto h
7.15}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbakÄ• laá¹ƒ ummujjitvÄ• patigÄ• dhappatto hotÄ«
... pe ....

accantaniyÄ• makathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

19. ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo

(193) 8. indriyakathÄ•

<853> natthi \Se 622/ \Be 426/ \Ne 475/ lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi lokiy hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ vÄ«riyindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... satindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ...
samÄ• dhindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 590/. natthi lokiyÄ• paÃ±Ã±
vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi lokiyÄ• saddhÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe lokiyaá¹ƒ vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... sati ... pe ... samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atth paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi lokiyo mano, atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ manindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyÄ• saddhÄ• , atthi lo saddhindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi lokiyo mano, atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ manindriyan atthi lokiyÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ somanassaá¹ƒ, atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ somanassindriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyÄ• saddhÄ• , atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyant vattabbe ... pe ... atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ, atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi paÃ±Ã±Ä• , atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ \Se 623/ paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<854> atthi lokiyÄ• saddhÄ• , natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyo ma manindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi lokiyÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ paÃ±

Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyo mano, natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ manindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi \Ne 476/ lokiyÄ• saddhÄ• , natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 591/. atth somanassaá¹ƒ, natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ somanassindriyanti ... atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitaá¹ƒ, natthi lokiya jÄ«vitindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi lokiyÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ paÃ Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyo mano, natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ manindriyanti ... pe ... atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitaá lokiyaá¹ƒ jÄ«vitindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<855> atthi \Be 427/ lokuttarÄ• saddhÄ• , atthi lokuttaraá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . a atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi lokuttaraá¹ƒ vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ...
lokuttarÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , atthi lokuttaraá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokiyÄ• paÃ±
paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi lokiyÄ• saddhÄ• , natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokuttarÄ• saddh lokuttaraá¹ƒ saddhindriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi lokiyaá¹ƒ vÄ«riyaá¹ƒ ... pe .
624/ lokiyÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• , natthi lokiyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi lokuttarÄ• pa lokuttaraá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±indriyanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<856> natthi lokiyÄ• ni paÃ±cindriyÄ• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``a bhikkhave, buddhacakkhunÄ• lokaá¹ƒ volokento satte apparajakkhe mahÄ• rajakkhe, tikkhi svÄ• kÄ• re, suviÃ±Ã±Ä• paye \Ee 592/, appekacce paralokavajjabhayadassÄ• vino viharan ``dvÄ• kÄ• re duviÃ±Ã±Ä• payeâ€™â€™ iccÄ• dÄ«nipi padÄ• ni dissanti}! attheva suttantot lokiyÄ• ni paÃ±cindriyÄ• nÄ«ti.

indriyakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

ekÅ«navÄ«satimavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

atÄ«te kilese jahati anÄ• gate kilese jahati paccuppanne kilese jahati, suÃ±Ã±atÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rakkhandhapariyÄ• pannÄ• , sÄ• maÃ±Ã±aphalaá¹ƒ asaá¹…khataá¹ƒ, patti asa tathatÄ• asaá¹…khatÄ• , nibbÄ• nadhÄ• tu \Ne 477/ kusalÄ• , atthi puthujjanassa accantan lokiyÄ• ni paÃ±cindriyÄ• nÄ«ti.

20. vÄ«satimavaggo

(194) 1. asaÃ±ciccakathÄ•

<857> asaÃ±cicca \Se 625/ \Ee 593/ mÄ• taraá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ« pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ hantvÄ• pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ« hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ \Be 428/ vattabbe ... pe ... a jÄ«vitÄ• voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . asaÃ±cicca adinnaá¹ƒ Ä• diyitvÄ• bhaá¹‡itvÄ• musÄ• vÄ• dÄ« hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

asaÃ±cicca pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ hantvÄ• pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ« na hotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . asaÃ±cicca voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko na hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... asaÃ±cicca adinnaá¹ƒ Ä musÄ• bhaá¹‡itvÄ• musÄ• vÄ• dÄ« na hotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . asaÃ±cicca mÄ• taraá¹ƒ jÄ«v hotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<858> asaÃ±cicca mÄ• taraá¹ƒ jÄ«vitÄ• voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``a jÄ«vitÄ• voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva suttantoti? natthi. ``saÃ±cicc voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci ``saÃ± voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva suttanto, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``a \Se 626/ jÄ«vitÄ• voropetvÄ• Ä• nantariko hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<859> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``mÄ• tughÄ• tako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu mA
Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci mÄ• tÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropitÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``mÄ• tughÄ• tak na \Ne 478/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``pitughÄ• tako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 594/.

voropitoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci pitÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``pitughÄ• Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti.

na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``arahantaghÄ• tako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu arahÄ• Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• jÄ«vitÄ• voropito, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``arahantaghÄ• tak na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``ruhiruppÄ• dako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu tathÄ• gat uppÄ• ditanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci tathÄ• gatassa lohitaá¹ƒ uppÄ• ditaá¹ƒ, tena vata re vatt ``ruhiruppÄ• dako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti.

<860> saá¹…ghabhedako \Be 429/ Ä• nantarikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sabbe saá¹…ghabhedakÄ• vattabbe ... pe ... sabbe saá¹…ghabhedakÄ• Ä• nantarikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dhammasaÃ±Ã Ä• nantarikoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<861> dhammasaÃ±Ã±Ä« saá¹…ghabhedako Ä• nantarikoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ b saá¹…ghabhedako Ä• pÄ• yiko nerayiko kappaá¹-á¹-ho atekiccho; atthupÄ• li, saá¹…ghabh nerayiko na kappaá¹-á¹-ho na atekicchoâ€™â€™ ti! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 627

--- ``dhammasaÃ±Ã±Ä« saá¹…ghabhedako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti.

<862> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``dhammasaÃ±Ã±Ä« saá¹…ghabhedako Ä• nantarikoâ€™â€™ ti vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• ---

``Ä• pÄ• yiko nerayiko, kappaá¹-á¹-ho saá¹…ghabhedako.

vaggarato adhammaá¹-á¹-ho, yogakkhemÄ• padhaá¹ƒsati.

saá¹…ghaá¹ƒ samaggaá¹ƒ bhetvÄ• na, kappaá¹ƒ nirayamhi paccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti {Vin II 354 attheva \Ne 479/ suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi saá¹…ghabhedako Ä• nantarikoti.

asaÃ±ciccakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

20. vÄ«satimavaggo

(195) 2. Ã±Ä• á¹‡akathÄ•

<863> natthi puthujjanassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi puthujjanassa paÃ±Ã±Ä• paj dhammavicayo sallakkhaá¹‡Ä• upalakkhaá¹‡Ä• paccupalakkhaá¹‡Ä• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab puthujjanassa paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• vicayo ... pe ... paccupalakkhaá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• pajÄ• nanÄ• vicayo ... pe ... paccupalakkhaá¹‡Ä• , no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``n Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti.

<864> natthi \Be 430/ puthujjanassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . puthujjano paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jh samÄ• pajjeyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci puthujjano paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjey ``natthi puthujjanassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti.

puthujjano \Se 628/ dutiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... tatiyaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ ... pe ... catutthaá¹ƒ j pe ... Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjeyya, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aÃ±cÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ Ä• k nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ samÄ• pajjeyya, puthujjano dÄ• naá¹ƒ dadeyya \B dadeyya, piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ dadeyya, senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ dadeyya, gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjapa Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci puthujjano gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• raá¹ƒ dadeyya, no ca vat puthujjanassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡aâ€™â€™ nti.

<865> atthi puthujjanassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡anti? Ä• mantÄ• . puthujjano tena Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena dukkha samudayaá¹ƒ pajahati, nirodhaá¹ƒ sacchikaroti, maggaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab

Ã±Ä• á¹‡akathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

20. vÄ«satimavaggo

(196) 3. nirayapÄ• lakathÄ•

<866> natthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . natthi nirayesu kammakÄ• raá¹‡Ä• ti?
... atthi nirayesu kammakÄ• raá¹‡Ä• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti? na heva

atthi manussesu kammakÄ• raá¹‡Ä• , atthi ca kÄ• raá¹‡ikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi nirayesu l kÄ• raá¹‡ikÄ• ti? na \Se 629/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi nirayesu kammakÄ• raá¹‡Ä• , kÄ• raá¹‡ikÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi manussesu kammakÄ• raá¹‡Ä• , natthi ca kÄ• raá¹‡ikÄ•
pe ....

<867> atthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• ---

``na \Be 431/ \Ee 597/ vessabhÅ« nopi ca pettirÄ• jÄ• , somo yamo vessavaá¹‡o ca rÄ• jÄ• .

sakÄ• ni kammÄ• ni hananti tattha, ito paá¹‡unnaá¹ƒ {paá¹‡uá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ (Se Katthaci), panu paralokapattaâ€™â€™ nti ||

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi natthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti.

<868> natthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``tamena nirayapÄ• lÄ• paÃ±cavidhabandhanaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ kÄ• renti {karonti (MN III 25
tattaá¹ƒ ayokhÄ«laá¹ƒ hatthe gamenti, tattaá¹ƒ ayokhÄ«laá¹ƒ dutiye hatthe gamenti, tattaá¹ƒ gamenti, tattaá¹ƒ ayokhÄ«laá¹ƒ dutiye pÄ• de gamenti, tattaá¹ƒ ayokhÄ«laá¹ƒ majjheurasmi dukkhÄ• tibbÄ• kaá¹-ukÄ• vedanÄ• vedeti; na ca tÄ• va kÄ• laá¹ƒ karoti yÄ• va na taá¹ƒ byantÄ«hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti {MN III 250; AN a III 36}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi a nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti.

natthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``tamenaá¹ƒ, bh saá¹ƒvesetvÄ• kuá¹-hÄ• rÄ«hi {kudhÄ• rÄ«hi (sabbattha) } tacchanti ... pe ... tamenaá¹ƒ, bh uddhampÄ• daá¹ƒ adhosiraá¹ƒ á¹-hapetvÄ• vÄ• sÄ«hi tacchanti ... pe ... tamenaá¹ƒ \Se 63

nirayapÄ• lÄ• rathe yojetvÄ• Ä• dittÄ• ya pathaviyÄ• sampajjalitÄ• ya sajotibhÅ«tÄ• ya {sa sÄ• rentipi paccÄ• sÄ• rentipi ... pe ... tamenaá¹ƒ, bhikkhave, nirayapÄ• lÄ• mahantaá¹ƒ aá Ä• dittaá¹ƒ sampajjalitaá¹ƒ sajotibhÅ«taá¹ƒ \Ee 598/ Ä• ropentipi oropentipi ... pe ... tamenaá nirayapÄ• lÄ• uddhampÄ• daá¹ƒ adhosiraá¹ƒ gahetvÄ• tattÄ• ya lohakumbhiyÄ• pakkhipa sajotibhÅ«tÄ• ya. so tattha pheá¹‡uddehakaá¹ƒ paccati, so tattha pheá¹‡uddehakaá¹ƒ pacc gacchati, sakimpi adho gacchati, sakimpi tiriyaá¹ƒ gacchati. so tattha dukkhÄ• tibbÄ• kaá¹-vedayati, na ca tÄ• va kÄ• laá¹ƒ karoti yÄ• va na \Be 432/ taá¹ƒ pÄ• pakammaá¹ƒ byantÄ«h nirayapÄ• lÄ• mahÄ• niraye pakkhipanti! so kho pana, bhikkhave, mahÄ• nirayo --- ``catukkaá¹‡á¹‡o catudvÄ• ro, vibhatto bhÄ• gaso mito.

ayopÄ• kÄ• rapariyanto, ayasÄ• paá¹-ikujjito ||

``tassa ayomayÄ• bhÅ«mi, jalitÄ• tejasÄ• yutÄ• .

samantÄ• yojanasataá¹ƒ, pharitvÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hati sabbadÄ• â€™â€™ ti {MN III 250; AN a III

attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi nirayesu nirayapÄ• lÄ• ti.

nirayapÄ• lakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

20. vÄ«satimavaggo

(197) 4. tiracchÄ• nakathÄ•

<869> atthi \Se 631/ \Ne 482/ devesu tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi tiracchÄ• nag hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi devesu tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 599/. devaloko na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi devesu tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi tattha kÄ« makasÄ• makkhikÄ• ahÄ« vicchikÄ• satapadÄ« gaá¹‡á¸• uppÄ• dÄ• ti {gaá¹‡á¸• upÄ• dÄ
vattabbe ... pe ....

<870> natthi devesu tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu atthi tattha erÄ• vaá¹‡o nÄ• m sahassayuttaá¹ƒ dibbaá¹ƒ yÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci atthi tattha erÄ• vaá¹‡o nÄ• ma ha dibbaá¹ƒ yÄ• naá¹ƒ, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi devesu tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

<871> atthi devesu tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi tattha hatthibandhÄ• assaband assabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• (?) } yÄ• vasikÄ• kÄ• raá¹‡ikÄ• bhattakÄ• rakÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabl tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• ti.

tiracchÄ• nakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

20. vÄ«satimavaggo

(198) 5. maggakathÄ•

<872> paÃ±caá¹…giko \Se 632/ \Be 433/ maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko ma seyyathidaá¹ƒ --- sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci a bhagavatÄ• \Ne 483/, seyyathidaá¹ƒ --- sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi \Ee 600/ ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ vattabbe --- ``paÃ±caá¹…giko maggoâ€™â€™ ti.

paÃ±caá¹…giko maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``maggÄ• naá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko seá¹-á¹-ho, saccÄ• naá¹ƒ caturo padÄ• .

virÄ• go seá¹-á¹-ho dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ, dvipadÄ• naÃ±ca cakkhumÄ• â€™â€™ ti {Dhp 273 dh attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggoti.

<873> sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, sÄ• ca na maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• diá¹ maggoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, sÄ• ca na mag
sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... pe ... sammÄ• sati ... pe ... sammÄ• ca na maggoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, so ca na maggoti? Ä• ma
... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, so ca na maggoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, sÄ• ca maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• \Se 6 maggoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hi maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, sÄ• ca maggo sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä• jÄ«vo maggaá¹…gaá¹ƒ, so ca maggoti? na \Ee 60

sammÄ• saá¹…kappo ... pe ... sammÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mo ... pe ... sammÄ• sati ... pe ... sammÄ•
ca maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• kammanto ... pe ... sammÄ• Ä maggoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<874> ariyo aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``pubbe

kÄ• yakammaá¹ƒ vacÄ«kammaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ«vo suparisuddho hoti; evamassÄ• yaá¹ƒ \Be 434/\Ne 484/ bhÄ• vanÄ• pÄ• ripÅ«riá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti {MN III 431}! attheva suttantoti?
paÃ±caá¹…giko maggoti.

<875> paÃ±caá¹…giko maggoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``yasmiá¹ƒ kho ariyo aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggo na upalabbhati, samaá¹‡opi tattha na upalabbhati, dutiyopi t upalabbhati, tatiyopi tattha samaá¹‡o na upalabbhati, catutthopi tattha samaá¹‡o na upalabb kho, subhadda, dhammavinaye ariyo aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggo upalabbhati, samaá¹‡opi tat
... pe ... tatiyopi ... pe ... catutthopi tattha samaá¹‡o upalabbhati. imasmiá¹ƒ kho, subhadda, ariyo aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggo upalabbhati. idheva, subhadda \Se 634/, samaá¹‡o, idha dut tatiyo samaá¹‡o, idha catuttho samaá¹‡o. suÃ±Ã±Ä• parappavÄ• dÄ• samaá¹‡ebhi aÃ±Ã± attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggoti.

maggakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

20. vÄ«satimavaggo

(199) 6. Ã±Ä• á¹‡akathÄ•

<876> dvÄ• dasavatthukaá¹ƒ \Ee 602/ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttaranti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvÄ• dasa l hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dvÄ• dasa lokuttaraÃ±Ä• á¹‡Ä• nÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvÄ• dasa so hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dvÄ• dasa sotÄ• pattimaggÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvÄ• dasa sotÄ• pa vattabbe ... pe ... dvÄ• dasa sakadÄ• gÄ• mimaggÄ• ... pe ... anÄ• gÄ• mimaggÄ• ... pe ... hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... dvÄ• dasa arahattamaggÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . dvÄ• dasa arahattaph
vattabbe ... pe ....

<877> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``dvÄ• dasavatthukaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttaraâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• bhagavatÄ• \Ne 485/ --- ``idaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ ariyasaccaâ€™â€™ nti me, bhikkhave, pubbe 435/ cakkhuá¹ƒ udapÄ• di, Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ udapÄ• di, paÃ±Ã±Ä• udapÄ• di, vijjÄ• udapÄ• d panidaá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ ariyasaccaá¹ƒ pariÃ±Ã±eyyaâ€™ nti me, bhikkhave ... pe ... pariÃ±Ã± bhikkhave ... pe ... `idaá¹ƒ dukkhasamudayaá¹ƒ {dukkhasamudayo (Se Ke Ee) } ariyasaccaâ
... pe ... `taá¹ƒ kho panidaá¹ƒ dukkhasamudayaá¹ƒ ariyasaccaá¹ƒ pahÄ• tabbaâ€™ nti me, pahÄ«nanti me, bhikkhave ... pe ... `idaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhaá¹ƒ {dukkhanirodhÄ• (Se Ke Ee) me, bhikkhave ... pe ... `taá¹ƒ kho panidaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhaá¹ƒ ariyasaccaá¹ƒ sacchikÄ• tab bhikkhave ... pe ... sacchikatanti me, bhikkhave ... pe ... `idaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhagÄ• minÄ« pa ariyasaccaâ€™ nti me, bhikkhave ... pe ... `taá¹ƒ kho panidaá¹ƒ dukkhanirodhagÄ• minÄ« p ariyasaccaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vetabbaâ€™ nti \Ee 603/ me, bhikkhave ... pe ... bhÄ• vitanti me, bhikkh ananussutesu dhammesu cakkhuá¹ƒ udapÄ• di ... pe ... Ä• loko udapÄ• dÄ«â€™â€™ ti {Vi

II 30}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi dvÄ• dasavatthukaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttara

Ã±Ä• á¹‡akathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

vÄ«satimavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

mÄ• tughÄ• tako Ä• nantariko pitughÄ• tako Ä• nantariko arahantaghÄ• tako Ä• nantariko saá¹…ghabhedako Ä• nantariko, natthi puthujjanassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, natthi nirayesu nirayap tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• , paÃ±caá¹…giko maggo, dvÄ• dasavatthukaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ lokuttaran catuttho paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sako.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

niggaho, puÃ±Ã±asaÃ±cayo, aá¹-á¹-hÄ• si, atÄ«tena ca mÄ• tughÄ• tako.

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(200) 1. sÄ• sanakathÄ•

<878> sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ \Se 636/ \Be 436/ \Ee 604/ \Ne 486/ navaá¹ƒ katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . satip katÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ navaá¹ƒ katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . sammapp iddhipÄ• dÄ• ... pe ... indriyÄ• ... pe ... balÄ• ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…gÄ• navaá¹ƒ katÄ• ti? na
... pe ... pubbe akusalaá¹ƒ pacchÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... pubbe
... saá¹ƒyojaniyaá¹ƒ ganthaniyaá¹ƒ oghaniyaá¹ƒ yoganiyaá¹ƒ nÄ«varaá¹‡iyaá¹ƒ parÄ• maá¹
... pe ... saá¹ƒkilesikaá¹ƒ pacchÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesikaá¹ƒ katanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi koci tathÄ• gatassa sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ navaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi koci satipaá¹-á¹ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi koci sammappadhÄ• ne ... pe ... iddhipÄ• de ..
... pe ... bale ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…ge navaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi koc akusalaá¹ƒ pacchÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... atthi koci pubbe sÄ• saá¹ƒkilesikaá¹ƒ pacchÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesiyaá¹ƒ karotÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

labbhÄ• tathÄ• gatassa sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ puna navaá¹ƒ kÄ• tunti? Ä• mantÄ• . labbhÄ• satipa kÄ• tunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... labbhÄ• sammappadhÄ• nÄ• ... pe ... iddhipÄ• dÄ•
... pe ... balÄ• ... pe ... bojjhaá¹…gÄ• \Se 637/ puna navaá¹ƒ kÄ• tunti? na \Ee 605/ hevaá¹

... labbhÄ• pubbe akusalaá¹ƒ pacchÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ kÄ• tunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... la sÄ• savaá¹ƒ ... pe ... saá¹ƒkilesiyaá¹ƒ pacchÄ• asaá¹ƒkilesiyaá¹ƒ kÄ• tunti? na hevaá¹ƒ vat sÄ• sanakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(201) 2. avivittakathÄ•

<879> puthujjano \Ne 487/ tedhÄ• tukehi dhammehi avivittoti? Ä• mantÄ• . puthujjano tedh
... tedhÄ• tukÄ• hi vedanÄ• hi ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• hi \Be 437/ ... cetanÄ• hi ... cittehi ... saddhÄ• hi satÄ«hi ... samÄ• dhÄ«hi ... pe ... tedhÄ• tukÄ• hi paÃ±Ã±Ä• hi avivittoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab puthujjano tedhÄ• tukehi kammehi avivittoti? Ä• mantÄ• . yasmiá¹ƒ khaá¹‡e puthujjano cÄ« khaá¹‡e paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ upasampajja viharati ... pe ... Ä• kÄ• sÄ• naÃ±cÄ• yatan viharatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... yasmiá¹ƒ khaá¹‡e puthujjano piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ deti ... pe ... gilÄ• napaccayabhesajjaparikkhÄ• raá¹ƒ deti, tasmiá¹ƒ khaá¹‡e upasampajja viharati ... nevasaÃ±Ã±Ä• nÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• yatanaá¹ƒ upasampajja viharatÄ«ti?

....

<880> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``puthujjano tedhÄ• tukehi kammehi avivittoâ€™â€™ ti? Ä• mant puthujjanassa rÅ«padhÄ• tuarÅ«padhÄ• tÅ«pagaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ pariÃ±Ã±Ä• tanti? na heva puthujjano tedhÄ• tukehi kammehi avivittoti ... pe ....

avivittakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(202) 3. saá¹ƒyojanakathÄ•

<881> atthi \Ee 606/ kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya arahattappattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . att
sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya ... pe ... vicikicchaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya ... pe ... sÄ«labbatapa appahÄ• ya ... rÄ• gaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya ... dosaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya ... mohaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya ... an arahattappattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi \Ne 488/ kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya arahattappattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• s samÄ• no samakkho sapaá¸·Ä• so saupÄ• yÄ• so sakilesoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ...
niddoso nimmoho nimmÄ• no nimmakkho nippaá¸·Ä• so nirupÄ• yÄ• so nikkilesoti? Ä• man pe ... nikkileso, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya arahatta

<882> na \Be 438/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atthi kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya arahattappattÄ
Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• sabbaá¹ƒ buddhavisayaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena h saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya arahattappattÄ«ti.

saá¹ƒyojanakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(203) 4. iddhikathÄ•

<883> atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``n
rukkhÄ• hontÅ«â€™â€™ ti --- atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ
... pe ... niccapupphÄ• rukkhÄ• hontu ... pe ... niccaphalikÄ• rukkhÄ• hontu ... niccaá¹ƒ ju niccaá¹ƒ khemaá¹ƒ hotu ... niccaá¹ƒ subhikkhaá¹ƒ hotu ... ``niccaá¹ƒ suvatthi {suvuá¹-á¹-hika hotÅ«â€™â€™ ti --- atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? na atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Se 640/. ` nirujjhÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti?

....

uppannÄ• \Ne 489/ vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... cetanÄ• ... cittaá¹ƒ ... saddhÄ• ... vÄ«
... samÄ• dhi ... pe ... paÃ±Ã±Ä• mÄ• nirujjhÄ«ti --- atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``rÅ«paá¹ atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... ``vi niccaá¹ƒ hotÅ«â€™â€™ ti --- atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ
... pe ....

atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``jÄ• tidha
jÄ• yiá¹ƒsÅ«â€™â€™ ti atthi ... pe ... ``jarÄ• dhammÄ• sattÄ• mÄ• jÄ«riá¹ƒsÅ«â€™â€™ t ``byÄ• dhidhammÄ• sattÄ• mÄ• byÄ• dhiyiá¹ƒsÅ«â€™â€™ ti ... pe ... ``maraá¹‡adhammÄ ti --- atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabb

<884> na \Be 439/ vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ•
Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 608/. nanu Ä• yasmÄ• pilindavaccho raÃ±Ã±o mÄ• gadhassa seniyassa bi ``suvaá¹‡á¹‡aâ€™â€™ ntveva adhimucci, suvaá¹‡á¹‡o ca pana Ä• sÄ«ti {Vin III 621; Vin I 2
Ä• yasmÄ• pilindavaccho raÃ±Ã±o mÄ• gadhassa seniyassa bimbisÄ• rassa pÄ• sÄ• daá¹ suvaá¹‡á¹‡o ca pana Ä• si, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi adhippÄ• yaiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

iddhikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(204) 5. buddhakathÄ•

<885> atthi \Se 641/ buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ buddhehi hÄ«nÄ• tirekatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . satipaá¹-á¹ vattabbe \Ne 490/ ... pe ... sammappadhÄ• nato ... pe ... iddhipÄ• dato ... indriyato ... balato bojjhaá¹…gato ... vasibhÄ• vato ... pe ... sabbaÃ±Ã±utaÃ±Ä• á¹‡adassanatoti? na hevaá¹ƒ buddhakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(205) 6. sabbadisÄ• kathÄ•

<886> sabbÄ• disÄ• buddhÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . puratthimÄ• ya disÄ• ya bud hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... puratthimÄ• ya disÄ• ya buddho tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kinn kiá¹ƒjacco, kiá¹ƒgotto, kinnÄ• mÄ• tassa \Ee 609/ bhagavato mÄ• tÄ• pitaro, kinnÄ• maá¹ƒ sÄ• vakayugaá¹ƒ, konÄ• mo tassa bhagavato upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• ko, kÄ«disaá¹ƒ cÄ«varaá¹ƒ dhÄ dhÄ• reti, katarasmiá¹ƒ gÄ• me vÄ• nigame vÄ• nagare vÄ• raá¹-á¹-he vÄ• janapade vÄ•
pe ....

dakkhiá¹‡Ä• ya disÄ• ya ... pe ... pacchimÄ• ya disÄ• ya ... pe ... uttarÄ• ya disÄ• ya ... pe disÄ• ya buddho tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... heá¹-á¹-himÄ• ya disÄ• ya \B tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . kinnÄ• mo so \Se 642/ bhagavÄ• ... pe ... janapade vÄ• ti? na
....

uparimÄ• ya disÄ• ya buddho tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe .... uparimÄ• ya dis
tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cÄ• tumahÄ• rÄ• jike tiá¹-á¹-hati ... pe ... tÄ• vatiá¹ƒse tiá¹-á¹-ha yÄ• me tiá¹-á¹-hati ... pe ... tusite tiá¹-á¹-hati ... pe ... nimmÄ• naratiyÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hati ... pe ...

paranimmitavasavattiyÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hati ... pe ... brahmaloke tiá¹-á¹-hatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattab sabbadisÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(206) 7. dhammakathÄ•

<887> sabbe \Ne 491/ dhammÄ• niyatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . micchattaniyatÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ v
sammattaniyatÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... natthi aniyato rÄ• sÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatta atthi aniyato rÄ• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 610/. haÃ±ci atthi aniyato rÄ• si, no ca vata re vattab dhammÄ• niyatÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

sabbe dhammÄ• niyatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu tayo rÄ• sÄ« vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• --- miccha sammattaniyato rÄ• si, aniyato rÄ• sÄ«ti {Dhs tikamÄ• tikÄ• 15}? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci tayo r
--- micchattaniyato rÄ• si, sammattaniyato rÄ• si, aniyato rÄ• si, no ca vata re vattabbe --- `` niyatÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

rÅ«paá¹ƒ \Se 643/ rÅ«paá¹-á¹-hena niyatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . micchattaniyatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ sammattaniyatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... saá
... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹-á¹-hena niyatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . micchattaniyatanti? n
... sammattaniyatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<888> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹-á¹-hena niyataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vedanÄ• ... pe ... sa saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹-á¹-hena niyatanti? Ä• mantÄ• pe ... \Be 441/ saÃ±Ã±Ä• hoti ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• honti ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ hoti ... vedanÄ•
... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ... vedanÄ• hoti ... s saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• hontÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi rÅ«paá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹-á¹-hena niyataá¹ saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... pe ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... pe ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹-á¹-hena ni dhammakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

21. ekavÄ«satimavaggo

(207) 8. kammakathÄ•

<889> sabbe \Ee 611/ \Ne 492/ kammÄ• niyatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . micchattaniyatÄ• ti? na h
sammattaniyatÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... natthi aniyato rÄ• sÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vatta

atthi aniyato rÄ• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \Se 644/ atthi aniyato rÄ• si, no ca vata re vattal kammÄ• niyatÄ• â€™â€™ ti.

sabbe kammÄ• niyatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu tayo rÄ• sÄ« vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• --- micchat sammattaniyato rÄ• si, aniyato rÄ• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci tayo rÄ• sÄ« vuttÄ• bhagava rÄ• si, sammattaniyato rÄ• si, aniyato rÄ• si, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbe kammÄ• niy

<890> diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹-á¹-her micchattaniyatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammattaniyatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe .
upapajjavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ ... pe ... aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ aparÄ• p niyatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . micchattaniyatanti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... sammattaniyatanti?
... pe ....

<891> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammave niyataá¹ƒ, upapajjavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ ... pe ... aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«yaá¹-á¹-hena niyatanti? Ä• mantÄ• . diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹ upapajjavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ hoti, aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ hoti ... pe ... upapajjavedanÄ«yaá diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ hoti, aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ \Be 442/ hoti ... pe ... ap kammaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ hoti, upapajjavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ hotÄ«ti? na hevaá hi diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hadhammavedanÄ«yaá¹-á¹-hena niy kammaá¹ƒ ... pe ... aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«yaá¹ƒ \Se 645/ kammaá¹ƒ aparÄ• pariyavedanÄ«

kammakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

ekavÄ«satimavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ navaá¹ƒ kataá¹ƒ atthi koci tathÄ• gatassa sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ navaá¹ƒ karoti labbhÄ• sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ puna navaá¹ƒ kÄ• tuá¹ƒ, puthujjano tedhÄ• tukehi dhammehi avivitto, atthi kiÃ± appahÄ• ya arahattappatti, atthi adhippÄ• yiddhi buddhÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ•
hÄ«nÄ• tirekatÄ• , sabbÄ• disÄ• buddhÄ• tiá¹-á¹-hanti, sabbe dhammÄ• niyatÄ• , sabbe

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(208) 1. parinibbÄ• nakathÄ•

<892> atthi \Ee 613/ kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya parinibbÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . atth

sakkÄ• yadiá¹-á¹-hiá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya ... pe ... anottappaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya parinibbÄ• nanti? na
....

atthi kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya parinibbÄ• nanti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• sarÄ• go ...
hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu arahÄ• nirÄ• go ... pe ... nikkilesoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci \S nirÄ• go ... pe ... nikkileso, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• parinibbÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti.

<893> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``atthi kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya parinibbÄ• naâ€™â€™ arahÄ• sabbaá¹ƒ buddhavisayaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• tÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi atthi kiÃ±ci appahÄ• ya parinibbÄ• nanti.

parinibbÄ• nakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(209) 2. kusalacittakathÄ•

<894> arahÄ• \Be 443/ kusalacitto parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• puÃ±Ã±Ä• bhi abhisaá¹…kharonto ... Ä• neÃ±jÄ• bhisaá¹…khÄ• raá¹ƒ abhisaá¹…kharonto ... gatisaá¹ƒvat karonto ... bhavasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karonto ... issariyasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaa adhipaccasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karonto ... mahÄ• bhogasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá mahÄ• parivÄ• rasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karonto ... devasobhagyasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ manussasobhagyasaá¹ƒvattaniyaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ karonto parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ va

arahÄ• kusalacitto parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• Ä• cinanto apacinanto pajahan ussinento vidhÅ«pento sandhÅ«pento parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe \Se 647/ ...
nevÄ• cinÄ• ti na apacinÄ• ti apacinitvÄ• á¹-hitoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• nevÄ• cinÄ apacinitvÄ• á¹-hito, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``arahÄ• kusalacitto parinibbÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€ neva pajahati na upÄ• diyati pajahitvÄ• á¹-hito, neva visineti na ussineti visinetvÄ• á¹-hito; vidhÅ«peti na sandhÅ«peti vidhÅ«petvÄ• á¹-hitoti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• neva vidhÅ
vidhÅ«petvÄ• á¹-hito, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``arahÄ• kusalacitto parinibbÄ• yatÄ«â€™

<895> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``arahÄ• kusalacitto parinibbÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• . n upaá¹-á¹-hitassati sato sampajÄ• no parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• upaá¹-sampajÄ• no parinibbÄ• yati, tena vata re vattabbe --- ``arahÄ• kusalacitto parinibbÄ• yatÄ kusalacittakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(210) 3. Ä• neÃ±jakathÄ•

<896> arahÄ• \Be 444/ \Ee 615/ Ä• neÃ±je á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu a parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• pakaticitte á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yati, no ca vat ``arahÄ• Ä• neÃ±je á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

arahÄ• \Se 648/ Ä• neÃ±je á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• kiriyamaye citt
parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu arahÄ• vipÄ• kacitte á¹-hito parinibb Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci arahÄ• vipÄ• kacitte á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ` á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

arahÄ• Ä• neÃ±je á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . arahÄ• kiriyÄ• byÄ• kate citte á na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu arahÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• kate citte á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ arahÄ• vipÄ• kÄ• byÄ• kate citte á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yati, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``arahÄ• parinibbÄ• yatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

arahÄ• Ä• neÃ±je á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu bhagavÄ• catutthajjhÄ• n samanantarÄ• parinibbutoti {DN II 219}? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci bhagavÄ• catutthajjhÄ• nÄ• samanantarÄ• parinibbuto, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``arahÄ• Ä• neÃ±je á¹-hito parinibbÄ

Ä• neÃ±jakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(211) 4. dhammÄ• bhisamayakathÄ•

<897> atthi \Ee 616/ gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammÄ• bhisamayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi gabbhase dhammassavanaá¹ƒ, dhammasÄ• kacchÄ• , paripucchÄ• , sÄ«lasamÄ• dÄ• naá¹ƒ \Se 649/bhojane mattaÃ±Ã±utÄ• , pubbarattÄ• pararattaá¹ƒ jÄ• gariyÄ• nuyogoti \Be 445/? na hevaá natthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammadesanÄ• , dhammassavanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... pubbarattÄ• parara Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci natthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammadesanÄ• , dhammassavanaá¹ƒ ... pe .
jÄ• gariyÄ• nuyogo, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammÄ• bhisamay

atthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammÄ• bhisamayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu dve paccayÄ• sammÄ• parato ca ghoso, yoniso ca manasikÄ• roti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci dve paccayÄ• sammÄ• diâ parato ca ghoso, yoniso ca manasikÄ• ro, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``atthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammÄ• bhisamayoâ€™â€™ ti.

atthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammÄ• bhisamayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . suttassa pamattassa muá¹-á¹-dhammÄ• bhisamayoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

dhammÄ• bhisamayakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(212-4) 5-7. tissopikathÄ•

<898> atthi \Ne 497/ gabbhaseyyÄ• ya arahattappattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . suttassa \Ee 617/ pa
muá¹-á¹-hassatissa asampajÄ• nassa arahattappattÄ«ti? na \Se 650/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... p

<899> atthi supinagatassa dhammÄ• bhisamayoti? Ä• mantÄ• . suttassa pamattassa muá¹
dhammÄ• bhisamayoti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<900> atthi supinagatassa arahattappattÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . suttassa pamattassa muá¹-á¹-ha
arahattappattÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

tissopikathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(215) 8. abyÄ• katakathÄ•

<901> sabbaá¹ƒ \Be 446/ supinagatassa cittaá¹ƒ abyÄ• katanti? Ä• mantÄ• . supinantena p Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci supinantena pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ haneyya, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbaá¹
abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti.

supinantena adinnaá¹ƒ Ä• diyeyya ... pe ... musÄ• bhaá¹‡eyya, pisuá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡eyya, p samphaá¹ƒ palapeyya, sandhiá¹ƒ chindeyya, nillopaá¹ƒ hareyya, ekÄ• gÄ• rikaá¹ƒ kareyya, tiá¹-á¹-heyya, paradÄ• raá¹ƒ gaccheyya, gÄ• maghÄ• takaá¹ƒ kareyya, nigamaghÄ• takaá¹ƒ methunaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ paá¹-iseveyya \Ne 498/, supinagatassa asuci mucceyya, supinante cÄ«varaá¹ƒ dadeyya, piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• taá¹ƒ dadeyya, senÄ• sanaá¹ƒ dadeyya, gilÄ• napaccat dadeyya, khÄ• danÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya, bhojanÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya, pÄ• nÄ«yaá¹ƒ dadeyya, ceti mÄ• laá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya, gandhaá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya \Se 651/, vilepanaá¹ƒ Ä• ropeyya ... pe ... cet kareyyÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• \Ee 618/. haÃ±ci supinantena cetiyaá¹ƒ abhidakkhiá¹‡aá¹ƒ kareyya

--- ``sabbaá¹ƒ supinagatassa cittaá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti.

<902> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``sabbaá¹ƒ supinagatassa cittaá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• m cittaá¹ƒ abbohÄ• riyaá¹ƒ vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci supinagatassa cittaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• , tena vata re vattabbe --- ``sabbaá¹ƒ supinagatassa cittaá¹ƒ abyÄ• kataâ€™â€

abyÄ• katakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(216) 9. Ä• sevanapaccayakathÄ•

<903> natthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``p Ä• sevito bhÄ• vito bahulÄ«kato \Be 447/ nirayasaá¹ƒvattaniko tiracchÄ• nayonisaá¹ƒvattan pettivisayasaá¹ƒvattaniko, yo sabbalahuso pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tassa vipÄ• ko manussabhÅ«tas hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti {AN c 8.40}. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevana natthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``adinnÄ• Ä• sevitaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vitaá¹ƒ bahulÄ«kataá¹ƒ nirayasaá¹ƒvattanikaá¹ƒ \Se 652/ tiracchÄ• nayon pettivisayasaá¹ƒvattanikaá¹ƒ, yo sabbalahuso adinnÄ• dÄ• nassa vipÄ• ko manussabhÅ«ta bhogabyasanasaá¹ƒvattaniko \Ne 499/ hoti ... pe ... yo sabbalahuso kÄ• mesumicchÄ• cÄ• manussabhÅ«tassa sapattaverasaá¹ƒvattaniko hoti ... pe ... yo sabbalahuso musÄ• vÄ• das manussabhÅ«tassa abbhÅ«tabbhakkhÄ• nasaá¹ƒvattaniko hoti ... pe ... yo sabbalahuso pis manussabhÅ«tassa mittehi bhedanasaá¹ƒvattaniko hoti ... pe ... yo sabbalahuso pharusÄ• y manussabhÅ«tassa amanÄ• pasaddasaá¹ƒvattaniko hoti ... pe ... yo sabbalahuso samphap manussabhÅ«tassa anÄ• deyyavÄ• cÄ• saá¹ƒvattaniko hoti, surÄ• merayapÄ• naá¹ƒ, bhikk sabbalahuso surÄ• merayapÄ• nassa vipÄ• ko manussabhÅ«tassa ummattakasaá¹ƒvattani attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti.

<904> natthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``n bhikkhave, Ä• sevitÄ• bhÄ• vitÄ• bahulÄ«katÄ• nirayasaá¹ƒvattanikÄ• tiracchÄ• nayonisa pettivisayasaá¹ƒvattanikÄ• â€™â€™ ti. attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi kÄ• ci Ä natthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``micchÄ• micchÄ• samÄ• dhi, bhikkhave, Ä• sevito bhÄ• vito ... pe ... pettivisayasaá¹ƒvattanikoâ€™â€ suttantoti \Se 653/? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti.

<905> natthi \Be 448/ kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavat bhikkhave, Ä• sevitÄ• bhÄ• vitÄ• bahulÄ«katÄ• amatogadhÄ• hoti amataparÄ• yanÄ• an attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi atthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti.

natthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``sammÄ Ä• sevito bhÄ• vito bahulÄ«kato ... pe ... sammÄ• samÄ• dhi, bhikkhave, Ä• sevito bhÄ• vito amatogadho \Ee 620/ hoti amataparÄ• yano amatapariyosÄ• noâ€™â€™ ti attheva suttanto kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• ti.

Ä• sevanapaccayakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

22. bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo

(217) 10. khaá¹‡ikakathÄ•

<906> ekacittakkhaá¹‡ikÄ• sabbe dhammÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . citte mahÄ• pathavÄ« saá¹‡á saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, sinerupabbatarÄ• jÄ• saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, Ä• po saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• ti, tejo saá¹‡á¹-hÄ• tiá¹‡akaá¹-á¹-havanappatayo saá¹‡á¹-hahantÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

ekacittakkhaá¹‡ikÄ• sabbe dhammÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• vattabbe ... pe ... cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ \Se 654/ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena sahajÄ• tanti? Ä• ma sÄ• riputto etadavoca --- ``ajjhattikaÃ±ceva, Ä• vuso, cakkhuá¹ƒ aparibhinnaá¹ƒ hoti, bÄ• hi Ä• pÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchanti, no ca tajjo samannÄ• hÄ• ro hoti, neva tÄ• va tajjassa viÃ±Ã±Ä {viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÄ• vassa (bahÅ«su) } pÄ• tubhÄ• vo hoti. ajjhattikaÃ±ceva, Ä• vuso, cakk bÄ• hirÄ• ca rÅ«pÄ• Ä• pÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchanti, no ca tajjo samannÄ• hÄ• ro hoti, neva t viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÄ• gassa pÄ• tubhÄ• vo hoti. yato ca kho, Ä• vuso, ajjhattikaÃ±ceva cakkh \Be 449/, bÄ• hirÄ• ca rÅ«pÄ• Ä• pÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchanti, tajjo ca samannÄ• hÄ• ro hoti, viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÄ• gassa pÄ• tubhÄ• vo hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti {MN I 306}! attheva suttantoti? A vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``cakkhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena sahajÄ• taâ€™â€™ nti.

sotÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... ghÄ• nÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... jivhÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yat kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡ena sahajÄ• tanti? na \Ee 621/ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... kÄ• yÄ• yatan \Ne 501/ sahajÄ• tanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputto etadavoca --- ``ajjhattiko c aparibhinno hoti, bÄ• hirÄ• ca phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• na Ä• pÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchanti, no ca ... pe Ä• vuso, kÄ• yo aparibhinno hoti, bÄ• hirÄ• ca phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• Ä• pÄ• thaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchan kho, Ä• vuso, ajjhattiko \Se 655/ ceva kÄ• yo aparibhinno hoti, bÄ• hirÄ• ca phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ
Ä• gacchanti, tajjo ca samannÄ• hÄ• ro hoti, evaá¹ƒ tajjassa viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡abhÄ• gassa pÄ•
I 306}! attheva suttantoti? Ä• mantÄ• . tena hi na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``kÄ• yÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ kÄ• ya sahajÄ• taâ€™â€™ nti.

<907> na vattabbaá¹ƒ --- ``ekacittakkhaá¹‡ikÄ• sabbe dhammÄ• â€™â€™ ti? Ä• mantÄ• .
sassatÄ• aviparià¹‡Ä• madhammÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe. tena hi ekacittakkhaá¹‡ikÄ• s khaá¹‡ikakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

bÄ• vÄ«satimavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

atthi kiÃ±ci saá¹ƒyojanaá¹ƒ appahÄ• ya parinibbÄ• naá¹ƒ, arahÄ• kusalacitto parinibbÄ• ya á¹-hito parinibbÄ• yati, atthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya dhammÄ• bhisamayo, atthi gabbhaseyyÄ• ya supinagatassa dhammÄ• bhisamayo, atthi supinagatassa arahattappatti, sabbaá¹ƒ supinaga abyÄ• kataá¹ƒ, natthi kÄ• ci Ä• sevanapaccayatÄ• , ekacittakkhaá¹‡ikÄ• sabbe dhammÄ• t

23. tevÄ«satimavaggo

(218) 1. ekÄ• dhippÄ• yakathÄ•

<908> ekÄ• dhippÄ• yena \Be 450/ \Ee 622/ methuno dhammo paá¹-isevitabboti? Ä• mant assamaá¹‡ena \Ne 502/ hotabbaá¹ƒ, abhikkhunÄ• hotabbaá¹ƒ, chinnamÅ«lena hotabbaá¹ƒ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... ekÄ• dhippÄ• yena methuno dhammo paá¹-isevitabboti? Ä• mant pÄ• á¹‡o hantabbo, adinnaá¹ƒ Ä• diyitabbaá¹ƒ, musÄ• bhaá¹‡itabbÄ• , pisuá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡ bhaá¹‡itabbaá¹ƒ, samphaá¹ƒ palapitabbaá¹ƒ, sandhi cheditabbo, nillopaá¹ƒ hÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ, e kÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ, paripanthe á¹-hÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ, paradÄ• ro gantabbo, gÄ• maghÄ• tako kÄ• tabl
na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

ekÄ• dhippÄ• yakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

23. tevÄ«satimavaggo

(219) 2. arahantavaá¹‡á¹‡akathÄ•

<909> arahantÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡ena amanussÄ• methunaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ paá¹-isevantÄ«
vaá¹‡á¹‡ena amanussÄ• pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ hananti ... pe ... adinnaá¹ƒ Ä• diyanti, musÄ• bhaá¹‡ bhaá¹‡anti, pharusaá¹ƒ bhaá¹‡anti, samphaá¹ƒ palapanti, sandhiá¹ƒ chindanti, nillopaá¹ƒ ha ekÄ• gÄ• rikaá¹ƒ \Se 657/ karonti, paripanthe tiá¹-á¹-hanti, paradÄ• raá¹ƒ gacchanti, gÄ• ma

... pe ... nigamaghÄ• takaá¹ƒ karontÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

arahantavaá¹‡á¹‡akathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

23. tevÄ«satimavaggo

(220-4) 3-7. issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• dikathÄ•

<910> bodhisatto \Ee 623/ issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«ti? Ä• ma issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu nirayaá¹ƒ gacchati \Be 451/, saÃ±jÄ«vaá¹ƒ gacchati, kÄ• lasu tÄ• panaá¹ƒ gacchati, mahÄ• tÄ• panaá¹ƒ {patÄ• panaá¹ƒ (Ce Se Ke Ee) } gacchati, saá¹…
roruvaá¹ƒ gacchati ... pe ... avÄ«ciá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

bodhisatto \Ne 503/ issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ` issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva suttantoti? nat issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- nattheva suttanto, no c ``bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ gacchatÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

<911> bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu gabbhaseyyaá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu nirayaá¹ƒ upapajjeyya, tiracchÄ• nayoniá¹ƒ upapajjeyyÄ• ti? n
....

bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu gabbhaseyyaá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti \Se 658/? Ä• mantÄ hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... bodhisatto iddhimÄ• ti? Ä• mantÄ• . bodhisattena chandiddhipÄ• vÄ«riyiddhipÄ• do ... pe ... cittiddhipÄ• do ... pe ... vÄ«maá¹ƒsiddhipÄ• do bhÄ• vitoti? na he
pe ....

bodhisatto \Ee 624/ issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu gabbhaseyyaá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu gabbhaseyyaá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva suttantoti?
``bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu gabbhaseyyaá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- natthe vattabbe --- ``bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu gabbhaseyyaá¹ƒ okkamatÄ«â€™â€™

<912> bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu dukkarakÄ• rikaá¹ƒ akÄ• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu ``sassato lokoâ€™â€™ ti paccÄ• gacchi, ``asassato lokoâ€™ lokoâ€™â€™ ti ... pe ... ``anantavÄ• lokoâ€™â€™ ti ... ``taá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ sarÄ«raâ€™ ``aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ jÄ«vaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ sarÄ«raâ€™â€™ nti ... ``hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹ hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti ... ``hoti ca na ca hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ m pe ... ``neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti paccÄ• gacchÄ«ti? n

pe ....

bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu dukkarakÄ• rikaá¹ƒ akÄ• sÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . ``bod issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu dukkarakÄ• rikaá¹ƒ akÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva suttantoti ``bodhisatto \Ne 504/ issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu \Se 659/ dukkarakÄ• rikaá¹ƒ akÄ• sÄ«â suttanto, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu dukkarakÄ• ri ti.

<913> bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu aparantapaá¹ƒ {amaraá¹ƒ tapaá¹ƒ (SN a I 1
satthÄ• raá¹ƒ uddisÄ«ti? Ä• mantÄ• . bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu ``sassato lok
... pe ... \Ee 625/ ``neva hoti na na hoti tathÄ• gato paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• â€™â€™ ti paccÄ• g
vattabbe ... pe ....

<914> bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ satthÄ• raá¹ƒ uddisÄ«ti? Ä• ma issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ satthÄ• raá¹ƒ uddisÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- attheva sutta ``bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ satthÄ• raá¹ƒ uddisÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- vata re vattabbe --- ``bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ satthÄ• raá¹ƒ udd issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• kathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

23. tevÄ«satimavaggo

(225) 8. patirÅ«pakathÄ•

<915> atthi na rÄ• go rÄ• gapatirÅ«pakoti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi na phasso phassapatirÅ«pako vedanÄ• patirÅ«pikÄ• , atthi na saÃ±Ã±Ä• saÃ±Ã±Ä• patirÅ«pikÄ• \Be 453/, atthi na cetan atthi na cittaá¹ƒ cittapatirÅ«pakaá¹ƒ, atthi na saddhÄ• saddhÄ• patirÅ«pikÄ• , atthi na vÄ«r vÄ«riyapatirÅ«pakaá¹ƒ, atthi na sati satipatirÅ«pikÄ• , atthi na samÄ• dhi samÄ• dhipatirÅ«p na paÃ±Ã±Ä• paÃ±Ã±Ä• patirÅ«pikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

<916> atthi na doso dosapatirÅ«pako, atthi na moho mohapatirÅ«pako, atthi na kileso \Ne 5 kilesapatirÅ«pakoti? Ä• mantÄ• . atthi \Ee 626/ na phasso phassapatirÅ«pako ... pe ... atthi paÃ±Ã±Ä• patirÅ«pikÄ• ti? na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ....

patirÅ«pakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

23. tevÄ«satimavaggo

(226) 9. aparinipphannakathÄ•

<917> rÅ«paá¹ƒ aparinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . rÅ«paá¹ƒ na aniccaá¹ƒ na saá¹…khataá¹ƒ na khayadhammaá¹ƒ na vayadhammaá¹ƒ na virÄ• gadhammaá¹ƒ na nirodhadhammaá¹ƒ na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khataá¹ƒ paá¹-iccasamuppannaá vayadhammaá¹ƒ virÄ• gadhammaá¹ƒ nirodhadhammaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammanti? Ä• m saá¹…khataá¹ƒ ... pe ... vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammaá¹ƒ, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ ap nti.

dukkhaÃ±Ã±eva parinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ {SN b
--- ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ dukkhaá¹ƒ vutta ``rÅ«paá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒâ€™â€™, no ca vata re vattabbe --- ``dukkhaÃ±Ã±eva parinipphannaâ

<918> vedanÄ• \Se 661/ ... pe ... saÃ±Ã±Ä• ... saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• ... viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ ... ca
... dhammÄ• yatanaá¹ƒ ... cakkhudhÄ• tu ... dhammadhÄ• tu ... cakkhundriyaá¹ƒ ... pe ... aÃ aparinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ \Ee 627/ na aniccaá¹ƒ ... pe ... na na hevaá¹ƒ vattabbe ... pe ... nanu aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…khataá¹ƒ ... pe vipariá¹‡Ä• madhammanti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒ saá¹…k
khayadhammaá¹ƒ vayadhammaá¹ƒ virÄ• gadhammaá¹ƒ nirodhadhammaá¹ƒ vipariá¹‡Ä• ma
--- ``aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ aparinipphannaâ€™â€™ nti.

dukkhaÃ±Ã±eva \Be 454/ \Ne 506/ parinipphannanti? Ä• mantÄ• . nanu yadaniccaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ aniccaâ€™â€™ nti? Ä• mantÄ• . haÃ±ci yadanic vuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• --- ``aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ aniccaá¹ƒâ€™â€™, no ca vata re vattab parinipphannaâ€™â€™ nti.

aparinipphannakathÄ• niá¹-á¹-hitÄ• .

tevÄ«satimavaggo.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

ekÄ• dhippÄ• yena methuno dhammo paá¹-isevitabbo, arahantÄ• naá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡ena aman paá¹-isevanti, bodhisatto issariyakÄ• makÄ• rikÄ• hetu vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ gacchati, gabbhaseyya dukkarakÄ• rikaá¹ƒ akÄ• si \Se 662/, aparantapaá¹ƒ akÄ• si, aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ satthÄ• raá¹ƒ uddis rÄ• gapatirÅ«pako atthi na doso dosapatirÅ«pako atthi na moho mohapatirÅ«pako atthi na k kilesapatirÅ«pako, rÅ«paá¹ƒ aparinipphannaá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• vindriyaá¹ƒ aparinipphannant khuddako aá¸• á¸• hapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sako.

tassuddÄ• naá¹ƒ ---

navaá¹ƒ, nibbuti, ekÄ• dhippÄ• yoti.

paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakuddÄ• naá¹ƒ --- mahÄ• niyÄ• mo \Ee 628/, anusayÄ• , niggaho, khuddakapaÃ±camo.

parappavÄ• damaddanÄ• , suttamÅ«lasamÄ• hitÄ• .

ujjotanÄ• satthusamaye, kathÄ• vatthupakaraá¹‡eti ||

paÃ±cattiá¹ƒsabhÄ• á¹‡avÄ• raá¹ƒ

kathÄ• vatthupakaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ niá¹-á¹-hitaá¹ƒ.

É Í Í Í

just as one would look upon a mirage - if a person thus looks upon the world, the King of Death sees him not.

Dhammapada 170

** **

LOVING AND DYING

by Ven. Visuddhacara

CONTENTS

Preface

HELLO DEATH GOODBYE LIFE

TWO RESOLUTIONS
Saying it with flowers too

COPING WITH DISEASE - THE RIGHT ATTITUDE
We can meditate

TRIBUTE TO KUAI CHAN

WE MUST DO OUR BIT
Alleviating suffering

LOVE IS UNDERSTANDING
The man and the scorpion
The Five Precepts

WE ARE OUR OWN SAVIOURS
Rebirth is instantaneous

How sharing of merits is effected
A Buddhist funeral is a simple funeral
We can learn from others
Grief is not suppressed but acknowledged
As for me

OUR DEATH SHOULD BE SERENE
Tears of joy
Making the atmosphere serene
The last thought-moment

CONTEMPLATION ON DEATH
When four mountains come a-rolling
A sense of urgency
Contemplating leads to understanding and acceptance
No lamenting can touch the ashes of the dead
Death is no stranger to us
Momentary death
Food for thought

A WORLD OF ANOMALIES

THE SWEETEST SMILE YET

** **

PREFACE

I have written this book to share some thoughts on death with anybody who may care to read it. Thoughts about how we can go about facing death - with courage and equanimity. With dignity. And if you like with a smile. Thoughts about how to cope with suffering, to live with wisdom and compassion, or with as much of it as we can muster, until we die.

But people generally do not like to talk about death. Whenever the subject is broached, they might start to feel uncomfortable. It is especially considered taboo on auspicious occasions such as a birthday or a New Year to talk about death. It is as if mentioning the word, //death//, on an auspicious occasion would mar that occasion and bring about bad luck or an earlier death! Of course, I do not agree with such notions. To me, it is just a superstition. I can understand, though, if people were to consider it bad taste to talk about death on auspicious occasions. But I think it is good and wise to reflect often on death and even on occasions such as a birthday or New Year, perhaps even more so on such occasions. Why? Because we can consider that we are not growing any younger but older, that each year brings us but one year closer to the grave. During such reflections we can take stock of our life, reassess our position and see whether we are going in the right direction - the direction of wisdom and compassion.

As a monk, I constantly meditate on death. It reminds me to lead a more meaningful life, not to waste my days away, though I must confess I still fritter away precious time from time to time; for the mind, as you know, can be very stubborn and lazy at times. Nevertheless by frequent contemplation on death, I am reminded that I must find more time to practise insight meditation so I can clean my mind of the defilements of greed, hatred and delusion.

The Buddha advised us to contemplate often on death, as often as daily or every now and then. It will arouse in us //samvega// - the sense of urgency to strive harder to eradicate the suffering that comes from a defiled mind and deluded mind. I like to talk about death. It's my favourite subject. (Am I morbid? It's all right. Go ahead. You can say I'm morbid and whatever you like. It's fine with me. I don't mind. People i.e. not only me but also you, must be allowed their basic human right to express their views and feelings as long as they do so in a legitimate, sensitive, non-imposing and non-violent way. No one should get angry with a person on account of his expressing his views in such manner, though unfortunately, sometimes we forget and get all heated up.) But coming back to the subject, I have always pondered, I have always wondered and am still wondering: "Why do we live? Why do we die? What is it all about? What is it all for? To what purpose? For what end?"

Many answers have been proffered, no doubt. And I'm sure there are many people who would be happy to offer me answers to these questions that have been asked ever since man began to think and ponder. But I cannot say I have been satisfied with all the answers that have been given. I am still seeking. These days I have become a Buddhist monk and taken up meditation. I subscribe to the Buddha's five precepts of not killing or harming, not stealing or cheating, not committing sexual misconduct such as adultery, not lying, and not taking alcohol and drugs. As a monk though I observe, in addition, celibacy and other rules for monks.

I cannot say I have as yet found all the answers to my questions, but I have found some solace, some comfort in the Buddha's dispensation. I can relate to the Buddha's teaching of mindfulness and loving-kindness. And I'm still meditating. Perhaps I might find all the answers one day. It will be nice if I can. But if I could not, it also doesn't matter. What matters is that I have tried. I will be glad even if I were to die trying. For at least I have tried. That way my life would still be meaningful, at least to a certain extent. And along the way, of course, I will try to spread as much good cheer and happiness according to my disposition and ability.

I have tried in this book to share my limited understanding of life and death. I feel that we need to discuss the question of death frankly. We should not be afraid to bring up the subject. Otherwise, how can we discuss and learn? When we can openly discuss and learn and understand, then it is good; for we can come to terms with death. We can know better how to deal with it. This is important; for the simple reason that all of us must die. There is no escape. And if we cannot relate to death now, how can we relate to it when we are lying on our deathbed, about to breathe our last? Might we not be overcome with fear and confusion then? So it's better to learn all about death now. It will surely stand us in good stead. Then we need not fear anymore. We'll have confidence, and when death comes we can go with a smile. We can say: "Death, do your worst. I know you and I can smile."

I have written this book in a forthright and engaging a manner as possible. I have tried not to be too academic or stilted. I wanted you to enjoy reading this book, to chuckle over those parts that might elicit a chuckle, and to pick up a thing or two which you might find helpful in living, loving and dying. Also I have written not so much as from a monk to a layperson but as from one human being to another human being. So I have written quite freely with the purpose of communicating, of reaching out to the heart. Though I cannot say how far I have succeeded or flopped! Only you will be the best judge of that.

As I'm a Buddhist monk, readers will find that the contents contain a lot of Buddhist values and concepts. Of course, some values, such as that of love and compassion, are universal. They belong to no one religion but to all. All religions teach love and compassion. They are all good religions. But it's we, the followers, who do not follow. So we kill and maim and hurt in the name of religion. Who's to be blamed but ourselves! Not the religions or their founders who always preached love, wisdom, mercy, forgiveness and compassion. If we can awaken to our ignorance, then we can love truly. We can live as brothers and sisters with tolerance, patience and understanding, with love and compassion.

I wrote this book mainly for Buddhists. But non-Buddhists too might read and find some benefit, some common areas of agreement, appreciation and understanding. At the very least, they would know the Buddhist point of view, the Buddhist approach and understanding. It's good to know each other's viewpoints; it leads to more tolerance, understanding and appreciation of each other's approaches and beliefs. There is no desire on my part at all to convert anybody. That should be very clear. Let everybody practise their own religion and let them do so well; for as has been well put by Nobel peace laureate, the Dalai Lama, compassion is, after all, the essence of all religions.

I have tried to share my understanding to the best of my ability. But I have no doubt that there will be some shortcomings here and there. Or some areas where there may be differences of interpretation or understanding. You may not like or agree with certain things I say. Or you may not like the way I put it. You might think it is improper, flippant, insensitive, sentimental, abrasive, distorted, absurd, or whatever. It is all right. This is natural. As long as there are even two persons, there will be some disagreements. You can just reject those things you do not agree with, throw them out, so to speak. You need not have to accept everything I say. Why should you? Of course you have a good mind of your own, and you can (and must) think and decide for yourself. We can agree to disagree, without getting upset or angry. We can agree to disagree and still remain good friends. Can we not? That is the most wonderful thing, the quintessence of mental maturity. It is for each of us to decide sincerely and honestly for ourselves what we can relate to and what we cannot. We need not believe everything or anything.

The Buddha himself said it's better that we carefully consider, investigate and verify for ourselves before accepting anything. Even the Buddha's own words too should come under the same intensity of scrutiny. After all, the Buddha made no exception whatsoever. He never believed in blind faith. He never told us to simply believe what he said and to simply reject what others said. But he told us to investigate, practise and verify for ourselves. If we find that a certain teaching is good, that it is wholesome and leads to the eradication of greed, hatred and delusion, then we can accept it. If not, we should reject it. It's excellent advice. And, therefore, taking a cue from the Buddha, I always like to say: Believe nothing. But I think, practise and verify for yourself. That's to me the best and safest approach. But as for any mistakes on my part in the writing of this book, I do apologise and ask for forgiveness.

May all beings be happy. May we all find the wisdom and happiness that we seek, each in our own way. And happy reading!

** **

HELLO DEATH GOODBYE LIFE

One day when I die, as I must, I'd like to die with a smile on my lips. I'd like to go peacefully, to greet death like a friend, to be able to say quite cheerfully: "Hello Death, Goodbye Life."

I can imagine myself having a conversation with death. Perhaps it might go this way: "Hello Death! How are you? I have been waiting for you a long time. All my life I have been anticipating you. Are you coming for me at long last? Is it time for me to go already?

"Yes, yes, Death I am coming. Be patient. I'm ready. Can't you see I am smiling? Since a long time ago I have been planning to welcome you with a smile. Yes, Death, I understand. You don't have to apologise. I know you've got a job to do. I hold nothing against you. No hard feelings. It's nothing personal, I understand.

"As I have said, Death, all my life I have been waiting for this moment. To see whether I can meet you with a smile. To see whether I could, at least, inspire in death, if not in life. You are now giving me this opportunity and I thank you for it.

"Yes, I have heard a lot about you. That you wait for no man. That you come like a thief in the night. That you'll bargain with nobody. That you'll not take no for an answer.

"Death, it's all right. I'll come with you gladly. I'm tired. This body is like a broken shell. It had seen better days. It has outlived its use and time. As you can see I'm already almost dead. And I have been enduring all this pain, trying to smile at all these many visitors calling on me. Death, to tell you the truth, you should have come earlier. After all the pain, you are a welcome respite, like a godsend. But enough of this talk. Death, let's not dally. Let's go. Come, hold my hand."

And I'd go, as I have always dreamt, with a smile on my lips. What a beautiful way to die! All the people who have gathered around me need not cry. They can be happy because they can see I'm smiling. They'll know that I'm all right. Death is nothing to be afraid of. Treat death like a friend. Be ever ready to say hello to death and goodbye to life.

** **

Of course no one is spared from death. All of us have to die. As the Buddha said: "Life is uncertain but death is certain". While we live we suffer the separation that comes with the death of a loved one. Both my grandparents have died. I do not remember my grandfather. He died when I was very young. But I do remember my grandmother. She was very kind to me. She was also very poor. She preferred to live in the countryside while my parents resided in town. I remember once when she visited us, I asked her for five cents. She immediately took out her purse, dug out five cents and gave it to me. In those days, there was purchasing power even in five cents: you could get an ice-ball or a glass of iced drink with five cents. If you drink the coconut water served by the Indian man you could even have two glasses for five cents! And for five cents too you could get five sweets.

My father died when I was 10. I remember visiting him for the last time one night at the General Hospital as he lay there dying from tuberculosis and other complications. I remember my mother telling him: "Ah Beh, this is your son Johnny come to see you." My father couldn't speak. He had an oxygen tube inserted in his nose. He seemed to look at me weakly. I was young. I didn't know what death was about then, though I know better now. My poor mother suffered the most. She had seen so many deaths and had a most difficult life from young. Definitely, life was no bed of roses for her.

One of my brothers died while still a baby. Another died at 23 together with his fiancee. It was tragic. They drowned. I can still remember seeing their bodies in the mortuary. My mother was wailing her heart out. It was very painful for her to lose a beloved son in such a tragic way. I was quite stunned and just didn't know what to make out of it all. I was 16 then. I tried to appear nonchalant, casual. I kept away the tears. I spoke and behaved as if nothing had happened, as if death was to me an everyday affair, and there was no need to grieve. I made light of it, trying to put on a cool exterior.

But in private I cried. I cried bitterly. And after the funeral I went back to the cemetery. I cycled there with a cangkul. I dug the ground and planted flowers around the grave of my brother and his beloved's. I carved on his wooden cross the words: "Greater love than this no man hath that he should lay down his life for his friend", as he had died while trying to save his fiancee. And I spoke to God. I asked Him: "Lord, why do you do this to me? Why do you take away my brother? Is it your will, your desire? Then if it is, let your will be done. I accept it." For you see, I was a good Christian then. And God's will must precede all others. It must not be questioned. Though as a Buddhist now, I believe I understand a little better. Yes, no God took away my brother. If we accept life we must accept death. Death is part and parcel of life. As the Buddha said, it is ignorance that makes the world of suffering go round, and we fare on from life to life according to our deeds. Good begets good and bad begets bad. I must confess I can relate better to the Buddha's way of looking at things.

Later in life I saw more deaths. As a journalist, I had seen bodies - people who died from accidents, gang-fights, suicides, samsu poisoning, etc. I wrote dramatic, touching or tragic stories about how people died. There was the man who kissed his little daughter goodbye and then shot himself in the head. Then there was a young couple who was found in a suicide pact on a hotel bed. The girl died from the poison they took; her boyfriend survived. And there was the notorious robber gunned down by police on a New Year's day. He was a marked man, who could not live to see the end of the first day of a new year. But for me it was just another story. I never thought very deeply about death then. I was quite numbed by it all. All I wanted was to get the best story for the front page of the newspaper. There was little feeling or compassion in me for the poor victims. I was quite a hard-hearted and selfish person then, just interested in my own well-being.

Still much later on, as a monk, I encountered deaths - this time with more feeling and compassion. When I visited the sick, I could feel sympathy for them. I tried as best as I could to console. To the Buddhists, I recited the suttas, the Buddhist scriptures. I told them what the Buddha said: "The body may be sick but let not the mind be sick." We may not be able to do much for the body but we can do something about the mind. We can keep it steady even when we are sick. We can be mindful. We can watch the rise and fall of the pain, how it comes and goes in waves. We can understand the nature of suffering. We can meet it and learn from it. It is there as a test - of how well we have understood the nature of life, how well we have understood that there is no permanent self here but only constant change of arising and passing away, like the ceaseless flowing of a river; how well we have understood that it is our ignorance, craving, attachment, anger, fear, etc, that are the cause of our suffering.

In that understanding, we can rise up to meet the pain. We can take it in our stride. We can remain calm and cool. Without even the slightest bit of depression. Yes, we can smile, even at our pain. We can say: "Hey pain, you are really trying to do me in. Are you not? Another person might succumb to you but not me. I have been training and steeling myself for you. The Buddha teaches that I should respond without anger or aversion. So I'm trying to respond to you now without anger or aversion. I understand that with mindfulness and peace in my heart, I can rise above you. I can smile at you. You teach me that life is suffering. But you also teach me that I can rise above you." And you can smile at the pain. You will feel immediately better.

** **

Life is mostly froth and bubble,
Two things stand like stone,
Kindness in another's trouble,
Courage in your own.

Adam Gordon

** **

TWO RESOLUTIONS

As I'm writing now, I recall that just yesterday a fellow monk died. He had been suffering from terminal cancer for eight months. When I was by his side at the hospital a few days before his death, he was in pain. I tried to feed him some broth but he could not eat. He looked quite gaunt and grim. He could hardly speak. The cancer had ravaged his body and it was no easy task for his mind to bear up. I urged him to note or observe the pain as he would do in normal meditation, to remain as calm and equanimous as possible. He was a staunch meditator and I am sure he meditated to the very end.

I remember another occasion when I visited a kind old man who had leukemia. He too was in pain. It showed on his face. There were beads of sweat on his forehead and face. I took a towel and gently wiped away his sweat. I whispered into his ear and tried to soothe him. This man too was a meditator and again I reminded him to maintain mindfulness, to observe the pain as calmly as possible. I was happy when the look of pain disappeared from his face. Shortly after, his relatives came and I left him. A few hours later he died. I was glad I was able to help him a little before he expired.

Although there is happiness in life, there is also suffering. The happiness seems so fleeting - gone in no time only to be replaced by sorrow and discontent. Life itself, because it ends in death, is a tragedy. Someone once said life is like an onion: you peel it crying. The Buddha says birth is suffering because it leads inevitably to decay and death. We should understand this well. If we accept life we must accept death. If we want to cry when somebody dies, then we should also cry at his birth. For the moment a baby is born the seed of death is in him. But we are happy when a child is born. We laugh and we congratulate the parents. If we understand birth - that it must lead to death - then when death comes we should be able to face it with a smile.

Seeing how people die in pain, their body wracked by disease, and seeing how all life must end in death (a fact that is driven home to me every time I went for funeral chanting), two resolutions arose in my mind: First, when the time comes for me to die, I want to die with a smile on my lips. I want to be able to be very mindful and serene. In other words I want to keep my wits about me. I want to be able to smile at my pain no matter how excruciating it may be. I want to be able to smile at all the visitors that may call on me. I want to be able to smile at all the kind doctors and nurses who attend upon me. I want to be able to smile at my fellow patients and to help in whatever way I can in the hospital, whether to inspire or to console.

Instead of the doctors and nurses asking me how I am, I want to ask them: "How are you doc? How are you Sister? How is your day today? You know, you are doing a great job. We are very lucky to have you. Please keep up the good work. Thank you very much!" And to my Buddhist visitors, I will speak Dhamma(*1). I'll say: Look at me. I'm half-dead. Finished! You know, it's not easy to meditate when you are half-dead. So while you are still healthy, make the most of it. Meditate! Practise the Dhamma! Have no regrets later. Don't wait until you become fatally ill. It will be too late then. But if you have been doing your meditation practice now, then when you fall sick it won't be so difficult to face the pain. You can observe and even transcend it.

You know, the Buddha tells us that everything is impermanent. If we meditate hard enough, we can understand the fact of impermanence more deeply, such that we will not be so attached to this mind and body. We will know for certain that this body is not ours; this mind too is not ours. Understanding, we will be able to let go. We will not be so attached to the gross sensual pleasures of life. We can live more wisely. We can grow old gracefully. And we need not fear death.

The Buddha says suffering is inherent in life. And we must learn how to live with it and to transcend it. Only by applying mindfulness in our daily life and by meditating can we penetrate the truth of suffering. When we have understood suffering deeply, we will strive to remove the cause of it, which is our craving, our attachment to life, to the sensual lure of pleasant sights, pleasant sounds, pleasant smell, pleasant tastes and pleasant touch. We will try to purify our mind and heart of all defilements.

According to the Buddha, when our mind is purified of greed, hatred and delusion, we will overcome all suffering. We will never again respond with attachment or aversion to anything. Instead there will be only wisdom and compassion in us. Just this is the end of suffering. Clinging no more we can never suffer. Even physical pain brings no mental suffering as the mind does not respond with aversion or anger. The mind can be calm and peaceful. There is acceptance and understanding. And when we die with this kind of wisdom and peace, the Buddha says that will be the end of suffering. No more rebirth, no more coming back to this cycle of birth and death. If we do not take on any new birth, there will be no decay and death together with its attendant suffering. Finished! The curtain falls! This mass of suffering is extinguished. And we can then say, just as the saints of old had said, "Done is what is to be done. Lived is the holy life."

Of course, right now we may still be far from the goal. But as they say, a journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. So I'm an optimist. Yes, I'm a Buddhist and an optimist. (Who says a Buddhist is a pessimist?) And I believe that every step we take on the path of mindfulness shall bring us one step closer to the goal - the goal of Nibbana, the end of all suffering. And being an optimist, I like to think that we will reach it sooner rather than later.

Saying it with flowers too

And so as I'm lying on my hospital bed, I'd like to speak Dhamma to all those who call on me, or to anybody who cares to listen. And furthermore, I can send flowers to all my friends out there. I might include a card with a message that can go something like this: "Hello there! How are you? Do you like these flowers? Are they not beautiful? Do you have time to pause and appreciate the beauty of a flower and breathe in its fragrance? And when you look at a flower, do you also see the shining eyes of your loved one or your child? And do you feel and understand their hopes and their fears? Or are you too busy, too preoccupied with your own worldly plans and ambitions, your pursuit of fame and wealth?

"Have you considered well the nature of impermanence, my friend - how all must fade and die? And how, while we are alive, we ought to live meaningfully so as to have no regrets later. By the way, like the flower that is fading, I too am dying. But I'm sending you good wishes. May you be well and happy! I hope you do find time for your loved ones and for the practice of meditation. You know, making money, acquiring luxuries, enjoying sensual pleasures is not everything. They may feel good for a while, but actually being kind and loving is more important: it will give you more satisfaction and happiness. Forgive me for preaching such platitudes but do give some heed to the words of a dying person. Allow him to say his piece. Yes, while you are alive, you should try to spread as much good cheer and happiness as possible. Forgive everybody. Do not harbour any grudges or consider anybody your enemies. Always remember, life is short and soon we will all be dead. And love is giving, not taking. Love gives without attaching any conditions. Love expects no return. Try to cultivate this beautiful kind of love. Be happy!" And I'll end with a PS - "Take good care. You need not visit me. But you can be happy for me. For I'm smiling and I'm happy that I can die with a smile on my lips. Cheerio and good luck!"

And if I could not speak because I was too ill, then still I could smile to show that everything was fine, that the disease was only getting my body and not my mind. In that way one can inspire even when one is ill. People might then appreciate the Dhamma more and practise even harder. Of course, if I am addressing my non-Buddhist friends, I must not impose my religious views upon them. I can express my views but in no way must I impose it upon them. Just as I would not want them to impose their views on me, so too must I not impose my views on them. We must give due respect to each other's religious views and have loving-kindness for each other. In this way, there will be peaceful co-existence.

** **

COPING WITH DISEASE - THE RIGHT ATTITUDE

We should not look on disease and suffering as something which will destroy us completely, and thereby giving in to despair and despondency. On the contrary, we (i.e. in the case of Buddhists) can look upon it as a test of how well we have understood the Buddha's teachings, how well we can apply the understanding we have supposedly learnt. If we cannot cope mentally, if we break down, it shows our understanding of the Dhamma, our practice, is still weak. So, in this way, it is a test and an opportunity for us to see how well we have mastered our practice.

Then also, disease is an opportunity for us to further enhance our practice of patience and tolerance. How can we practise and develop paramis(*2) (perfections) such as patience if we are not tested, if we are not put under difficult and severe conditions? So, in this way, we can look at the disease as an opportunity for us to cultivate more patience.

We can also look at health as not just the mere absence of disease but the capacity to experience a disease, and to learn and grow from it. Yes, such a novel definition of health comes from certain medical experts, such as Dr Paul Pearsall, of the Sinai Hospital, Detroit, USA. Seeing how disease can never be completely eradicated and how we have eventually to succumb in one way or another, these doctors have come up with a definition of health that can help us to adjust to disease when it comes. It is true, isn't it? - that no matter how many sophisticated machines, procedures and drugs we may come up with, people still succumb to cancer, AIDS, heart disease and a host of other ailments. Ultimately there is no escape. We have to understand and accept the fact, so that when it comes and we have to go down, we can go down gracefully. No doubt, we will treat the disease as best we can, but when despite our best efforts, we fail and the disease continues to progress, we have to accept and reconcile with the inevitable.

In the final analysis, it is not how long we live but how well we live that counts, and that includes how well we can accept our disease, and finally how well we can die. In this regard, Dr Bernie S. Siegel, in his book, Peace, Love & Healing, wrote:

"Exceptional patients don't try not to die. They try to live until they die. Then they are successes, no matter what the outcome of their disease, because they have healed their lives, even if they have not cured their diseases."

And he also said:

"A successful life is not about dying. It is about living well. I have known two-year-olds and nine-year-olds who have changed people and even entire communities by their ability to love, and their lives were successful though short. On the other hand, I have known many who lived much longer and left behind nothing but emptiness."

So it can be quite wonderful after all that our life can be healed

even though our diseases may not be cured. How? Because suffering is a teacher and if we learn our lesson well, we can become surprisingly better persons. Have we not heard accounts of how people after having gone through great suffering, emerged changed and better persons? If they had been impatient, selfish, arrogant and thoughtless before, they might become more patient, kind, gentle and humble. Sometimes they remarked that the disease was a good thing for them - it gave them an opportunity to reconsider their lifestyle and the more important values in life. They come to appreciate their family and friends more, and they now value the time they spend with their loved ones. And if they were to recover, they would find more time for their loved ones, and to do the things that are really more important and meaningful.

But even if we were to succumb to the disease we can still learn and grow from it. We could understand the precariousness of life and how true the Buddha's teaching was - that there is an essential flaw in life. We could become kinder and more appreciative of the kindness we have received from people. We could forgive those who had hurt us. We could love more richly, more deeply. And when death comes, we can die with acceptance and peace. In this way, we can say that our life is healed because we are reconciled with the world and we are at peace.

** **

We can meditate

When we are sick and bedridden, we need not despair. We can meditate even when we are in bed. We can observe our mind and body. We can obtain calmness and strength by doing breathing meditation. We can observe our in-breath and out-breath, knowing as we breathe in and out. This can give us a calming effect. Or we can observe the rising and falling of the abdomen as we breath in and out. Our mind can follow the rising and falling, and become, as it were, one with it. This too can give us calmness. And from such calmness, understanding can arise. We might see the transient and dissolutary nature of all phenomena, and be able to reconcile with the fact of impermanence, unsatisfactori-ness and no-self. If we have learnt mindfulness or Vipassana(*3) meditation, we can pass our time quite easily. There are many objects we can observe in any posture, whether lying down, sitting, walking or standing. We can know our posture as it is, and feel the sensations that arise in our body. We can observe them with a steady and calm mind. And, of course, the mind is also a subject for observation. So we can also observe the states of our mind. All can be observed - sadness, depression, restlessness, worry, thoughts - and they would all pass, giving way to equanimity, peace and wisdom. Wholesome and unwholesome states will come and go. We will be able to watch them all with understanding and equanimity.

Sometimes we can radiate //metta// (loving-kindness). Again and again we can wish for all beings:

> May all beings be well and happy.
> May they be free from harm and danger.
> May they be free from mental suffering.
> May they be free from physical suffering.
> May they take care of themselves happily.(*4)

In this way too, we can pass our time quite happily even if we are bedridden. We can radiate metta to the doctors, nurses and fellow-patients. We can also send our metta to our loved ones, relatives and friends. Moreover, we can reflect on the Dhamma from time to time, recollect what we have read, heard or understood. Reflecting thus, we can respond to our suffering with wisdom and equanimity.

The instruction of the Buddha was to cultivate the mind, to meditate, and to do so even when we are sick. In fact, it is at such times that we need to make even more effort to summon up our mindfulness. Who knows, //Nibbana// or the highest wisdom, may be attained even as we breathe our last! In the scriptures, the Buddha cited the case of a person who was sick - afflicted with painful bodily feelings, grievous, sharp, racking, distracting, discomforting that drained the life away. But that person was not disheartened. He felt //samvega// - a sense of urgency to strive even in his last hours. "He makes effort accordingly," the Buddha said. "His mind being intent on Nibbana, he realizes with his own person the supreme truth, he sees it by penetrating it with wisdom."

** **

True it is, true it is, householder, that you are sick; your body is weak and cumbered. For one carrying this body about, householder, to claim but a moment's health would be sheer foolishness. Wherefore, householder, thus you should train yourself: "Though my body is sick, my mind shall not be sick." Thus householder, must you train yourself.

Buddha

** **

TRIBUTE TO KUAI CHAN

I'd like to tell you about a brave yogi who died peacefully from lung cancer with the word, Nibbana, on her lips. Her name is Kuai Chan and she passed away on December 18, 1992 at her home in Kuala Lumpur. She was 43. Her husband, Billy, told me how she coped with the disease. Finding the account most inspiring, especially for yogis (meditators), I asked him for permission to relate it in this book, and I thank him for agreeing to it.

Kuai Chan was first diagnosed with breast cancer in April 1989. At that time she had already practised Vipassana meditation for about a year. She took the diagnosis calmly. "My wife accepted that it was her kamma(*5)," said Billy. "She did not blame anybody or anything. She was not bitter nor did she fall into any depression. She was remarkably steady and remained quite so till her death." Kuai Chan underwent an operation to remove the affected breast. Then after three months she had to be operated upon again when the cancer cells were found to be still growing in the area. After that she underwent radio- and chemo-therapy with minimal side-effects. Throughout her treatment for her breast cancer, and in the last six months of her life after she was diagnosed with terminal lung cancer, she declined to take any pain medication. "She didn't want any painkillers," said Billy. "Even when the pain was excruciating, she refused to take any paindrugs, not even a panadol. She was a very determined person, very strong and admirable."

Her decision to go without the pain medication was because she wanted to keep her mind as clear and alert as possible. She was a yogi, and all yogis value their mindfulness. They wouldn't want any drugs that can dull their mind and impair their meditation. So if they can take on the pain they would do so. Kuai Chan was prepared to face the pain, so she declined the painkillers. She only agreed to the radio- and chemo-therapy for her breast cancer because they might have led to a cure. But later when she had lung cancer and was told that it was terminal, she declined the radio- and chemo-therapy recommended by a hospital for alleviating her suffocation. And when a doctor offered to administer pain medication, such as morphine, she rejected it too.

Billy said that in her first bout with the breast cancer, Kuai Chan had little problem with the pain she felt after the operation. As a yogi, she was able to note the pain quite well and it would disappear. But the lung cancer was a real ordeal for her. The pain was terribly acute at times but still she refused drugs. There were times she just collapsed and lay prostrate on the floor when the pain struck. But still she held on. She also had a wracking cough which persisted for many days and nights. Billy was by her side and when she could not sleep night after night, he tried to soothe her pain and cough by rubbing ointment, massaging and other traditional remedies. He took her to see Chinese physicians and obtained many kinds of herbs and brewed them for her to drink.

Billy said it was Kuai Chan's faith and meditation that enabled her to face her suffering with a remarkable degree of serenity and composure. Both of them had meditated with Venerable Sujiva at a Retreat in Taiping in 1988. Subsequently Kuai Chan continued to attend regular Retreats at the Venerable's Santisukharama hermitage at Kota Tinggi, Johor.

When she was diagnosed with lung cancer after a coughing spell in July 1992, the doctor gave her one month to live. Showing Kuai Chan and Billy the x-ray, he pointed out how the cancer had spread all over the lungs. He even expressed surprise that Kuai Chan could still be walking around and looking quite healthy, given the condition of her cancer-ravaged lungs. But the doctor didn't know that Kuai Chan had a mind of steel. She survived for six months. For her then it was not so much a battle to stay alive as to die with dignity. When she and Billy saw me at the Wisdom Centre in Petaling Jaya where I was visiting in July, they asked what could they do. I told them: What could a yogi do but meditate! If I were her I would meditate to the very end, I said. They were encouraged and Kuai Chai was determined then to spend the rest of her days meditating in her home. Billy said he would support her all the way.

But she didn't reckon the pain could be so terrible. She told Billy she never knew there could be such pain. It was especially severe in her lower back, burning and cutting into her. She summoned all her mental strength to note the pain but still she would lose out. It was too much. There were times when she could only lay there helpless without being able to note the pain anymore. She was sheerly enduring. But she would not take any paindrugs. She consulted her meditation teacher Ven Sujiva who advised her to do metta (loving-kindness) and in-breath out-breath meditation to soothe the pain when she could not tolerate it anymore. This gave her some relief. Coming out from such relief, she could continue her vipassana meditation. One day after three weeks of battling with persistent pain, she had a unique experience. She told Billy that while noting the sharp pain, she observed it becoming finer and finer until it vividly disappeared. She said she felt as if all her senses were cut off, as if there was no nama-rupa (mind and body) at that moment, that her mind and body had disappeared together with the pain. She told Billy she felt that this was like a Nibbanic experience, and she felt a great joy came over her. After that experience, she never encountered that kind of excruciating pain anymore.

Ten days before her end, Billy admitted her to a private hospital as she was having difficulty breathing. The doctors put her on oxygen. X-rays showed that the cancer cells had spread further, aggravating the suffocation. That was when radio- and chemo-therapy was suggested, not as a possible cure but merely to alleviate the condition. But Kuai Chan didn't want her mind to lose its clarity, and so rejected the suggestion. After five days she asked Billy to take her home as she felt there was no longer any reason for her to stay in the hospital. Billy installed an oxygen tank in their home, took her back and put her on the oxygen to alleviate her breathing difficulty. For the next five days from December 13 to her death on Dec. 18, she seemed to be in some kind of sleep, waking up only now and then. Two days before her death, she could still remember her daughter's 17th birthday which fell on Dec. 17. She reminded Billy to boil two eggs for their daughter and to give her a red packet, which he did.

On Dec. 18 she woke up at about 9am with a smile. She asked: "Have I been sleeping?" Billy replied: "Yes, it's been five days already. Don't you know?" She was surprised. She appeared happy and was smiling. She said she didn't need to take herbal medicines anymore. She again remembered her daughter's birthday, and although Billy told her he had already given their daughter a red packet as instructed, she told him again: "Give her another ang-pow on my behalf."

At about 2pm, Billy said, Kuai Chan tried to say something to him but was too weak to speak. Billy reminded her to maintain a detached frame of mind, not to worry about him and the children, and to feel free to go peacefully. He said they had discussed this many times before, that if she should be cured it is good; but if that is not possible, it is all right also: she should be able to go gracefully, understanding the law of kamma, that all of us must separate one day.

At 3pm when her son, aged 15, returned from school and announced to her: "Mother, I am back," she understood although she could not speak. She nodded her head to indicate that she knew.

At about 3.30pm, Billy said, Kuai Chan managed with some effort to say very distinctly in Cantonese, "Woh yap niphoon", which literally means "I have entered Nibbana," which means to say she believed she had realized or experienced Nibbana. And she pointed to her abdomen. That was her last words, and she passed away peacefully about 45 minutes later. Billy said Kuai Chan, in her meditation, usually observed the rising and falling motion of the abdomen that occurred with every in- and out-breath. She found the abdominal rising and falling a good object to place her mind upon, and she used to encourage other yogis to stick to that object too. Whatever phenomena in the body or mind one applies one's mindfulness and concentration upon, one would eventually see the arising and dissolution of the phenomena and come to understand their impermanence, unsatisfactory and no-self nature. Such understanding can climax in the attainment of Nibbana, a state of cessation of sufferng. Defilements of greed, hatred and delusion are totally eradicated when Nibbana is experienced at the arahant level.(*6)

Billy said that as her end approached, Kuai Chan's face took on a kind of radiance, and when she spoke, her eyes were bright and clear. At about 4.15pm, Billy noticed that she had stopped breathing. "She looked very peaceful, very serene. She passed away very peacefully," said Billy.

At about 4pm that day, a Dhamma friend, Lily, who was staying about 25 km away in Petaling Jaya, had a sudden desire to radiate metta (loving-kindness) to Kuai Chan. Lily sat down to meditate, sending out thoughts of metta to Kuai Chan. And she said she had a "crystal-clear" vision of Kuai Chan, who looked serene. When she stopped her meditation, she looked at the clock. It was 4.15pm, at about the same time Kuai Chan had passed away.

Dying the way she did, it is clear that Kuai Chan had a good death. What better way to go than this - with her mind intent on Nibbana. Who can say what unique experience she might have undergone? Only she can know. But one thing is certain, her mind was even, to the last, inclined to Nibbana. I would like to think that she had attained her Nibbana. If she had not done so in this life, I would think that with her mind, being so firm and resolute, she would have undergone a good rebirth as a human being or deva (a celestial being) and would attain her cherished goal in that life.

As a Buddhist, she had instructed Billy to give her a very simple funeral, devoid of superfluous rites and rituals. According to her desire, Billy arranged for her cremation the following day. Several Buddhist monks, yogis and friends recited Buddhist suttas. It was all very simple, as she had requested. Billy collected her ashes and had them strewn at the bodhi tree at their teacher's meditation hermitage in Johor.

Recollecting their life together, Billy said Kuai Chan was the best wife he could ask for: "We were married for 22 years and she stood by me through thick and thin, through my many trials and tribulations. She had a cheerful and bright disposition. She was always loving and caring. Even when she was ill she was marvellous. She never complained. She was not depressed. There was no anger or bitterness in her. She remained calm and steady. She could still smile and laugh. She accepted all her suffering with grace. She would say that it was only her body that was sick but not her mind. Her mind was still fine and healthy. Her concern too was not for herself but for others. She said that if she could live ten years longer, she would do more Dhamma work. She was concerned too about me and the children.

"In fact, she took her suffering better than I did. I could not bear to see her in so much pain. I tried to get her all the best herbs in the hope of a cure or some respite. Sometimes I asked why all this should happen to her. And I thought: Let her live 10 years more and I 10 years less. Let me give her 10 years of my life. But of course that's not for us to say. It's kamma that has the last say.

"She used to tell me: "It's my kamma, Billy. It's all right. I do not know what I might have done in my past lives. I must accept my kamma." Sometimes she would say: "I'm so sorry I give you all this trouble, Billy, all this suffering. You know, Billy, I owe you a lot in this life." I would tell her not to say like that. She doesn't owe me anything, I said. We are husband and wife, are we not? - and she has been a great wife to me. We have gone through thick and thin together, and now in her hour of need, I shall be by her side. We shall sink or swim together, I told her, I assured her.

"At other times she would tell me: 'Billy, this is the true teaching, the true path, I am very convinced of that,' and she reminded me not to neglect my practice of meditation, not to be complacent but to practise hard. We had been searching for some time for a teaching that we could relate to. And when we came across Buddhism and Vipassana meditation in 1988, we took to it. You know, we used to discuss the Dhamma together every night over a cup of tea. We had a great relationship."

Kuai Chan's cousin, Sati, once asked her whether she had any fear of the cancer, and she said no, she was not afraid of the disease. She was prepared to take on the pain without drugs. She was truly a heroic yogi, one who in the face of great odds, still persevered in her practice of the Dhamma. She made me wonder if I, as a monk, were to be in her condition, to have cancer, would I be able to bear up that much, to have that much courage and endurance? She is truly an inspiring example, a teacher by example to us all. I must thank Billy for foregoing his privacy to share with us this inspiring account so that we too can be encouraged in our practice and be more determined to strive harder.

Billy asked me to put on record his gratitude to Ven Sujiva and other monks and yogis for all the kind assistance they have given him and Kuai Chan. Fellow yogis from the Buddhist Wisdom Centre, PJ, had especially given much moral support and encouragement to Kuai Chan throughout her sickness. "I do not know how to express my gratitude to all the people who had helped us. Please tell them I wish to thank them all, to say: "Thank you. Thank you very much for everything you all have done for Kuai Chan."

** **

That best portion of a good man's life,
His little nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love.

Wordsworth

** **

WE MUST DO OUR BIT

Earlier I said that when I saw the sick, the dying and the dead, two resolutions arose in my mind. One is to be able to take pain and death with a smile, to be able to remain mindful and composed to the very end. Now I wish to touch on my second resolution. Yes, seeing how we human beings and in fact all living things, are subject to so much suffering, I feel that the least we can do while we are alive is to contribute to the alleviation of the suffering around us.

Many people are serving humanity in wondrous ways. Mother Theresa, for example, has devoted her whole life to the caring of the needy and destitute. Many people and organisations are involved in providing social services to the sick, the handicapped, the starving, the old folks, the dying and others. All great religious teachers exhort their disciples to be charitable. Jesus Christ said: "Love your neighbour as yourself." And he praised those who fed the hungry, gave drink to the thirsty, clothed the naked, gave shelter to the destitute, visited the sick and the imprisoned, saying that "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my brothers, you have done it unto me." There is a similar saying in the Koran where Prophet Muhammad said God might say to a person on Judgment Day: "I was hungry but you did not feed me. I was sick and you did not visit me." And when asked by the bewildered person how could that be, God would reply: "Such a one asked for bread and you did not give it to him. Such a one was sick and you did not visit him."

In Buddhism although we do not believe in a Creator God, we believe in goodness and we are exhorted not to harm or kill even an animal or an insect. We believe in the law of kamma - that good begets good and bad begets bad. And so we are enjoined to always adhere to the good: to abstain from killing, stealing, cheating, sexual misconduct, lying and taking alcohol and drugs. We are to train ourselves to reach a stage where we will do good just for the sake of doing good, and not because of the fear of hell or the anticipation of rewards. We will then do good because we delight in doing good and are naturally inclined to good. In other words, we can't help but be good. Goodness and us are one.

The Buddha enjoined on his followers to be charitable and caring. In giving, he said every little effort counts. Even throwing some crumbs into the water to feed fishes is praised by the Buddha. Once, when some monks failed to attend on a sick monk, the Buddha personally bathed the sick monk and admonished the others, saying: "Whoever attends on the sick attends on me." The Buddha urged kings to rule with compassion. He advised them to weed out poverty which is one of the contributory factors to theft and other crimes. A man of peace, the Buddha once intervened when two countries wanted to go to war over a stretch of river water. The Buddha asked them: Which is more important - the water or the blood of human beings that will flow as a result of a war. The warring parties saw the folly of their quarrel and withdrew without a fight.

One of the most benevolent of kings who came under the influence of the Buddha's teachings was Asoka, who reigned in India during the 3rd century B.C., about 200 years after the death of the Buddha. Renowned for his humanitarianism, Asoka's generosity and kindness extended even to animals. He was reputed to have provided doctors for the treatment of both man and beast. He built public parks, resthouses for travellers and hospices for the poor and sick. Although a staunch Buddhist, Asoka gave his people full freedom of worship and even supported other religious sects. In one of his famous edicts engraved on rocks, he said he "wishes members of all faiths to live everywhere in his kingdom...(He) honours men of all faiths, members of religious orders and laymen alike, with gifts and various marks of esteem." He desired all faiths to be honoured because "by honouring them, one exalts one's own faith and at the same time performs a service to the faith of others...Therefore concord alone is desirable...(and he, Asoka) desires men of all faiths to know each other's doctrines and to acquire sound doctrines..."

Asoka saw his role as a benevolent father and he regarded his people like his children, saying that he desired for them "every kind of prosperity and happiness." The Buddha, could he have witnessed Asoka's reign, would have been filled with joy at seeing his teachings being adhered to so diligently by the great king. H.G. Wells, in his Outline of History, said that among all the kings that had come and gone in the world, "the name of Asoka shines, and shines almost alone, a star." Surely, all governments will do well to study and apply Asoka's humane approach in governing.

And if we too are to follow the Buddha's teachings, then we would, like Asoka, work in our own way to alleviate suffering and spread peace and happiness. The Buddha himself had set us the finest example, having dedicated his whole life to showing people the way out of suffering. Yes, the Buddha was concerned not only with alleviating suffering but also with eradicating it completely. And so after attaining enlightenment he spent the whole of his 45 remaining years teaching people the way to the complete eradication of suffering. He taught the path of mindfulness.

The Buddha saw that only through a radical approach can one eliminate suffering. Although taking care of the sick, healing diseases, providing food and material aid to the needy are part and parcel of the treatment of suffering, the Buddha wanted to attend to more than just the symptoms: he sought for a total cure from the disease of suffering. So he meditated on the whole question of life and death. And he saw that to solve the problem at the very root level, we need to do a complete overhaul of the mind. Suffering is essentially mental. When there is physical pain, a person normally reacts to it with grief, fear and depression. But a meditator, the Buddha said, can tolerate the physical pain in such a way that there is no mental suffering. In other words he does not react to the pain with grief, worry, depression, aversion, anger and so on. Instead, he can respond with calmness and equanimity. He can be cheerful, and even comfort and encourage others!

So the Buddha saw the problem as essentially mental. If we can rid our mind of greed, anger and ignorance (of the nature of life), the Buddha said we can totally overcome and eradicate mental suffering, such as worry and anxiety, sorrow and lamentation. As for physical suffering, we have to concede that it is unavoidable as long as we have this body. All of us know as a fact that nobody can escape from old age, disease and death. But the Buddha said once the mind is purified of all defilements of greed, anger and so on, then physical suffering does not frighten us anymore. One becomes unshakable. Nothing can upset one anymore, not even the most excruciating pain that diseases such as cancer can bring. One's mind can remain cool throughout. Thus, when the Buddha's disciple Anuruddha, was once asked how he could remain cool when he was grievously ill, he replied that it was because he had well mastered his mind through his practice of mindfulness as taught by the Buddha.

Finally too, the Buddha taught that for such an accomplished person who had eliminated greed, anger and ignorance, there is no more rebirth. When he dies that is his last life. He has attained the state of Nibbana - perfect peace. Not undergoing rebirth he can never undergo old age, disease and death. Just that, the Buddha said, is the end of suffering.

** **

Alleviating suffering

While we are striving to make a complete end of suffering, we should, along the way, help to alleviate suffering in whatever way we can. Yes, it is obvious that there is no shortage of suffering in the world. Many people are suffering in various ways. If we read the newspapers we can find suffering all over the place. People quarrel, fight, kill, rob, lie, cheat, and inflict pain in various ways on each other. Out of ignorance we hurt each other. Furthermore, calamities, accidents, mishaps, starvation, disease abound. And always disease, old age, and death are dogging our every step.

Yes, the world is laden with suffering. Why should we add to it? Shouldn't we instead try to alleviate the suffering? Even if we cannot do much we can do a little. Every little effort counts. As somebody puts it: Nobody made a greater mistake than to do nothing because he could do only a little. Each one of us can do something, according to our inclination and ability. For a start we could start being nicer. For instance, we can check our anger. Everytime we are angry we cause pain to ourselves and others. But if we can just check our anger and cultivate tolerance and patience, love and compassion we can be nicer people, and that can go quite a long way to help spread good cheer and happiness.

In other words, we must start by cleaning up our own minds of unwholesome and negative contents of greed, hatred and delusion. Corresponding to our ability to check these unwholesome states, love and compassion will develop in us. We can be kinder in our relationship with the people close to us and around us. We can try to speak more lovingly and gently, and avoid all harsh and rough speech. We can become more considerate and caring. If we are only concerned with our own well-being, then we will not be able to love very well. To love well we have to consider not so much our own well-being but that of others. So we have to ask ourselves. Do we love enough? Do we care enough? If we do not, then we cannot act to alleviate suffering. For it is out of real love and compassion that we can act.

A Meditation Master once said if you want to know whether you have loved well, you should approach your loved one one day and gently take her hand in yours. Look deeply into her eyes and ask her: "My dear, have I been loving you properly? Do I love you enough? Am I making you happy? If I am not, can you please tell me what is lacking so that I can change and love you better?" If you ask her gently with true love and care, then she might cry. And that, the Master said, is a good sign. For it meant you have touched a chord in her heart. And there can be communication between you.

And so she might tell you between sobs how thoughtless you had been at times. For example, she might say: "You don't open the car door for me anymore. You used to do that when you first courted me and even during the first year of our marriage. You would see to it that I was properly seated and then you would very gently close the door for me. Nowadays you don't do that anymore. You just get into the car first and start the engine. I have to open the door myself and get in quickly. Otherwise you would start moving off even before I had closed the door! I felt like crying when you behaved this way. What had happened to the gentle and thoughtful person that I married?"

And she might continue: "You don't hold my hand anymore when we cross the road. You just walk ahead and expect me to follow you. So too when you walk into the restaurant. You don't open the door and invite me to go in first. You don't pull out the chair for me to sit on. You don't ask me what I'd like to eat but you just order what you like to eat. You don't buy me any more pretty dresses. You don't buy any presents for my parents, not even on festive occasions. And although you may remember to give me presents on my birthday, you don't include one of those lovely birthday cards with beautiful and heartfelt messages. In short, you don't do all the nice little things you used to do when you first courted and married me. If I knew you were going to change like this, I would have second thoughts about marrying you. I have been wondering whether you really love or care for me anymore!" And she may go on in this vein, citing a list of her unhappiness. She might even sob louder and you may be taken aback, for you hadn't known she was taking all these things to heart, that she was missing all the nice little things you used to do for her, that she missed your little but important demonstrations of care and affection.

Of course, it is also possible that you too might have some legitimate grievances. So this might be a good time to have it out, but in a very gentle way. You might say: "Oh, I am so sorry for the heartless and thoughtless way that I have behaved, my dearest. Believe me, I truly am. Please forgive me. I will make it up to you from now on. I promise I will not be so careless in future. I will take good care of you. I will resume to do all the little things which I have neglected to do for you. I didn't realise you miss them so much.

"But dear, please do not get angry at what I'm about to say. As much as I am at fault, you should also know that there were some things you used to do for me that you never do now. For example, you know that I love the kangkung fried in sambal belacan that you used to cook for me. But nowadays you never cook that anymore, not to mention the spicy tomyam soup and several other dishes. You know, the old saying about the way to a man's heart is through his stomach is still quite pertinent.

"In the old days you used to wake me up with a smile and a gentle peck on the cheek but you never do that anymore. Sometimes you wake up rather late and I have to prepare my own breakfast or eat at the office. You used to be waiting at the door for me when I returned from work and asked me how my day was. You were really interested to know then and you were very sympathetic and comforting whenever I had a bad day. But nowadays, you don't seem to care about how I am faring anymore, whether I have been having a good day or a hard time. You would be watching the TV, yelling at the kids, or be at the beauty parlour or doing something or other. When I called out: "Hello dear, I'm back," you sometimes snapped at me and said things which are not very endearing." And so on and so forth.

And so both of you can have a heart-to-heart exchange. Communication is very important in a relationship. Is it not? Relationships break down when there is no communication, and both parties keep their grievances to themselves, privately nursing them in their heart. But when there is communication there can be understanding. A pouring out of the heart between two parties can lead to understanding and love. If two persons care enough and value their relationship, then they can communicate and take corrective measures whenever necessary. In that way, the relationship can become more strong and beautiful with each passing day.

** **

Each one of us needs to contribute in our own way, in whatever way we know how. In my case, for example, I, as a monk, can contribute by sharing what little Dhamma knowledge I know, what little understanding I may have. I can encourage people to practise meditation and guide them a little along the way. I can urge people to be loving and caring, considerate and patient, and so on. Of course we are not perfect and there are times when we ourselves fail to deliver. The saying that it is easy to preach but most difficult to practise what one preaches is very true. So I should be the first to acknowledge my own shortcomings and to accept corrections. I ask though that people, in judging me or others, would consider mitigating factors such as good intention. We mean well and we do not mean to hurt. But because of our own defects, unskilfulness, impatience, intolerance, conceit, etc, we may hurt others even as we mean well. But if a person is magnanimous, he or she can understand and be forgiving. The ability to forgive is a very wonderful quality, which is why the saying To err is human; to forgive divine has been coined.

Avail yourself to giving and you yourself will know best how you can contribute. All of us have different skills, talents and aptitudes. Our conditions and circumstances may differ. So each of us can only contribute in our own way, according to our conditions and inclinations. The important thing is that we try; we do something according to our ability. As we have said, every little bit counts and as time goes on, we may find that actually we have done quite a fair bit. And that is cause for us to rejoice. Of course it doesn't mean that we should rest on our laurels. There is still more work to be done. So we keep trying; we keep forging ahead.

** ** **

He dwells having suffused the first quarter with a mind of loving-kindness, likewise the second, likewise the third, likewise the fourth; just so above, below, around he dwells having suffused the whole world everywhere, in every way, with a mind of loving-kindness that is far-reaching, widespread, immeasurable, without enmity, without illwill.

Buddha

** ** **

To understand everything is to forgive everything.
And then too there can be love.

Anonymous

** ** **

LOVE IS UNDERSTANDING

To die well we must live well. If we have lived well we can die well. There will be no regrets. We can go peacefully, content that we have done what we could, that along the way we have spread understanding and happiness, that we have lived according to our principles and commitment to the ideals of love and compassion.

Love is understanding. Love does not judge or condemn. Love listens and understands. Love cares and sympathises. Love accepts and forgives. Love knows no barriers. It does not segregate and say: I am a Theravadin and you are a Mahayanese or Tibetan. It does not say: I am a Buddhist and you are a Christian, a Muslim, a Hindu. Or I am a Chinese; you're a Malay, an Indian, a Eurasian. Or I'm an Easterner and you are a Westerner; or I'm Malaysian, you're Japanese, an American, a Burmese, a Thai and so on.

Love transcends all barriers. Love sees and feels that we are all of one race, the human race. Our tears are all the same; they are salty, and our blood is all red. When there is this kind of love and compassion, we can empathise with another human being. We can see that we are all travelling in the same boat upon the stormy sea of life. We are fellow-sufferers in samsara, the endless faring-on in the round of birth and death. We are brothers and sisters.

When we can see and feel this, then all barriers of race, religion, ideology and so on will fall away. We can reach out with a heart of pure love. We can understand and feel another's suffering. Compassion will swell and fill our breast. And in whatever we say or do, this love and compassion will come across. It will soothe and heal. It will contribute to peace and understanding.

The man and the scorpion

Love goes hand-in-hand with compassion. When we have a loving heart, compassion arises easily in us. Whenever we see somebody suffering, we feel an urge to reach out to ease that person's suffering. Compassion has this quality of desiring to eliminate suffering. It can be especially felt when we act spontaneously to remove or ease another's suffering. A story here will help to clarify the point: A man saw a scorpion drowning in a puddle of water. A spontaneous desire to save arose in his heart, and without hesitating he stretched out his hand, lifted out the scorpion from the puddle, and put it on dry ground. The scorpion stung him. And wanting to cross the road, the scorpion resumed its walk and headed straight again into the puddle! Seeing it floundering and drowning again, the man picked it up a second time and was again stung. Someone who came along and saw all that had happened, said to the man: "Why are you so stupid? Now you see you have been stung not once but twice! It's a silly thing to do to try to save a scorpion." The man replied: "Sir, I can't help it. You see, it is the nature of the scorpion to sting. But it is my nature to save. I can't help but try to save that scorpion."

True, the man could have exercised some wisdom and used a stick or something to lift out the scorpion. But then he might have thought that he could have lifted the scorpion with his hand in such a way as not to be stung. Or he might have thought that a scorpion in such a dire strait would not sting him. Whatever it may be, the moral of the story is in the spontaneous response of the man in wanting to save another living being, even though it may be an insect. It also shows that the compassionate man is such that even though he may receive ingratitude from a person he had helped, it does not matter. It is just his nature to help, and if he could help again, he would. He doesn't know how to harbour any bitterness or grudges!

Compassion then is the language of the heart. At the time when we are motivated by love and compassion, we reach out to help without discrimination as to the race, creed or nationality of another. In the light of compassion, identification to race, creed, etc becomes secondary; they become insignificant. Further, such compassion is not confined to human beings but is also extended to all living things including animals and insects. In line with the above theme of compassion as the language of the heart, I will like to offer you a poem:

THE LANGUAGE OF COMPASSION

Mahayana Theravada Vajrayana
Christian Buddhist Muslim Hindu
Malay Chinese Indian Eurasian Malaysian Japanese American African White man Black man Yellow man Brown man and so on and so forth
as you like.

What does it matter?
The language of compassion is the language of the heart!

When the heart speaks
A thousand flowers bloom
And love flows
like the morning sun streaming through the window.

No words are needed
a look, a touch,
will suffice
to say what a thousand words could not.

And Compassion glows like the radiant star
in the night sky.

Barriers crumble prejudices flounder
Supremacy regained
Love & Compassion
vanquishing all fears & misgivings healing wounds reign.

I feel that if we have tried to cultivate this kind of love and compassion, then when the time comes for us to die, we will go peacefully. Even if we have not succeeded 100 per cent in loving perfectly, we can still be happy and content that we have tried. And surely we would have succeeded to a certain extent.

The Five Precepts

If we have been trying to cultivate this kind of love, then keeping the five basic precepts will not be that difficult. The first precept, as we know, is not to kill, not to take any life, even that of an animal or insect. This is a beautiful precept. It means that we respect life. Nay, not only do we respect life, we also cherish it. Life is precious to all. When we give life, we are giving a most precious gift. When we keep this precept we become kinder. Not only do we refrain from killing, we also refrain from harming any living being.

True, in this imperfect world where the strong prey on the weak, killing is rampant. We can see this in the animal world, how a tiger would feed on a deer, a snake on a frog, a frog on a fly, a bird on a worm, and a big fish on a small fish. And we humans too kill the animals and fish and even each other. But we are not here to judge or condemn. We understand our human imperfections and the imperfect nature of existence. The Buddha understood too. He says that when we can purify our mind and attain Nibbana, then we can opt out of this imperfect existence, this cycle of birth and death. It is for us to verify whether this can be done. When we have cleansed our minds of all greed, hatred and ignorance, we will know with the certainty of direct experience whether the Buddha spoke true or not. Until then, I have faith that I can do no better than to follow the path of the Buddha, the path of purifying the mind.

Each of us has to follow our path of development. Let each one of us try to keep the first precept to the best of our ability: We should not kill; we should spare life, give life.

The second precept is not to steal or cheat, not to take anything with dishonest intent. We are honest and we shall earn our living the honest way. There are some people who say that an honest man cannot succeed or become rich. I do not agree with this. I'm sure there are many honest men who stuck to their principles and succeed. And furthermore they enjoy the happiness of a clear conscience and peaceful mind. On the other hand those who cheated are often exposed and punished in the end. Even if they do manage to escape detection, they still suffer from fear of detection and the pangs of a guilty conscience; and when they die, the suffering of a woeful rebirth awaits them. As such, honesty has always been and will always be the best policy. Do not listen to those who say otherwise. The honest can be more successful. Even if we should face greater obstacles, we would not cheat to succeed. We would rather be honest and poor, than to be rich but crooked. There is nothing so blissful as a clear conscience, especially at the time when we face death.

The third precept is to be responsible in sexual matters. If two partners take their relationship seriously, are considerate, loving and faithful to each other, then their love is sealed. No third party can come in between them. Sexual responsibility is very important. Because of irresponsibility, victimisation occurs. Pimps destroy the lives of young girls; and men who succumb to their lust are abettors to the ill-deed. But we are not here to judge but to plead for true love and compassion. Truly, if we can purify our mind and check our lust, there will be less suffering and exploitation in this world. And the dreaded AIDS disease which has become a world-wide scourge can also be contained.

The fourth precept is not to lie but to speak the truth. Again do not listen to those who say that one cannot succeed without lying or making false representations. Truth is one of the ten paramis (perfections) held fast to by a bodhisatta (a person aspiring for Buddhahood). All Buddhists have to develop their paramis to a considerable extent too if they want to attain arahathood - liberation from the round of birth and death. The Buddha wanted us to be so perfectly truthful that he exhorted us not to lie even in jest. So we should try our best to uphold this noble precept of non-lying. Furthermore, though we may not seek it, the reputation of an honest man will nevertheless spread far and wide. Even his detractors will have to concede and give him due respect.

The fifth precept is not to take alcohol and drugs because they befuddle the mind. And they are also bad for the body. Some people think that this precept may allow a little social drinking but I do not think so. The Buddha would not want us to compromise our mindfulness which could in turn cause us to compromise our other precepts. Besides, alcohol is harmful to our health. As for drugs we are all agreed that hard drugs such as heroin are out. But cigarette smoking may be thought by some people to be not included in this precept. (During the Buddha's time, tobacco had apparently not been discovered.) However, in the light of present day overwhelming medical evidence on the harmfulness of tobacco and the efforts of governments all over the world to ban or curtail its usage, we can confidently say that if the Buddha were here today, he too would strongly discourage us from smoking; for he would not want us to compromise our physical health nor would he want us to be addicted to a mild but proven hazardous drug.

More could be said on the great damage alcohol and tobacco had wreaked and are still wreaking on society, but it is not within the scope of this work to go into a long discussion of the subject. Suffice to say that it is our view that even a little so-called social drinking and smoking too would infringe somewhat on the spirit of the fifth precept. It is better to abstain completely, especially in the case of alcohol, having given due consideration to these very words of the Buddha: "Monks, taking of intoxicants when practised, developed, and repeatedly performed, causes one to arise in hell, in the world of animals, and in the world of hungry ghosts; the very least result is that even should one be reborn as a human being one will be inflicted with insanity."

When we keep these five precepts, we give happiness and security to others. How? Why, nobody need to worry about us. They need not fear us. They can feel very secure and comfortable with us. For they can be assured that we will not harm them, steal from them or cheat them. We will not have any affair with their spouses. We will not lie to them. And what more, if we do not drink or smoke, they do not have to worry about their children aping our drinking or smoking habit, or the hazard they face by breathing in our side-stream smoke. They will feel they can trust us, for we don't even drink. We are religious and keeping to the straight and narrow path. We are harmless. Those who strongly crave for sensual pleasures may think that we are living a very dull life and that we are foolish. But it doesn't matter. We are happy for what we are. We are happy as we are. And truth to say, we will be praised by the wise.

So it is good when we can keep the basic five precepts. Furthermore we practise generosity and kindness. We care and we share whatever we can afford. We also cultivate mindfulness as advised by the Buddha. We try to live a mindful life. We meditate to gain more understanding of the nature of our existence, its characteristics of impermanence, suffering and no-self. Thus when we have done all these, when we have lived a good life, what do we have to fear when we die? What regrets can we have?

That is why we say that to die well we must live well. And that when we have lived well, we can die well. We can go peacefully, content that we have done all that we could. True, we may make some mistakes along the way. But then who hasn't? Jesus Christ once said: "Let him who has not sinned cast the first stone." So before we had learnt and mellowed, we may have done some bad deeds. That is understandable, because we are all not perfect. But the thing is that once we realise our mistakes, we begin to cultivate love and compassion, we begin to keep the precepts and purify our mind. We can be happy because we had time to change to the right track. As they say it is better late than never. We may arrive a little late after the others, but at least we still arrive.

** **

WE ARE OUR OWN SAVIOURS

Sometimes as a monk I'm asked to go for funeral chanting. I do feel sorry for the bereaved ones but sometimes I also feel quite helpless because there is so much confusion as regards the role of a monk in funeral chanting.

The other day a young lady approached me. Her father had died that morning. He was only 42. She pleaded with me in Hokkien: "Tolong lai liam keng, khuih lor hor wah-eh-pah." It means: "Please come and chant prayers. Please open the way for my father." I look at her with as much compassion as I can muster. I can feel her confusion and suffering. She must be about 20 I thought, and she is a filial daughter. In my heart I told myself: "O dear, how on earth am I going to open the way for anybody. What imaginary path am I going to draw in the air for his equally imaginary spirit to tread upon? How can I tell this poor young lady in her present state of grief and confusion that there is no such way as she may have conceived it to be."

The Buddha was put in such a position once and how did he respond to it? Well, one day a young man approached and asked the Buddha: "O lord, my father has died. Please come and say some prayers for him. Raise up his soul so that he can go to heaven. The Brahmins perform such rites but you Buddha are so much more powerful than them. If you were to do it, my father's soul is sure to fly straight to heaven."

The Buddha replied: "Very well. Please go to the market and fetch me two earthen pots and some butter." The young man was happy that the Buddha had condescended to perform some powerful magic to save his father's soul. He hurried to town and got what was required. Then the Buddha instructed him: "Put the butter in one pot and stones in the other pot. Then throw both pots into the pond." The man did so, and both pots sank to the bottom of the pond. Then the Buddha continued: "Now take a staff and strike the pots at the bottom of the pond." The man did so. The pots broke and the butter, being light, floated up while the stones, being heavy, remained where they were at the bottom.

Then the Buddha said: "Now quick, go and summon all the priests. Tell them to come and chant so that the butter can go down and the stones can come up." The young man looked at the Buddha, flabbergasted. "Lord," he said, "You can't be serious. Surely you can't expect the butter being light to sink and the stones being heavy to rise up. That would be against the law of nature."

The Buddha smiled and said: "Even so, my son, don't you see that if your father had led a good life, then his deeds would be as light as the butter, so that no matter what he will rise up to heaven. Nobody can prevent that, not even me. For nobody can go against the natural law of kamma. But if your father had led a bad life, then just like the stones that are heavy, he would sink to hell. No amount of prayers by all the powerful priests in the world can cause it to happen otherwise."

The young man understood. He corrected his wrong concept and stopped going around asking for the impossible. The Buddha's simile had driven home the point: Nobody can save us, least of all after we are dead. According to the law of kamma, we are owners of our deeds, heirs of our deeds. Our deeds are our true property. They are our true refuge, our true relatives. They are the womb from which we spring. When we die we cannot take even one cent with us or any of our personal belongings. Neither can even one of our loved ones accompany us. Just as we came alone according to our kamma, we must go alone. If we have understood the law of kamma well, then we will appreciate how important it is to lead a good life while we are alive. For to wait until we are dead will be too late. There is little that can be done then.

** **

Rebirth is instantaneous

Nevertheless, there is a role which a monk can play in funeral chanting. And that is the Buddhist way of sharing merits. How is the sharing or transference of merits effected? Before we can explain this we must first understand what happens at death. According to the Buddha, rebirth takes place instantaneously after death, consciousness having the nature of arising and passing away unceasingly. There is no interval between death and the next birth(*7). One moment we are dead and the next moment rebirth takes place, either in the human plane, the animal plane, the suffering spirit or ghost (peta) plane, the demon (asura) plane, the hell plane, or the celestial (deva) plane.

One takes rebirth according to one's kamma. If one has led a good life one will generally get a good rebirth. The mind is likely to be in a wholesome state at the death moment enabling a good rebirth to come about. One may be reborn as a human being or as a god in one of the many heavenly realms. The Buddha was able to see with his psychic powers the various realms of existence, and also how beings died and were reborn immediately according to their deeds. The Buddha and many of the monks during his time too were able to recollect their innumerable past lives.

If one has led a generally evil life, then a bad rebirth is more than likely to come about - in one of the four woeful states as a hell-being, a hungry ghost (peta), an animal or a demon (asura). But wherever one may be reborn, one will not be there forever. On the expiry of one's lifespan, one dies and undergoes new rebirth. So existence as a hell-being or a ghost too is not forever. There is hope: one has a chance to come up again, though it might take an incalculably long time to do so. So it is better not to drop into the woeful states at all, for once there you'll never know how long you'll have to stay there. It might seem like an eternity!

Similarly, existence in the heavenly realms is not permanent. On expiry of one's lifespan there, one is liable to drop down to a lower plane. Only an arahant who has given up all desire for rebirth, having eradicated the mental defilements of greed, hatred and delusion, will undergo no new rebirth. On dying he arises no more in any of the 31 planes of existence. He is subject no more to samsara, the round of birth and death. He attains parinibbana which is the extinction (nirodha) of mind and body, the extinguishing of the whole mass of suffering. But until one becomes an arahant one will still be subject to rebirth.

How sharing of merits is effected

Now, for transference of merits to be effected, it is essential for the being who is to receive the merits to know what is going on. He must be present and be able to approve of the good deeds done in his name or on his behalf. If he approves, then that approving or rejoicing state of mind is a wholesome state of mind. In other words he made his own merits by rejoicing over the good deed which had been done on account of him. Thus it is not that we transfer our merits to him. That is not literally possible. What happens is that he rejoices and that rejoicing is a meritorious deed by which his suffering may be alleviated and his happiness increased.

If after death, rebirth takes place in the human or animal plane, the being will be in no position to know what is going on, - for instance he may still be a foetus in the womb of his mother. Under such circumstances, he would not be able to rejoice and partake in the merit-making.

If a person has been reborn as a hell-being, he too cannot know what is going on in this world because he would be suffering in hell, which is another plane of existence in which he would have no knowledge of what is transpiring here on earth. If he is reborn as a deva (heavenly being), it is unlikely that he would keep in touch with this world. It is said that he would be too happy and busy exploring the wonders of his new existence to be immediately concerned about what is happening on earth. Time is relative and a day, say in the Tavatimsa heaven, is said to be the equivalent of 100 years on earth! So by the time a deva should, so to speak, take a look down here, we'll all be dead and gone! Moreover, we cannot say for certain that a deva will automatically have the psychic powers to recollect his previous life, though the scriptures do record instances of devas remembering what they had done in their previous life to earn them a celestial rebirth.

So in the Tirokutta sutta, the Buddha told a brahmin that only a peta (an unfortunate spirit) would be able to partake in the sharing of merits. These spirits, though in their own realm, are able to perceive with their own eyes the human plane. If they are aware of the meritorious deeds done on account of them, and rejoice thereupon, then they would gain merits as a result of their rejoicing. Of course no-one would like their loved one to be reborn as a peta. One would like to think that he (or she) has undergone rebirth as a human being or a deva.

So the brahmin asked the Buddha what would happen if the deceased had already obtained a good rebirth. The Buddha replied that it was still good to share merits, for in our beginningless wandering in samsara, it was certain that some of our relatives in previous lives have had unfortunate rebirths as petas. And as the lifespan of a peta can be very very long, they are liable to be still around. So we share the merits with departed relatives and also with all sentient beings. Besides, the Buddha pointed out, the person who did the good deed on account of the departed will himself get the merits too.

Sharing of merits is a Buddhist tradition. The Buddhist does good deeds such as offering almsfood and requisites to monks, sponsoring the printing of Dhamma books and donating to charitable causes, such as homes for the aged, charity hospitals and institutions for the handicapped. Then he invites the departed and all sentient beings to rejoice and share in the merits. This itself is a good deed, the doer of which does not "lose" any merits but gains even more by sharing, as the act of sharing is another meritorious deed. So the living make double merits - first by doing a good deed and second by sharing the merits.

The presence of monks to recite Buddhist suttas and to give Dhamma talks to the bereaved relatives at the time of their grief is also a great moral support. The monks can remind the living relatives of the Buddha's teaching of impermanence, suffering and no-self. They can urge the relatives to accept the suffering with wisdom, and to strive more diligently to attain Nibbana, the cessation of all suffering.

If we understand and accept the Buddhist concept of rebirth as being instantaneous, then we will understand that what is important is that we must do good deeds while we are alive. By doing good deeds, we gain good kamma. Kamma is our true inheritance, for only those good deeds or kamma can follow us. After death, the burning of paper money, houses, cars, etc. cannot benefit the deceased. It would be against the logic of kamma. Moreover, we can think for ourselves - how can something that is burnt here materialise in another world or anywhere for that matter. What is burnt is just burnt; it stays burnt. In the context of the law of kamma too, offering of food to the deceased is also pointless. On being reborn, the new being will survive on the kind of food that is appropriate for its plane of existence. Thus we find that the Buddha did not at all ask us to offer food to the deceased or burn paper money, etc.

Apparently, these funeral rites and rituals have been handed down from generation to generation without any thought as to their basis and significance. What the Buddha taught is, as explained earlier, to do some good deeds on account or in memory of the deceased and then share the merits, by reciting the Pali or stating in the language we can understand: "May these merits go to the departed. May the departed rejoice and share in the merits done."

A Buddhist funeral is a simple funeral

The Buddhist way is meaningful and simple. If we can understand and appreciate the Buddhist way, then a Buddhist funeral can be a very simple one devoid of superstitious rites and rituals, devoid of fear, anxiety or confusion. One need not burn this or that, perform all kinds of strange rites and observe all kinds of taboos, all of which are quite meaningless and confusing to the living who usually go along with it more out of fear, social pressure or ignorance than anything else. One need not invite professionals to chant and perform rituals for a hefty fee amounting to thousands of dollars! or engage a band to strike up music, even though it may well be solemn music.

As a Buddhist, one need only to invite Buddhist monks to recite Buddhist suttas which need not be lengthy. It would be good if the suttas can be translated into English or Chinese so that all present can understand, appreciate and reflect on what had been recited, on what the Buddha had taught us about the nature of life and death. Of special importance is the upholding of the five precepts by the lay-people - done by reciting the Pali, preferably with translation, after the monk. The taking and observance of five precepts is basic practice for lay Buddhists. After the taking of precepts, the monk can give a dhamma talk aimed at providing consolation, comfort and strength to the bereaved.

In the Theravadin tradition, monks do not levy any fee at all for their service. The service is done by them out of compassion, to give moral support to the lay-devotees in their hour of need. Thus, the monks would not seek monetary compensation as that would be at odds with the spirit of the Dhamma. Nevertheless, lay-devotees sometimes offer a red packet as a donation to the monks for the purchase of allowable requisites, such as robes or medicines. This sum, if offered, need only be a token. In fact, the monks are not to expect a red packet, and if it should be offered, then it is something which is offered solely on the initiative of the offerer. This packet being a token sum is not a fee but a donation. A fee, in the case of a funeral, is usually a substantial (or exorbitant) sum that would be fixed by the undertaker before he would agree to conduct elaborate services. And that, as we have said, is not the practice for a monk.

The relatives, of course, can offer food (dana) to the monks at the temple. Those who are more affluent can make donations for the printing of Dhamma books for free distribution. They can also make donations to charitable institutions, to the poor and needy, and other worthy causes. In lieu of wreaths, relatives and friends can be encouraged to donate towards specified charities. All the merits thus gained can then be shared with the deceased. All these will make the funeral meaningful - minus the unskillful practices which involve much confusion and waste of funds.

We can learn from others

The deceased can be cremated or buried promptly - on the same day or the following day. In this regard I think Chinese families can learn something from a Muslim funeral, which I'm told, is simple, practical and inexpensive. A Muslim friend of mine says that the Muslim way is to bury the deceased on the very day of death or, at the latest, the following day. So if a Muslim dies at 2pm, he can be buried before sunset on the same day. If he dies in the late evening or at night, he is buried the following day.

The funeral is an inexpensive, easily affordable one because, as my friend says, Islam discourages extravagance and encourages simplicity and frugality. A Muslim funeral, inclusive of the casket, he tells me, can cost as little as $500 - a far cry from a Chinese funeral which can cost up to $30,000 or even more! The funeral procedures for the Muslim too are, in the Muslim context, relatively simple and meaningful. A Christian funeral too is simple, inexpensive and meaningful for the Christian, and burial is carried out within 48 hours.

I believe that in life we can never stop learning. There are always better and more meaningful ways of doing things. If we keep an open and unbiased mind we can learn from others. The Buddha advised us in the Kalama sutta that we should always think and investigate for ourselves. If we find that a practice is good and meaningful then we should follow it; if we find that it is bad or unskillful, then we should not follow it, or if we had already been following it, we should be bold and wise enough to discard it. Nothing, the Buddha said, should be followed blindly without understanding or question. The Buddha encouraged us to question and investigate. Even his words are to be investigated and only when found true to be followed. The Buddha does not want us to have blind faith but faith that is based on direct experiential knowledge.

Therefore, if we find simple and good practices in other religions and traditions, we can adapt and follow them as long as they are not in conflict with our religious beliefs. In this regard, we can learn from others in the way they hold a prompt and inexpensive funeral. We should also discard the superstitious and un-Buddhistic practices of ours. As for superstitions, I understand there are many in a traditional Chinese funeral, and I have seen some of these practices for myself while chanting at funerals. I feel quite helpless as I can only witness these practices in silence. There is little one can do. Traditions are most difficult to change; and any effort to make changes will usually meet with strong resistance and even condemnation.

There were times when I hesitated to go for funeral chanting because I wondered what purpose would my presence there serve. But more often than not, I responded and tried to do what I could by giving a Dhamma talk and clarifying as skillfully as possible the Buddhist position. I think it is high time that Chinese Buddhists re-examine the traditional Chinese funeral practices and make simplifications in line with Buddhist wisdom. I may be criticised for my views but I feel that if we do not speak up, we will be doing a disservice to the Buddhist community.

If I may suggest a simple Buddhist funeral, I will propose that cremation be done on the same day if possible, and if not, the following day. However, some people may wish to keep the body for a few days to enable faraway relatives and friends to come and pay their last respects, or for various other personal reasons. So the decision would be a personal one to be made by the family concerned. I have proposed cremation rather than burial because of various practical considerations, such as the shortage of land, increase in human population, and savings in funeral costs which can then be channeled towards more meaningful needs such as charity.

The deceased should be bathed, cleaned and dressed by the family members, rather than by strangers. This would be meaningful because the body is that of our loved one, and the very least we can do is to handle it gently with love and respect. The body can be dressed in clothes which need not be grand or formal, but which the deceased had liked to wear when he was alive. A male body can be bathed and dressed by male family members, and a female body by female members. We should not feel any fear for a dead body, especially as it is the body of our loved one.

There is also no point in putting any jewellery on the body. Once, while on funeral chanting, I noticed undertakers adorning the deceased's body with special made-for-the-dead rings and earrings. This is even more ironical and meaningless, considering that in whatever rebirth the deceased may take, he (or she) is not going to take anything at all along with him except the sum of his good and bad deeds.

When handling the body, such as removing it from the bed and arranging it in the casket, it can again be done by family members. And as always the body should be respectfully and gently handled. The practice of turning one's back towards the deceased as he is lowered into the casket, or as his casket is taken into the hearse, is to me an odd thing. The deceased is our loved one and we ourselves should, in the first place, be placing his body gently into the casket, or to look on with respect as it is being done so by others. To turn away and show one's back to the deceased is to me a mark of disrespect! I can't help thinking that if I were the deceased I would be offended to be treated in such a manner.

This practice of turning away is just another superstition. Why should we fear any ill-luck befalling us if we do not conform to such taboos? As Buddhists we should have confidence in kamma which is our true refuge and support. Good begets good and bad begets bad. We should fear bad deeds, such as breaking of our precepts, as such bad deeds will bring about suffering. The last thing we need to fear are superstitions and unfounded taboos.

The casket too need not be an expensive one. It should be placed in the hall of the house with some flowers nicely arranged around it and a photograph of the deceased. Some meaningful Dhamma words, passage or saying can be put up for reflection. No wreaths need be sent. Instead, in lieu of wreaths, donations should be sent to charities which can be specified by the family members of the deceased. Whatever expense that is saved by holding a simple and meaningful funeral can also be channeled to charity.

Food need not be offered before the deceased's casket, for as we have explained, the deceased will not be able to partake of it. Burning of paper money, joss paper, etc, is also meaningless and should not be done at all. Lighting of candles and joss-sticks are also unnecessary. In fact, the very many superstitious practices and taboos that normally accompany a traditional Chinese ceremony should all be discarded, bearing in mind the Buddha's words that a true lay-follower of his has five qualities: "He has faith; he is morally disciplined; he does not believe in superstitious omens; he relies on kamma, not on omens; he does not seek spiritually worthy persons outside of here (ie. outside of the Buddha's dispensation) and he shows honour here first (ie. he has respect for the Buddha's dispensation and should not subject himself to un-Buddhistic practices)."

Wearing of mourning clothes is unnecessary. The Buddha does not want us to mourn or grieve but to accept the fact of separation and death with wisdom and equanimity. Soka or grief is an unwholesome state of mind and it is to be overcome through mindfulness and wise reflection. Thus, the anagami and arahant (who have attained the third and fourth stages of sainthood respectively) are incapable of mourning and grieving. When the Buddha died, the monks who had attained anagamihood or arahathood, shed not a tear. Understanding the nature of impermanence, they did not grieve even though the Buddha was passing away before their eyes.

Neither did the Buddha grieve when his two chief disciples, Sariputta and Moggallana, died within two weeks of each other, about six months before him. The Buddha himself remarked: "Marvellous it is, most wonderful it is, monks, concerning the Perfect Ones that when such a pair of disciples have passed away there is no grief, no lamentation on the part of the Perfect One." And the Buddha added: "For of that which is born, come to being, put together, and so is subject to dissolution, how should it be said that it should not depart? That, indeed, is not possible. Therefore, monks, be ye an island unto yourselves, a refuge unto yourselves seeking no external refuge; with the Teaching as your island, the Teaching your refuge, seeking no other refuge."

//Grief is not suppressed, but acknowledged and dispersed through mindfulness and understanding//.

So if we can bear in mind the Buddha's teaching, we can remain calm in the face of grief. Here we should emphasize that we are not saying that you should suppress your grief by force, ignore or deny its existence. No, that too would be an unskillful approach.

Our approach then is to acknowledge and observe our sorrowful state of mind. Through mindfulness and wise reflection, we can contain our grief and become calm. Mindfulness and understanding is the middle and best way - it involves neither suppression nor giving vent to negative and destructive emotions. Mindfulness is acknowledgment and observation, out of which understanding, acceptance, reconciliation and wisdom can arise. We do not deny or suppress our emotions. We acknowledge and observe them.

In that acknowledgment and observation, we can better cope with the turmoil and conflict that may be going on in our mind. We can exercise wise reflection on the nature of impermanence, suffering and no-self. We can draw from the wisdom of the ancients, and thereby come to terms with our grief. In other words, wisdom can arise. We can understand and accept our sorrow. And it will not take control over our mind or overwhelm us. This is what we mean when we say the gentle application of mindfulness leads to understanding and self-composure.

In this way, we will not be wailing our heart out. We can observe the emotion of grief in us, and it can be contained quite naturally, without us having to give gross outward expression to it. There will be calmness, acceptance and understanding. Even if we should lose our control and cry, we can do so in a somewhat restrained manner. We will eventually regain our control and calm down. Mindfulness will come to our aid, and help us to reconcile with our grief. We will understand the fact of suffering, the truth of what the Buddha and other wise teachers had taught, and we can smile again.

Coming back to the subject of mourning, we can see that in the context of wisdom and non-grieving, the wearing of mourning clothes is unnecessary. It doesn't mean that we are not filial, or that we love our loved ones less, if we do not wear mourning clothes. No, we still have great respect for our loved ones but we do not see any merits in making a public and superfluous show of our grief. Respect and grief are here a very private matter. They are felt in our hearts and we are not bound to make a public show of them.

Rather than emphasizing on outward and superfluous forms of mourning, filial piety should be associated with actions towards elders while they are alive. Deeds speak for themselves. It would be most unfortunate if some people think that elaborate funeral rites and rituals and the wearing of mourning clothes, can serve as a redemption for deeds of love and care not showered upon the deceased when he or she was living.

Nevertheless, in line with the decorum for a solemn occasion, "solemn" clothes can be worn. One can select some appropriate dark, white or plain-coloured clothing from one's wardrobe. That to my mind should suffice, though the deceased person, if he had been a joyful and understanding Buddhist, might not even want us to wear "mournful" clothings but to rejoice that he had led a good life and had gone on to a better rebirth. So a person could, before his death, stipulate that he does not want any mourning and superstitious practices but just a simple funeral. He can delegate a responsible person to see that all his wishes are carried out. He can have it all written down on paper and signed in the presence of witnesses so that all concerned would know and abide by his wishes.

The general atmosphere in the house and throughout the funeral should be one of serenity and understanding. Unbecoming activities such as drinking and gambling should definitely not be allowed. All should be respectful and conduct themselves with due decorum. Meaningful passages from the Buddhist scriptures can be read from time to time and reflected upon by the family members and all those present. One person can lead in the reflection. If all concerned have a good understanding of the Dhamma, they would be able to contain their grief. The more stoical can comfort those who are grieving. In this way a peaceful and understanding atmosphere can come about during the whole proceedings. And those present can also feel further resolved and motivated to strive harder in their spiritual quest, and to live with more love and compassion.

A service for the deceased can be conducted in the house. Senior family members can lead in the service, during which the life and good deeds of the deceased can be recounted. Children can recount the great kindness and love of their parents(*8) and resolve to lead an exemplary life in their memory.

A monk too can be invited to give a pertinent Dhamma talk. Meditation sessions can also be held in the hall. It would be both a meritorious deed and a mark of respect for the deceased. The deceased, if he had been a staunch meditator, would surely be very happy if he could know that everybody was sitting around his casket, meditating. If he has been reborn in heaven and could see what was going on, I am sure he would be delighted. I, for one, will be very delighted if I were to look down and see people all meditating around my casket. I will be pleased to no end. And if possible I will come down and sit happily in meditation with everybody but, of course, you must pardon me: I know I'm giving free rein to my imagination.

On the day of the cremation, all the merits that have been made can again be shared. A list of the charities that have benefited from the donations received can also be read out. A meaningful service can be conducted at the crematorium just before the casket is pushed into the incinerator. Meaningful passages can be recited from the scriptures. They can be about the impermanence of life, the inevitability of death and the need to live a good life, to meditate and to serve our fellowmen. It might be even more edifying if the service be specially composed and read out for the occasion. It would be good if a monk can lead the whole service but if that is not possible, then a senior member of the family, relative or friend can take the initiative.

After the cremation, what should we do with the ashes? In Buddhist Burma I am told that usually a body is cremated to ashes, which is then left to be disposed of by the crematorium attendants. The relatives do not collect the ashes as it is believed that the deceased had immediately on death taken a new rebirth, and the body left behind is just an empty shell. The Chinese practice in Malaysia, however, is to keep urns containing the ashes in temples or columbariums at substantial cost. My personal feeling is that there is no point to keep the ashes as it doesn't serve much purpose, there being no need at all to make any offerings or perform any services before the ashes. For, as we know from the Dhamma, the ashes is merely elements of inanimate matter while the consciousness has taken on a new rebirth, a new body in some new existence. So I would concur with the Burmese Buddhist way of leaving the ashes behind. If we want to remember and honour the deceased, we should live a good life and do good deeds in his memory. On anniversary of his death too, we can offer dana (food and gifts) at the temples, or make donations to charities.

All the proposals with regard to funerals that I have made above are, I believe, more meaningful and significant than present practices. But of course it is up to the reader to decide for himself or herself. These are just my feelings, the way I look at it. I understand that others may feel differently. They may disagree with me and they have every right to do so. For it has always been my firm belief that no-one should impose his or her views on another. We all have a mind of our own and must be allowed to think and decide for ourselves.

Therefore I must make it very clear here that I am not imposing my views on anybody. Instead I am just expressing and sharing them. And I leave it to each person to decide for himself or herself what he or she would like to believe or follow. Each person must feel free to do as he or she deems fit. Furthermore, in deciding on a funeral after a person has died, there should be discussion and concensus among the family members. It is best therefore that a person, before he dies, makes clear the type of funeral he desires. And it should preferably be done in writing, signed and witnessed. Then there would be no quibble after his death. Family members should respect and follow his wishes.

Of course, the suggestions I have given are not all-comprehensive. They have not covered all the details and aspects of a funeral. They are just a rough framework, just some food for thought. There can be other variations too. It will therefore be good if a team of like-minded and respected Buddhists can sit down and formulate a simple Buddhist funeral covering all aspects and details, and answering all the questions that may be raised. Firstly, what should be looked at are our present practices. What are they? What are their significance? Do we know and understand what we are doing? Why do we practise them? Do they make sense? Are they in line with the Dhamma? Or are they superstitious practices or practices which cannot be reconciled with our understanding of the Dhamma as preached by the Buddha?

From what I can see, many of the present practices in a Chinese family, which professes the Buddhist way of life, cannot be reconciled with the Dhamma. It would appear that many people just follow funeral rites without any idea of what they are all about. They just follow instructions without question or understanding. They are, at the time of the funeral, really quite confused and distraught. They just follow what they are told to do because it is the tradition and they can't possibly go against it without being criticised and accused of being unfilial and so on. So there is really no meaningful participation. To me, it all seems quite pathetic. Ignorance and resignation to whatever is being conducted seems to be the order of the day.

So a team of respected Buddhists looking into all these practices can come up with meaningful alternatives in line with the Buddha Dhamma. Details of the proposed funeral service with various options can be drawn up after having conducted a thorough study of the local situation. A comprehensive book providing all the various funeral options and necessary information can then be compiled and published. Such a project will be a great service to the Buddhist community who are often confused as to what constitutes a proper Buddhist funeral.

** **

As for me

As for my own funeral, I have given due thought as to how I would like my own body to be disposed after death. The body is actually nothing more than a corpse after death. It will just return to the earth. So I might as well do one last good deed with it - ie. donate it to the hospital. Doctors can remove the cornea from my eyes and give the wonderful gift of sight to a blind person. Imagine what joy it is for one who is blind to be able to see again, and how precious such a gift would be to him. And imagine how happy I would be too, to know that I have given him this gift of sight. This gift too is no sacrifice on my part at all, as the body is of no more use to me after death. So I might as well do one last good deed with it before it decomposed.

If possible, the doctors should also remove my heart, kidneys, lungs, liver and whatever organs that could after my death be transplanted to others. And whatever is left may be of benefit to medical students in their studies. They could do dissection practice on it. Later, they could dispose what remains of the body as they wish. Perhaps it could become fertilizer for the soil and some plant can grow into a strong tree that provides shade and pretty flowers. In this way too, nobody need to worry about giving me a so-called proper funeral. Everybody can just leave it to the hospital to dispose of everything as they deem fit. It will make it so much easier for everybody. It will, so to speak, take a load off their mind. No-one need to be unnecessarily inconvenienced on my account.

And if anybody speaks about a proper funeral for me and the paying of last respects, I will say: Please do not bother about all that. A funeral is not for me. But if you really wish to remember me, then do a good deed. Do any good deed you like in my memory. Live a good life. Be caring and sharing. Be forgiving and loving. Be generous and big-hearted. Be kind and gentle. That is all that I ask. That will make me very happy - to know that I have been able to spread some good message and be of some good influence.

** **

Monks, a monk should meet his end mindful and clearly comprehending.
That is our instruction to you.

Buddha

** **

OUR DEATH SHOULD BE SERENE

All of us have to die one day. Our death should be serene and peaceful. Therefore when someone is about to die we should make it as serene and beautiful for him or her as possible. Yes, are you surprised that death can be beautiful? If you are, it is because we normally have dosa or aversion towards death. There is fear of pain and the uncertainty of what is to come after death. Then there is attachment to our loved ones which gives rise to much pain in our heart in having to part with them.

We should however realize that our wrong understanding and attitude is the cause of our suffering. We have not understood the Dhamma deeply enough. We have not understood and penetrated the nature of mind and body as impermanence, suffering and no-self. We have not learned how to let go gracefully, how to submit to the inevitable.

When the Buddha's stepmother Maha Pajapati Gotami was about to die at the ripe old age of 120, Ananda and the nuns cried. Maha Pajapati Gotami gently reproached them: "But why should you cry, my son and daughters. Don't you see this body of mine has become old and decrepit? It is like a haunt of snakes, a seat of diseases, a resort of old age and death, a house of suffering. Weary have I grown with this corpse of a body. It has been nothing but a great burden to me. Long have I aspired for the liberation of Nibbana. And today my wish is about to be realized. Truly my death is a happy thing. It is the time for me to beat the drum of satisfaction and joy. Why then should you cry?"

The Buddha, as he was dying amidst natural surroundings under two sal trees in the forest, also told Ananda not to cry at his death. He said one must with wisdom and equanimity accept the fact that death and separation from all that we love is inevitable. The Buddha reminded that we must practise mindfulness meditation to attain the wisdom that can enable us to face death with serenity. He told the monks: "Thus must you train yourselves: We must meet our death mindful and composed." And the Buddha's last words were:

"All conditioned things are subject to dissolution. You should strive on with diligence."

People who have lived beautiful lives can die beautifully. The other day I came across a very touching In Memoriam in the newspaper: "As she breathed her last and entered into eternal life, her face lit up and her lips broke into a lovely smile. Sister F., on seeing this, exclaimed: "Look, she's seeing God..." It so happened I know this lady, a Christian, who had died such a beautiful death. She had a very gentle and kind nature and was always concerned for the welfare of others. I was told that as a school teacher she used to seek out the especially weak students and gave them special coaching and encouragement. She was deeply loved and cherished by her family and by all those whose lives had been touched by hers. I am told that she had always been such a gentle and loving person to everybody that verily her life was just like that of a saint.

Having lived such a beautiful life, it is no wonder that she died a beautiful death. Our religions may vary but as the Dalai Lama, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, puts it: "Compassion is the essence of all religions." It is my firm belief that if we have lived a good life, then when we die we will die a beautiful death whether we are Buddhists, Christians, Hindus, Muslims or of whatever views or beliefs. As the Buddha says, it is deeds that maketh a person. In this context I used to tell Buddhists that it is better to be a good Christian or good Muslim than to be a bad Buddhist. Thus, good Christians when they die may see their God or the light. Buddhists too may see mental images of the Buddha, arahants, devas or heavenly realms and radiant light.

Jack Kornfield, the American Vipassana meditation teacher, once related in the Inquiring Mind journal how he visited Howard Nudleman, a very kind surgeon and meditator a day before the latter died of cancer. He recollected how walking into Howard's room was like walking into a temple. And when he looked at Howard, Howard gave him a smile, a smile of such incredible sweetness, that he (Kornfield) would never be able to forget it for the rest of his life.

Yes, I am sure touching stories about beautiful deaths of beautiful people abound. Therefore, death too can be a beautiful experience. When we have lived a good life and this body has become frail and broken down, we can face death gracefully, knowing that we have lived a good life and that it is time for us to move on.

So when a loved one is about to die, we should understand and allow him (or her) to go peacefully. We should make it as serene and beautiful for him as possible. Obviously, we shouldn't be crying or wailing. That would only make it more difficult for the dying person. Of course if he is an understanding Buddhist and there is still strength in him to speak, he might, just like the Buddha, gently chide you: "But my dear why should you cry? Has not the Buddha taught us in many a way that separation is inevitable in life? How can it be that what is subject to dissolution should not dissolve? That is not possible. Therefore we should contemplate deeply on the Dhamma. This body, my dear, is not ours. This mind too is not ours. They arise and pass away according to conditions. We must practise mindfulness deeply to see this, so that, clinging no more, we can be liberated from birth and death. My dear, be strong. Even as I take my leave of you I will like to remind you of the Buddha's last words to us all: "All conditioned phenomena are subject to dissolution. Therefore, I exhort you, strive on with diligence."

Yes, all Buddhists should remember that the Buddha's last reminder to us was to strive on untiringly to attain the wisdom that can liberate us from birth and death. A meditator should meditate to the very end. He can observe his in-breath or out-breath or the rising and falling of the abdomen as he breathes in and out. If he experiences any difficulties he can be aware of them, noting them as they are, without any fear or anxiety, but with calmness and steadiness of mind. He can observe painful sensations and bear them even if they are intense. He can remind himself that they are merely sensations, albeit difficult ones. He can see too that they are impermanent, that they continually arise and pass away. He can understand and not cling or be attached to the body. He knows that both the body and mind arise and pass away according to conditions. He can reflect: "This mind and body are not mine. They have never belonged to me. They arise because of conditions and, according to conditions, they will pass away. Accordingly, this eye is not mine, this ear is not mine, this nose is not mine.....This body is made up of the four elements of earth, fire, water and air which represent the qualities of matter, the qualities of hardness, softness, pressure, tension, heat, cold and so on. As long as there is kammic energy to sustain my lifespan for this life, this body will survive. When the kammic energy for this life expires, then this body dies, and a new mind conditioned by the old mind at the moment of death, arises in a new body. If I had attained arahatship, there is no need for anymore rebirth. If I have not but have, nevertheless, lived a good life, I am not afraid of a new rebirth. I can take on a new existence as a well-endowed and intelligent human or a heavenly being and from there continue my path of development until I attain the ultimate Nibbana, the end of birth and death." Reflecting in this way, a meditator can become very calm and steady. He can become very peaceful. He can even smile at his pain and at the people that may be gathered around him. With his mind being so peaceful, painful bodily sensations too can cease. He can die in serenity and peace, gently breathing his last.

** **

Tears of joy

When Anathapindika, the philanthropist and great benefactor of the Sangha, was dying, Sariputta, the Buddha's chief disciple, preached a discourse on non-attachment to him. Sariputta reminded Anathapindika that life was merely a process dependent on conditions, and that in this transient mind and body there is nothing which is worth clinging to. Sariputta went through a whole list of what life constitutes, showing that they are all ephemeral conditions which cannot be clung to. Therefore Anathapindika should not grasp after visual forms and the eye, sound and the ear, scent and the nose, taste and the tongue, touch and the body, and the consciousness that is dependent on all of these. Anathapindika should not grasp after seeing consciousness, hearing consciousness, smelling consciousness, tasting consciousness, touching consciousness and thinking consciousness. He should understand their impermanent nature and observe their arising and passing away, without clinging to or being averse to them.

Similarly Anathapindika should not grasp after the contact dependent on eye and form, ear and sound and so on. He should not grasp after the feeling, whether pleasant or unpleasant, that arose dependent on the contact. He was to treat them all with equanimity, understanding their true nature of impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and no-self. The body is made up of the four elements of extension, oscillation, cohesion and temperature. The mind is made of feeling, perception, mental activities and consciousness. They are all impermanent and changing all the time. Anathapindika, Sariputta exhorted, should not be attached to any of these. There is nothing in the world which can be called a permanent self. There is, in the ultimate sense, no self in this mind and body. And therefore there is nothing for Anathapindika to cling to.

On hearing this profound Dhamma, a great peace and joy came over Anathapindika. And he cried. The Buddha's attendant monk, Ananda, who was present was taken aback and asked Anathapindika why he cried. "Was it because he was not able to bear up with his pain?" "No," Anathapindika replied. It was not that. But rather it was because the discourse was so beautiful that it had touched him very deeply. "I have never felt so touched in my life. That is why I cried," he told Ananda and Sariputta. His tears were not tears of sorrow, but tears of joy - joy at hearing and understanding such profound Dhamma.

Anathapindika asked why such Dhamma was not often preached to the lay-people. Sariputta replied it was because the lay-people normally found it difficult to appreciate such deep Dhamma, being attached, as they were, to the very many sensual pleasures available in life. Anathapindika protested that there were those who would understand and appreciate the deep Dhamma and who, for not hearing it, would be lost. He urged Sariputta to preach often to others the discourse on non-attachment which Sariputta had just preached to him.

Shortly after Anathapindika died. As his end was peaceful and he had lived a good life, he was said by the Buddha to have been reborn in the Tusita heaven. As one who has attained the first stage of sainthood (sotapatti) it is believed that Anathapindika would, within seven lives, attain full enlightenment and thereby be liberated from rebirth.

There are stories too of how monks in the old days attained arahatship (full enlightenment) on their deathbed. So too yogis of today can meditate to the very end, so that for all they know they might realize insight knowledges, deepening their understanding of impermanence, suffering and no-self, and even attaining sainthood at the moment of death.

A yogi too can radiate metta, loving-kindness. Even as he is dying, he can radiate thoughts of loving-kindness to all beings. "May all beings be happy. May they be free from harm and danger. May they be free from mental suffering ..... physical suffering ..... may they take care of themselves happily." Dying with such noble thoughts of love for all beings is a noble way of dying. In the Visuddhimagga, a classic Buddhist meditation manual, it is stated that a person who is in the habit of radiating metta, will die very peacefully, as if falling into a pleasant sleep. And if he has not attained arahatship and has thus to be reborn, he may be reborn in a heavenly realm.

Yes, a yogi need not fear death. He can gracefully give up the body and mind knowing that life and death are just two sides of the same coin, understanding that while we are alive we are already dying from moment to moment, dying to each passing moment and being reborn into each new moment. Mental and physical phenomena are constantly arising and passing away. Nothing stays the same even for a second. This has been proven too in quantum physics where it was found that subatomic particles vanish at a rate of 10 to the power of 22 times in just one second. The Buddha too said that mental and physical phenomena are constantly arising and dissolving. As long as we have not eliminated the kammic-rebirth energy by uprooting the mental defilements of greed, anger and delusion, so long will we continue to take new birth. Dying in this life just means the end of the lifespan for the body and mind in this life. But immediately on expiry of the death-moment mind, without any interval, a new mind arises taking on a new body according to the kamma or deeds of the being in his previous life. So a yogi understanding that the death-moment mind is basically no different from that of any other mind-moment would have no fear. He can meet his end mindful and composed in line with the instruction of the Buddha.

** **

Making the atmosphere serene

In making the atmosphere serene for a dying person, we should know his preferences, his likes and dislikes. For example, he may like flowers. Then we should have flowers in the room by his bedside. He would probably like to pass away in his own cosy room, in surroundings that are familiar and peaceful to him. So if it is possible, he should have his end at home rather than in a hospital. But if that is not possible and hospital care is required, we should try to make his surroundings in the hospital as private and peaceful as possible. A private room is best but not all people may be able to afford it. Whatever the place may be, we should try to make the atmosphere as peaceful as possible.

He might have a small Buddha image which he likes to gaze at. If so we can place the image beside the flowers at his bedside. The serene countenance of a Buddha image can be very reassuring. By looking at the image, one is reminded of the Buddha's wisdom and teaching. And that can give much comfort and peace, especially in times of need. The room too should be clean and cosy. The dying person might like his bed to be placed facing the window so he can see trees and plants which can be soothing to the heart. (The Buddha, for example, chose to pass away in natural surroundings, under two sal trees which were in bloom in Kusinara forest.)

If perchance the dying person should lose his steadiness and show signs of fear, anxiety or pain, relatives should reassure him. For example, a loved one can hold his hand or gently stroke his forehead, speaking in soothing and reassuring terms. She can remind him gently of the Dhamma, the need to keep the mind calm and to meditate. She can assure him not to worry about her or the children, that she has the teachings of the Buddha and that she will live by the teachings. She will know how to take care of herself and the children. She can remind him that property, loved ones and mind-and-body are ultimately not ours. Only our deeds are our true property that will follow us. She can remind him of the good life he had led, of the good care he had taken of the family, and of the many good deeds he had done. Recollecting thus, and understanding the Dhamma, he can become strong. He can smile and be at peace. Death is no more frightening to him.

Of course, what we have stated is just an example of one possible scenario. When the time comes there can be no prepared script. But if one understands the Dhamma one can respond intuitively and, according to the prevailing conditions, say and do just the right thing to help a loved one die peacefully.

During the Buddha's time, Nakulamata, the wife of Nakulapita, did just that: she reassured her husband when he was at one time close to dying. She told him: "My dear, do not die with any regret or attachment to anything. Our Lord, the Buddha, had said that it is unwise to die in such manner." Understanding her husband's nature, she continued: "My dear, you might think that when you are gone, I will not be able to support the children or keep the family together. But think not so; for I am deft at spinning cotton and carding wool. I can support the children and keep the family together. Therefore be at peace."

And she reassured her husband that she would remain virtuous and practise the Dhamma until she attained enlightenment. And if anyone should doubt this, let them go and ask the Buddha, who she was certain would express confidence in her. Hearing all these assurances, Nakulapita instead of dying felt very much better and recovered from his illness! Later, when the loving couple went to see the Buddha, the Lord told Nakulapita that he was very lucky to have a wife like Nakulamata. "You are very fortunate to have Nakulamata who had such love and compassion for you, who desire your happiness and who can counsel you in times of crisis."

Relatives too should give all the support they can to the dying. As has been said earlier, they should not cry as that would make it difficult for the dying person. But if they have difficulty in controlling themselves, then they too should contemplate on the Dhamma. They can contemplate that death is inseparable from life. When there is life there must be death. It is something we must accept gracefully. Besides when the body is decrepit or terminally ill, it is quite a relief to be "freed" from it. Taking on a new life, the person will be better off. Thinking in a wise way too, relatives can regain their composure and help give the dying person a dignified and serene departure.

The last thought-moment

The last thought-moment or the death moment is said to be very vital. If one dies with fear, anger, craving or any other unwholesome mental state, then a bad rebirth will come about. But if one dies with peace and understanding, with mindfulness and equanimity, a good rebirth will come about. Usually if one has led a good life the last thought-moment will quite naturally be a wholesome one. The good deeds one has done may appear to the mind's eye. Or one may have visions of the destiny one is going to, such as the seeing of breathtaking heavenly scenery and beautiful people. Conversely, if one has led an evil life, then the evil deeds one has done may appear before one's eye, or visions of hell-fire and other bad omens may be seen. In life though, we are not all good or all bad; there is a mixture of bad and good in us. But if on the whole we have been good, then we can be confident of getting a good rebirth.

If we have a good understanding of life and death, we can meet death with steadiness and equanimity. We can, as we have said, meditate to the very end, maintaining our mindfulness and composure. Having lived a generally good life and furthermore, being able to maintain mindfulness in the face of death, we can certainly be assured of a good rebirth - as a good human being again or as a deva, a heavenly being. Hopefully too we can quickly, in whatever rebirth we have taken, make an end of samsara, the round of birth and death, so that subject no more to rebirth, we will attain the peace of Nibbana.

Sometimes the question may be asked: What if a person is unable to maintain mindfulness, especially if he has not undergone any meditation training? What if, let us say, he dies in a coma? Or what if he dies suddenly in an accident? From my understanding of the scriptures as taught by the Buddha, I would say that if one has led a good life, then chances are some good thought-moment will surface at the moment of death and a good rebirth can come about. Our kamma is our true refuge (kamma-patisarana), so accordingly the sum-weight of the good deeds we have done should lead us to a good rebirth. That is why we should lead a good life while we are alive, and not wait until we are near death, for it would be much too late then. But as in life we have done both some bad and good, there is the possibility that we might unskillfully recollect the bad deeds instead of the good ones at the moment of death. Therefore maintaining mindfulness is all important; it is very helpful. With mindfulness, unwholesome thoughts will not be able to enter our mind and we can pass away calmly, peacefully. Mindfulness being such a wonderful quality - being able to help us in both life and death - why then should we not cultivate and thoroughly develop it while we are alive?

** **

A monk devoted to mindfulness of death is constantly diligent. He acquires perception of disenchantment with all kinds of becoming (existence). He conquers attachment to life. He condemns evil. He avoids much storing. He has no stain of avarice about requisites. Perception of impermanence grows in him, following upon which there appear the perception of pain and not-self. But while beings who have not developed mindfulness of death fall victims to fear, horror and confusion at the time of death as though suddenly seized by wild beasts, spirits, snakes, robbers, or murderers, he dies undeluded and fearless without falling into any such state. And if he does not attain the deathless here and now, he is at least headed for a happy destiny on the break-up of the body.

The Path of Purification (Visuddhimagga)

** **

CONTEMPLATION ON DEATH

While we are alive it is good to contemplate on death now and then. In fact it is good to do it daily. The Buddha recommends frequent contemplation on death because there are many benefits to be gained from such contemplation. Let's look at how we can benefit in contemplating on death.

First we must make it clear that by contemplating on death, we do not mean that you must become morose, frightened, morbid or depressed, and feel like killing yourself. No, far from all these, we mean that you should, in contemplating wisely on death, be able to live even more wisely and compassionately.

For example, whenever I should get annoyed or frustrated I would (if I am not too unmindful) contemplate along these lines: Life is short, soon we will all be dead. So what's the use of quarrelling or arguing with anyone? What's the use of getting all heated up?

No point at all. It is better that I keep my peace. Arguing or getting heated up would not solve the problem. It causes only more animosity and vexation. Thinking in this way I can cool down, check myself from being carried away by strong feelings, and relate more gently and skillfully with others. Of course, it is not always easy and sometimes (perhaps many times) I do forget and get carried away with rhetorics and emotions, but whenever I remind myself about the brevity of life and the pointlessness of getting all fired up, I can cool down somewhat and speak with more gentleness and restraint.

Similarly, when I should be agitated or worried about something, I would think what's the use of all these worrying and anxiety. Life will take its natural course and death awaits each and everyone of us. No-one in the world can escape death. Death is the great equalizer, the great leveller. Therefore, while I am alive, it is better for me to live as best I could, and that means living in accordance with the Dhamma, living mindfully, from moment to moment, day to day, just doing the best I can, one day at a time. Thinking in such wise too, I can check worries and live more lightly and happily.

Furthermore, we can consider that with or without worries, all of us still have to grow old and die. So we might as well grow old without the worries! That will be the smarter thing to do. Nobody will disagree that we'll surely be better off without the worries. On the other hand, all the worrying might even shorten our life, cause us to develop a premature illness and die. Thinking in this way too, we can check our worries and live happier lives. Thus, thinking about death in a skilful way can cause us to be more tolerant and patient, kinder and gentler, both with ourselves and others.

Then we can also become less attached to our material possessions, less greedy. Yes, when we can perceive deeply the brevity of life, and how no matter how much we may have acquired we cannot take even one cent along with us when we die, we can become less tight-fisted. We can loosen a little and start to enjoy sharing and giving, loving and caring. We will realize then that there is more to life than just accumulating and hoarding wealth. We will like to be more generous, to share and to bring joy and happiness into the lives of others. Bringing joy and happiness to others is what makes life meaningful and beautiful. That is what counts. Love and compassion can grow and flower in us like the beautiful blooms of a tree. We can become truly beautiful people that are steeped in compassion, responding from the heart without any discrimination of race, sect, religion, social status, etc. Our life will take on a new shine and we can then say we are truly happy and human. And when death comes we shall have no regrets. We can die happily and peacefully, with a smile.

** **

When four mountains come a-rolling

The Buddha once told a simile with regard to death to impress upon us the need to live a meaningful life. He posed this question to King Pasenadi: "What would you do, O King, if you are told that four huge mountains, one each from the north, south, east and west, are heading in the direction of your kingdom, crushing every living thing in sight, and there is no escape?"

King Pasenadi replied: "Lord, in such a mighty disaster, the destruction of human life so great, and rebirth as a human being so hard to obtain, what else can I do save to live a righteous life and do good deeds." The Buddha then drove home his point: "I tell you, O King, I make it known to you - old age and death are rolling in upon you. Since old age and death are rolling in upon you, what are you going to do?" The King replied that under such circumstances, it was all the more urgent for him to live a righteous life and do good deeds. He also acknowledged that all the power, prestige, wealth and sensual pleasures which he was enjoying as a king would, in the face of death, come to nought.

So when we reflect wisely on death we will realize that wealth, power, prestige and sensual pleasures are not everything. They cannot guarantee us happiness. Many people have had them and still lived tempestuous and unhappy lives. Some regretted the way they had ill-treated, down-trodden or ruined others in the frenzied pursuit of their worldly ambitions. Having reached the top, they found that the achievement was, after all, not all that satisfying, even hollow and meaningless. Sometimes they wished they had spent more time with their loved ones and friends, that they had shown more care and tenderness. They regretted having neglected their loved ones. Some people having attained a good degree of success, changed their attitude in mid-course. They devoted more time to their loved ones, friends and society and are prepared, for the greater good, to forego their highest ambitions, to settle for less.

If we were to read about how some rich and successful people made a mess of their lives, we might learn a lesson from their mistakes. The other day I read a book entitled, "The World's Wealthiest Losers". I found it quite an educational book. It was quite aptly titled. They were losers in life despite their wealth. Yes, I learned quite a lot of Dhamma from it, about how money and success do not guarantee their owners happiness. Instead they were unhappy despite or because of their wealth and success. Reading about how the rich and famous, such as Howard Hughes, Mario Lanza, Elvis Presley, Marilyn Monroe and Aristotle Onassis, lived and died I do not envy them.

Glamorous personalities like Elvis and Monroe, died from an overdose of drugs, living out the old adage: "From rags to riches, and from riches to emptiness." All their wealth and success could not bring them the happiness they sought. Happiness still eluded them. They seemed quite pathetic, consumed by tantrums, grief, fear and emptiness. Take the case of one heiress, who inherited an astronomical fortune, married seven times but could not find happiness. She told her biographer: "I inherited everything but love. I've always been seeking for it, because I didn't know what it was." Her first six marriages ended in divorce and her last in separation. In the end, despite her massive wealth she was said to be "just a vulnerable sick woman riddled with loneliness." She died at age 66 with some friends by her bedside, but no husband. Such tragic tales, I'm sure, can be found in the East too.

Of course, in making references to others, we do not mean to be disparaging in a self-righteous way. But we just wanted to emphasize the importance of having the proper values in life, to understand the nature of true love and compassion. We also do not mean to denounce riches and success, or to say that you should not strive for them. No, we are not saying that. We do understand that we have to be practical and realistic. We understand that if you are working in the world it is only natural you will try your best to acquire as much wealth as possible. After all, if you want to do good and help others, such as building charitable institutions, hospitals and meditation centres and offering almsfood to monks and the needy, you would need money. So we are not saying you should not try as laypeople to enrich yourselves. But of course in acquiring wealth, you should do so through honest means, without harming others.

In other words, what we are emphasizing is the moral balance. We need to have spiritual values, the appreciation that happiness is not in self-indulgence but in sharing and caring. When we have the right values we can live meaningfully and bring joy and happiness to all those who come within the ambience of our lives. When we have understood the Dhamma, especially the truths of impermanence, suffering and no-self, we will not cling to fame or gain. We can live with humility and compassion, share our wealth and success, and find joy in making others happy. But when we do not have a deep understanding of what constitutes happiness - that true happiness comes from a mind that is liberated from greed, anger and delusion - then because we do not understand we can do the wrong things, be sunk in a sensual mire and come to a miserable end. So it is important that we contemplate well on life and death, and steer in the right direction, the proper course.

** **

A sense of urgency

Contemplating on death can also bring about what is called //samvega// in Pali - a sense of urgency which can charge us with the energy to do all the good we can before we die and, in particular, to practise meditation to experience the deeper truths and understanding. The Buddha said most people are running up and down the nearer shore; they are not seeking to cross over to the other shore. The Buddha meant that we are all very much entangled in sensual pursuits, in the mundane pleasures of life. We are not seeking to go beyond to the supramundane - to go beyond life and death, to taste the ambrosial nectar of immortal bliss, immortal Nibbana.

What is this Nibbana? The Buddha said it cannot be described but must be experienced by each one for himself or herself. But the Buddha did try to give us some idea of what Nibbana is like. For example, he described it as the unborn, unoriginated, unformed, unconditioned, the deathless, the highest happiness, the greatest peace. Nibbana represents a state of no arising and passing away, no birth or death. It is also described as a blowing out of the fires of greed, hatred and delusion, the cessation of mind and matter, the extinction of suffering(*9).

A person who has attained the state of Nibbana, which can be realised in the course of meditation, is said to be enlightened. An enlightened person may be an arahant or a Buddha. The difference between an arahant and a Buddha is that the former gains enlightenment by listening to another enlightened person while a Buddha gains enlightenment by himself.

An enlightened being is a person who can face the vicissitudes of life with an even mind. Through the ups and downs, such as loss and gain, success and failure, praise and blame, pain or pleasure, fame or disrepute, he remains serene and unshakable. He remains this way not because he is deluded or unfeeling, but because he is enlightened and wise; he understands the true nature of existence, the nature of physical and mental phenomena, the nature of their impermanence, insecurity and absence of any core or essence that can be called a self in the ultimate sense. If he does not crave for pleasure or is unaverse to pain, it is not that he does not feel them. He feels them but understanding their true nature he cannot be overwhelmed by them. He can take both pain and pleasure as they come along with wisdom and equanimity.

So too with the other worldly conditions such as praise and blame, and loss and gain. If he is praised he does not get swollen-headed or conceited. He is not elated. If he is blamed he is not upset or depressed. It doesn't matter to him. He is steady and unperturbed because he knows he has acted truly - without the subtlest taints of greed, anger and delusion. He is motivated only by loving-kindness and compassion. He has no desire even to harm an ant or a mosquito. His conscience is clear, his mind is light and free. An arahant lives out his last life on this earth and when he dies he undergoes no more rebirth. He goes out like a lamp. He attains nirodha - cessation. He has //parinibbana-ed// - ie. he has attained final Nibbana, the cessation of all existence, the attainment of the Nibbanic element of supreme peace. Thus arahants during the time of the Buddha had this saying:

> I delight not in life
> I delight not in death
> But I await my time > mindful and composed.

Another verse goes like this:

> Impermanent are all conditioned things
> Of a nature to arise and pass away
> Having arisen they then pass away
> Their (complete) calming and cessation is true bliss.

Comtemplating on death can release us from the grip of the sensual lure. We will not be deluded by material wealth but will channel our resources towards a more fulfilling and rewarding life, with due regard for the development of wisdom and compassion. We can be spurred to take up meditation or, if we have already done so, to double our efforts to attain the supreme goal of liberation from all suffering.

** **

Contemplation leads to understanding and acceptance

Frequent contemplation on death - on how it is inevitable and that our true property are our deeds - can spur us to live a good life such that when we die we will have no fear of death. Furthermore when somebody dear to us die, as inevitably all of us must, grief will not assail us as we have understanding and acceptance. This is not because we are unfeeling or have no heart. No, we have a heart, and a soft one too. We can feel deeply but we also understand the nature of existence, and can accept that death is very much woven into life.

Explaining how the wise can accept death, the Buddha said: "Seeing the nature of the world, the wise do not grieve. Weeping and wailing will only lead to more suffering and pain. It cannot bring back the dead. The mourner becomes pale and thin. He is doing violence to himself and his mourning is pointless." The Buddha said that the wise man who had truly comprehended the nature of existence has "pulled out the dart of grief and despair." "He has no clinging. Having obtained peace of mind, he has passed beyond all grief. He is freed."

So we should contemplate on the deeper aspects of the Buddha's teachings so that we can face death without grief but with understanding. The departed too would not want us to lose our self-control. They would not want us to suffer a broken heart but to accept their departure gracefully. Having taken a new rebirth, they are also no more present to see us weeping. Our weeping and sorrow cannot help them in any way. So it is futile. If we were to consider more deeply, we may see that our grief is because of our attachment. We cannot bear the parting. But if we can contemplate deeply and become wiser, we can accept the inevitable. Instead of grieving, we can be brave. We can respond meaningfully, say by resolving to live a noble and exemplary life in honour or in memory of a loved one. A wise person would surely not want us to mourn for him. Instead he or she would say: "If you really want to do me honour or to remember me by, then live a good life, do good deeds, be kind to your fellowman.....That's all I ask."

When the Buddha was about to pass away, it was said that heavenly flowers and sandalwood powder fell from the sky and sprinkled all over his body in honour of him. And heavenly music too was heard. But the Buddha indicated that such kind of honour was not what he wanted. "It is not thus that the Tathagatha is honoured in the highest degree," he said. "But, Ananda, whoever abides by the Dhamma, lives uprightly in the Dhamma, walks in the way of the Dhamma, it is by such a one that the Tathagatha is honoured in the highest degree. Therefore, Ananda, thus should you train yourselves: We shall abide by the Dhamma, live uprightly in the Dhamma, walk in the way of the Dhamma." And though we have said it before, we would like to say it yet again: The Buddha's last admonition was: //Vayadhamma sankhara. Appamadena sampadetha//. All conditioned things are subject to dissolution. Strive on with diligence (for liberation).

No lamenting can touch the ashes of the dead

In his previous lives, the Buddha as a bodhisatta (a Buddha-to-be), also displayed no grief at the death of dear ones. The Buddha was able with his psychic powers to recollect his past lives, and it was said that in one life when he was a farmer, he did not grieve when he lost his only son. Instead, he contemplated: "What is subject to dissolution is dissolved and what is subject to death is dead. All life is transitory and subject to death." When he was asked by a Brahmin why he did not cry - was he a hard-hearted man, has he no feeling for his son? - the bodhisatta replied that his son was very dear to him, but grieving would not bring him back. "No lamenting can touch the ashes of the dead. Why should I grieve? He fares the way he had to tread."

In another life when he did not cry over his brother's death and was accused by people of being hard-hearted, he replied that they had not understood the eight worldly conditions that all beings faced, to wit, loss and gain, happiness and unhappiness, praise and blame, fame and disrepute. "Because you do not understand the eight worldly conditions you weep and cry. All existent things are transient and must eventually pass away. If you do not understand this, and because of your ignorance you cry and lament, why should I also join you and cry?"

In yet another life, the Bodhisatta shed no tear at the death of his young and beautiful wife. Instead he reflected: "That which has the nature of dissolution is dissolved. All existences are impermanent," and taking a seat nearby, he ate his food as usual, showing an exceptional ability to live mindfully from moment to moment. The people who gathered around him were amazed and asked how he could at such a time remain so calm. Did he not love his wife who was so beautiful that even those who did not know her could not help but brush away a tear? The Bodhisatta replied in verse:

> Why should I shed tears for thee
> Fair Sammillabhasini?
> Passed to death's majority
> You are henceforth lost to me.
>
> Why should frail man lament
> What to him is only lent?
> He too draws his mortal breath
> Forfeit every hour to death.
>
> Be he standing, sitting, > moving, resting, what he will,
> In a twinkling of an eye
> In a moment death may come.
>
> Life I count a thing unstable,

Loss of friends inevitable
Cherish all that are alive
Sorrow not should you survive.

Such amazing accounts of the Bodhisatta's self-control is awe-inspiring. It teaches us too to contemplate well and deeply on the teachings, to understand the truth of impermanence and to accept the fact of death. Perhaps then when we suffer the loss of loved ones, we too can reflect as the Bodhisatta did and maintain our composure.

** **

Death is no stranger to us

Another way to contemplate on death so as to overcome fear of it, is to consider that it is no stranger to us. In this, our long wandering in samsara, the never-ending round of birth and death, the Buddha said we have died and been reborn innumerable times - so many are they that if we were to collect all our bones together and had the bones not rotted, each of the piles of our bones would rise up higher than the highest mountain! So too, the Buddha said, the tears we have shed in samsara over the loss of our loved ones was more than the waters in the four oceans.

Truly, the Buddha said, we have suffered enough to be utterly wearied of life, and to seriously seek the way out of this maze of suffering, the way to the deathless Nibbana. But unfortunately, we have short memories and cannot remember any of our many past lives. How could we when we sometimes could not even remember what we did yesterday! And so we continue to live complacently, without the sense of urgency to cultivate the wisdom that can liberate us from all suffering. However, during the Buddha's time, there were many monks, including of course the Buddha, who could recollect their past lives. In our present age too, there have been accounts of people who had an uncanny ability to recollect their past lives. Francis Story and Dr Ian Stevenson had written books, documenting quite a number of these cases.

When we contemplate on rebirth we can benefit in two ways:

1. We can consider that death is, after all, no stranger to us. We have met it many times before. So we need not face it with fear. We can consider it as just another transition, a change from one life to another.

2. We can be motivated to find a way out of samsara, the round of birth and death. We may study more deeply the teachings of the Buddha. And we may strive harder to put them into practice, to develop dana, sila and bhavana - generosity, morality and meditation.

Momentary death

In another way of looking at it, death is something we are experiencing from moment to moment. For in the absolute sense, we are dying every moment and being reborn the next. According to the Buddha, consciousness is arising and passing away all the time. On the dissolution of one consciousness, another immediately arises and this goes on and on, ad infinitum, until and unless we realize ultimate Nibbana. Bodily phenomena too are continuously arising and passing away. So what we have is just the continuous arising and dissolution of mental and physical phenomena. This is, in a way, a kind of death and rebirth which is occurring from moment to moment. In Pali, it is called //khanika-maranam// - momentary death. In the Path of Purification (Visuddhimagga), it is stated thus:

"In the absolute sense, beings have only a very short moment to live, life lasting as long as a single moment of consciousness lasts. Just as a cart-wheel, whether rolling or whether at a standstill, at all times only rests on a single point of its periphery: even so the life of a living being lasts only for the duration of a single moment of consciousness. As soon as that moment ceases, the being also ceases. For it is said: `The being of the past moment of consciousness has lived, but does not live now, nor will it live in future. The being of the future moment has not yet lived, nor does it live now, but it will live in the future. The being of the present moment has not lived, it does live just now, but it will not live in the future." (Translated by Nyanatiloka in Buddhist Dictionary.)

In this context, a being is but a conventional term. In the ultimate analysis, it is just a series of consciousness arising and passing away. One consciousness dies, another arises - that's all. And we call this continuity or process a being. But in the ultimate sense, there is no being - no unchanging soul or mind, but just this series of consciousness arising and passing away, one consciousness conditioning the arising of another.

Furthermore, the conventional death that we experience at the end of one life-span is also not ultimate death. Another consciousness immediately arises but in a new body or realm according to the rebirth one has taken. Only when one has eliminated the mental taints of greed, hatred and delusion will no rebirth come about. Contemplating thus, we can also appreciate the nature of impermanence, suffering and no-self. And we can take life and death in our stride.

** **

Food for thought

Everytime you look at the newspapers and come across obituaries or death announcements, do you give a thought to death? Do you pause and contemplate the fact of your own mortality? Whenever death comes to others, we don't feel much about it. The deceased may be a stranger to us. The suffering is not ours and, besides, we have become quite numbed to stories of death - they are reported everyday in the newspapers. Reading about how people are killed, especially in a war, life seems so cheap. There seems to be no respect for life. But when death strikes those close to us, how do we take it? And when we face our very own death, are we petrified with fear? Yes, although we know that death and tragedies are occurring all around us, yet we are thunderstruck and are unable to accept it when it actually happens to us.

When we read the in memoriams in the newspapers, we can see that though a person may have passed away for some years already, yet the pain of separation suffered by the living ones is still very much there, as if it had been inflicted only yesterday. Sometimes in their messages, spouses or relatives openly expressed the sorrow they still felt and the tears they still shed for their loved ones. We understand it is very human to feel this way. But the Buddha also teaches us that, as human beings, we can imbibe ourselves with the wisdom and strength to accept our loss and to bear it stoically. It is not that the Buddha wants us to be unfeeling but that he wants us to have the wisdom to accept the loss and to understand the futility of our grief. Definitely he doesn't want us to pine away with grief, to grow thin and frail, to lose all interest in life. Buddhists in particular should understand this and thereby accept their loss stoically.

If Buddhists need to put a message to go with an orbituary or in memoriam in the newspapers, why not Buddhistic ones such as: "Impermanent are all conditioned things. Strive untiringly for the unconditioned Nibbana"; or meaningful contemplation on death such as: "Just as the dew-drop at the point of the grass-blade at sunrise very soon vanishes and does not remain for long: just so is the dew-drop-like life of men very short and fleeting. One should wisely understand this, do good deeds and lead a virtuous life; for no mortal ever escapes death."

Or if one wishes to be more personal, how about a message that goes something like this: "My dear, if you could know, you will be pleased to know that the children are growing up beautifully. I have taught them the Dhamma well, to treasure the precious values of love and kindness, wisdom and understanding. I have taught them well not to ape the violence and greed that often come across in mediums such as the TV and movies. As a consequence, they are very gentle and loving to everybody. As for me, I have been keeping my precepts and meditating. I am practising mindfulness in everyday life and I go for retreats once or twice a year. I am quite peaceful, and growing in the Dhamma. I try not to grieve for you; for you and I have understood somewhat the Buddha's teachings - that it is futile to grieve: it serves no purpose. And I know you wouldn't want me to grieve either, but to live a good and exemplary life.

"Nevertheless there were times, I must admit, when I felt the pain, when I missed you terribly, especially when I thought about the good times we had, the happiness we shared together, your sweet smile and bright eyes, the way you laughed and teased. Yes, when I got lost in such nostalgia, I must admit I do feel like bursting into tears. But dear, I can get a hold of myself. I can be mindful. I can watch the pain and accept it. I can watch my thoughts and mood. I can reflect on the Buddha's teachings and understand the futility of grieving. I can be happy and count my blessings - at least we have had happy times together and there are now the children to live for. I know my pain comes from my attachment and lack of deep understanding of the nature of all existence. Thank Buddha for teaching us mindfulness, for teaching us to live in the present, to be happy from moment to moment, to count our blessings, to bask in the happiness of a life well-lived.

"Well, I know this message is getting rather long. I realize too that you will not be around to read it. But it does make me feel good to express myself this way. I thank you for the happiness you have given me, and I dedicate all the good deeds that I have done, and the good life I now try to live, all that I dedicate to your sweet and loving memory. I wish that you too, in whatever good rebirth you may have taken, may continue to practise the Dhamma until you attain Nibbana, the cessation of all suffering," and so on and so forth.

Admittedly this is a rather long message and I have got somewhat carried away. But what I would like to underscore here is the theme of the message, one of understanding and acceptance. It is just to give an idea of a Buddhistic message or expression. It can be shortened and put more simply. Or, except for its pedagogic (ie. its teaching) purpose, a message may not be needed at all. Such feelings are quite personal and can be kept private. When one has understood the Dhamma well, one can just carry on living a good life and be content.

** **

A WORLD OF ANOMALIES

Reading the newspapers and newsmagazines can give us much food for reflection. Besides the orbituaries, there are grim reminders of suffering all over the world, though we may have become quite numbed to it. There are murders, robberies, rapes and wars, religious, ethnic, social and political conflicts, pollution, diseases, starvation, poverty, tortures, oppression, terrorisms, accidents, suicides and natural calamities such as earthquakes, fires, floods and hurricanes. It is a long and depressing list which can go on and on.

At the same time, side by side with these news stories there are pictures and advertisements showing happy people enjoying themselves, as if without a care in the world. They are laughing and posing behind posh cars, grand mansions, luxury hotel suites, bottles of alcohol, cigarettes, perfumes, cosmetics, glamourous designer outfits and exquisite jewellery. They are gorging themselves at food fests, beauty contests and fashion shows with beautiful and sophisticated looking models parading on the catwalk. The contrast is especially ironic when, say, you happen to see a high fashion parade next to a heart-rending picture story of piteous African children all skin and bones dying from sheer starvation.

We are said to be a civilised people who abhor violence and the inflicting of senseless pain on one another. Yet we have boxing championships at which two brawny men would, for a sum of money, try their utmost to bash out each other's brains to the roars of approval from the crowd, not unlike the barbarous days of the Romans when gladiators fought lions and each other for the entertainment of blood-thirsty spectators. We have matadors that would infuriate, torture and kill a bull just for the fun of it. And everybody, or at least the stadium-filled spectators, seems to think it is fun too.

Smoking and drinking have taken great tolls on the health of the people, yet cigarettes and alcohol companies still insist on purveying in every possible way, even through the sports arena, their products of death. Smoking is ludicrously described as "an encounter with tenderness"! and drinking is equated with success and prestige among many other things. So-called developed countries are dumping their cigarettes and other harmful products on Third World nations while curbing the consumption of those products among their own people. In their inordinate greed for wealth, companies would go to great lengths, not seeming to have any qualms at all about what they say or do in the purveyance of their products. The mass media such as newspapers and newsmagazines, which accept and publish these advertisements because of greed for the huge sums of money they bring in, cannot absolve themselves too from responsibility. They have a basic human right to exercise a social conscience by declining harmful advertisements but they choose not to do so.

Looking at a glossy airline magazine, the picture of an elderly brewery company chairman in Thailand caught my attention. Dressed in suit and tie and with greying hair, he was proudly displaying, in his posh conference room, a row of bottles of beer brewed by his factory. Just behind him was an altar on which sat a gleaming Buddha image. One can see that the altar was impressively and centrally located in the room. Now, the Buddha, as we all know, had taught abstinence, and the fifth precept to which all Buddhists subscribe, states: "I take the precept to abstain from alcohol and drugs which are a cause for heedlessness." It is hard, therefore, for an observer to reconcile the mass production and distribution of alcohol, which is considered a wrong kind of livelihood in Buddhism, with the image of a Buddha, displayed as it were, so proudly in the room.

Sulak Sivaraksa, a Thai social critic and activist, wrote in his book, Seeds of Peace, "It is a sorry fact that Siam has about 250,000 monks and more than twice that many prostitutes. This speaks for a system that is dysfunctional and has to be reexamined from the ground up. If we can return to the beautiful roots of our Asian traditions, we will help create a sane and functional model for living." In citing the latter two examples, it is not our intention to pick on Thailand, but just to point out anomalies. In point of fact, anomalies exist everywhere. Just as in Thailand, they can be equally found in Buddhist Burma, Buddhist Sri Lanka, our own or any other country. Nobody has a monopoly.

Yes, we can go on and on with the list of contradictions that abound in the world we live, but this much, we believe, would suffice to make our point. Yes, are we not a kind of society with a split or schizophrenic mentality? - like a Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde. We know what is unwholesome, yet we condone and even encourage its proliferation. Apparently, we are all willy-nilly caught in it, and we are hurled along with the tide. Programmed and conditioned by the moguls of the advertising media, we respond to their commands and messages. Buy this, buy that. Eat this, eat that. Wear this, wear that. Do this, don't do that. This is rugged and that is feminine. This is the in-thing and that is out. This is the great way to live; it is the jet-set high society, the world of great fun and entertainment.

Forgive me if I may sound like a critical person, a bad sport, or a mad monk standing on a soapbox declaring at the top of his voice that the end of the world is nigh and threatening a decadent society with hellfire and brimstones. But you might agree with me that it might not be a bad idea if, now and then, we were to step back a little and look at the state of the world and the state of our mind and the state of our life. Some wisdom may yet arise from such contemplation. We can re-assess our position and the direction we will like to go. Do we follow the crowd or do we break ranks? If I may "borrow" a verse from Robert Frost: "Two roads diverged in a wood and I - I took the one less travelled by. And that has made all the difference." Yes, when two roads diverge in your journey of life, which one will you take? The one less travelled by - the path of mindfulness and wisdom, of love and compassion? Please do think about it, for it might well make all the difference.

** **

Where earth and water, fire and wind no footing find,
There ebbs the flow,
there whirls no more the round,
there mind and matter,
cease without remainder.

Buddha

** **

THE SWEETEST SMILE YET

As we come to the end of our treatise on Loving and Dying, I should make it clear that I do not at all claim to be an authority on living, loving or dying. But I have tried to share some thoughts on the subject with you, thoughts about how to live and die with love and understanding all along the way. It is a subject which I have given, and shall continue to give, much thought to. It is a subject which, I believe, should be of interest to all of us - this question of life, love and death. Of course I am not claiming to be wise and I know I have many shortcomings too. Just like people who may mean well but still bungle along the way, I too am bungling and falling as I go along the way. But each time I do pick myself up, brush the dirt away, try not to lament or cry, set my sights once again on that mountain peak that rises up into the sky, and carry on with the journey of life.

I do hope though that some of the thoughts I have shared here may have been of some help to you, that they may have lighted up a little of your way. If they should have given you a little inspiration and determination to live and die with more love and understanding, I would be very very happy. And if perchance parts of my writing should have offended you in any way, I ask too for your forgiveness. As human beings we can only try - to serve and to share. We mean well, and what little we, despite our limitations, managed to contribute to a better society, it is a happy thing. Whenever I look back, it will give me some joy and solace to know that at least I have managed to do this much, even though it may only have been a little.

And when I die, perhaps I could say to Death: "O Death, you may do your worst now, for I have lived and loved, and I have done what little I could for my fellow-beings." And before I slip quietly into the night, perhaps you might yet see that faintest trace of a smile on my lips.

I will smile
the sweetest smile yet
you shall see
And I will go very peacefully
into the night.

Can you smile
with me too?
And say -
Hello to death
Goodbye to life.

** **

Notes

*1 Dhamma is what is. It is seeing things as they are. It is the teaching of the Buddha. The Buddha, in effect, taught: "Life is suffering but I have found the way out of this suffering, and I will show it to you." And the Buddha exhorted the people to practise generosity, morality and meditation.

*2 The ten paramis are giving, morality, renunciation, wisdom, energy, patience, truthfulness, resolution, loving-kindness and equanimity. All bodhisattas (ie. those aspiring to be Buddhas) have to cultivate these paramis. All Buddhists have to cultivate these paramis to a certain degree too before they can gain enligtenment under the dispensation of a Buddha.

*3 Vipassana is Insight or Mindfulness meditation. In Vipassana, meditators employ mindfulness to observe the nature of mental and physical phenomena, perceiving eventually their characteristics of impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and no-self. For a simple introduction to Vipassana, and the practice of another kind of meditation, called metta or loving-kindness meditation, see Invitation to Vipassana and Curbing Anger Spreading Love both written by the same writer.

*4 Details on the practice of metta meditation can be found in the book, Curbing Anger Spreading Love.

*5 Kamma is the natural law of cause and effect, or action and result. It works on the principle that good begets good and bad begets bad. So if we have done something bad in a previous life, the result of the evil deed may take place in this life. For example, one who kills a lot, will, if reborn as a human, have a short life. For a good explanation of kamma see The Buddha and his Teachings by Narada, Buddhist Missionary Society (BMS), Malaysia; Pg 333ff.

*6 As an experience of the cessation of conditioned phenomena during meditation, Nibbana can be experienced at four stages of sainthood. Although the experience of Nibbana as cessation of conditioned phenomena is the same at all four stages, Nibbana having only one "taste," that is the "taste" of peace, the results in terms of eradication of mental defilements are, however, different at each of the four stages.

At the first stage of a sotapanna (stream-winner), greed and hatred are dramatically weakened but not totally eliminated. These two defilements have been weakened to the extent that the sotapanna could no more break the five precepts of not killing (even an insect), not stealing or cheating, not committing sexual misconduct such as adultery, not lying, and not taking alcohol and drugs. At the second stage of a sakadagami (once-returner), the defilements are further weakened. At the third stage of an anagami (non-returner), sensual desire and hatred/anger are completely eliminated. But there is still a subtle trace of ignorance and desire of a non-sensual nature, ie. desire for rebirth in the non-sensual brahma heavenly realm. At the fourth stage of an arahant (a full saint), all desire/greed and ignorance are eliminated. The arahant lives his last life, there being no more rebirth for him.

*7 The Tibetan belief that there is an intermediate stage or an interval of up to 49 days between death and rebirth runs contrary to Theravada Buddhism, which states that rebirth takes place immediately after death. For more details on rebirth in the Theravadin Buddhist perspective, see Narada's The Buddha and His Teachings, chapter 28.

*8 In this regard, parents may well take to heart the reality that deeds outlive the physical life. A life well-lived will be the best legacy they can leave behind for their children. A legacy that will both inspire and provide dignity to their inheritors. The fragrance of their exemplary deeds and life will remain long after they are gone.

*9 For further reading on the subject of Nibbana, see On the nature of Nibbana by Mahasi Sayadaw, published by Buddha Sasana Nuggaha Organisation, Rangoon, Burma.

(end of file)

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP an on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path
thecoombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 28 July 1993]----------TITLE: Wedding
PartyAUTHOR: Bill La FLEUR SOURCE: The Ten Directions, Vol 1, No 2, May 1980. pp. 15 by Bill La FLEUR,of the Zen Center of Los Angelesa flow of chamagneand of monks moving with bowlsand silverware: a pileof shoes at the tresholdas the people inside getmore dense, linquid,more ready to dance;the tall bride's family memberswera flowers and shoesand happ even here wherein all ten directions thereis nothingbut crowd----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymousFTP on COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AUThe document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in level INDEX file][Last updated: 6 August 1993]----------"Beginning Anew".This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues.Therefore, it should b analysed in a mindful way.All copyrights to this document belong to Sister Annabel Laity, Plu FranceEnquiries: The Editor, "Mind Moon Circle", Sydney Zen Centre, 251 Young St.,Annar 2038, Australia. Tel: + 61 2 660
2993----------BEGINNING ANEWSISTER ANN LAITY In our tradition we say that the sound of the bell is the voice of the buddha.The buc doesn't mean anything particularly historical - it doesn't meanShakyamuni Buddha. The buc awakened one". Shakyamuni Buddhatold us that there had been many buddhas before and buddhasafter him and there were also buddhas in the present moment with him. Soplease to be a Buddhist to talk about buddha. It justmeans "awakened mind". Everyone has that a is capable ofwaking up and we say that the sound of the bell, is that aspect of the awakenec wake up. So for that reason we call it a Php Kh, which is theVietnamese pronunciation of th means tool and Php means dharma.It is a dharma tool - one of those things you take with yo aretreat in order to make the retreat possible.In Vietnamese history there are all sorts of mir stories about bells,about people diving into rivers and finding bells in the bottom of the river, digging foundations to make a monastery and finding bells. And peopledreaming about find certain place and then going there andfinding a bell. So the bell is very significant for the V people.Every temple has its own very big bell, hanging up. And when the bell rings outyou c long way round the whole village and it used to be thetradition that everybody would stop wh bell and they would saysomething like "Namo Amitabhaya Buddha". In our tradition when we stop. We use the bell to help usclear our minds. We stop talking and we just enjoy our bre awonderful way to renew yourself. We say that when we hear the bell, a new dawnarrives so up from a good sleep. You feel refreshed and youfeel renewed when you hear the bell. And have theopportunity of allowing the feeling of compassion to arise in you, because thefeeling can be blocked by too much thinking. So if we stop ourthinking, it's easier for compassion to arise.Everybody has compassion. We shouldn't say to anybody, "You don't have anycompa never say about anybody, "She doesn't have anycompassion." It isn't true. Everybody has compassion. Theproblem is they don't know how express it; they don't know how to bring it plenty of blood but you have to cut yourself for the blood to comeout. Compassion is the sar stop thinking we can look with compassion on all that lives. We onlyhave to look on the thin I look with compassion on the rose, therose contains the whole universe. The rose contains thatpollinates the flower, the sunshine, the rain So we only have to look withcompassion on we're already in touch with many things. And I onlyhave to look with compassion on my frie practice centre when I hearthe bell to appreciate their preciousness. How precious it is to ha the practice and to keep them close to us. Obviously if they really don'twant to stay we don' stay but we do our best. There was a monk in the Buddha's sangha who was not keeping th Another monk said, "Lord Buddha, you should call him to you andinstruct him that he should You should correct hisbehaviour." The Buddha said, "If you have a child who has lost one e hasone eye left, wouldn't you do everything to look after that one eye?" And the disciples of said, "Yes, Lord, we would." He said, "It's the same with this disciple who breaks the precep very little self-confidence; he has very little faith; he has very littlecapacity to keep the precep if I call him to me and tell him off, hewill lose what he has. I want to protect him, so that is w sayinganything at the moment." So it's not the intention of the Buddha that we haveto keep stay in the sangha.The Buddha also said, "The Dharma is like the ocean, and the ocean nev body. It always washes the dead body up onto the shore. It'sthe same. Somebody who rea with the practice will quitenaturally be washed up on the shore. They won't be able to stay in ofthe practice. You monks don't have to do anything about it. It happens quitenaturally."So best to keep our sangha intact. Everybody has something valuableto add to the sangha. So going through a very hard time.Sometimes people have suffered so much in their life and the busyand so their busy-ness has meant that their suffering is repressed. They don'trealise it' because they keep their conscious mind so occupied all thetime. And then they begin to me conscious mind no longer has somany things to occupy it and so all the suffering from the pa tomanifest. They begin to touch it. And when they touch it they not only feelsuffering within but they feel suffering all around them too. Sothey can be rather difficult to live with. So we able to help thembe in touch with their suffering. We need above all to be able to listen toth something we say every morning in our sangha. It's an invocation of thename of the Bodhis Avalokitesvara because Avalokitesvara is not only onewho looks but one who listens. The C Am, I think. "Kwan"means to look; "Am" means the sound. So it means to look at the sound the sounds of the world, the sounds of pain.We invoke your name, Avalokitesvara. We aspir practice oflistening In order to help relieve the suffering in the world. We shall sit andlisten w judging and reacting. We shall sit and listen with all oursincerity and open-heartedness. We listen so deeply That we canhear what the other person is saying And also what has been le knowthat just by listening deeply We already relieve a great deal of the sufferingof the other the practice of listening is a very deep one and it is very useful when youare building a sang sangha means to make a community ofpractitioners and to build a sangha really is building tomake a house you have to do it properly. But you don't have to get caught inthe idea of "T house. I want it this way." Quite simply, I'm doingthe work of building a house so that other come and practise in thathouse. Because when we have a beautiful sangha that's living in h awonderful place for people who are overstressed, or overworked or over-anxiousto be able refreshed. It's like a beautiful house they cancome to. So that is really why we build our sar most helpful way to build a practice community is the work of listening andknowing how to e

To know how to listen, we have to know how tostop thinking. The best way for me is to follo to make mybreathing unnatural, not to force my breathing but just to be aware of how itnatu goes, like a circle - breathing in turns into breathing out- I feel the breath in my body and in t find that my thinking isstopped.So when I listen to somebody talk, I meditate while they're ta followmy breath. I really enjoy the feeling of my body but I'm listening with all myattention at time. Because when I enjoy the feeling of my body, I'mreally there. I'm in the present mome body is really here in thehere and now. And the other person talks.The wonderful thing abou Beginning Anew is that you never reply.It helps us not to think, because if you think, "Oh, de reply tothat person in a minute," you may be thinking, "What am I going to say?" Butwhen y have to reply, you don't have to think about what youare going to say. Even if the other pers

"Oh you're a liar, you'rethis, you're that," you don't have to think, "Well, I have to tell this pers not a liar." It's OK. You just listen to them.We need an atmosphere of lightness and calm.
allow the atmosphereto get heavy, if we can help it. For the Beginning Anew you have a sp who invites the bell. This should be arranged maybe by consensus -somebody you feel is re light, that is, not a very heavy person -because that person will influence the whole commun have the belland the way that they invite the bell, the way in which they sit there andfollow th is quite important. And you can have a differentchairperson every time.And so if somebody you please be our chairperson at today'sBeginning Anew session?" and you feel agitated, o toothache, orsomething like that, say, "Sorry, I don't feel very well today. I don't think Ican d very honest, because you know that your own agitation, your ownlack of good health will infl the community. So just say thatand they can find somebody else to do it.In our community together once a week. We make a set time. Ifyou live in a family it's good to do that as well the time flies; itpasses and you can't find it again. So it's important to make a time. Once av recite the precepts and the day before we recite the precepts we doBeginning Anew. Usual in the evening after supper. Somebodyhas chosen a flower and they put it in the centre of th sitaround the flower, and one person sits with the bell. Now that person doesn'thave to say if they don't want to. The way they are is what'simportant, not what they say. It may be just there, just by theirdeep listening, they already do a lot to help. So the person who invites the shouldn't feel, "Oh I have to direct everybody, make everybody go in aparticular direction."
feel you have to do anything like that.And they take the bell, if they want in their hand, and th threetimes. And the sound is an invitation. There's a space for people to breatheat least thr
After the bell, it's open for the community to speak. The person who wishesto speak joins th waits to be acknowledged by the rest of thecommunity who will join their palms in return. Th will stand upand bring the flower before them. It's like saying, "I want to be as fresh as aflow talk because if I talk in the wrong way it will cause somebody tosuffer in my community."Som can't help but cause somebody to suffer. You shouldn't thinkalways "I have to speak in a wa because when you say, "You made mevery angry, when you did something or you said som sufferbut I have to accept it because if I cannot express my anger and I keep itinside me, it health. Every time I see you, I will have thefeeling that you are going to make me angry aga

a wrongperception about you. So I need to clear it up with you. So I have to saysometimes when you told me that the floor wasn't properly swept,I felt very angry because I spent over sweeping the floor." I needto say that to you. Then you will think a little bit about that, "Oh mygoodness, it wasn't very mindful of me to say that." So you will be morecareful in the futu beneficial for us both and the person who hears itwill get more benefit than the person who often.When we started having Beginning Anew in Plum Village about three years ago, weha
The first session of Beginning Anew started about half pastseven and went on until midnight people talked? Two people!Problems had been building up over a long time. And they mad knew they were suffering; we knew they were unhappy and that one of them atleast was ser leaving the community. So we wanted to givethem a chance to express their suffering, why suffering, what had madethem unhappy. But they didn't do it very skilfully.And we learnt les which I would like to pass on to you. Peoplewould say something like, "What I dislike about is that peoplealways talk about the Dharma but underneath they don't really practise at all."T generalisations like "people do this; people do that". Andeverybody listening was thinking, " the person they're talkingabout." And when they talked they were quite angry so a lot of us
"This person's very angry." But in fact, they never said outright,"Oh, when Sister Annabel do makes me very unhappy," because if they'dsaid that, it would be much easier. I would know that, I makethem unhappy. So I would think about it and try and do something about it. But vague sort of statement about "people doing this", I only suspect itmight be me and I don't h motivation to want to do something about it.So I suggest you never make general statement because you're tooafraid to mention somebody's name, when you practice Beginning Anew.
mention that person's name they'll get mad at me so I'd rather justmake it general." But ab seven people in the community will thinkyou're talking about them and they will get a bad fee from that.And if you do talk to somebody you shouldn't say something like, "Your pride,your general attitude towards life makes me very upset." Whensomebody hears something like th where to begin. How can Ipossibly change my attitude towards life? It's too difficult, it's too person's simply left feeling hopeless. We need to help people correct whatthey're doing by specific. We have to say, "On Thursdaymorning, when you did, or when you said such and veryupset." And then you can go on explaining a bit, "Maybe because I hadn't sleptthe nigh because I've seen you do something like that to me oncebefore" You can go on explaining take the general out of itand make it specific.For instance, one time in Beginning Anew, som me, "On Sunday in teameditation when you passed me the biscuits you didn't even look at m sitting there following my breath and I suddenly had a very clear image ofexactly what I look outside - very serious, rather superior,passing the biscuits like that. And I saw myself exactl other personsaw me and I understood, because she had given that specific occasion so it w me. Of course I didn't feel I was hurting her at the time atall; I didn't have any intention at all her, but I did. So I knew inthe future how not to hurt her. And after that our relationship cha Justby mentioning a little thing like that, somehow some energy between us began toflow ag relationship became much better.When we speak we try to do so with a very even voice. If voicegetting agitated or high or louder, that is a sign that we feel agitated aboutwhat we're ta and we should maybe stop and come back to ourbreathing. If we start to cry, we should sto wrong withcrying but we need to come back to our breath and calm down before we go on.T voice is a very good sign to us of how we are when we'respeaking and we should listen to o voice.Before I take the flower and speak, I have to do it at the right time because ifI speak a time, it will have the wrong effect. It's very subtle.The right time and the right place is very s

It's not my conscious mindthat tells me when the right time is; it's something that comes up f myunconscious mind. And so I sit there.Last night we had Beginning Anew with the Vietnam knew there wassomething I had to say. And I thought, "Oh maybe when we start to talk, Iwi it wasn't the right time. I just knew it wasn't the righttime. So I just sat there and followed m and I didn't have any plansfor the future at all. And then there was a big space of silence an sort of emptiness - you feel some sort of emptiness - it's not particularlyyou who's taking the at that time you just get up and you take theflower. And you talk. And you talk to help every you, but tohelp everybody else too. And maybe you fail. Well, it isn't so awful. We allfail fro time so it doesn't matter. And next time you can be better.It's not the end of the world.The m after Beginning Anew you feel lighter, you feel you've learntsomething. You feel maybe a lit but it isn't so serious. To feela little bit hurt is better than somebody having to repress some feelingsabout you for many years . Because when you feel bad about somebody else, youf yourself. You understand? If somebody else feels bad about you,they're feeling bad about Because as soon as we have a bad feelingabout somebody else, we know that we're feel ba we'redoing it for everybody; we're not just doing it for ourselves.We know so well that in our consciousness are buriedall the wholesome seeds,seeds of love and understanding,all the s peace and joy.But because we do not know how to water them and we always allow sorrow them,how can they spring up fresh and green?When we begin Beginning Anew we want to love andunderstanding. So from the deep part of my heart, with all my sincerity, I saysome meaning to somebody in my community I know who needs wateringbecause their flower is a And everybody can do that. Someof the people who are best, the most skilful at watering flo usuallythe youngest people in the community. We know they're inclined to be sincere.When person saying something nice about you, you know that theyprobably mean it. An older per flattery we don't want to doflattery though.Sometimes you want to tell somebody how they'v some unskilfulaction they've done. You may say, "Remember how we were both ordained practice has always been linked? Therefore I want to clearsomething up with you which I fe at the moment. On Thursdaywhen you did such and such I felt very hurt. You're always suc person.You have such a lovely smile. I know that you didn't mean to hurt me but I wantyou want you to know that you did hurt me, deeply, when yousaid such and such."Sometimes we bit irritated with somebody. I think maybe weought to say that too. "I was irritated with you that." It's goodto be able to say that too. Not just deeply hurt, but just irritated. Becausesm irritation can build up into something big and it's best to nip it in thebud, to acknowledge that irritated, and to be able to say to the otherperson, "You irritated me."Sometimes we don't wa to the whole community. For instance, if yoususpect your dharma sister has stolen a lot of m wouldn't want to sayin front of the whole community, "I was very hurt when I discovered you of money." But you would want to say it just to them because youdon't want other people to have to arrange a time to talk tothem just with one other very good dharma friend who's neu thereand keep the atmosphere stable and serene. So there'll just be three of you, infact.Wh problems which are specifically between two people, we usuallyinvite those two people to co third impartial person who looksafter the bell, and we have several sessions. At one session peoplecan talk and the other person just listens the whole session and we bow and goaway session the other person talks. And so on, until it isresolved.And if we know somebody has internal formation, that is a bundleinside, a sort of knot inside, made up of feelings and thoug them tosuffer, but they can't express it, we should be able to encourage that person tospeak get them to speak - and that's very difficult sometimes.Because they can't undo the knot and them to talk. Andsometimes when they begin to talk, it's very difficult to listen to them becau suffer so much and it sort of pours out and it's like a sort of poisoncoming out of a wound, lik out of a wound, and it's not verypleasant. So we have to know ourselves, "How much can I want tooverstretch ourselves. And so that when we hear this coming out, we sit andlisten an long as we can. And when we feel that we've had enough,we can't take any more, we have sorry. I'm very tired.Can we carry on another time please?" And you have to have another it off. I had to do that in Vietnam. I had to listen to somebodyexpress their suffering from fiv in the morning until ten o'clock. Atten o'clock I couldn't take any more. So I had to say, "I'm have tostop. I can't take any more. We'll carry on another day."When some people express a lot of violence comes out too. Whatis important then is the quality of our listening. We sup other bylistening. But we have to know that this is helping this person to expresstheir hurt.

of our listening is what helps. If we don't listen,what will happen is that as they express their it gets resown intheir subconscious because it is not being accepted and they might say, "I f talking to myself." And talking to myself may not be helpful becauseit's getting resown. But receptive and we really sit and listen, thenit's a chance that that suffering can be transforme person. So weshould encourage them.Generally we have four things that we may talk abou Thefirst is you may water flowers, as we talked about. If you see a flower in yourcommunity bit droopy, you can water it.The second thing is you can talk about how you regret having do somethingduring the past week. But it really must be a regret - not just to impresspeople by something like that. That can happen, by the way. Youshould really feel deep regret and if you feel better, you knowthat that was right. You feel relief.And the third thing we need to ex how we've been hurt or how we areirritated and so on Those are usually the three things: w flower,expressing our regret for something we have done and saying how we've been hurt.T difficult. It takes the most humility. It takes morehumility than repenting something that you' think. Because you needto admit that you are still an unenlightened being who gets hurt, ev something very trifling like not getting a smile when you get the biscuitsin the tea meditation.

we allow a fourth thing as well, and that is an explanation to mycommunity of my past exper know what I'm going throughpsychologically in the present moment. That gives my commun tounderstand me better. So that if I look very grumpy, or I'm very short withpeople from time seem to be completely locked up in myself, and Ican talk about my past, then my community That's why you're likethat!" And they won't feel that you've got a personal grudge against th understand the hurt and want to support you and help you.All wrong-doing arises in the mind mind is pure,there is no wrong-doing there.The white flowers today,as always,float freely in the sky.This traditional gatha recognises all the seeds we have in our ownconsciousness, in consciousness. And our own consciousness isonly a part of the collective consciousness. W don't sow seeds ofkilling, stealing and sexual misconduct. So I never break the five precept the seeds of breaking the five precepts are there in all of usbecause they are there in the so are part of the society. So whenwe do Beginning Anew, we're not just doing it for ourselves forour whole society.We have all done things in the past that we regret and Buddhism is som doesn't like guilt. It is just another obstacle to our practice. So itis not useful, really, to feel g about what we've done in the past. Itdoesn't really help anybody. It uses up a lot of energy, guilty, and wecould use that energy in a different way.So that is why we have that wonderful wrong-doing arises in themind." If I'm going to kill somebody or steal something, I have to th first. So the idea arises and then I go out and do it. "When the mind ispure, there is no wron there." Well, I can make my mind pure at anymoment. All I have to do is maybe hear the be my breath, makemy body and mind one. And my mind is pure. So the wrong-doing is not th flowers today, as always, float freely in the sky." I am free. I amfree of concepts of me, my and things like that. And I know thereis only one way to put right what went wrong in the pas way is how Iam in the present moment.In Plum Village we sometimes have Vietnamese war obviously,when they come to a Vietnamese community, it is very difficult for them. Theyreme the war with Vietnam, they killed a lot of Vietnamesepeople and they feel a lot of guilt. So w
"Please, what is done isdone. There is no way you can undo it. There is only one thing you is to begin anew in the present moment." So we say, "Look, we are sendingoff medicine to don't you help us wrap up the parcels,because this medicine may save a child's life. So all y to putright having taken a child's life in the past is to save a child's life now."So we see that t we are now in the present is the most important thing,not what we have done in the past. Be are in the present iswhat will influence our future. And Buddhism has always been very ope thought that in our subconscious mind there is a store of unwholesomeseeds and a store of the important thing is not how manyunwholesome seeds there are but the ratio of wholesom unwholesome.The thing is how we are now, what we do now. The ability to be able to sit an breaths and see that your mind has the capacity to be pure nowand then act out of that purit matters. And we don't need prisonsand things like that if people know how to do that. So w sorryfor something, that means I'm saying I'm sorry because I really want that personnot to l Because when I say I'm sorry I'm meaning I'm going to do thingsin a different way now, do s different. Nobody wants to go back to theVietnam War and kill children any more. It's much send offmedicine, that is what I'm saying sorry is about - I won't do it again."There's a tender to always want to reply to people, to respond. Onegood way not to react when somebody sa rather than say,"Ooh! I didn't say that!" or, "Ooh! I didn't do that!" is to say somethinglike th heart: "Thank you. I have heard what you said and I have madea note of it. So I'm not goin I'm not going to say that you'reright, but I'm not going to say that you are wrong. I will take it andover the week I will think about it. It's very good." So you go away and youthink, "Oh tha partly true. It's not a hundred percent true, butthere is some truth in it." And you see that. B react, you'reinclined to say it's completely right or completely wrong. But, "Thank you. Ihave you said and I have made a note of it," is very open, not as aformality, but because you are the person who has hurt you isn't there at the meeting? - which oftenhappens. It happened Somebody asked the chairperson, "I have beenhurt by somebody who is not here - a memb not here. CanI say so?" And the person inviting the bell said, "Yes. But on certainconditions take complete responsibility for what you say, so that ifany of us goes to that person and say way, Brother So-and-so saidhe was very angry when you did that, that, that," you take respo forthat. Two: you speak with all your awareness and mindfulness as if that personwere here speaking directly to them. And three: you do your bestto go to that person when you have th opportunity and talk it out withthem. But we are very ready to listen to you now, to help you Butit's like a preparation. You are preparing now to be able to go to that personwith a flower them, "You hurt me." Or, "I felt very hurt when yousaid that." It's better to say it that way.So if somebody is breaking too many rules the chairperson invites thebell, and says "I think this against the principles," or if somebodykeeps interrupting, or hasn't taken the flower, "No it's allowed."When people seem to be getting weary, the chairperson may want to say, "Noblec you look a little tired, or uncomfortable, would you like toend this session in about fifteen min and stretch your legs? or have abreath of fresh air?" And at the end of Beginning Anew, we takeeach other's hands so we feel some connection with each other. And some peoplego up each other.From Beginning Anew you learn how to listen. It's a wonderful gift. And you canl anybody anywhere in the world. Sometimes it's the best thing you cando, to understand a p like that, what they've gone through inthe past. It's quite enlightening when you see how a p everybodyaround them suffer, how deeply they suffer themselves. Once you can touch thec they're going through, it makes it much easier to love them. Ifyou can't touch that suffering, difficult. Giving a person a bit ofspace to talk can create the conditions for their Buddha-natu flower.It is also practice in itself, a practice of how to listen deeply, how to behumble. The qu the listening is so important. It is important thatthere is a core group of people in the sangha know how to listen andto speak, who commit to the practice of listening and speaking. I don conflict or friction there is in your sangha, what irritations,annoyances, or anger crops up. Is community as healthy as it could be?Very often the best way to ascertain the health of the s "How amI myself? How am I when I come to my sangha? How do I feel? Do I feel wecoulc

And if we could, then how?"If there is a group who can practice Beginning Anew every mont Board,they become a healthy core, because if the core is healthy, the rest is healthy.If the b circulating properly in the Board then it circulates everywhereIf all those people have their ov Beginning Anew session together, whenthey join the bigger group they may be able to really sangha building is the very basis of our practice. A sangha needs to begrowing all the time.
tree. If the tree doesn't put out newbranches, we know it's not in good health. A sangha nee developing,growing, changing the whole time, never the same one year to the next. And the the enlightened aspect of everyone's mind in the sangha. Andin order to do that you have to communication betweenyourselves so everybody feels they have something to contribute an
to. That way the sangha can grow.I can say without any doubt that my practice has been ab because ofBeginning Anew more than any other thing in my community life. To be able tohe people how I have upset them, to be able to see myself as otherpeople see me from the out helped me to know myself better and tobecome a much happier person, a much easier pers has helpedme tremendously. And so that is why when I go to teach people, I recommend th it's been difficult sometimes to hear about my faults, it'snot always been pleasant, in the end felt lighter. And though Isometimes go to bed after Beginning Anew feeling a little bit upset, wakeup in the morning, I always feel wonderful. I feel, "How wonderful! I have achance to b new person today."It is like the miracle of humility. Humility takes you right back to thebegin back to beginner's mind. You see that you haven't made anyprogress at all. You're right whe beginning. And it'swonderful. You can begin anew. Sister Annabel is the Director of I Plum Village, France ----------end of file

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[Last updated: 5 October 1993]

"Beginning Anew".

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Sister Annabel Laity, Plum Village, Meyrac, Loubes-Bernac, France.
Enquiries: The Editor, "Mind Moon Circle", Sydney Zen Centre, 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney, NSW 2038, Australia. Tel: + 61 2 660 2993

BEGINNING ANEW

SISTER ANNABEL LAITY

In our tradition we say that the sound of the bell is the voice of the buddha. The buddha just doesn't mean anything particularly historical - it doesn't mean Shakyamuni Buddha. The buddha just means "the awakened one". Shakyamuni Buddha told us that there had been many buddhas before and there would be many buddhas after him and there were also buddhas in the present moment with him. So please don't think you have to be a Buddhist to talk about buddha. It just means "awakened mind". Everyone has that aspect of mind which is capable of waking up and we say that the sound of the bell, is that aspect of the awakened mind which can wake up. So for that reason we call it a Php Kh, which is the Vietnamese pronunciation of the Chinese. Kh means tool and Php means dharma. It is a dharma tool - one of those things you take with you when you go on a retreat in order to make the retreat possible.

In Vietnamese history there are all sorts of miraculous stories about bells, about people diving into rivers and finding bells in the bottom of the river, or people digging foundations to make a monastery and finding bells. And people dreaming about finding a bell in a certain place and then going there and finding a bell. So the bell is very significant for the Vietnamese people. Every temple has its own very big bell, hanging up. And when the bell rings out you can hear it for a long way round the whole village and it used to be the tradition that everybody would stop when they heard the bell and they would say something like "Namo Amitabhaya Buddha". In our tradition when we hear the bell, we stop. We use the bell to help us clear our minds. We stop talking and we just enjoy our breathing. It's a wonderful way to renew yourself. We say that when we hear the bell, a new dawn arrives so it's like waking up from a good sleep. You feel refreshed and you feel renewed when you hear the bell. And when you stop, you have the opportunity of allowing the feeling of compassion to arise in you, because the feeling of compassion can be blocked by too much thinking. So if we stop our thinking, it's easier for compassion to arise.

Everybody has compassion. We shouldn't say to anybody, "You don't have any compassion." We should never say about anybody, "She doesn't have any compassion." It isn't true. Everybody has a big store of compassion. The problem is they don't know how express it; they don't know how to bring it out. Everybody has plenty of blood but you have to cut yourself for the blood to come out. Compassion is the same.

If we can stop thinking we can look with compassion on all that lives. We only have to look on the things near us. If I look with compassion on the rose, the rose contains the whole universe. The rose contains the little insect that pollinates the flower, the sunshine, the rain.
So we only have to look with compassion on the rose and we're already in touch with many things. And I only have to look with compassion on my friends in the practice centre when I hear the bell to appreciate their preciousness. How precious it is to have friends in the practice and to keep them close to us. Obviously if they really don't want to stay we don't force them to stay but we do our best.

There was a monk in the Buddha's sangha who was not keeping the precepts. Another monk said, "Lord Buddha, you should call him to you and instruct him that he should keep the precepts. You should correct his behaviour."

The Buddha said, "If you have a child who has lost one eye and only has one eye left, wouldn't you do everything to look after that one eye?"

And the disciples of the Buddha said, "Yes, Lord, we would."

He said, "It's the same with this disciple who breaks the precepts. He has very little self-confidence; he has very little faith; he has very little capacity to keep the precepts. But if I call him to me and tell him off, he will lose what he has. I want to protect him, so that is why I'm not saying anything at the moment." So it's not the intention of the Buddha that we have to keep the precepts to stay in the sangha.

The Buddha also said, "The Dharma is like the ocean, and the ocean never receives a dead body. It always washes the dead body up onto the shore. It's the same. Somebody who really doesn't get on with the practice will quite naturally be washed up on the shore. They won't be able to stay in the ocean of the practice. You monks don't have to do anything about it. It happens quite naturally."

So we do our best to keep our sangha intact. Everybody has something valuable to add to the sangha. Sometimes people are going through a very hard time. Sometimes people have suffered so much in their life and they've been very busy and so their busy-ness has meant that their suffering is repressed. They don't realise it's there because they keep their conscious mind so occupied all the time. And then they begin to meditate and the conscious mind no longer has so many things to occupy it and so all the suffering from the past begins to manifest. They begin to touch it. And when they touch it they not only feel suffering within themselves but they feel suffering all around them too. So they can be rather difficult to live with. So we need to be able to help them be in touch with their suffering. We need above all to be able to listen to them.

This is something we say every morning in our sangha. It's an invocation of the name of the Bodhisattva, Avalokitesvara because Avalokitesvara is not only one who looks but one who listens. The Chinese word is Kwan Am, I think. "Kwan" means to look; "Am" means the sound. So it means to look at the sounds, to be aware of the sounds of the world, the sounds of pain.

We invoke your name, Avalokitesvara. We aspire to learn your practice of listening In order to help relieve the suffering in the world. We shall sit and listen without judging and reacting. We shall sit and listen with all our sincerity and open-heartedness. We shall sit and listen so deeply That we can hear what the other person is saying And also what has been left unsaid. We know that just by listening deeply We already relieve a great deal of the suffering of the other person.

So the practice of listening is a very deep one and it is very useful when you are building a sangha. To build a sangha means to make a community of practitioners and to build a sangha really is building work. If you want to make a house you have to do it properly. But you don't have to get caught in the idea of "This is my house. I want it this way." Quite simply, I'm doing the work of building a house so that other people can come and practise in that house. Because when we have a beautiful sangha that's living in harmony, it's a wonderful place for people who are overstressed, or overworked or over-anxious to be able to come and feel refreshed. It's like a beautiful house they can come to. So that is really why we build our sangha.

The most helpful way to build a practice community is the work of listening and knowing how to express yourself. To know how to listen, we have to know how to stop thinking. The best way for me is to follow my breath, not to make my breathing unnatural, not to force my breathing but just to be aware of how it naturally comes and goes, like a circle - breathing in turns into breathing out - I feel the breath in my body and in that way I find that my thinking is stopped.

So when I listen to somebody talk, I meditate while they're talking. I follow my breath. I really enjoy the feeling of my body but I'm listening with all my attention at the same time. Because when I enjoy the feeling of my body, I'm really there. I'm in the present moment because my body is really here in the here and now. And the other person talks.

The wonderful thing about a session of Beginning Anew is that you never reply. It helps us not to think, because if you think, "Oh, dear, I have to reply to that person in a minute," you may be thinking, "What am I going to say?" But when you know you don't have to reply, you don't have to think about what you are going to say. Even if the other person is saying, "Oh you're a liar, you're this, you're that," you don't have to think, "Well, I have to tell this person I'm not a liar." It's OK. You just listen to them.

We need an atmosphere of lightness and calm. We shouldn't allow the atmosphere to get heavy, if we can help it. For the Beginning Anew you have a special chairperson who invites the bell. This should be arranged maybe by consensus - somebody you feel is really stable and light, that is, not a very heavy person - because that person will influence the whole community. And they have the bell and the way that they invite the bell, the way in which they sit there and follow their breath, is quite important. And you can have a different chairperson every time.

And so if somebody asks you, "Will you please be our chairperson at today's Beginning Anew session?" and you feel agitated, or you have a toothache, or something like that, say, "Sorry, I don't feel very well today. I don't think I can do it." Be very honest, because you know that your own agitation, your own lack of good health will influence the rest of the community. So just say that and they can find somebody else to do it.

In our community we try to come together once a week. We make a set time. If you live in a family it's good to do that as well, otherwise the time flies; it passes and you can't find it again. So it's important to make a time. Once a week we recite the precepts and the day before we recite the precepts we do Beginning Anew. Usually we come together in the evening after supper. Somebody has chosen a flower and they put it in the centre of the circle and we sit around the flower, and one person sits with the bell. Now that person doesn't have to say anything really if they don't want to. The way they are is what's important, not what they say. It may be just by sitting there, just by their deep listening, they already do a lot to help. So the person who invites the bell shouldn't feel, "Oh I have to direct everybody, make everybody go in a particular direction." You shouldn't feel you have to do anything like that. And they take the bell, if they want in their hand, and they invite it three times. And the sound is an invitation. There's a space for people to breathe at least three times.

After the bell, it's open for the community to speak. The person who wishes to speak joins their palms and waits to be acknowledged by the rest of the community who will join their palms in return. Then that person will stand up and bring the flower before them. It's like saying, "I want to be as fresh as a flower when I talk because if I talk in the wrong way it will cause somebody to suffer in my community."

Sometimes you can't help but cause somebody to suffer. You shouldn't think always "I have to speak in a way that won't, because when you say, "You made me very angry, when you did something or you said something," maybe you will suffer but I have to accept it because if I cannot express my anger and I keep it inside me, it will bring ill health. Every time I see you, I will have the feeling that you are going to make me angry again and so I get a wrong perception about you. So I need to clear it up with you. So I have to say sometimes, "On Thursday, when you told me that the floor wasn't properly swept, I felt very angry because I spent over three hours sweeping the floor." I need to say that to you. Then you will think a little bit about that, "Oh my goodness, it wasn't very mindful of me to say that." So you will be more careful in the future. "It's beneficial for us both and the person who hears it will get more benefit than the person who says it, very often.

When we started having Beginning Anew in Plum Village about three years ago, we had some problems. The first session of Beginning Anew started about half past seven and went on until midnight. And how many people talked? Two people! Problems had been building up over a long time. And they made some mistakes. We knew they were suffering; we knew they were unhappy and that one of them at least was seriously considering leaving the community. So we wanted to give them a chance to express their suffering, why they were suffering, what had made them unhappy. But they didn't do it very skilfully.

And we learnt lessons from that which I would like to pass on to you. People would say something like, "What I dislike about this community is that people always talk about the Dharma but underneath they don't really practise at all." They talked in generalisations like "people do this; people do that". And everybody listening was thinking, "Oh, I must be the person they're talking about." And when they talked they were quite angry so a lot of us had a feeling, "This person's very angry." But in fact, they never said outright, "Oh, when Sister Annabel does this it makes me very unhappy," because if they'd said that, it would be much easier. I would know that when I did that, I make them unhappy. So I would think about it and try and do something about it. But if I have a vague sort of statement about "people doing this", I only suspect it might be me and I don't have enough motivation to want to do something about it.

So I suggest you never make general statements about people because you're too afraid to mention somebody's name, when you practice Beginning Anew. Don't think, "If I mention that person's name they'll get mad at me so I'd rather just make it general." But about six or seven people in the community will think you're talking about them and they will get a bad feeling about you from that. And if you do talk to somebody you shouldn't say something like, "Your pride, your attitude, your general attitude towards life makes me very upset." When somebody hears something like that they don't know where to begin. How can I possibly change my attitude towards life? It's too difficult, it's too much. The person's simply left feeling hopeless. We need to help people correct what they're doing by being absolutely specific. We have to say, "On Thursday morning, when you did, or when you said such and such a thing, I was very upset." And then you can go on explaining a bit, "Maybe because I hadn't slept the night before. Maybe because I've seen you do something like that to me once before" You can go on explaining after that. But take the general out of it and make it specific.

For instance, one time in Beginning Anew, somebody said to me, "On Sunday in tea meditation when you passed me the biscuits you didn't even look at me." I was just sitting there following my breath and I suddenly had a very clear image of exactly what I looked like from the outside - very serious, rather superior, passing the biscuits like that. And I saw myself exactly as that other person saw me and I understood, because she had given that specific occasion so it was very helpful to me. Of course I didn't feel I was hurting her at the time at all; I didn't have any intention at all to hurt her, but I did. So I knew in the future how not to hurt her. And after that our relationship changed. Just by mentioning a little thing like that, somehow some energy between us began to flow again and our relationship became much better.

When we speak we try to do so with a very even voice. If we feel our voice getting agitated or high or louder, that is a sign that we feel agitated about what we're talking about and we should maybe stop and come back to our breathing. If we start to cry, we should stop. There's nothing wrong with crying but we need to come back to our breath and calm down before we go on. The sound of our own voice is a very good sign to us of how we are when we're speaking and we should listen to our own voice.

Before I take the flower and speak, I have to do it at the right time because if I speak at the wrong time, it will have the wrong effect. It's very subtle. The right time and the right place is very subtle. It's not my conscious mind that tells me when the right time is; it's something that comes up from my unconscious mind. And so I sit there.

Last night we had Beginning Anew with the Vietnamese people and I knew there was something I had to say. And I thought, "Oh maybe when we start to talk, I will." But somehow, it wasn't the right time. I just knew it wasn't the right time. So I just sat there and followed my breath and I didn't have any plans for the future at all. And then there was a big space of silence and somehow some sort of emptiness - you feel some sort of emptiness - it's not particularly you who's taking the flower - and at that time you just get up and you take the flower. And you talk. And you talk to help everybody - to help you, but to help everybody else too. And maybe you fail. Well, it isn't so awful. We all fail from time to time so it doesn't matter. And next time you can be better. It's not the end of the world.

The main thing is after Beginning Anew you feel lighter, you feel you've learnt something. You feel maybe a little bit hurt, but it isn't so serious. To feel a little bit hurt is better than somebody having to repress some bad feelings about you for many years . Because when you feel bad about somebody else, you feel bad about yourself. You understand? If somebody else feels bad about you, they're feeling bad about themselves. Because as soon as we have a bad feeling about somebody else, we know that we're feel bad about ourselves. So we're doing it for everybody; we're not just doing it for ourselves.

> We know so well that in our consciousness are buried > all the wholesome seeds, > seeds of love and understanding,
> all the seeds of peace and joy.
> But because we do not know how to water them > and we always allow sorrow to overwhelm them, > how can they spring up fresh and green?

When we begin Beginning Anew we want to water those seeds of love and understanding. So from the deep part of my heart, with all my sincerity, I say something with a meaning to somebody in my community I know who needs watering because their flower is a little bit droopy. And everybody can do that. Some of the people who are best, the most skilful at watering flowers, are usually the youngest people in the community. We know they're inclined to be sincere. When you hear a young person saying something nice about you, you know that they probably mean it. An older person gets better at flattery we don't want to do flattery though.

Sometimes you want to tell somebody how they've hurt you by some unskilful action they've done. You may say, "Remember how we were both ordained together and how our practice has always been linked? Therefore I want to clear something up with you which I feel is bothering me at the moment. On Thursday when you did such and such I felt very hurt. You're always such a sweet person. You have such a lovely smile. I know that you didn't mean to hurt me but I want you to know, I really want you to know that you did hurt me, deeply, when you said such and such."

Sometimes we're just a little bit irritated with somebody. I think maybe we ought to say that too. "I was irritated with you when you did that." It's good to be able to say that too. Not just deeply hurt, but just irritated. Because small irritation can build up into something big and it's best to nip it in the bud, to acknowledge that I am irritated, and to be able to say to the other person, "You irritated me."

Sometimes we don't want to say it to the whole community. For instance, if you suspect your dharma sister has stolen a lot of money, you wouldn't want to say in front of the whole community, "I was very hurt when I discovered you had stolen a lot of money." But you would want to say it just to them because you don't want other people to know. And so you have to arrange a time to talk to them just with one other very good dharma friend who's neutral and can sit there and keep the atmosphere stable and serene. So there'll just be three of you, in fact.

When we have problems which are specifically between two people, we usually invite those two people to come together with a third impartial person who looks after the bell, and we have several sessions. At one session one of the people can talk and the other person just listens the whole session and we bow and go away. And in the next session the other person talks. And so on, until it is resolved.

And if we know somebody has what we call an internal formation, that is a bundle inside, a sort of knot inside, made up of feelings and thoughts, causing them to suffer, but they can't express it, we should be able to encourage that person to speak - somehow to get them to speak

- and that's very difficult sometimes. Because they can't undo the knot and we want to help them to talk. And sometimes when they begin to talk, it's very difficult to listen to them because they suffer so much and it sort of pours out and it's like a sort of poison coming out of a wound, like pus coming out of a wound, and it's not very pleasant.

So we have to know ourselves, "How much can I take?" We don't want to overstretch ourselves. And so that when we hear this coming out, we sit and listen and breathe as long as we can. And when we feel that we've had enough, we can't take any more, we have to bow and say, "I'm sorry. I'm very tired. Can we carry on another time please?" And you have to have another session to finish it off. I had to do that in Vietnam. I had to listen to somebody express their suffering from five o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock. At ten o'clock I couldn't take any more. So I had to say, "I'm sorry, I have to stop. I can't take any more. We'll carry on another day."

When some people express their suffering a lot of violence comes out too. What is important then is the quality of our listening. We support each other by listening. But we have to know that this is helping this person to express their hurt. The quality of our listening is what helps. If we don't listen, what will happen is that as they express their suffering, it gets resown in their subconscious because it is not being accepted and they might say, "I feel like I'm talking to myself." And talking to myself may not be helpful because it's getting resown. But if we are receptive and we really sit and listen, then it's a chance that that suffering can be transformed for that person. So we should encourage them.

Generally we have four things that we may talk about in Beginning Anew. The first is you may water flowers, as we talked about. If you see a flower in your community is a little bit droopy, you can water it.

The second thing is you can talk about how you regret having done something during the past week. But it really must be a regret - not just to impress people by repenting or something like that. That can happen, by the way. You should really feel deep regret and if when you say it you feel better, you know that that was right. You feel relief.

And the third thing we need to express is how we've been hurt or how we are irritated and so on Those are usually the three things: watering the flower, expressing our regret for something we have done and saying how we've been hurt. The third is the most difficult. It takes the most humility. It takes more humility than repenting something that you've done, I think. Because you need to admit that you are still an unenlightened being who gets hurt, even if it's about something very trifling like not getting a smile when you get the biscuits in the tea meditation.

Sometimes we allow a fourth thing as well, and that is an explanation to my community of my past experiences so they know what I'm going through psychologically in the present moment. That gives my community a chance to understand me better. So that if I look very grumpy, or I'm very short with people from time to time or I seem to be completely locked up in myself, and I can talk about my past, then my community says, "Oh yes! That's why you're like that!" And they won't feel that you've got a personal grudge against them. They'll understand the hurt and want to support you and help you.

> All wrong-doing arises in the mind.
> When the mind is pure,
> there is no wrong-doing there.
> The white flowers today,
> as always,
> float freely in the sky.

This traditional gatha recognises all the seeds we have in our own consciousness, in the collective consciousness. And our own consciousness is only a part of the collective consciousness. We may say, "I don't sow seeds of killing, stealing and sexual misconduct. So I never break the five precepts." But in fact the seeds of breaking the five precepts are there in all of us because they are there in the society. And we are part of the society. So when we do Beginning Anew, we're not just doing it for ourselves. We're doing it for our whole society.

We have all done things in the past that we regret and Buddhism is something which doesn't like guilt. It is just another obstacle to our practice. So it is not useful, really, to feel guilty about what we've done in the past. It doesn't really help anybody. It uses up a lot of energy, feeling guilty, and we could use that energy in a different way.

So that is why we have that wonderful gatha. "All wrong-doing arises in the mind." If I'm going to kill somebody or steal something, I have to think about it first. So the idea arises and then I go out and do it. "When the mind is pure, there is no wrong-doing there." Well, I can make my mind pure at any moment. All I have to do is maybe hear the bell, sit and follow my breath, make my body and mind one. And my mind is pure. So the wrong-doing is not there. "The white flowers today, as always, float freely in the sky." I am free. I am free of concepts of me, my wrong-doing and things like that. And I know there is only one way to put right what went wrong in the past. And that way is how I am in the present moment.

In Plum Village we sometimes have Vietnamese war veterans coming, and obviously, when they come to a Vietnamese community, it is very difficult for them. They remember how, during the war with Vietnam, they killed a lot of Vietnamese people and they feel a lot of guilt. So we tell them, "Please, what is done is done. There is no way you can undo it. There is only one thing you can do and that is to begin anew in the present moment." So we say, "Look, we are sending off medicine to Vietnam today. Why don't you help us wrap up the parcels, because this medicine may save a child's life. So all you can do now to put right having taken a child's life in the past is to save a child's life now."
So we see that the way we are now in the present is the most important thing, not what we have done in the past. Because the way we are in the present is what will influence our future. And Buddhism has always been very open about this, the thought that in our subconscious mind there is a store of unwholesome seeds and a store of wholesome seeds and the important thing is not how many unwholesome seeds there are but the ratio of wholesome to unwholesome.

The thing is how we are now, what we do now. The ability to be able to sit and to take in a few breaths and see that your mind has the capacity to be pure now and then act out of that purity is all that matters. And we don't need prisons and things like that if people know how to do that. So when we say we are sorry for something, that means I'm saying I'm sorry because I really want that person not to be hurt. Because when I say I'm sorry I'm meaning I'm going to do things in a different way now, do something different. Nobody wants to go back to the Vietnam War and kill children any more. It's much more happy to send off medicine, that is what I'm saying sorry is about - I won't do it again."

There's a tendency at first to always want to reply to people, to respond. One good way not to react when somebody says something to you, rather than say, "Ooh! I didn't say that!" or, "Ooh! I didn't do that!" is to say something like this in our heart: "Thank you. I have heard what you said and I have made a note of it. So I'm not going to react now. I'm not going to say that you're right, but I'm not going to say that you are wrong. I will take it away and over the week I will think about it. It's very good." So you go away and you think, "Oh that person is partly true. It's not a hundred percent true, but there is some truth in it." And you see that. But if you react, you're inclined to say it's completely right or completely wrong. But, "Thank you. I have heard what you said and I have made a note of it," is very open, not as a formality, but because you are open.

What if the person who has hurt you isn't there at the meeting? - which often happens. It happened last night. Somebody asked the chairperson, "I have been hurt by somebody who is not here - a member of our sangha who is not here. Can I say so?" And the person inviting the bell said, "Yes. But on certain conditions. One: you take complete responsibility for what you say, so that if any of us goes to that person and says, "Oh, by the way, Brother So-and-so said he was very angry when you did that, that, that," you take responsibility for that. Two: you speak with all your awareness and mindfulness as if that person were here and you were speaking directly to them. And three: you do your best to go to that person when you have the next opportunity and talk it out with them. But we are very ready to listen to you now, to help you feel better. But it's like a preparation. You are preparing now to be able to go to that person with a flower and say to them, "You hurt me." Or, "I felt very hurt when you said that." It's better to say it that way.

Sometimes if somebody is breaking too many rules the chairperson invites the bell, and says "I think this is going against the principles," or if somebody keeps interrupting, or hasn't taken the flower, "No it's not allowed."

When people seem to be getting weary, the chairperson may want to say, "Noble community, some of you look a little tired, or uncomfortable, would you like to end this session in about fifteen minutes or go and stretch your legs? or have a breath of fresh air?" And at the end of Beginning Anew, we all bow and take each other's hands so we feel some connection with each other. And some people go up and smile or hug each other.

From Beginning Anew you learn how to listen. It's a wonderful gift. And you can listen to anybody anywhere in the world. Sometimes it's the best thing you can do, to understand a person, why they're like that, what they've gone through in the past. It's quite enlightening when you see how a person who makes everybody around them suffer, how deeply they suffer themselves. Once you can touch the deep suffering they're going through, it makes it much easier to love them. If you can't touch that suffering, it's very difficult. Giving a person a bit of space to talk can create the conditions for their Buddha-nature to flower.

It is also practice in itself, a practice of how to listen deeply, how to be humble. The quality of the listening is so important. It is important that there is a core group of people in the sangha who really know how to listen and to speak, who commit to the practice of listening and speaking. I don't know how much conflict or friction there is in your sangha, what irritations, annoyances, or anger crops up. Is your community as healthy as it could be? Very often the best way to ascertain the health of the sangha is to ask, "How am I myself? How am I when I come to my sangha? How do I feel? Do I feel we could make things better? And if we could, then how?"

If there is a group who can practice Beginning Anew every month, like the Board, they become a healthy core, because if the core is healthy, the rest is healthy. If the blood is circulating properly in the Board then it circulates everywhere. If all those people have their own regular Beginning Anew session together, when they join the bigger group they may be able to really help.

Because sangha building is the very basis of our practice. A sangha needs to be growing all the time. It's like a tree. If the tree doesn't put out new branches, we know it's not in good health. A sangha needs to be developing, growing, changing the whole time, never the same one year to the next. And the best way is to use the enlightened aspect of everyone's mind in the sangha. And in order to do that you have to have a very good communication between yourselves so everybody feels they have something to contribute and they can be listened to. That way the sangha can grow.

I can say without any doubt that my practice has been able to develop because of Beginning Anew more than any other thing in my community life. To be able to hear from other people how I have upset them, to be able to see myself as other people see me from the outside has really helped me to know myself better and to become a much happier person, a much easier person to live with. It has helped me tremendously. And so that is why when I go to teach people, I recommend the practice. Although it's been difficult sometimes to hear about my faults, it's not always been pleasant, in the end I've always felt lighter. And though I sometimes go to bed after Beginning Anew feeling a little bit upset, when I wake up in the morning, I always feel wonderful. I feel, "How wonderful! I have a chance to begin to be a new person today."

It is like the miracle of humility. Humility takes you right back to the beginning, right back to beginner's mind. You see that you haven't made any progress at all. You're right where you were in the beginning. And it's wonderful. You can begin anew.

[Sister Annabel is the Director of Practice at Plum Village, France]

---

end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP ar
on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path
thecoombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 30 July 1993]----------This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues.Therefore, it should be read, quoted a mindful way.UNDERSTANDING THE SIGNIFICANCE OF A BUDDHIST SHRINEby Lama C from the CLEAR MIND QUARTERLY NEWSLETTER No 6,Nov 1990-Jan 1991]Copyright 19 Sakya Losal Choe Dzong, CanberraIt is our human nature to keep precious things in a safe havethem. We can tell ourselves what are the most important objects we own byexamining them. For a practising Buddhist, an image or adrawing of the Buddha and other Buddhist sy objects whichenhance his faith and remembrance of the teachings. The time and effortrequ shrine clean and replenished with flowers and otherofferings is considered a skilful activity to mind in the spiritualpractices. It will be more than interesting if we can realize the reason wh and keep our things around the house reflect our state of minds. Itappears that things can meanings as much as our minds can project uponthem. We are not going to tell our children are not real andhave no significance. Your 15 year old Holden may seem unreal when you s sports car. When you walk into a Buddhist shrine, you can tellthat your heart-felt devotion or expressed through your bodylanguage. Just as all objects have some kind of power or influ the serene Buddha image and nicely arranged flowers and aromatic incensecause our mind ourselves in the deep meditativeconcentration. The positive impact of seeing a Buddha ima cannotbe underestimated. The Buddha images are purposely consecrated and blessed tora power and blessings so that whoever happen to see themexperiences the positive feeling th the statue. As long asour minds are dependent upon sensory objects, it is important to have objects conducive to our minds. A Buddhist would find it inspiringand motivating to see a Bu which helps him to remember the qualitiesof a Buddha and his teachings. He or she shows down, offerflowers and light a candle or two before taking a seat to meditate. Bowing downp and cultivates humility. One cannot meditate properly if onecannot let go off such negativitie enables us to remind ourselvesto surrender all the negativities in order to feel peace, sereni tranquility,freedom and light. Keeping the shrine clean represents the sanctification ofour sp and acknowledges the purity of an enlightened being. InTibetan Buddhist shrines, many wa arranged on the altar tocultivate its manyfold qualities, fluidity, continuity, universality and pu our practice and faith. Flowers, candles, fruits and incense are brought asofferings to the Bu give us an opportunity to practise generosityand test our understanding of the Law of Karma to attend asession, rearrange the offerings on the altar, clean the water bowls and fillthem w water [start from left to right], remove withered flowers andold fruits and light a candle befor seat. You will be surprized withthe difference it makes to your meditation. While you are doi canpray your wishful thoughts in the following manner: Water: May I and otherscultivate pur faith in our spiritual practices! Flower: May myheart blossom with the gift of love and compa can share it toothers and grace them with happiness! Incense: May all the negative vibration to my selfishness, ignorance, greed and hatred be purified bythe aroma of the practice of m

May the light of understanding,faith, awareness and wisdom illuminate the darkness of confu andall defilements! Perfume: May the aroma of unshakable faith and confidence havethe ab anybody who come in contact with me! Fruit: May I be ableto satisfy the needs of sentient be sustaining the mind with the abundantfood of meditation and wisdom! Now, you can practic to thecentre next time or visit a temple, or you can perhaps rearrange the Buddhaimage in y enrich the spiritual vibration around your house.----------end of file

The Very Brief Stages of the Path by Todd Fenner Presented to America On-Line 12/8/95 - 12/30/95
Slightly Edited

Subj.: LamRim I
Date: 95-12-08 11:09:12 EST
From: Jamyang

First a little background: Literature on the Stages of the Path abound in Buddhism. It might b Shakyamuni's formula of hearing, reflecting, and meditation represents such an outline as w of discipline, meditation, and wisdom. the former are stages we should take regarding any te first we hear, read etc. Then we examine it with reason and experience. Shakyamuni said we should not simply take his teachings out o rather test them as we would test the purchase of gold. Finally, we should meditate on them is samadhi. What this means is that after generating a particular mind from hearing and refle this an integral part of us through the power of concentration. For instance, we hear about co attended many teachings on it. Then we reflect and mentally go through all the different reasonings such as 'all beings were once our mothers' and/or the 'exchange of self and othe dawns in us i.e. when we have generated the mind of compassion, we continually cultivate t compassion is with us always, or at least more e often than not. We do the same with refuge wisdom etc. There are varying degrees of concentration. But this is the general idea.

The latter formula is more broadly oriented, saying in essence, that without discipline, the co meditation/concentration won't arise and that w/o concentration insight won't develop. Here, insight is not intellectual speculation but realization. However, if you examine will see that even intellectual speculation demands some degree of mental focus and that as isn't so undisciplined that it can't do anything but flit from sense object to sense object, pass passion. The Theravada master, Buddhaghosa outlines his Path of Purification along this la elements of the two sets of three mentioned above are assumed to be functioning in all path though they may not be mentioned explicitly they are there. Another outline taught by Shaky outline of the 37 wings of enlightenment. These are the 4 foundations of mindfulness, the 4 r bases of accomplishment, the 5 faculties, the 5 powers, the 7 limbs and the 8 fold path. Sha these shortly before his passing when asked to give a final teaching on the path.

In addition, the Prajnaparamita speaks of the stages of a bodhisattva. Asanga's massive Yo sections on the paths of both those seeking individual liberation and bodhisattvas. The point outlines of stages of the path appear throughout the history of Buddhism.

Subj.: LamRim ii
Date: 95-12-10 01:02:26 EST
From: Jamyang

The lineage:
The lineage of the Lam Rim teachings I am going to post about comes largely from Atisha (9 born in Bengal and quite early showed signs of being a prodigy. By the age of 21 it is said th many teachings including logic, received many empowerments and had visions of Hevajra a studied with Avadhutipa, a direct disciple of Naropa, for 7 years. After that period he decided monk at the age of 28. He traveled and studied extensively and spent a good deal of time in Indonesia. He became very renowned.

Eventually a King in Tibet, Jangchub Od invited him to come to Tibet in hopes of restoring m the monks of Tibet. Atisha did so, and in so doing founded the Kadam lineage of Tibetan Bu influenced and is respected by all the lineages of Tibet. The work 'Lamp for the Path to Enlig was written in order to answer some questions by the King became the basis for the Lam Ri
the key features of this tradition are

* That there is one final vehicle
* That meditation is necessary for wisdom
* That both wisdom and method are critical for success
* That moral discipline, i.e. any of the 7 pratimoksa vows established the basis for the Bodhi
* That the so-called lower trainings, rather than being replaced by the higher ones were the higher ones and training in the Mahayana and Vajrayana required resting on a strong found

He delineated 3 classes of persons according to capacity and motivation.

* The initial motivation consisted of those who wished to improve their lot in future lives
* Those of middling motivation sought not mere improvement but actual liberation from sams
* Those of advanced motivation sought to liberate all other sentient beings as well and for th pursue the goal of Buddhahood.

This Lam Rim lineage passed into the Kagyu lineage via Gampopa(1079-1153) who wedde notably the vast lineage of Asanga and the profound lineage of Nagarjuna with the blessing Milarepa. It is this flowing together that became the Dakpo Kagyu and its offshoots including and Dukpa Kagyu. Lama Tsongkhapa (1357-1419), fused together many teachings of the lin Kagyu, and Sakya plus a close lineage received directly from Manjusri. He received the tran Rim from the Nyingma teacher Khenchen Namkha Gyaltsen.

Tsongkhapa wrote extensively on the Lam Rim including his great, middling and small expos he wrote the sNgag rim chen mo, his extensive treatment of the stages of the Vajrayana pat

Subj.: LamRim iv
Date: 95-12-10 14:42:23 EST
From: Jamyang

What will and what will not be taught-

My intent is to present the teachings on karma, discipline (for lay people), the nature of sams impermanence, the preciousness of human rebirth, to cover the first two motivations, then b first five perfections for the last motivation. the topic of wisdom will only briefly be discussed in part discussed in the previous section on view.

Of the three motivations, the initial motivation comes from the desire to improve ones lot in a
This can mean a better human life or a life among the devas in a heaven of which there are concerned only with this life have been classically felt to not be included among those with c motivation. Classically also, other religions which teach virtue and various acts in order to be heaven are considered as belonging to this class. It may be argued that by way of motivation there may be in other belonging to the higher motivations and that such persons may in fact be sravakas, pratyeka
This appears to be so certainly for bodhisattvas and some texts speak of the possibility of ar pratyekas achieving their final goal while outwardly appearing to be a practitioner of other dharmas. However, this is beyond the presentation. It is also beyond the scope to discuss humanists who practice virtue and who dharmic techniques but who deny future lives and see buddhahood as essentially a metaph peaceful one life.

Karma

The basic teaching in the initial motivation is about karma. Karma as a word means action b any action. It has the connotation of intent. So it can be said that karma is willed action. How primarily applies to beings who are not buddhas it is willed action tainted by the defilements.
can take place via body speech or mind. The will in willed action can be extremely subtle, so is difficult to notice unless one has practiced mindfulness to an advanced degree. Likewise t mainly the three: delusion, attachment and aversion can be subtle in the sense that they are appearant to the unmindful. To the extremely mindful they are as noticeable as a hair in the unmindful as noticeable as a hair in the palm of a callused hand.

Because intent is involved, we have free choice. But once karma ripens we must experience result of karma is not technically considered karma although the word 'karma' in ordinary usa result. Buddhism is not fatalistic then. There was a school of thought in India called the Ajivil completely deterministic. But this is not a tenet of Buddhism. When something happens to o result of karma, however one still has the ability to respond and with that ability creates a ca future benefit or harm. Admittedly, because of the habit to let ourselves be carried away we course of action that has negative results. The rules of virtue or discipline are intended to co habit.

When we act, we create a cause that remains a potential until conditions for the ripening of t arise. When it does, the result of karma occurs. The result may occur quickly or ages from th have a big result or a little result depending on the conditions. For instance, a seed of a plan the seed of that plant but conditions for growing may be non-existent, existent but poor etc.
that karma for winning the lotto will ripen without buying a lotto ticket.

It is said that there are five factors that should be present for a karmic action to be complete and be assured of ripening. These are:

1. Tainted by the defilements
2. Intent
3. An object on which the intent is focused
4. Carrying out the intent on the object
5. A feeling of being happy about carrying out the intent.

an example: attachment to riches, an unguarded diamond, intent to take the diamond, taking the diamond and joy once it is in your pocket. this is the karma involving stealing. and it will have an effect.

Subj.: LamRim v
Date: 95-12-12 23:08:37 EST
From: Jamyang

Along the foregoing line of thought, Drikungpa Jigten Sumgon argued with regard to vows, it that because one did not take the upasaka vows such as no killing, stealing, sexual miscond intoxicants that did not make it ok to do such things. If that were the case, then it would be b take any vows because then one could do anything with impunity. Vows, he said, are meant we take a vow we set up a dike if you will that inhibits us at the right times and so protect us. The full considered as really a more tight and better dike against non-virtue than the upasaka vows.

a bunch of rules.

When Shakyamuni first taught, he ordained by just saying 'come with me'. The full vinaya de incidents occurred and Shakyamuni had to guide persons along a better way. Similarly, the protect against the loss of bodhicitta, the vajrayana vows against the degeneration of one's blessings.

Karma is simple to explain in isolation but in actuality it gets complex because we are alway causes. It can be mixed and usually is. An example given by the former Zong Rinpoche was generous person being reborn as an American pet; a life of riley, but an animal nonetheless

In accumulating wholesome karma and minimizing the unwholesome one has to be very car
It is for this reason that some say the four restraints among the 37 wings to Bodhi which dea accumulating virtue and minimizing and ridding non-virtue are placed after the four foundatio mindfulness. With the practice of mindfulness one can recognize the wholesome and the un accordingly. The lists given in various abhidharma treatises of mental states are used in pra such states within one so that one can act accordingly. They are not meant as an excercise tape!

Having said that, the question may arise: 'Is there a method for ridding causes already accu latent?' The permanent solution is liberation and Buddhahood. until then however, and as a on the path one applies the four antidotes.

1. Confession or recognition of the problem
2. Regret, sincere please!
3. Doing something virtuous such as taking refuge, renewing vows etc.
4. Wish not to do the trouble causing act again

These four act in concert to allay the full result and burn the seed or create unfavorable con ripening. a birth in hell may only become a nightmare for instance. Specific actions also inclu while reciting the confession sutra, a practice of Marpa as well as a Gelug ngon dro practice and others as well, included in Vajrayana. However doing these without the mind being bas antidotes won't have much power so the four antidotes are key.

This concludes the brief account of the teaching for one with initial motivation.

Subj.: LamRim vi
Date: 95-12-14 00:50:19 EST
From: Jamyang

Having learned about karma one should examine its implications. One's behavior affects on speech and one's thought. For this reason, discipline and mindfulness are critical practices.
leads to long life, not stealing to not being ripped off, generosity to wealth, patience to beaut concentration meditation and puja along with the other virtues to rebirth in the god realms.

The Mimamsaka school of Hinduism believed that this was the best one could hope for. The rituals (as in rg veda etc. not saivism etc.) ensured a happy rebirth and so one continued in in this way.

The intermediate motivation is generated by meditating on the implications of karma for the all, in the long run, karma is a never ending losing game. One simply cannot avoid suffering forever one is bound sooner or later to slip up and fall and fall bad. Even a birth in the god re or goddess or where it is androgynous is not viewed as favorable because even there happi worse, because in the god realms, one is blissed out so to speak, one never works to build u and like living on one's savings account, though it starts out good, eventually it runs out. the away like all sentient beings and are reborn in lower realms, often in hell.

An example: a person works hard, makes a lot of money, quits and just spends, no investme lasts but when the money is out one is one the street worse than when one started.

A desire to escape the whole system begins to evolve. One comes to meditate on the nature three parts:

1. suffering of suffering
2. suffering of change
3. pervasive suffering

The first refers to direct acute misery - death, illness, homelessness, war, hell etc.

The second refers to misery that results from change -- winning a game, gaining that job, starting a relationship etc. all have great promise of happiness and for a wh ecstatic and feels on top of the world. But it is temporary. one acts as though winning etc. wi permanence of joy as in 'if I only got that I would the happiest person in the world'. But winni brings only temporary joy; that great job becomes just a job, and relationships, well, that first last forever. even winning the lotto or becoming a world conquering monarch has its pitfalls.

The third refers to the capacity for all things to end up this way because we are always seek in the impermanent, the pure in the impure, the self in not self, the mine in not mine. this vie held by realized practitioners. when it is said that everything is suffering, this is the view that the realized practitioner is like a reformed addict who when seeing that drink or drug is remi misery it led to rather than the joy its users take it for. In this case it is the addiction to samsa must be broken. Taking pleasure in it is said to be like licking honey from the edge of a razo

Subj.: LamRim vii
Date: 95-12-16 02:17:53 EST
From: Jamyang

It is said that the sincere seeker of individual liberation desires to leave samsara with the sa one whose hair is afire wishes to put it out. How this is done is on the basis of discipline, co and wisdom. Discipline must be to a degree such that one has little distraction and good co contemplation. although the outlines of the path vary in description in general it has been sa sravaka principal practice consists of the development of the four foundations of mindfulnes serially but then together in concert and contemplates the dharmas in terms of sixteen aspe noble truths. The sixteen are:

* suffering : impermanence, suffering, empty and not self * origin: arising, appearance, cause, and condition
* cessation: cessation, calm, excellent and definitive liberation
* path: path, truth, obtaining, and release

Contemplating such, one meditates on each truth in two stages consisting of the developme facility regarding the object of meditation, this being called 'patience' and then the knowledg defilements have been abandoned, called 'knowledge'. In turn, these two stages regarding e contemplated in relation to objects of the desire realm and then objects of the higher realms realm of pure form and the formless realm. Thus the 16 aspects are meditated on in 16 stag sixteenth stage being generally considered entrance onto the path of seeing wherein the fou seen directly.

To illustrate:
suffering -- patience stage re desire realm knowledge stage re desire realm subsequent patience stage re higher realm subsequent knowledge stage re higher realm origin etc. same as above

The attainment of the path of seeing eliminates certain of the defilements. Others must be e path of cultivation. The principle defilements are: attachment, anger, pride ignorance, false v
These six can be divided into ten by subdividing false views into belief in a self, false view, h extremes, esteeming of views, and esteeming of mere ritual and ascetic practices. the ten ca divided by various means including the realm in which they relate. The Abhidharmakosa thus counts 98 such d discusses which are eliminated by the seeing and cultivation of the four truths in what realm discussion is way beyond the scope here. My purpose in mentioning them is to illustrate tha necessarily a simple slam dunk affair and to point out that it is considered important to cultiv with absorption i.e. you need both.

To many Mahayanists, one of the differentiating points between Mahayana and Hinayana w sunyata rather than the sixteen aspects of the four truths. However, to Chandrakirti and the sravakas and bodhisattvas cultivate realization of sunyata and that it is only by such realizat the Arhats can be liberated. The difference lay principally in the development of bodhicitta b bodhisattva. Such motivation attended by the practice of the perfections enabled a deeper cultivation of wisdom obstructions to omniscience as well as liberation could be eliminated. I bring this up here to important view that asserts that meditation on wisdom alone will cause one otherwise a mah short and slip into the path of an arhat.

Thus ends the section on individual liberation

Subj.: LamRim viii
Date: 95-12-16 13:06:30 EST
From: Jamyang

The highest motivation grows out of the initial and the intermediate. That is, without the first cannot be the highest. Why? As Jigten Sumgon said in his famous gong chik (the vajra vers intent), the difference between the large and small vehicle is bodhicitta the mind intent on fu enlightenment. One can and some do, argue against the gong chik saying that there are a lo the vehicles, but what Jigten Sumgon said here really hits the nail on the head because all c differences grow out of this very bodhicitta.

It is said that all beings want to be happy and no being wants to suffer. All the things we do a beings seeking fame, gain, avoidance of loss and fear, feeding the self cherishing mind ever down. Some, seeking more lasting benefit learn about karma and conduct themselves accor benefit that is more lasting than before. Of those, some realize that simply doing this will not permanent benefit and seek to be liberated forever from the round of samsara, the ocean of They use the laws of karma, not as an end it itself but to bring about conditions useful for pra difficult to practice as a god or demi-god(actually very akin to the greek titans) because gods too comfortable and the titans are too obsessed with the gods for having beaten them in bat large do not have the mental capacity to practice and are usually either enslaved or are caug survival.
Ghosts are weighed down by misery and envy, never happy with what they have, seeing pure water as pus and blood, trying to feed an enormous appetite that is never satisf hell, experience the ripening of their actions of hate and out of control lust and greed, so the practice much.

As an illustration, think of how well you practice when your mind is filled with anger, thoughts even etc. then imagine multiplying that many fold and you can get an idea of how the flames the flames of hell. Even in the human realm there are places without dharma, places in war tyrants. There are humans who suffer extreme poverty, illness etc. However, some do come dharma and have conditions conducive to practice. This last is termed a 'precious human rebirth'. It is precious because conditions are ripe for practice. However, who knows how lon Death could come at any point, the miracle being not that we breath out but that we breath b here today could be gone tomorrow. Today's leisure could change into tomorrow's workload uncertainties and chances not to practice, one with dharma motivation conduct themselves t about and sustain good conditions for practice.

Beings seeking individual liberation, utilizing the merit they have accumulated then practice meditate on the four truths to gain the wisdom that liberates.

A person of high motivation, likewise uses karma to accumulate merit for good conditions, lil liberative wisdom, but the motivation in the high motivation changes from seeking liberation and maybe a few others to seeking liberation for all beings. Having recognized the four truth suffering and its cessation, one considers that all beings are in the same boat. Through out a universes beings have sought happiness only to fail utterly in the end. Each of these beings another have been your dearest loved one, your lover, friend, child, parent. You grew up wit

Now you see that their attempts at happiness are failing. What is more, these same beings y of seeking happiness ignorantly may now be beings who are in hell, in the animal realm, be on. Because of realization of the four truths and because of the recognition of the plight of b grows to liberate them as well.

Subj.: LamRim ix
Date: 95-12-16 13:34:47 EST
From: Jamyang

But what to do? How does one liberate all other beings? It is very difficult and takes much sk even arhats do not have. Arhats may benefit many beings while alive and succeed in liberat However, on death, an Arhat passes into a state of cessation and cannot help. Further, as g are, they do not have the depth of wisdom and the powers used by Buddhas to be of even m desire to liberate all beings everywhere can really only be hoped to be fulfilled by having the abilities of a Buddha, one then vows to work toward enlightenment for the benefit of beings.
bodhicitta.

It has been said 'the buddha causes beings to become liberated beings but bodhicitta cause the only real cause of buddhahood is bodhicitta because the only purpose of buddhahood is benefit beings. All the powers of the Buddhas their various forms, their pure lands, their retin the result of the vast accumulation of merit combined with the deepening of wisdom that a b with this deep and vast motivation which is pure selfless love seeking to benefit all others.

This is why, Atisha, in spite of high achievements in meditating on tantric dieties considered important teacher to be the one who taught him bodhicitta. This is why, that without bodhicit one can do in Vajrayana is be reborn as a powerful demon. This is why there is such an em dharma on checking one's motivation.

Buddhahood is not achieved by the desire to have a body of light, have a retinue, emanate c or otherwise be nifty. It is achieved through the constant cultivation of bodhicitta. With bodhi will work to gain the necessary accumulations of merit and wisdom without it one won't.

Subj.: LamRim x
Date: 95-12-16 18:47:16 EST
From: Jamyang

There is said to be three grades of bodhisattva motivation.

1. Shepherd -- wherein like a shepherd who stays behind the flock until they get over the pa bodhisattva is so motivated that he/she is perfectly willing to stay in samsara until every last liberated no matter what hardship may result. This is the motivation exemplified by Chenresi Kuan Yin).
2. Ferryperson -- like the captain of a ferry, the bodhisattva seeks to take all beings at the sa
'let's get liberated together'.
3. King -- like a king who leads, a bodhisattva first seeks skill by becoming a
4. Buddha and then leads. 'let me get liberated and get skill, then I can help'.

The strongest motivation is that of the shepherd, however eventually bodhisattvas must act motivated simply because unless a bodhisattva has skill no one is going to be benefited.

The generation of the wish for enlightenment, aspiring bodhicitta, is the act which makes on and begins the path of accumulation. The actual helping of beings, that is, the actual leading liberation, not just aiding in a myriad of other ways which a bodhisattva also does, is called e bodhicitta. Engaging bodhicitta is said by many to begin at the path of seeing, that is after th has a direct non-conceptual view of reality and so actually begins to rid defilements from the root and can also teach aut from experience. Until the path of seeing, one meditates on reality via an image. This image can be very precise and accurate however, it is still an image and it is not the actual experie attaining the path of seeing, the bodhisattva actually begins the practice of the six perfection called perfections because the conduct is done in conjunction with the knowledge of reality t the path of seeing onwards. By doing thus, the obstructions to omniscience as well as the ol liberation are eliminated.

This does not mean that the perfections should not be practiced beforehand, quite the contra only that they cannot be 'perfected' prior to the path of seeing.

Subj.: LamRim xi
Date: 95-12-17 11:35:57 EST
From: Jamyang

Generosity -- the first perfection

When a bodhisattva enters the first bhumi a great joy enters along with. Seeing the true pos liberation for the first time, no longer relying on just faith or inference, but on actual direct kn that bodhisattva's grasping to objects including the self becomes as if mortally wounded.

The practice of generosity, which the first bhumi bodhisattva takes up as a principle practice of accumulating more of merit and wisdom. It is merit, because of the act of giving itself and during the act of giving, the propensity of ignorant grasping, seeing the gift, object of giving, subject giver as being fundamentally different and experiencing a loss when giving is weake the opposite of ignorant grasping is further developed.

The practice of giving is divided into three with reference to the gift:

1. Material goods
2. Dharma
3. Protection

The bodhisattva practices all three according to skill and means. It is important to note that t 'perfection' in practice of giving does not equate to the actual elimination of poverty, ignoran of all beings. As Shantideva points outs, if that were true, none of the Buddhas would have b since there is still poverty, ignorance and fear.
Rather it has to do with an attitude.

This attitude however, is not a mere lack of miserliness. Kamalashila argued for the point of Buddhism in saying that giving had to be more activistic; it had to consist in actual acts of giving via body speech and mind. This is true even when the act is primarily visualized offerings during a puja or sadhana. In this regard, it is also important to note that bodhisattva's compassion is not a mere lack of intent to harm. The latter is something a Srav have. A bodhisattva does something.

An illustration is that of a person fallen into a pit filled with filth. Passers by look and feel sorrow but a bodhisattva thinks nothing of jumping in an helping that person out.
The bodhisattva's acts of giving are also not acts of giving like a fool. Giving must be done s Bodhisattvabhumi of Asanga actually gets quite detailed about what is or what is not a prope from the view of the giver's attitude, the receiver of the gift and the gift itself. All these 'rules' can be distilled into one major criteria. That is, will the gift bring about true benefit for all invo yes, then it is suitable. If no, then it is not.

Subj.: LamRim xii
Date: 95-12-17 13:20:53 EST
From: Jamyang

So what are examples of suitable and non suitable giving? The most common nowadays wo one intending to kill, a drug to an addict etc. are examples of non-suitable giving. The giving benefiting ultimate happiness directly, such as giving food to the hungry, should not harm ul

If you have a dharma book that is rare, which is benefiting you and helping your progress, it is ok not to give it to someone els have gained mastery over the book. This is different than grasping to the pride of 'What a fi have. People will be so impressed when they see what a dedicated dharma student I am.' A asks for the dharma book or teaching, is not a suitable person, i.e. such a person is not sinc examine only to cause trouble etc. then most definitely one should not give the book or teac if such a person is sincere, but would be harmed by receiving a particular teaching such as emptiness etc. one should not give.

Shakyamuni, who knew the dispositions of all persons who came to him, did not, like many on everything he knew. Rather, the teaching was customized to the receiver so as to gain th
There were many persons who asked for all sorts of teachings that Shakyamuni just refuse would not do them any good, and may actually harm them. Milarepa for instance, when he student, was not a suitable vessel for Dzogchen teachings. Even though he received such teachings no realization developed as a result. He had to go back to Marpa.

For Milarepa, even though Marpa seemed to be stingy with dharma and a cruel taskmaster, dharma to Mila was suitable because it fitted what Mila needed. Many of us nowadays don't the recipient of dharma teaching like we would the recipient of a material gift. We hear abou teachings and blurt them out all over the place, even denigrating 'low' teachings without a cl beneficial or not. The fact is, whether a teaching is superior or inferior does not depend on i renown, category in the canon etc. It depends on whether it actually benefits and that depe recipient more than the giver or the gift. Shakyamuni brought many to the path of seeing an by the use of seemingly trivial phrases such as 'death happens to everybody'. In such case 'look into the nature of your own mind' allegedly a 'high' teaching, may have been useless a person if as a result the person thought, 'what kind of nonsense is this? I'll go elsewhere'.

Subj.: lam rim xiii
Date: 95-12-17 13:48:03 EST
From: Jamyang

The last post on the importance of the recipient of the gift might be construed by our wily se mind as an excuse to be stingy. So it is even more important that we cultivate mindfulness a motivations and limitations. Along the way, we will most definitely make mistakes big and s should not stop us from trying. More on that in the section on the perfection of effort.

Now for the giver: first, giving is just that, giving. Giving, because one thinks 'this will get me points' is not giving, it is an investment. Aryadeva in chapter V of the Catuhsataka says :

When one thinks that by giving gifts now
There will be a great result, Receiving and giving are like trade for profit.

Such persons will gain prosperity but not liberation. The bodhisattva thus cultivates giving w of reward. Lama Tsongkhapa lists a number of points to judge whether the giver is practicin

Incorrect practice :
* with postponement,
* just after causing hardship,
* poorly after reneging on a pledge,
* with pointing out what a kind person you are for giving,
* in tiny installments when it is proper to give at once,
* only after a lengthy amassing of wealth etc.

Correct practice:
* with joy,
* sincerity,
* with respect to the recipient (not 'here it is you stupid lazy beggar') etc.

Granted, all this is difficult but we should start. The late Geshe Rabten suggested for some p start by taking a pebble and having the right hand give it to the left and vice versa.

Subj.: Lam Rim xiv
Date: 95-12-22 12:53:03 EST
From: Jamyang

Conduct/discipline/morality -- sila paramita.

rJe Tsongkhapa explains the perfection of conduct/morality and the cultivation of the attitude

As explained previously, the rules of discipline are intended as a guide on keeping oneself o trouble. The avoidance of the ten non-virtues and the taking up of the lay vows clearly dema behavior that seeks to avoid harming others. In the perfection of such conduct, this extends offense.

In the conduct chapter of the Bodhicaryavatara, Shantideva criticizes those who use their to improperly as well as other types of behavior considered rude in 7th century India. The idea here is not to say that we should, as buddhists adopted ancient Indian etique does say that we should be conscious of the rules in the environment we are in and work so others.

Tsongkhapa points out that as with giving, the measure of success is not in the actual non-o since that is impossible. A buddhist robe may offend a non-buddhist, Shakyamuni's conduct cousin nuts. In the cultivation of the attitude however, behavior will ensue that does minimize while serving to lessen self grasping and negative actions resulting in bad migrations.

Here, as with giving, there is a certain balance that needs to be maintained. The bodhisattva instance demand that some vinaya rules be set aside when the greater good will result. How demands mindfulness and wisdom. One should not simply take this clause in the bodhisattv in the IRS Code. Shakyamuni in a previous life once took the life of a pirate in order to save 400 persons. It still resulted in a short time in hell. However, Shakyamuni was willing as a re love
for beings to endure this.

Also, the rudeness and coarseness of the Siddhas are meant to help us and are not the resu mindfulness that lets self-grasping run wild. It should not be an excuse for us to just act goof Rinpoche, current head of the Drikung Kagyu advised buddhists to fit in to society as best th models of conduct rather than objects of ridicule. He told certain westerners who liked to run Tibetan shamans to be careful of scaring people and bringing about a negative view of dhar

It is my personal view that awareness of this perfection, the knowledge of vinaya, bodhisattv vows etc. and how they all fit together in this perfection would go a long way to protecting bo students from the scandals and abuses that have beset the sangha. Teachers who are not r at least follow the lay vows and students should be aware that there are codes of conduct th

Subj.: LamRim xv
Date: 95-12-23 12:33:17 EST
From: Jamyang

Patience --

Shantideva said 'There is no sin like anger, no virtue like patience' . He also said that one m can destroy eons of good merit. Often, in the west, we view anger in a neutral way as somet sometimes bad. In dharma , anger, - dvesa -- hatred and its subsets is always bad. The emo poison into our systems and creates the cause for a bad migration.

The chapter on patience in the Bodhicaryavatara is rather lengthy providing many meditatio event anger arises. Since the book is in English, I encourage all who are interested in the M and read it.

Anger, hatred must be recognized for the poisons they are. When someone insults you and just who does it harm? Who is the person who can't eat, can't sleep, starts quarrels with love enjoy an otherwise perfect situation? Is it the person who insulted you or you?

If you are being harmed and can do something about it, there is no need to let this poison ar something can be done. If there is nothing that can be done, how is this poison going to help

If your enemy wants to destroy you what better way than to try and cause anger and hatred arising of this poison does not arise of itself or solely because of your enemy. You have to c Without your cooperation, the poison cannot arise.

When anger does arise, it is important to recognize it. All too often 'venting' only cultivates th Meditations such as the above help to defuse it and re frame it. Many also think that anger is accomplish things. Poison is never necessary. One can perform actions, even very assertive without this emotion. Granted, this poison and many actions have gone hand in hand for so many eons that we think that they are one. Not in the world without any of the three poisons of lust, hate and ignorance is a key bodhisattva

The subject of anger and patience is one that often requires very extensive treatment and di beyond the scope of this presentation. So I request again that one get this work mentioned a translated by Stephan Batchelor as Entering the Bodhisattva's Way of Life. I spent three yea study and meditation of this book so it is not something one reads and tosses.

Subj.: LamRim xvi
Date: 95-12-26 09:12:53 EST
From: Jamyang

Anger has, like many buddhist terms, a very precise meaning. These meanings can be foun particular for our purposes, the Abhidharmasammuccaya of Asanga. Anger is defined as a r reference to its object, agitates the mind through being unable to bear it, or through intendir Patience, ksanti/zopa is the counter to this. It has become my experience that abhidharma, t mere list of dry intellectual terms and categories is an invaluable tool in being able to train the mind. Why? Because its precision helps delineate the mental states that one enc one can more easily recognize them and work with them. In the west, anger is often seen as instance, it is seen as an energizer to overcome obstacles whether to study, win a game, rig is not the energy that overcomes obstacles that patience is directed against. It is directed ag and being unable to bear, not against study etc. It is sometimes a fine distinction but it is important in keeping one from going to extremes.

A bodhisattva must bear many things it seems. However, a regular being, reacting according simply keeps the wheel of samsara going. A bodhisattva must break away from this habit. L miserliness, reactive conduct, anger as enemies that keep us bound, the bodhisattva seeks habits. The sravaka does as well, but the bodhisattva in seeking the welfare of others must t because there is more to do, more chances at encountering obstacles. So a bodhisattva, fearing result mor being the opposite for ordinary beings), when confronted with something unpleasant thinks t reactions of anger etc. is to be avoided.

Among the many meditations a bodhisattva does is the looking upon bad situations as an op accumulate merit. After all, reacting with anger is something that only agitates and results is karma. Reacting with forbearance accumulates merit and results in a calm to loving mind, lo etc. Far from being an obstacle, a beggar offers the opportunity to practice giving and so acc Far from being a suitable object for anger, it is a situation suitable for rejoicing. Also, if a bein you to be angry, that being is pointing out the faults of your self-grasping mind and so is to b a teacher.

The Master Atisha used to have an attendant who was particularly obnoxious. When asked around, Atisha replied that the attendant was allowing him to practice patience. If you are in where there are no ills, one has little chance to see if one's practice is making progress. As said, 'a field may look calm and peaceful but no one knows how many misquitos there really through it.'

Subj.: LamRim xvii
Date: 95-12-26 22:29:41 EST

From: Jamyang

Effort -

Here it is virtuous effort or striving in the accumulation of merit and wisdom. This perfection c emphasized enough. In Buddhism, it is by your own effort that liberation and enlightenment Buddha though skillful cannot help at all unless you put forth the effort.

There is a story about a Lama who gained the power to remember past lives. One day while image of the Buddha he said he remembered long ago when the Buddha Shakyamuni and h he was in fact much wealthier. The Lama went on to say that the big difference was that the put forth effort and did not waste his time, while he just diddled around.

Drikungpa Jigten Sumgon said that effort was the most important perfection for with effort al accomplished and without, nothing could. Speaking of sutra and tantra, he said that even the be accomplished in one life if enough effort were put into it. Asanga said 'The striving perso overcome by enjoyments nor by defilement nor by weariness nor by the size of a reward'.

Shantideva divides effort into four types:

1. Armor like
2. Non-discouragement
3. Application
4. Non-satisfaction

The first is the courage to stick to the path until enlightenment no matter what hardship come not letting setbacks and disappointments cripple one. My teacher Geshe Lhundup Sopa onc fail and fall along the path. The difference in success depends on the ability to pick oneself u Application refers to practicing dharma with a mind of delight and joy. Lama Tsongkhapa co children who play for hours on end without getting tired. Non-satisfaction means not being sa accomplishments but continuing on to Buddhahood in full. For instance, a first bhumi bodhis truth nakedly but not being satisfied continues along the remaining bhumis.

Subj.: LamRim xviii
Date: 95-12-26 23:05:23 EST
From: Jamyang

The ways to sustain effort varies however it is said to be of four types of power:

1. aspiration/conviction/motivation
2. steadfastness
3. joy
4. rejection/suspension

The most powerful aspiration is that of bodhicitta. Even if you were to attain great accomplis concentration etc. without bodhicitta the power would fade. If one has problems in practice, t is to get back to the basics and this in turn means regenerating ones motivation for enlighter if one needs to, all the steps from refuge to renunciation to striving for others, not in a rote w genuine way.

It is also here that pride is used. One must think that if the Buddha did it so can I. In general considered a virtue but modesty to the point of thinking 'I am such a wretch. The others are s never make it' is considered a type of laziness.

Further, when practicing be steady. Forcing things may work in the short run but it is a bad s long term. Build up your practice bit by bit. Shore up your foundations. I don't know how mar that come to dharma, get all excited, think they can do anything and plunge on in to things li retreats without any preparation. Then they either drop out in the middle of the retreat or afte thinking it a bunch of nonsense. Or persons of talent and good karma who experience visions and bliss very soon have it and move elsewhere.

(Here I want to add that the foundations, preliminaries, or ngon dro are not doing a bunch of prostrations and mantras, they are actually the generating of certain minds or cons namely, renunciation, bodhicitta, regret for wrongs, developing generosity and selflessness a
When the attitude thereby generated is stabilized vis a vis a collection of merit and wisdom ( collection of numbers) then one has accomplished the foundations not before.)

The power of joy is as said before. Taking delight in virtue, in ones practice is one of the bes can do. Renunciation is not an ascetic practice. It is the lifting of a great burden. Giving bring receiver and the giver. A traffic jam on the Hollywood freeway no longer brings sorrow but a opportunity to practice. Foolish? For eons we have reacted in the ordinary way, yet look whe us. An ordinary person's foolishness is often the bodhisattva's wisdom.

Rejection/suspension means that one, knowing oneself through honest mindfulness, knows to rest or suspend effort. That is one knows one's limits and although the limits are expandir they are not pushed to the breaking point. Rest when part of this effort is practice and not la

Geshe Sopa advised me once ' you will have good days and bad days but not being overly e then by constantly sowing the causes for enlightenment the effects will surely follow' .

Subj.: LamRim xix
Date: 95-12-27 23:38:35 EST
From: Jamyang

An important part of effort is also following the right path. By this, I mean a path that is right
This doesn't mean 'feels good' although that can happen. Right path means a path that brin

Finding the right teacher takes even more. Particularly in vajrayana, the teacher is so import should not pick lightly but only after some testing. The Dalai Lama says a lot of testing. One' not be famous or have a high title. Two things are necessary, a qualified teacher and a quali suggestion is to do a bit of learning combined with practice of the basics: mindfulness, medit four truths, and bodhicitta until one has matured a bit in dharma, before committing oneself a way like that demanded in the Vajrayana.

A lot of people get burnt because of getting caught up in someone's charisma or fame and f basics. Some things to keep in mind are that not every one in robes or with a title is infallible good. Questioning is good and right. Buddhism has rules of conduct that apply to teacher as well as student. Using common sense things like this will avoid trouble.

Also, whether a path is quick or slow depends on the student more than the path. Many of th
'higher' teachings can result in abandonment of the path and dharma much less merely crea a case the student may progress quicker if first introduced to the 4 truths rather than Maham remember that Shakyamuni brought many to the path of seeing and even Arhantship by see statements such as 'everybody dies' and that the Dzogchen teachings Milarepa got resulted enlightenment. For this reason one should never disparage any of the Buddha's teachings a 'meant for the dummies'.

This doesn't mean to go to the extreme of not practicing the 'higher' practices either. If with and honesty one has checked and found that one's foundations are stable one should defini regard to traditions. Some persons are of a type that benefit from many perspectives and so confused seeing all the seeming differences as contradictions. Eventually, though, one must commit to a core practice. One c race by constantly changing horses.

Subj.: LamRim xx
Date: 95-12-28 11:45:07 EST
From: Jamyang

Concentration

When Shakyamuni left the palace he went to various famous teachers seeking the key to lib concentration meditation up to its most rarefied levels. It was not the key to liberation howev fueled by concentration's power proved to be the key. Nonetheless, concentration was seen tool, indeed, except for a few schools, nearly indispensable. The reason is simple. In order t insight we have to generate concentration because our normal state, prone as it is to either to object as the passions arise or to fall asleep if the passions do not arise is simply not stab achieve even a deep conceptual view of insight much less the direct view. Thus concentrati insight meditation need to go hand in hand. Asanga, defining meditation says it is the focusi single area of thought that is mundane or supramundane and preceded by hearing and examining. This is true whether the focus is in concentration, insight or the two together. The achievement of concentration/calm abiding - samadhi is done by striking a balance in the mind between scattering and sinking while focu of thought, that is a mental object, until one can remain so concentrated for an indefinite tim achieves a strong degree of mental suppleness so that it takes little or no effort. This last is important as one should be able to have such control that one can go to another object of m the state and do one's business without disruption. I have heard some who having practiced become quite adept at it and claim to have achieved calm abiding. However, when asked to a guru tree for breath, they can't do it. This is not considered calm abiding because they lack of mental suppleness.

Briefly stated: scattering is the tendency of the mind to flit from object to object uncontrollabl sinking is a dullness or lack of energy that eventually causes the loss of the object via sleep scattering is a bigger problem in the beginning and sinking in the end. Sinking is particularly because it mimics one pointedness and can generate a pleasant sensation. However it only pointedness because it is dull and can't move and its pleasant sensation is akin to resting.

Subj.: LamRim xxi
Date: 95-12-28 23:28:04 EST
From: Jamyang

A formal teaching on shamatha in Tibetan Buddhism often covers nine different stages of ab directing the mind to an object, to bringing it back after distraction, to being able to countera to being able to be one pointed indefinitely to calm abiding itself which is marked by incredib bliss and clarity. In the teachings one is taught different characteristics for each stage and di techniques used for advancement

This may be needlessly complex for this post. The main point to remember is to relax when distracted and scatters, using the power of memory to bring back the object and when sinkin notices dullness and mental sluggishness to be more energetic. It is like tuning a stringed in tight or too loose is no good.

Shantideva barely mentions these techniques at all in the Bodhicaryavatara. What he does t need for a conducive environment and motivation. With enough motivation, it becomes doab in rush hour. There is no magic trick to it. Drikungpa Jigten Sumgon used to say that medita meditation but habit. So if you know how to cultivate a habit you know how to cultivate medit why set times and places are recommended. Geshe Rabten used to say that in the beginnin session short, quitting at its peak rather than when the mind declines. If one did the latter, or oneself beginning to hate sessions because of association with great effort and strain. If the would associate sessions with accomplishment and joy.

If one seeks to accomplish samadhi, one should get personal training. This is because every different and not all techniques are applicable to everybody. Sometimes one needs to be for one needs to relax. Recommending one to one who needs the opposite is a big mistake. Als personalities are suited to different objects of meditation. Some need very simple objects, so ones. As a result, even though a teacher might first tell you to count your breath and relax th needs in fact to be in touch with this teacher and be honest with yourself and the teacher ab happening so that the teacher can adjust the meditation. Without this interaction, you are ch and fooling the teacher.

Subj.: LamRim xxii

Date: 95-12-28 23:46:35 EST
From: Jamyang

When calm abiding is achieved and the first dhyana is attained, one feels as through one co
the bliss is a flood of bliss.

* The first dhyana is characterized by: investigation, examination, joy, bliss, and one-pointed of the presence of investigation and examination, Lama Tsongkhapa recommends this dhya of insight through analysis.
* The second dhyana has joy, bliss, and one-pointedness.
* The third has bliss and one-pointedness
* The fourth has pure one-pointedness.

The difference between investigation and examination and between joy and bliss is the difference between approach and being there. Like seeing an oasis in the desert and enjoying it.

These four dhyanas belong to the realm of pure form. The sense realm has been left behind.

* There are four formless dhyanas as well.
* The first is attained when the object is eliminated and one just meditates on the space it oc
* The second when one just meditates on the consciousness cognizing what had been the s
* The third when even that is gone and there is nothing at all
* The fourth when there is not even nothing but neither perception nor non-perception.

This last is called the pinnacle of the world. It is very important to remember that as rarefied states are, they are most definitely not the goal and are generally to be avoided. Strong culti states without accomplishing the path of seeing can result in rebirth in a trance state lasting eons where nothing is accomplished whatsoever. Re names and characteristics of these states helps to understand the trepidation many teacher that emphasize 'nothingness', 'just consciousness' 'space' etc. Such terms when applied to e meditation, Dzogchen, Mahamudra etc. mean altogether different things but it is easy to fall trap and trap it is.

Subj.: LamRim xxiii
Date: 95-12-29 16:45:48 EST
From: Jamyang

How does one join the analytic meditation with the concentration? Essentially one analyzes concentration. Lama Tsongkhapa argues vigorously in his Lam Rim Chen Mo that one can u while in the first absorption. That is, absorption need not be a state wherein nothing happens while training, thoughts are discouraged. Sometimes one cuts them off. Sometimes, one lets away without cultivation. However, in the union of analysis and concentration one must anal analysis varies. In some methods one simply notices what is happening. In the Theravada m the arising and passing away of the dharmas and through that awareness discovers imperm on. In Mahamudra, having focused on the mind itself, one searches for the nature of the min color, what shape etc. One does something similar in the mind section of Dzogchen. Using Madhyamika techniques of reason one uses either syllogisms or consequences such as the reasoning of the one and the many.

The Gelug does the following:
* ascertainment of the way the ordinary self is conceived.
* stabilizing that idea
* using consequences to explore if that idea is something truly established.

The Gelug say if one is going to get rid of a mistaken notion, that is 'negate it', one must hav idea of what the mistaken notion is. This notion is the 'negatee'. So one purposely generates the mind where the 'self' arises clearly. This may include remembering someone insulting or where one is praised. To the Gelug, this notion after much analysis is the notion of inherent, existence. When the notion is successfully negated it is negated in such a way that nothing replaces it. This is affirming negation'. An affirming negation is one where another idea arises in place of the o For instance: fat devadatta does not eat in the day, implies devadatta eating at night. On the 'brahmans don't drink beer' does not imply anything other than what they don't drink. To the of negation is essential to avoid the reifying of emptiness. For instance, in negating defileme replace it with purity and think that pure mind is truly established. More worrisome however i think it is nothingness which is truly established and come to the conclusion that the practice taken literally is what is meant.

Such a method as the Gelug use is slightly different than a simple search for a self among th true nature of the mind in that the Gelug will be active in setting up the notion of self first. It b to method rather than view.

When the self is negated and one has generated a conceptual image of emptiness one then strength of focused concentration to burn away as it were this image and realize emptiness method is based partly on the epistemological theories of Dignaga and Dharmakirti. Accordi knows something via direct perception, inference or yogic direct perception. The first is what first moment of a sense consciousness perceiving something. The second is used to ascertain what is hidden Inference does not have to be formal or even discursive, it is rather automatic. In the case o perception everything is presented to the consciousness, including its true nature of being in self etc. however this is not usually ascertained. In the second, the true nature may be ascer indirectly via an image. This image is what is meant by concept. In is in the third category, that of yogic direct perception, that one perceives and ascertains fully without benefit of an i are all sorts of nuances here but basically this is it.

Subj.: LamRim xxiv
Date: 95-12-29 17:04:14 EST
From: Jamyang

A word about samadhi: it is essentially a state of concentration wherein the subject/object di longer viable. It is described as being like water poured into water. The methods described a the realization of emptiness and the gaining of the path of seeing. However, similar methods along the entire path from taking refuge on up. For instance in the generation of bodhicitta, c the mind using various reasons then stabilizes it using focused concentration and begins to such a mind but expands it. When one speaks of entering the samadhi of bodhicitta it means and compassion, the motivation to become a buddha for the benefit of all beings is such tha that bodhicitta. One is that great love. This is true strength of resolve and is the last leg on th path of hearing, examining and meditation. On the path of meditation/cultivation one expand gained on first entering the path of seeing, not only by formal concentration sessions but throughout all ones activities. The various perfections of giving, conduct etc. aid this exp throughout ones entire being, ones entire stream, permeating wholly and completely. In this the two accumulations and becomes a Buddha.

Subj: LamRim xxv
Date: 95-12-29 19:12:42 EST
From: Jamyang

The five paths are:
1. accumulation
2. preparation
3. seeing

4. meditation/cultivation
5. no more learning

In the Mahayana the path of accumulation begins with the generation of bodhicitta. One ther accumulation of merit and wisdom, always striving in some way to do this. Opportunities for generosity, conduct, patience, effort, concentration and wisdom are not to be passed up. Wi necessarily conceptual.

The path of preparation begins when the accumulation has reached a point wherein one is v above and has a good conceptual view of emptiness. As long as one does not have direct p emptiness, one relies on the strength of faith and devotion. At this level one is still an ordina but has gone beyond the spiritual poverty of those not on the path and possesses samadhis from various obstructions, even supernormal abilities.

The following is from Kamalshila's first volume on the Stages of Meditation: The four approx separation from defilements are 1) external objects having diminished, the light of understan dimly. This is called 'heat' and the 'samadhi of obtaining the light'. 2)when this light of unders come to shine brighter this is called 'summits' and is termed the 'samadhi of trimming the lar shines very brightly because one abides in the non apprehension of the object i.e. pure consciousness, this is th real separate called 'patience' and is the 'samadhi of the one trend' 4) When understanding gives way to non-dual understanding (if no object then no subject) this is the highest worldly is the 'samadhi of the immediate' because from it one can enter into understanding of reality Up to now
the level of practice is termed 'aspiring'.

The path of seeing and the first bhumi is reached with the initial full attainment of the faculty the reality of emptiness of self and dharmas. The first level is called the 'joyous'.

Subj: LamRim xxvi
Date: 95-12-29 19:35:29 EST
From: Jamyang

1st level still -- Although the bodhisattva understands reality, as long as he/she cannot abide mindfulness which prevent falling into small transgressions of conduct one remains on the fi

On the 2ne level, called the stainless, transgressions of conduct are not made. But as long a enter into all the worldly samadhis and cannot retain the meaning of all ones studies one rem level

The 3rd level , called the luminous is so called because of the brightness of wisdom. One re of all one's studies and patiently endures all worldly pain. But as long as one cannot constar the wings to enlightenment without rest one remains on that level.

The 4th level, is called the flaming, because the flames which burn defilement blaze, having unstoppable practice. However, one does not yet in meditation hold the wings via method, th has a tendency to incline toward nirvana.

The 5th level is called hard to purify because of the attainment of that hard to obtain quality.
cannot remain in the samadhi of the signless because of remnant uneasiness in the analysis

When one can so stay, one is in the 6th level called the facing. One meditates abiding in dep
However, although so abiding, one cannot do so without break.

When one can do so without break one attains the 7th level called 'that which has gone far'.
perfection practiced is the perfection of 'method'. Although constantly abiding in the signless so without effort.

When it becomes effortless, one attains the 8th level called the 'unmoving' and cultivates the the vow. Here some say, the bodhisattva catches up to the full Arhat and Pratyekabuddha in though not of course in method. Although one abides constantly without effort in the signless teach in all the various languages and modes of all sentient beings.

Subj: LamRim xxvii
Date: 95-12-29 19:52:11 EST
From: Jamyang

When one can teach in all languages and modes to all sentient beings one attains the 9th le discrimination', practicing the perfection of power. However, one still cannot display the budd retinues, apparitions, the qualities of a Buddhas resources etc. and bring all beings to matur

When one can one obtains the 10th level called the 'cloud of dharma' practicing the perfectio (jnana, ye shes). However one cannot bring about the gnosis that is perfectly free of any res to each and every possible dharma.
When one can so do, one attains the level of a Buddha. It is the total fulfillment of every exc the limit of the levels as there are none beyond it. As even the Buddhas could not describe t different aspects of the attributes of this level, what need is there to say that one like myself

There are many descriptions of the ten bhumis. These were described from the point of view of the faculties. The path of cultivation begins immediately after the path of seeing and of co of no more learning is Buddhahood itself.

So ends the brief discourse on the lam rim with the exception of a few words on vajrayana in the next post.

Subj.: lam rim xxviii
Date: 95-12-29 20:21:31 EST
From: Jamyang

The vajrayana path is considered a subset of the Mahayana. As such, the foundations of ren bodhicitta are key prerequisites. In addition, some knowledge of emptiness is also required. Sutrayana and Vajrayana is the same, but the methods differ. Vajrayana utilizes the method result onto the path. This has the practical effect of bringing in the practice of deity yoga. The question as to whether the first tantra set of kriya has deity yoga however in the general kriy Susiddhi Tantra, it says there is. There are numerous other little issues concerning exact de tantra and the divisions therein however, in brief tantra can be defined as above.

Many persons have the idea that offerings, visualizing dieties, saying mantras etc. are uniqu Not So. Those are all practiced in Sutrayana as well. In general, self generation as deity is u and requires empowerment. As for the divisions of the tantra sets, they are arranged accord of internalness of the practice and the subtlety of the consciousness utilized.

Although I cannot, because of vows, disclose specific practices or indeed go much beyond w said, I want to clarify a certain point. That is, many think that the Sutra should be dumped wh practices the Vajrayana. Not so. Too much in the Vajrayana assumes knowledge gained in t is additive, it doesn't replace. At the risk of disclosing too much I will also say that even the a categories, the 37 wing to enlightenment, the skandhas etc. play important parts in tantric m Consequently, if one wants to do the meditation and not simply recite a sadhana, one should to the sutras and shastras. Without it, far too much seems just arbitrary and mere poetics in practice. I personally believe that the current trend of not studying and just going to empowe blessings will bring about the degeneration of tantra into something like what happened to th eucharist/mass.

Sarva Mangalam.

Precious bodhicitta, where it hasn't arisen may it arise.
Where is has arisen, may it not decline but grow ever fuller.
By the virtue of writing, reading this teaching may all beings be brought to the state of Vajradhara, may the dharma take solid root in the west and may no obstacles arise to its practice and flourishing.

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers viaanonymous FTP or the Australian NationalUniversity, Canberra on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU or from th at http://coombs.anu.edu.au/CoombsHome.html]The document's ftp filename and the full dir given inthe coombspapers top level INDEX files][This version: 20 September 1994]---------- original message ----------Date: Wed, 5 Oct 1994 08:16:12 -0500From: mcain@nwu.edu (B Richard LangloisThis is in reply to your request for information in Rev. Langlois.Should you further information please e-mail to the aboveaddress.The following is the most complete do have on KongoLanglois Roshi. Please feel free to edit it as you see fit for yourpurposes.Kon Roshi is the current Abbot of the Zen Buddhist Templeof Chicago. He also serves as the Di Instructor of theChinese Cultural Academy in Evanston, Illinois. Kongo Roshi, asan America brings a deep and rich experience to bear intransmitting those most refined and precious art theirbasis in oriental culture including Zen and Taoism. He has inherited,through direct trans traditions and arts based on hisdecades of study with his Zen teacher, Rev. Soyu Matsuoka Prof. Huo Chi-kwang, the founder and the former head of theChinese Cultural Academy.The of Chicago is the oldest, practicing Zenmeditation center in the United States, having been f byRev. Soyu Matsuoka, Roshi, (to whom we all refer as Sensei).Ultimately succeeding Sens Roshi is heir to a sixhundred year tradition of Zen priesthood in Sensei's family. The ZenBu of Chicago is in direct affiliation with the SotoSect of Zen Buddhism through Kongo Roshi's SojijiTemple and Monastery, one of the two head temples of the Soto Sect inJapan.The Chi Academy was founded by another of Kongo Roshi'steachers, Professor Huo Chi-kwang, in 1 master inthe 5 styles of Chinese calligraphy, painting and poetry; and ascholar of Chinese li history and philosophy; as well as agreat boxing master, renowned wherever Chinese cultur Huo is the 16th generation of calligraphers in his familywhich has produced noted scholars s Dynasty. KongoLanglois, Roshi also succeeded Prof. Huo as the Director of theAcademy.G
significance of the above achievements, it is pertinent torecount the background that Roshi teaching. Kongo Roshiwas born Richard Valentine Langlois in Chicago, Illinois. His`first lov piano which he began studying at ten years of age.Although his training consisted entirely o classical pianostudies, he nevertheless discovered an inherent talent for improvisa-tion. Su worked professionally as a jazz musician whilevigorously pursuing the formal study of music Richard entered his teens, he experienced a profoundintellectual and emotional cataclysm:
looked I couldsee only a condition of desperation, degeneration, and hypocrisy. Thedepth o perspective was amplified, because at so young an age Iwas unprepared to resolve experie magnitude: I'imploded'." Richard's friends in need at this time were primarilythe philosopher Schopenhauer and Nietzsche. "I was especiallyattracted to Nietzsche and the Bhagavad Gi Zarathustraand Krishna, helped maintain some semblance of sanity. Though,indeed, the re several years, perhaps interminably,for Nietzsche remains alongside Dogen Zenji, at my bed reach."Richard Langlois served two years in the Army from 1954 to 1956.Following military s enrolled under the G.I. Bill in theAmerican Conservatory of Music, majoring in piano, where studies in 1962. As his interest in philosophy grew,besides studying and playing piano, Rich becameincreasingly interested in the study and practice of EasternPhilosophy. He began hi in 1956 under the guidanceof Swami Vishwananda, of the Vedanta Society and continued th practice of Yoga as a disciple of Sri Nerode. Although thistraining involved a great deal of in study, the main workwith Sri Nerode was intense meditation practice. This included thestud with emphasis on Kundalini Yoga, an esotericmeditation practice.Inevitably, Richard Langloi tendencies led him to ZenBuddhism that satisfied an inner urge for a spiritual practice which direct, less intellectual, more intuitive and directlyrelated to everyday life. He began studyin Matsuoka Roshi in1960 and officially became his disciple in 1963. Richard Langlois wasgiv name Kongo, meaning `Diamond'. This name signifiesmore than just a sparkling gem. Its s that ofenduring brilliance, dignity and strength. But, more significantly,it signifies the Diamo and its teaching of the Diamond Swordof Discriminating Wisdom, which cuts away all doubt Langlois' training for the Zen priesthood. Richard Langlois'previous experience as a disciple excellent foundation forhis relationship with Matsuoka Roshi. However, this turned out to be of another kind entirely. Although discipleship isalways on a one-to-one basis, the training i of a uniqueand peculiar kind; there is no room for esoteric philosophizing.One's every move response is unremittingly scrutinizedand corrected. The feeling is somewhat like being unde

As a result of this smelting process, one's true natureis allowed to shine through spontaneou process is much likea sculptor, not one who models clay, but one who chips awayat the sup superficial so that only the truly essentialremains. Zen meditation (zazen) is the central prac ZenBuddhism for cultivating the awakening of our true nature.From Matsuoka Roshi he obta zazen practice and then inSoto Zen Buddhism, becoming the first American to be ordained a
In 1970 when Matsuoka Roshi left Chicago to foundanother Zen Center in Long Beach, Cal Kongo Langloiswas appointed his Dharma Successor and became Abbot of the ZenBuddhis also was the firstAmerican to receive the Roshi degree. In 1974, Matsuoka Roshibestowed Reverend Langlois. The title Roshi is not,as many believe, synonymous with `priest'; it is be Zenpriest by another who holds the Roshi degree, as an indication andacknowledgement of understanding or realization.Hence all Roshis are priests, but not all priests are Roshis. Tho remember Rev. Matsuoka when he taught in Chicago, know theextremely powerful impressi Zen priest. Manywere impressed and astounded by one who could teach so much, so often inflection. Certainly the student needed to bewilling to look, but if one did look, students can handsfull to overflowing. All of us recognize this as a unique andpowerful characteristic of b and Roshi. Although theirpersonalities are in many ways vastly different, they nevertheless ability to mindfully, consistently, flexibly, andpowerfully project their teachings and indeed th essencedirectly from the spiritual center.In 1987, Kongo Roshi was presented with the `Inka oftransmission) from the line of Asahina Sogen, Primate of the Rinzaibranch of Zen Buddhis Roshi is recognized as a masterby both the Soto and Rinzai schools of Zen Buddhism.Rosh

Professor Huo Chi-kwang began in 1966. He beganstudying privately with Prof. Huo, who w came to knowfrom his attendance at the Temple, as well as directly through hisassociation w Huo imparted a thorough grounding inthe internal connections and spirit of Confucianism, Ta
Buddhism,and the Chinese Ch'an and Taoist meditation traditions.During his 22 years of stu Chi-kwang, Kongo Roshifirst mastered the Yang Family (Secret) Style of Tai Chi Chuan, the art. The Yang Style is commonly taught in the socalled 'public' style, which originated when Manchu(Ch'ing) dynasty compelled the Yang family to provide instruction forthose demandin Yang family, while under this greatduress, was nevertheless unwilling to give away the esse thetradition to 'outsiders', devised a considerably debased 'public'style in order to satisfy the Prof. Huo was most fortunate inthat he learned the original and 'true' style directly from Yang was the elder brother of and superior martial artist toYang Ch'eng-fu, developer of the 'public is this original,undiluted Yang style which Roshi teaches.Also while studying under Prof. Huo mastered the Chen Style ofTai Chi Chuan, which historically was antecedent to the Yang. S spent in learning both script and cursive styles ofChinese calligraphy using traditional philos Additionalmartial arts from Prof. Huo's large repertoire were similarly absorbedby Roshi duri of study with Professor. These include theWu Style of Tai Chi Chuan, Tai Chi Push Hands, andTai Chi Sword.Also transmitted were the Chinese Health Methods. The Chinese Healthl approximately fifty exercises (only counting oncethose performed on both the right and left s coursesuitable for all ages, but of especial value to the middle aged,elderly, or infirm due to ease with which they areperformed. Involving gentle self massage that acts internally, every function is engaged, from head to toe, including theinternal organs.Beyond all these many fa also received a thorough groundingin the essence of Buddhist, Taoist, and Confucian philos astudy of the classics in the original Chinese language.Kongo Roshi served as Assistant Ins Chinese CulturalAcademy for 8 years. Then in May 1988, Kongo Roshi became Prof. Huo's appointed Director of the Chinese CulturalAcademy where he continues to teach.During an Chicago, Prof. Tao Zhang, Head ofOrthopedic Surgery at the China Academy of Traditional Guang An Men Hospital, Beijing, taught Roshi the I Jin Jing.This is the most highly regardec exercises and theyare attributed to Bodhidharma, founder of Ch'an (Zen) Buddhism inChina Jin Jing demands great intensity ofconcentration. Prospective students must be made awar of Tai Chi Chuan has definitely been made a prerequisite forthis particular course of study, c profound and subtlenature of these exercises which require great awareness required forthe In I Jin Jing the student learns bysimultaneously performing the exercise and by closely obs theinstructor,with great awareness. The interaction is quite intense.Given Kongo Roshi's un accomplishments, it is almostunfathomable that one individual could absorb and indeed emb so many diverse and deeply spiritual teachings. However,we may perhaps begin to get a ta of intensivepreparation it took to amass this impressive array of mastered arts.In this way Ko resembled Prof. Huo, in that he wasalways engaged in study. Professor often remarked tha all of his many students, displayed the assiduous applicationand possessed the tenacious s distinguishes disciple fromstudent. In fact, as Roshi learned from a number of Prof. Huo'scl friends, Professor considered Roshi to be his onlytrue disciple. It thus becomes easy to unc Prof. Huo, thequintessential and imposing Chinese gentleman,artist, scholar, and philosoph school', would onlyentrust the Academy to Roshi. Thus the fact of Roshi's Americanorigin b outweighed by Roshi's intense application toall forms of study and practice grounded in mec innow knowing or recalling these facts, we can all better appreciatesome of the incredible de Roshi's time over the years. Onedares to say that there may well be no American, and prob of Orientals who have sacrificed so much of themselves andtheir lives to preserve the treasu Oriental, meditativelybased arts.Now we can begin to understand the excitement shared am with Roshi, especially his old time students, given thathis schedule is expanding at both the Academy. One maytruly say: "The reservoir has been filled and now we can all take adeepe of the Zen Buddhist Temple of Chicago, Kongo Langlois, Roshidirects services, the instructi practitioners, and thediscipleships of candidates for the Zen Buddhist priesthood. Inthis he i a number of disciples, several of whom areordained priests. Private zazen instruction (doku byappointment. Regular services are held at 10 A.M. on Sundays and7 P.M. on Wednesday retreats for intensivemeditation are held monthly. Lectures and demonstrations are alsomad any interested organizations. These have alreadybeen given at churches, Buddhist temples groups,colleges, and universities.Under Academy auspices Roshi teaches Chen and Yang ( Chi Chuan, I Jin Jing, and Chinese Health Methods. Theseaccomplishments and classes th most profoundindication of Roshi's dedication to the preservation and disseminationof the gr treasures of Asia. They also concretelyexpress his hope that his students may find the time determinationto master these arts and continue their transmission anddissemination. As we classes offered and taught by Roshi,we may hope eventually to acquire what most, all too o after a lifetime and what Roshi has most remarkably achieved inover three decades of inter Roshi's expanded teaching schedule now permits him to take onprivate students. Many hav profound benefits ofprivate instruction from Roshi. It is always intense and indeed mostrewa those ambitious enough to make the commitment toaccelerate and solidify their progress lea mastery, it isto be highly recommended. In fact, private lessons and encountersplayed a vita enabling Roshi to acquire so much from Prof.Huo and Sensei.It is to be hoped that this biog

you with some idea ofthe intense work involved in this life of multiple discipleships.Only if yo some training of this sort can you begin toreally appreciate the extent to which Kongo Langl livedup to the promise of his Dharma name, Diamond. For a recorded messagegiving curre Temple and the Academy, please call(708) 869-0554. To make arrangements for any of the (708) 272-2070.Barry Cain <mcain@nwu.edu>Energy Efficient Environments, Inc.box 171, St.Evanston, IL 60201----------end of original message
----------end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers viaanonymous FTP or the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU orANU Soc.Sci.WWW Server at http://coombs.anu.edu.a document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given inthe coombspapers top level I files][Last updated: 28 March 1994]----------"THE FORTUNATE AND O DISASTER OF LAY LIFE" a teisho by John Tarrant, RoshiOriginally published in: Mind Moo 1994, pp.1-3.This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issue should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.All copyrights to this document belon CaliforniaDiamond Sangha, Santa Rosa, Cal., USAEnquiries: The Editor, "Mind Moon Circle
Centre, 251Young St., Annandale, Sydney, NSW 2038, Australia. Tel: + 61 2 6602993----------THE FORTUNATE AND ONGOING DISASTEROF LAY LIFEJohn Tarrant, RoshiGood Buddhists know that the thing world,attain enlightenment and lead other beings to safety. But if you are aZen person, you easily. We find Buddha in the heartof delusion, we find stars in the deepest night. When Hak very body is the Buddha," he didn't mean after we've gainedenlightenment or taken vows, h in the chaos.I think of the old story of the warrior who did zazen with such energythat all the house grew still until he had finished. Hiswife remarked on this and he said, "Well, this won't totry harder." His zazen deepened and soon, as he sat, the mice came outand played all ov unafraid.This story tells about inclusion. It implies that even mice have theircontribution and that we don't want to shut too much oftheir world out. This means not only the outer world a ofenlightenment but also the inner world - the disturbed zazen, theimmense proliferation of f distractions. If lay life hasa virtue, it is in this inclusiveness.In the Indian world that Buddhism from there seems to have been afairly clear distinction between lay and monastic lives. One for the first part of life and then, when familyobligations were finished, one was free to seek enlightenment. Butnothing is really this orderly and Shakyamuni fractured this way ofseeing abandoning his obligations before they were completedand so making lay life somehow sec Buddhismcertainly saw things this way. There was a split between the puremonastic world a householder world.It was the advent of the Mahayana that clouded this view once more.Vim became a hero, and the Bodhisattva ideal was ofone who had compassion, who saved othe walkingunharmed through the fires of the world. Now this is quite a differentpath. The image enlightenment has changed. The original idea ofnirvana was a cessation, extinction, a snuffi lamp.Perhaps we should call it endarkment. It implies a stoic view ofthings. Life was seen a contaminated that the end of it was thebest thing of all. The Mahayana, and the Zen image i optimistic:to light a lamp and pass it on. Beings are worth saving, even stonesare beings, a is a great project.The monastic life then becomes less a way station on the path out oflife a matter of practical choice within life, a skilfulmeans. We put a fence around the training hall containment, sothat the energy we pour in does not leak out. The training hall is akind of alc vessel. Only if it is in some degree sealed off canwe get enough heat to change the lead int

the greatvirtue of monastic life. All transformation needs its guardians andmonastic life provi its project enlightenment andcompassion - is no longer different from the lay project.Both lay worlds have their pathologies. The pathologiesof the monastic life seem to be about clinging Purity isnot a natural thing and needs to be guarded. Another way to say thisis that monaste towards monotheism - a single and orthodoxview of reality. The monastic consciousness do infantasies or in the arts because it doesn't like the confusion ofmultiple views. Monasteries because when we make a rule wegain the illusion that we have dealt with the problem. This to the inner life as well. Samadhi and concentration statesare often highly valued. This is wh masters called thesword that kills - the koan that drives all thoughts away,annihilating every in the mind. Then enlightenment willcome and there will be no more real problems.The statu children always seems to suffer inmonasteries. This is because they always bring in more re have a special role as distractions, human affections being theone thing most difficult to put around. Women have beenexcluded, or they are included but asked to act like men, or they' women, but to not have children, or they're asked tonot bring their children around the sessh monasteriesseem to have a patriarchal air - rigid and hostile to the obligationsof the heart. W temples are often given the archetypal task ofrepresenting the world and its weight, its mess awoman will object because her real developmental task is somethingindependent of the wa her.The pathologies of a lay life relate to a kind of getting lost, aforgetting of the quest, an unconscious immersion in the world. Somuch time is spent changing diapers or watching the that zazen never gets up enough steam to bring about a realchange. We are so close to the the anger and theignorance that it's impossible not to get stained by them. We comehome fr and can't stop thinking about the baby whodied. The world penetrates us.But this wounding can be the essence of theBodhisattva life. The Bodhisattva legend is of one who puts off her enlightenment in order to save others. On the face of it, this isan absurdity, but like many ab contains a very deep story.An old koan goes like this: "Why is it that perfectly accomplished are attached to the vermilion line?" The red line is theline of passion- of sorrow and the love Our perfectioncannot connect with others. Only through our weaknesses do we grow. Itis the failures and problems that is the place ofBodhisattva action and the development of charact afterenlightenment. The Bodhistttva's enlightenment is not something thatmakes her invulne but open to it. It is closelylinked to love. This weakness, this permeability, is the strength oft life.The lay view asks itself unanswerable questions such as, "What doesenlightenment mea link the experience of eternity to thesmell of the morning coffee. It assumes there will always problemsand failures. It wonders what its dreams mean and always misinterpretsthem. It ge and metaphor. The monastic view isuninterested in meaning and tends to think enlightened don'tdream.Obviously there are people in monasteries who are immersed in theworld and p monasteries who try to stay unsullied bythe world. Most of the Western monasteries today h ofwhat I am calling lay consciousness,. And yet it is the monasticconsciousness that has pre down through the ages andthis is a powerful argument in its favour.The virtue of the lay poin that it brings a fertilizingmuddle into the serenity of the temple. Blackberry pie, sex, a newca for the little girl, these distractions and frivolitiesare themselves the Buddha Way. A coheren existence seems, atleast from the outside, to be difficult. Fortunately, a coherent layexistenc impossible.----------end of file

==========
First published in the //Maha Bodhi//, Vol.92 nr. 7-9 (July-Sept. 1984), and the //Light of the Dhamma//, Vol. III, nr. 4 (1984).
Also published in //Buddhism As a Way of Life and Other Essays//, 1993.
This DharmaNet edition published February 1995.
==========

LEADING VIRTUOUS LIVES AS LAYMEN

by Sayagyi U Chit Tin

Ashin Maha-Buddhaghosa discusses virtue (//sila//) in great detail in the first chapter of //The Path of Purification// (//Visuddhimagga//). He discusses in particular the virtue of the Sangha. The Sangha is of great importance as it will keep the Teachings of the Buddha alive. On one level, by Sangha is meant the Community of Bhikkhus that maintains the purity of the Dhamma in the sense of preserving the texts containing the Buddha's discourses (the Suttas), the rules for the bhikkhus (the Vinaya), and the analysis of mind and matter that is the highest expression of the Teachings in the most accurate language (the Abhidhamma); and in the sense of putting into practice those Teachings. On another level, the word "Sangha" refers to all those who have attained one of the four levels of enlightenment: Sotapanna, Sakadagami, Anagami, Arahat. In this sense, laymen are included.

Ashin Maha-Buddhaghosa refers specifically to the Bhikkhu-Sangha in most of his discussion. This is because on the human level the Bhikkhu-Sangha is very important in keeping the Buddha's Teachings alive. When he goes into detail on how the rules for the Community of Bhikkhus are to be respected, this does not concern laymen except in so far as they will be more helpful in supporting the Bhikkhu-Sangha if they know the rules. But when Ashin Buddhaghosa discusses how the bhikkhus are to develop in virtue, these instructions can be very beneficial to laymen also.

Ashin Buddhaghosa, for example, cites a discourse given by the Buddha on the dangers of immoral actions. In the discourse the Buddha is addressing the bhikkhus but the same dangers exist for laymen as well.[1]

The Buddha described in seven vivid images the dangers of a bhikkhu breaking his virtue and, as an unvirtuous man accepting and using the requisites given by laymen. The unvirtuous man, he said, is evil-natured, of unclear or suspect habits, secretive about his actions, claims to be an ascetic but is not, claims to lead a life of purity but does not, is rotten within, lecherous and full of corruption.

(1) It would be better for a bhikkhu to embrace a burning fire that might burn him to death and cause great suffering but not lead to rebirth in a state of woe than to sit down or lie down with a woman, which results in the indulgence of the five cords of sense-desires.

(2) It would be better for an unvirtuous bhikkhu to have a strong horse-hair rope twisted so tightly around his legs that it cut through to the marrow of the bone than to consent to letting laymen pay homage to him.

(3) It would be better for an unvirtuous bhikkhu to be wounded in the breast by a sharp spear tempered in oil than to consent to the reverential salutation of laymen.

(4) It would be better for an unvirtuous bhikkhu to be wrapped in a red-hot iron sheet than to accept robes given in faith by laymen.

(5) It would be better for an unvirtuous bhikkhu to have his mouth prized open with red-hot iron tongs and that a red-hot ball be put in his mouth and burn through his lips, mouth, tongue, throat, belly and pass out below carrying with it his bowels and entrails than to use almsfood given in faith by laymen.

(6) It would be better for an unvirtuous bhikkhu to be seated or laid on a red-hot iron bed or iron chair than to use a bed or chair given in faith by laymen.

(7) It would be better for an unvirtuous bhikkhu to be plunged upside down into a red-hot cauldron than to use a dwelling given in faith by laymen.

Ashin Buddhaghosa ends his chapter on virtue in //The Path of Purification// with a list of the advantages of maintaining virtue. The bhikkhu with immaculate virtue gives pleasure and inspires trust in wearing his robes and carrying his bowl. He need never fear self-reproach. He shines like the sun and moon. The colour of his body is pleasing to the Devas -- and even more so the perfume of his virtue, for the perfume of virtue is greater than all other perfumes as it spreads unchecked in all directions. Deeds, no matter how small, done for a virtuous man bear great fruit. None of the intoxicants can plague him here and now, and he digs out the root of suffering in future lives. If he wishes perfection among men or Devas, it is not difficult for him to attain it. But once his virtue is perfected, he seeks only the perfection of Nibbana.

"The mind of one who understands thus," Ashin Buddhaghosa says, "shudders at failure in virtue and reaches out towards the perfecting of virtue. So virtue should be cleansed with all care, seeing this danger of failure in virtue and this benefit of the perfection of virtue.[2]

We will see through first-hand experience that if we are not firm in our resolution to avoid situations that lead to breaking //sila//, then we will encounter situations that overpower us. As the English saying goes, "He who hesitates is lost." Even though, at times, we may be able to force ourselves to do the right thing, many times we could have avoided the situation entirely. If we associate with people who are going to tempt us, prod us to do things such as killing, stealing, lying, drinking, committing adultery, etc., we will be less likely to be able to avoid such actions. If we frequent places where such people are found, we are more likely to come under their influence. It is useless to pretend we can save such people or that we are there with them so that our good influence will guide them. There are already many difficult situations that cannot be avoided. As the results of actions done in past lives mature in this life, we will find ourselves unavoidably thrown into situations where there will be strong temptations. It is sufficient to confront these situations and use all our energy and determination to do the right thing then. We do not need to put ourselves in such situations on purpose.

This is why, on the one hand, the Buddha said associating with the Noble Friend is the whole of the life of the Dhamma, but, on the other hand, he laid much emphasis on the advantages of the life of solitude. A Noble Friend who will help us grow in the Dhamma is not always available. If we cannot be with such persons, we are better off alone. Even alone, if we practise the Buddha's teachings, we will not feel lonely, for at such times we are close to the Buddha, the best of all friends.

There are three levels of effort to make: effort with regard to physical actions, with regard to verbal actions, and with regard to mental actions.

Here are some examples of making an effort with regard to physical actions. Let us take //not killing// as an example. If our self-control is not very highly developed, we may not even notice our anger until we are on the point of killing. We may be sitting very still, meditating, when a mosquito lands on our hand and starts to bite. We feel the pain and our reaction is so fast, our level of awareness so dull, we do not notice we are about to do a wrong action till our hand is raised, ready to kill the insect. If we //do// become aware at that moment of what we are about to do, we can restrain ourselves.

But there are better ways of dealing with such situations. If we reflect before we begin to meditate and realise that there are mosquitoes around and that if we do not take precautions we will probably be bitten by one, then we can look for a place that is protected; inside a mosquito net, perhaps. Or we can look for something to protect us; we can cover up the exposed parts of our body. Or, if this is not possible, we can prepare ourselves for the moment the mosquito will come and resolve that we will not kill it. It can help to review what we have learned of the Buddha's Teachings; that we have gone through countless lives in which we have killed and have suffered for killing. If we are to escape from this vicious circle, we must put an end to killing. No amount of physical discomfort in this life can equal one moment of the suffering that will result in future lives if we do not stop killing now.

Once, during our teacher's time, the Venerable Abhidhaja Maharattha

Guru Masoyein Sayadaw, Senior Abbot of Burma and President of the Chattha Sangayana, the Sixth Buddhist Synod, visited the shrine room of the Accountant General's Office, Yangon, on the occasion of a //swoon-kway// (inviting for a meal) hosted by Sayagyi U Ba Khin and his disciples. The //swoon-kway// was, in fact, the //dana// from two Indian students, Messrs. Venkataraman and Natarajan, who became Buddhists after meditating under Sayagyi. On this occasion, the Venerable Sayadaw was accompanied by an attendant who happened to notice Mr. Venkataraman in a state of deep meditation with rigid body and tight limbs, and who asked whether the latter would move if someone were to prick his body with a pin. To which Sayagyi replied, "Sir, we wouldn't attempt it, being afraid of Ariyarupa-antaraya if he is an Ariya.[3] But one thing I'm very sure of, that he could sit without moving in this hall at night with no covers on the body, just as he sits during the day. He can enter into this state at will for a predetermined period of time. Here, at the back of this building, there is a Hindu hotel which is very filthy. Workers throw all the rubbish and dirty water out the back where thousands of mosquitoes thrive and come up at night when students are sitting in the hall. It is a real hardship for the students, but Mr. Venkataraman can enter into states at will and can remain in one posture for three hours without moving."[4]

In later years, Sayagyi liked to recount this event, and he added some other details to the story. He told us that Mr. Venkataraman's father-in-law died in India in the late 1950s and he and his wife had to travel by boat to Calcutta. As he suffered from high blood pressure, Mr. Venkataraman had to be careful of his health and he usually got seasick on such journeys. So Sayagyi explained to him how he could overcome sea-sickness by going into deep meditation for three hours. Three times in succession, after a full and hearty meal and with the knowledge of his wife, he did this and the method worked.

When Sayagyi met Venerable Webu Sayadaw in 1941, while visiting the Sayadaw at his centre in Kyaukse, he reported that the venerable monk came out of the door of his hut followed by a swarm of mosquitoes. Sayagyi's attendant, a railway assistant station manager, wondered how the Sayadaw could meditate inside his room with all the mosquitoes. At least meditation could help one to forbear such disturbances.[5]

Now let us look at an example of wrong speech. Perhaps out of ignorance, when talking to other people, we speak in favour of killing mosquitoes. We may say something like, "I can't stand being bitten by mosquitoes. Just the sound of them buzzing around is enough to drive me crazy." In speaking in this way we are admitting our lack of control, implying that we will not try to learn how to control ourselves, and we will be encouraging the taking of life. What we say may be used by the other person to feel justified in killing mosquitoes himself. And the more we speak in this manner, the less inclined we will be to make the right effort ourselves.

Right effort for thoughts is the hardest of all. We must have the highest level of concentration for this. But if we train ourselves to recognize as soon as possible the wrong thoughts that precede killing the better we will be able to avoid such actions. Whenever we begin to think of mosquitoes, we will tend to have negative thoughts if there is no control. But if we can recognize this as it happens, then we can begin to train ourselves to come back to the breath below the nostrils and the touch of the air coming in and out. Or, if this doesn't work, we can remind ourselves of the Buddha's Teachings, as we mentioned before.

The greatest aid in our daily lives will be learning to control the senses. This means exercising as much control as possible over the things we pay attention to. The more we control what we see, hear, smell, taste, touch, and think, the better we will be able to lead moral lives. This in turn will help us to concentrate better and appreciate //anicca// more fully. It will mean that our lives will be happier.

We should do our best to control our senses the way those who have attained at least the first stage of enlightenment do. In the Burmese commentary on the //paramis//, the importance of being mindful is pointed out.[6] Killing, stealing, sexual misconduct, taking intoxicants and lying are all actions which lead to the lower planes of existence. Those who are Ariyas, who have reached at least the state of Stream-winner, never do such acts. Even if their lives are threatened they will not do such acts for they have eliminated the root of the tendency (//anusaya//) to do immoral acts. Observing the five precepts, which means abstaining from such acts, is necessary for all those who become Buddhists.

A layperson such as Mother Visakha, who was a Stream-winner, may have lawful sexual relations, eat after noon, dance and sing, etc., and use high and lofty seats and beds. But we should not take this to mean it is possible to indulge in such behaviour indiscriminately. To do so would mean that we would do so more and more and cultivate wrong view (//miccha-ditthi//). Ariyas do not use material things soliciting sense desire (//vatthu-kama//) in the same way an ordinary person does. In the commentary to the //Anguttara-nikaya// (The Book of the Gradual Sayings), it is said that the Ariyan disciple approaches agreeable formations (//sankhara//) like a clean brahman who seeks safety in a dung heap from an elephant in rut. For the Ariya, the burning fever (of desire) is subdued, calmed. Ordinary people, on the other hand, generally enjoy sensual pleasures with wrong view.

The quicker we are able to turn away from things which provoke unwholesome reactions and actions, the better off we will be. In the world today, we are constantly surrounded by sights and sounds, etc., which encourage us to react in an unwholesome manner. Advertising can serve as a good example. On the most direct level, we may be encouraged by advertisements to kill. This would include ads which tell us to buy a certain insect spray in order to kill insects or a poison to put on plants in the garden. In more subtle ways, ads which romanticize hunting and fishing or being a soldier are an encouragement to killing higher forms of life, including human beings. Even when people think they are acting out of compassion for other people's suffering by advocating euthanasia, they are encouraging killing. The Buddha pointed out that trying to predict where a person who dies or is killed will be reborn is like trying to predict exactly where a stick that we throw up in the air will land. We cannot say that we have reduced anyone's suffering through ending his life.

The more we give attention to such advertisements the more our thoughts will be filled with the idea of killing. We will not be able to lead a normal life as laypeople and avoid all contact with such ads. But we can give them as little attention as possible. We can turn away from them whenever possible.

We are less likely to find encouragement to steal in advertisements in magazines, on the radio or on television. But more and more novels and movies today represent the heroes as being able to steal and get away with it. This may be justified in the film by depicting the hero as a sort of Robin Hood who steals from the rich and gives to the poor, but even that is not often the case. The hero steals to make himself rich. We can usually get a general idea in advance of the subject matter of a book or movie before we read it or go to see it. So, it should be easy to avoid exposure to such immoral propaganda.

One of the major themes of advertising is sexual indulgence. This powerful force is used by businesses to sell almost any product: cars, newspapers, cigarettes, alcohol, perfumes, jewelry, etc. Almost any product can be directly or indirectly associated with physical attractiveness. Our eyes will be constantly coming into contact with images which will arouse our sexual desires. The songs we hear will rarely have any other theme than sensual love with all the attachment, craving and suffering that it involves.

Advertisements will also set us a very bad example when it comes to right speech. Exaggeration is the rule rather than the exception. Implications which are not directly stated, and so can be excused as not being direct lies, get across the message the seller wants us to believe. If we use a certain product, we will be beautiful, stay young, etc.

Among the biggest advertisers are the makers of alcohol. Even though doctors tell us that alcoholism is one of the leading diseases of mankind, very little is done to combat this disease when compared with the efforts made to encourage taking intoxicants. Even if we think that we are immune to temptation, exposing ourselves unnecessarily to the attractive image presented of taking alcohol will subtly break down our resolve or at the very least create tensions in us.

All these examples appeal to the six senses. Even when we are not in contact with such advertisements, we will find our thoughts turning to them. The better our ability to be conscious of the fact that the mind is indulging in unwholesome thoughts, the better we will be able to detach ourselves from them. We will be able to dismiss such thoughts and come back to the in-breath, the out-breath and the touch of the air below the nose.

We must make a conscious effort to minimize our exposure to all the encouragement around us to lead immoral lives. We can be more selective in the sorts of newspapers and magazines we read, in the books we read, the television programmes we watch and the movies we go to. We can avoid going to places where such temptations are found and we can avoid being with people who encourage us to break any of the precepts. This does not mean becoming sanctimonious or "holier than thou." We have friends and family for whom we are responsible. For them we can make every effort to be a good friend -- one who sets a good example and who encourages others to do good. But in situations where we are not responsible for other people, it is best to remember that in the ultimate sense each individual is responsible for his own actions. It is better to go our own way than to interfere and provoke ill will and agitation in ourselves and in others.
On the other hand, we may find ourselves confronted with a situation we cannot avoid when we would be compromising the Dhamma if we did not speak out clearly and firmly. In such cases, we must stand steadfast.

We will sometimes find ourselves in situations where it seems impossible to avoid breaking one of the precepts. Even a Bodhisatta may decide to do such actions as going to war to protect the citizens of his country. Such decisions are very difficult to make, and we must be very clear and able to think correctly if we are to make a wise decision.
Whatever we do we must never excuse ourselves, thinking that a good action can cancel out an immoral action. No matter how justified an immoral action may seem, it will result in future suffering. The Buddha said that even if we are being tortured to death, if we feel ill will towards those who are torturing us, we will suffer for it.

Studying the teachings of the Buddha can help us to avoid finding excuses for ourselves and help us to take responsibility for all our actions. The better we understand the Dhamma, the better we will be able to learn from our mistakes. We will stop blaming other people or circumstances for our wrong actions.

Bhikkhus, what is right effort? Bhikkhus, with regard to this the bhikkhu makes a resolution and an effort, mobilizes energy, concentrates and vigorously applies his mind in order that evil and inappropriate mental processes that have not yet arisen may not be produced. He makes a resolution and an effort, mobilizes energy, concentrates and vigorously applies his mind in order to expel evil and inappropriate mental processes that have already arisen. He makes a resolution and an effort, mobilizes energy, concentrates and vigorously applies his mind in order that skilful mental processes that have not yet arisen may be produced. He makes a resolution and an effort, mobilizes energy, concentrates and vigorously applies his mind in order that skilful mental processes that have already arisen may be stabilized, gain clarity, reach full growth, development and completeness.

Digha-nikaya (II 3l2)[7]

Sayagyi U Chit Tin

FOOTNOTES:

[1] GS III 185f.

[2] This discussion is an extract from //The Perfection of Virtue//, Dhammadana Series 4 of the publications by the Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, U.K.

[3] //Ariyarupa-antaraya// can be translated "endangering or causing harm to an Ariya." See pp. 14ff. in the biography of U Ba Khin by U Ko Lay. Also see "Men Seeking God" by C.P. Mayhew, MP, Great Britain; his Buddhist programme was televised by the BBC on the night of March 5, 1954 for half an hour. The then Chief Accounting Officer, Myanmar (Burmese) Embassy, London, reported to Sayagyi, in his letter dated April 5, 1954: "As a film it was excellent. However the time allowed was only 30 minutes (as for other religions) and I must say he could touch only the barest outline of Buddhism. The majority of Burmese residents in London saw the programme and were very impressed."

[4] Abhidhaja Maharattha Guru Masoyein Sayadaw took great interest in the work of Sayagyi's teaching meditation to Westerners and visited IMC-Yangon several times. When he visited in 1960, he saw the many letters of appreciation written by Western students regarding the practice of the Buddha-Dhamma and the fruits gained by coming to the centre, and he told Sayagyi that when these appreciations and experiences described by the students were published in the Maynmar language (Burmese) he would write an introduction, which he subsequently did.

[5] Webu Sayadaw was reputed to be an Arahat. He learned the scriptures under the above mentioned Sayadaw in Mandalay and then retired to the forest to practise meditation. He was given up for lost and his family was not able to trace him until he was seen in a forest near Kyaukse, forty miles south of Mandalay at a place popularly known as Webula Hill. He then took up residence at that place after the lay disciples in the vicinity built him meditation huts. Later on, they built him a meditation centre with many monasteries. He became known as Webu Sayadaw. Later his father came to visit him and asked him to return to his birth place, Ingyinbin village, where he afterwards founded another meditation centre.

In his earlier years, after he had learned the scriptures, he resided for a time in Shwebo, where another story of some interest occurred. The presiding monk in this place was older than Webu Sayadaw and for some time had been occupying himself with the question of who would be the best monk to take his place as the presiding abbot of his monastery. This monk, who also practised meditation, was impressed with Webu Sayadaw's behaviour and his scrupulous observance of the Vinaya rules. The old monk decided to hand over the monastery to Webu Sayadaw and retire into the forest to practise meditation more effectively. But the day after he made that decision the abbot was approached by Webu Sayadaw early in the morning and the latter requested permission to leave the monastery and retire into the forest himself. "Well, monk (//avuso//)," the abbot replied, "you are quicker than I to decide to retire into the forest. What can I say? Please help yourself. May you gain the Deathless."

After he founded the centres at Kyaukse and Ingyinbin-tawya, Webu Sayadaw was approached by the lay disciples of Shwebo, sixty miles north of Mandalay, who asked him to honour them by taking up residence in their city, as he had spent his early days there. The Sayadaw agreed and founded a third large meditation centre at Aung Mye Yeikthar in Shwebo. He customarily spent four months at each of the three places mentioned, but he always spent the rainy retreats at Kyaukse. After Mahapavarana, the full moon day of Thadingyut, his period of residence at Kyaukse ended and he would leave for Shwebo to reside and teach meditation there for the next four months. Then he would go to his birthplace, Ingyinbin-tawya village, another twenty-five miles north of Shwebo, where he spent the last quarter of the year teaching lay disciples and monks who came from all over the country.

In 1953, he was invited by Sayagyi U Ba Khin to give blessings and preach the Dhamma at IMC, 3la Inya Myaing Road, and he came with some monks and some of his relatives, both nuns and laymen to reside for seven days in June before the Buddhist lent. Beginning in 1954, the following year, he was invited annually by the lay disciples of Yangon and Lower Myanmar to visit the capital and many other cities of Lower Myanmar. He became very famous as he was already reputedly an Arahat. He was also well-known for the simplicity of his Dhamma teaching, which could be understood by ordinary laymen and laywomen and which, in fact, appealed to everyone who heard it. See pp. 213ff. in the biography of U Ba Khin by U Ko Lay.

[6] See //The Perfection of Virtue//, "Virtue as two kinds(a),"pp.11-14.

[7] DB II, p. 344. Our translation is based on Rune E.A. Johansson's //Pali Buddhist Texts// (Scandinavian Institute of Asian Studies, 2nd ed., 1977), pp. 84f. We prefer "vigorously applies" rather than "forces" for //pagganhati//.

Worldwide Contact Addresses
in the Tradition of Sayagyi U Ba Khin
~~~
~~~

AUSTRIA: International Meditation Centre, A-9064 St. Michael/Gurk 6, Austria;Tel: +43 4224 2820, Fax: +43 4224 28204
Email: CIS, IMC-Austria, 100425,3423

EASTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 2 Cessnock Road, Sunshine NSW 2264, Australia;
Tel: +61 49 705 433, Fax: +61 49 705 749

UNITED KINGDOM: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House, Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England;
Tel: +44 380 850 238, Fax: +44 380 850 833,
Email: CIS, IMC-UK,100330,3304

USA (East Coast): International Meditation Centre, 438 Bankard Road, Westminster MD 21158, USA;
Tel: +1 410 346 7889, Fax: +1 410 346 7133;
Email: CIS, IMC-USA, 74163,2452

WESTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 78 Jacoby Street, Mahogany Creek WA 6072, Australia;
Tel: +61 9 295 2644, Fax: +61 9 295 3435

CANADA: IMC-Canada, 336 Sandowne Drive, Waterloo, Ontario, N2K 1V8, Canada; Tel: +1 519 747 4762, Fax: +1 519 725 2781

GERMANY: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Christaweg 16, 79114 Freiburg, Germany, Tel: +49 761 465 42, Fax: +49 761 465 92

JAPAN: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, Komatsuri-Cho 923, Kishiwada-Shi, Osaka-Fu, 596 Japan, Tel: +81 724 45 0057

THE NETHERLANDS: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Stichting, Oudegracht 124, 3511 AW Utrecht, The Netherlands,
Tel: +31 30 311 445, Fax: +31 30 340 612

SINGAPORE: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Association, 9 Penang Road #07-12, Park Mall, Singapore 0923

Tel: +65 338 6911, Fax: +65 336 7211

SWITZERLAND: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Greyerzstrasse 35, 3013
Bern, Switzerland;Tel: +41 31 415 233, Fax: +41 61 271 4184;
Email: CIS, 100256,3576

USA (West Coast): Contact Address: IMC-USA c/o Joe McCormack, 77 Kensington Rd., San Anselmo, CA 94960,U.S.A.
Tel: +1 415 459 3117, Fax: +1 415 459 4837

BELGIUM: Address as for the Netherlands, Tel: +32 2 414 1756

DENMARK: Contact Address: Mr. Peter Drost-Nissen, Strandboulevarden
117, 3th, 2100 Kopenhagen, Denmark. Tel: 031 425 636

ITALY: Contact address: Mr. Renzo Fedele, Via Euganea 94, 35033
Bresseo PD, Italy. Tel: +39 49 9900 752

Published by the Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, United Kingdom
Address as above, registered charity no. 280134

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Leading Virtuous Lives as Laymen
FILENAME: LAYMEN.ZIP
AUTHOR: Sayagyi U Chit Tin
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: n/a
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House,
Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: The Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, U.K.
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1984
RIGHTS & RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: February 1995
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

ORIGIN SITE: BODY DHARMA * Berkeley CA 510/836-4717 DharmaNet (96:101/33)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end of file]

==========
This talk was given by Sayagyi U Chit Tin on October 12, 1985, to mark the seventh anniversary of when Mother Sayamagyi and he came out of Myanmar to teach the Buddha-Dhamma in the West.

It was printed in //The Maha Bodhi//, Vol. 94, nos. 1-3 (1986).
Also printed in //The Light of the Dhamma//, Vol. VII, no 3 (1987).
Also printed in //Buddhism As a Way of Life, and Other Essays//, 1993.
This DharmaNet edition was published 17 February 1995.
==========

PRACTISING THE BUDDHA-DHAMMA AS LAYMEN

by Sayagyi U Chit Tin

In //The Essentials of the Buddha-Dhamma in Meditation Practice//, Sayagyi U Ba Khin points out that during the Buddha's lifetime there were around ninety million people living in Savatthi and the neighbouring countryside.[1] Of these, approximately fifty million were Ariyas, having reached the first stage of Awakening. We can conclude from these figures that the number of laymen who took to Vipassana (insight meditation) must have been more than those who were in the Orders of Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunis. Laymen of today should therefore be encouraged in their effort to put into practice the Teachings of the Buddha in their everyday lives. It can be done.

In the collection of the Suttas, there are a number of discourses given by the Buddha to laypeople. Let us look at one given to the brahman householders of Sala and Veranja.[2] The circumstances of this talk are similar to several others given to laypeople. The people of Sala and Veranja had heard of the Buddha and of his reputation. They approached him with a question often asked by laypeople. They wished to know why some people were reborn in lower planes of existence and why others were reborn in the higher planes.

The Buddha answers this question -- but he also adds that it is possible to aspire to something far greater than heavenly worlds. The Buddha first gave a very concise reply to their question: some people go to lower worlds including the hells because they live unrighteously and live unbalanced lives; some people go to heavenly worlds through living righteously (Dhamma-cariya) and because they live balanced lives (sama-cariya).

The laymen of each town said that they did not understand the full meaning of what the Buddha had said and they requested that he give them a full explanation. The Buddha then explained that unrighteous living -- that is to say, not following the Dhamma -- involves wrong actions: unbalanced physical, verbal, and mental actions. On the other hand, righteous living, which follows the Dhamma and is balanced, means actions which are of the opposite kind. In summarizing the Buddha's discourse, we will emphasize the type of life which follows the Dhamma.

The Buddha mentions three kinds of actions of the body. Unrighteous and unbalanced living means killing, stealing, and indulging in sensual pleasures -- wrong sexual practices are mentioned in particular. Righteous and balanced living means refraining from killing -- a person will lay aside stick and sword, live scrupulously, and be merciful, kindly and compassionate to all living creatures. Such a person does not take what is not given and he restrains himself from indulging in wrong actions with regard to sensual pleasures. Here the Buddha specifies that a man does not have intercourse with women who are under the protection of others. We can infer from the list that all sexual relations outside of marriage are to be avoided.

There are four kinds of speech. Unrighteous and unbalanced speech includes lies, slander, harsh speech, and frivolous chatter. A person who follows the Dhamma will abandon lying. If he is called as a witness, he will tell what he knows and what he has seen, but if he does not know something, he will say so. He will not intentionally lie for his own sake, for someone else's sake, or in order to obtain material gain.

In avoiding slander, a person will not repeat what he has heard in order to set people against each other. He will work to reconcile those who are disputing and to bring friends close together. He will take pleasure in concord rather than discord. He will delight in concord. It will be a joy to him and will motivate his speech.

In abandoning harsh speech, a person will say what is gentle, pleasing, affectionate, going to the heart, courteous, and pleasant to many people. This is in contrast to the wrong kind of speech which is rough, hard, severe on others, abusive of others, bordering on wrath and not conducive to concentration.

In contrast to indulging in frivolous chatter, a person will speak at the right time, in accordance with fact. He will speak about the goal, about the Dhamma, about discipline. What he says will be worth treasuring. His similes will be timely, with a purpose, and related to the goal.

In a discourse to the bhikkhus, the Buddha distinguished between two kinds of right speech. The first kind of right speech will lead to future lives. It will have taints and will involve clinging to future existence (but it will be on the side of merit). It involves abstaining from the four kinds of wrong speech: lying, slander, harsh speech and gossiping. The second kind of right speech is Noble (ariyan), free of taints, supramundane and part of the Path to Nibbana. In addition to abstaining from, refraining from, avoidance of and restraint from the four kinds of wrong speech, one should develop the Noble Path through Noble thoughts, thoughts free of the taints, and one should know the Path.[3]

The right actions of body and speech that the Buddha taught to the laymen of Sala and Veranja are included in the precepts for virtuous living followed by all true Buddhists. The minimum number of precepts, which must be respected at all times, are the five precepts. These include four righteous actions of the body: not killing, not stealing, and abstaining from indulging in sensual pleasures, including adultery and taking intoxicants. The fifth precept is to abstain from lying. So we can see that here, the Buddha gives a more detailed explanation of the control over verbal actions. A group of eight precepts (ajivatthamaka-sila) for laypeople includes these four types of right speech.[4]In addition, there are the three types of right kindly actions the Buddha gave the people of Sala and Veranja and the eighth precept is right livelihood.

Of particular interest in this discourse of the Buddha's is the fact that he speaks of mental actions as well as actions of body and speech. The three kinds of unrighteous and unbalanced thoughts include coveting other people's property, being malevolent and corrupt in thought and purpose, and being of wrong view. (These kinds of thoughts have the three roots of wrong action at their source: greed, hatred and delusion [lobha, dosa, moha].) The absence of these three roots will lead to the three kinds of righteous and balanced thoughts.

A person should not covet other people's property. He should not be malevolent in mind or corrupt in his thoughts and purpose. He should think to himself, "May others be friendly, peaceful, secure, happy, and protect themselves." He should have right view, which includes thinking correctly concerning worldly affairs. He should believe that for a person who gives there will be a future result, that sacrifice will give future results, that actions that are well done or badly done will give appropriate results. He should believe that this world exists, as does a world beyond, that fulfilling one's duty to one's mother and father gives good results, that there are beings who are spontaneously reborn, and that there are those in the world who live correctly and who teach about this world and the world beyond, having understood them with their own higher knowledge.

This development of right thoughts will prove to be useful in doing right actions. A person who is free of desire for other people's property will not steal. Those who are free of hatred will not kill, they will not wish to lie or slander or use harsh words. Those who correctly understand the results of actions will not indulge in these kinds of wrong actions, and they will realize that frivolous talk can only lead to suffering in the future.

The Buddha then told the laymen that through the righteous, balanced living he has just described, a person may be reborn as a rich man or in the Deva and Bramha worlds. Finally, he adds that it can also lead to the highest goal of all, Nibbana. In this way, a person can destroy the taints and enjoy the freedom of mind and freedom through wisdom by his own higher knowledge. So the Buddha, in addition to answering the laymen's question about what leads to future suffering and future happiness, also gave them a hint that they should strive for freedom from any future world.

Anyone who has tried to control his thoughts, as recommended by the Buddha, will realize that it is very difficult. The most difficult thing in the world, in fact. This is why it is so important that we learn how to concentrate our thoughts. Through mindfulness of breathing (anapana-sati), laypeople today can bring their minds under their own control. The better the control the better they will be able to think the three types of thoughts given by the Buddha and perform good bodily and verbal actions.

Control of thoughts is especially important with regard to speech. At first, we may find that even though we do not exercise complete control we are able to recognize immediately afterwards when we use wrong speech. If we see ourselves more clearly and if we make progress in being honest with ourselves as well as others, we will not try to excuse ourselves and justify our wrong speech. We will face up to our lies. We will admit to ourselves when we are looking for some benefit for ourselves or others. We will also be able to see the effect of our words, and we will see the pain caused if we try to set people against each other. We will soon prefer to look for a way to use gentle speech rather than say something harsh. We will not have the mistaken view that shouting at others is for their own good.

There may be an occasion when a person will speak to another even though the other person will become angry, but such occasions will be very rare. This will only be when one is sure that through speaking to him the person will be easily convinced of what is said and will be persuaded o give up unskilful actions and do what is skilful.[5] The Buddha compared this with the compassion of a parent who will be rough with a baby to get a stick or stone out of its mouth. The important thing in this connection is that one truly knows it is the right time to speak.[6]

An illustration of how difficult it is to know when to speak or not is illustrated in the case of the novice Aricavata.[7] This novice was approached by Prince Jayasena who is described as always pacing up and down and always roaming about. He asked Aricavata if a bhikkhu who was diligent, ardent and self-resolute could attain one-pointedness of mind. Aricavata answered that this was possible. So Prince Jayasena requested that the novice teach him the Dhamma. But the novice hesitated. "If I were to teach you the Dhamma as I have heard it, as I have mastered it," he said, "and if you could not understand the meaning of what I said, that would be wearisome to me, that would be vexing for me." The prince insisted, however, so Aciravata taught him. Then the prince declared that he did not think it was possible for a bhikkhu to attain one-pointedness of mind.

Aciravata went to the Buddha and explained what had happened. The Buddha told him that Prince Jayasena lived surrounded by sensual pleasures. He enjoyed them and was consumed by thoughts of sensual pleasures. He burned with the fever of sensual pleasures and eagerly sought sensual pleasures. Therefore, it was impossible for him to know, see, attain or realize what can be known, seen, attained or realized by renunciation.

The Buddha then pointed out to Aciravata that if he had used appropriate similes, Prince Jayasena would have been able to understand. He should have pointed out that while animals who receive no training will never be tamed, animals who do receive training will be tamed, or he could have used the illustration of two friends who go up to a mountain. One of them then climbs the mountain and describes the parks, woods, level ground and ponds that he can see. His companion does not believe him. So he has the companion climb up to see for himself. As long as the companion was hemmed in by the mountain slope, he could not see what was to be seen.

The novice Aciravata pointed out that since these two similes had only just then been given by the Buddha, he could not have known them and used them in his discussion with Prince Jayasena.

This incident can be a lesson to people who wish to tell others about the Buddha's Teachings. They should not over-estimate their ability to understand how best to explain the Dhamma to others. No one has the ability of the Buddha to know how best to teach others. We can also see the importance of being familiar with the Teachings. The more we understand, the better the chance we will be able to use an appropriate explanation.

The most important lesson to be learned from this discourse, however, is the importance of control over the senses. The restless prince was such a slave to the pleasures of the material world that he could not believe it is possible to control the mind.

The Buddha pointed out in a discourse to a group of bhikkhus the benefits to be derived from mindfulness of the body.[8] Mindfulness of the body, the Buddha explains, leads to a mind which is utterly pure and clean, inwardly settled, calmed, focused and concentrated. On the other hand, he warns, if mindfulness of the body is not developed, the leader of negative forces, Mara, will gain access.

It is therefore very important that laypeople be able to control their senses. This will make it possible to follow the precepts and work for happiness in this life and future lives. But more important, it is essential if we are to work for the true happiness of Nibbana.

The Buddha used very telling images to illustrate the sort of control we need in a discourse addressed to Venerable Ananda.[9] He tells Ananda that in the development of control over the senses in the discipline for the Noble, the six senses of the eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and mind will be stimulated by shapes, sounds, smells, tastes, touches and mental states which will be either liked, disliked or both liked and disliked. A person should be able to be aware that such sensations are present very quickly. For sights, it should be as quick as opening or closing the eyes. For sounds, it should be as quick as a finger snap; for smells, as quick as raindrops sliding off a lotus leaf that is slightly slanted; for tastes, as quick as spitting; for touches, as quick as a strong man bending or stretching out his arm; for mental states, as quick as a few drops of water drying up when they fall in a red-hot iron vessel. Whether the sensations arising are liked, disliked or both liked and disliked, it should be all the same to a person. In this way, they will be stopped and equanimity will be established.

This refers to those who are fully Awakened, Arahats. It is useful to know the goal to be reached, however, and to appreciate how much control over the mind is possible. For those who are still learners, the Buddha points out, sensations will cause them to be troubled and ashamed and the sensations will be loathed.

So we can see how important it is for laypeople to lead righteous and balanced lives, and how essential it is to develop control over the mind and the senses if this is to be done. We can all aspire to the perfect equanimity of the Arahats.

The Buddha in his discourse to the people of Sala and Veranja answers their question about what leads to good or bad results in future lives. We do not need to wait until then to reap the benefits of leading righteous, balanced lives. Venerable Buddhaghosa in the Visuddhimagga quotes several texts from the Suttas in which the Buddha describes present benefits.[10]

The first quotation is from the Buddha's answer to Venerable Ananda's question, "What is the object of, what profit is there, in good conduct?"[11] The Buddha answers that being free of remorse is the object of and profit in good conduct. In other words, if we live moral lives, we will have a clear conscience. Ananda continued to question the Buddha and through his answers the Buddha showed that freedom from remorse leads to joy, which leads to rapture and so on -- through calm, happiness, concentration, seeing things as they really are, turning away, and fading of interest, one reaches the release through knowing and seeing. "So you see, Ananda," the Buddha concluded, "good conduct leads gradually up to the highest."

Shortly before his death, the Buddha taught the laymen of Pataligama that there are five bad results for the immoral person and five good results for the moral person. If a person is immoral: (1) he is poor through indolence, (2) he has a bad reputation, (3) he is confused and lacks confidence whenever he goes to a meeting, (4) he has anxiety when he dies, and (5) he is reborn in the lower worlds of suffering, including the lowest of the hells.

On the other hand, if a person is moral: (1) he becomes wealthy through being industrious, (2) he has a good reputation, (3) he is confident and self-possessed whenever he goes to a meeting, (4) he dies without anxiety, and (5) he is reborn in a heavenly world.

Even if a person does not feel ready to try for the final goal of Awakening, Nibbana, these benefits of leading moral lives are well worth the effort. If a person has wealth, a good reputation, self-confidence, and no fear of death and what comes after, he will certainly be much happier than the average person in this world.

If development of the mind and of insight into the true reality of existence is added to moral living, the benefits can be far greater. This is pointed out in Ashin Buddhaghosa's last quotation which is from a discourse given by the Buddha to a group of bhikkhus.[12] Certain aspects of what the Buddha says apply particularly to bhikkhus, but we can apply the basic ideas to the lives of laypeople.

First of all, the Buddha points out that the bhikkhus should respect the moral code, seeing the danger there is in the slightest fault. With this strong basis, they will be able to be intent on internal mental tranquillity with uninterrupted meditation, intent on attaining insight, and intent on seeking seclusion in order to work properly. Laypeople today can also work for mental calm through developing their concentration, even if they do not reach the highest stages of uninterrupted mindfulness that are possible for those who retire from everyday life or who make significant progress along the Path to Nibbana. They can acquire sufficient concentration to began developing insight. Even if laypeople of today do not retire from everyday life permanently, it is possible to do so for certain periods during the day, for a day or more during the month, and for longer periods from time to time to undergo training in developing their concentration and insight through following a meditation course.

The range of benefits that can be expected, as the Buddha explains, go from relatively minor advantages all the way to the highest goal. First of all, a person will be dear to his companions in the life of purity, loved by them, and held in respect and honoured by them. Bhikkhus will receive the four necessities of life, which correspond to the wealth to be expected for laypeople which we mentioned already. If we wish that others who give to us should acquire great merit, then this will be the case, for we will be of great merit ourselves. The more highly developed a person is, the greater the merit there is in giving to him. When others make in giving to us they can share that merit. We will also be able to overcome aversion and craving, as well as fear and dread. The Buddha then enumerates the various stages of concentration, Awakening, and higher mental powers which the bhikkhus could strive to attain. All of these will not be appropriate for laypeople to aspire to, but the first three stages of Awakening are certainly within the grasp of all who have the necessary merits and who make the right kind of effort in this life.

Let us conclude with the Buddha's advice to Ananda:[13] "Whatever, Ananda, is to be done out of compassion by a teacher seeking the welfare of his disciples and compassionate for them, that has been done by me for you. ... Meditate, Ananda, do not be slothful, do not be remorseful later. This is our instruction to you."

Sayagyi U Chit Tin,
October 12, 1985
Campus "De Blokken"
Baarle-Nassau, The Netherlands

FOOTNOTES:

[1] In Sn-a I 371, 18 crores (180 million) people are mentioned (see DPPN II 1127). Savatthi was the capital of Kosala and one of the six great cities of India during the lifetime of the Buddha (D II 147). Ashin Buddhaghosa says that Savatthi was the capital of two countries: Kasi-Kosala (Sp III 614), so the number of inhabitants mentioned in Sn-a may refer to both countries, and the number in Savatthi itself might have been half that number.

[2] M n 41, n 42 (MLS I 343-350).

[3] M III 73f. (MLS III 116f.).

[4] For more details about //ajivatthamaka-sila//, see Ledi Sayadaw,

//The Requisites of Enlightenment// (Wheel 171/174).

[5] See M n 103 (MLS III 27).

[6] See M n 58 (MLS II 62f.).

[7] See M n 125 (MLS III 175-183).

[8] See M n 119 (MLS III 129-138); for references to Mara, see MLS III pp. 134ff.

[9] See M n 152 (MLS III 346-350).

[10] See Path, Chapter I para23.

[11] See A V 1ff. (GS V 1-3).

[12] M n 1 (MLS I 41-45).

[13] MLS III 350.

Worldwide Contact Addresses
in the Tradition of Sayagyi U Ba Khin
~~~~~~

AUSTRIA: International Meditation Centre, A-9064 St. Michael/Gurk 6, Austria;Tel: +43 4224 2820, Fax: +43 4224 28204
Email: CIS, IMC-Austria, 100425,3423

EASTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 2 Cessnock Road, Sunshine NSW 2264, Australia;
Tel: +61 49 705 433, Fax: +61 49 705 749

UNITED KINGDOM: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House, Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England;
~~~~~~

Tel: +44 380 850 238, Fax: +44 380 850 833,
Email: CIS, IMC-UK,100330,3304

USA (East Coast): International Meditation Centre, 438 Bankard Road, Westminster MD 21158, USA;
Tel: +1 410 346 7889, Fax: +1 410 346 7133;
Email: CIS, IMC-USA, 74163,2452

WESTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 78 Jacoby Street, Mahogany Creek WA 6072, Australia;
Tel: +61 9 295 2644, Fax: +61 9 295 3435

CANADA: IMC-Canada, 336 Sandowne Drive, Waterloo, Ontario, N2K 1V8, Canada; Tel: +1 519 747 4762, Fax: +1 519 725 2781

GERMANY: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Christaweg 16, 79114 Freiburg, Germany, Tel: +49 761 465 42, Fax: +49 761 465 92

JAPAN: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, Komatsuri-Cho 923,
Kishiwada-Shi, Osaka-Fu, 596 Japan, Tel: +81 724 45 0057

THE NETHERLANDS: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Stichting, Oudegracht 124, 3511 AW
Utrecht, The Netherlands,
Tel: +31 30 311 445, Fax: +31 30 340 612

SINGAPORE: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Association, 9 Penang Road #07-12, Park Mall, Singapore 0923
Tel: +65 338 6911, Fax: +65 336 7211

SWITZERLAND: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Greyerzstrasse 35, 3013
Bern, Switzerland;Tel: +41 31 415 233, Fax: +41 61 271 4184;
Email: CIS, 100256,3576

USA (West Coast): Contact Address: IMC-USA c/o Joe McCormack, 77 Kensington Rd., San Anselmo, CA 94960,U.S.A.
Tel: +1 415 459 3117, Fax: +1 415 459 4837

BELGIUM: Address as for the Netherlands, Tel: +32 2 414 1756

DENMARK: Contact Address: Mr. Peter Drost-Nissen, Strandboulevarden 117, 3th, 2100 Kopenhagen, Denmark. Tel: 031 425 636

ITALY: Contact address: Mr. Renzo Fedele, Via Euganea 94, 35033 Bresseo PD, Italy. Tel: +39 49 9900 752

Published by the Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, United Kingdom
Address as above, registered charity no. 280134

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Practising the Buddha-Dhamma as Laymen
FILENAME: LAYPRACT.ZIP
AUTHOR: Sayagyi U Chit Tin
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: n/a
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House, Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: The Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, U.K.
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1985
RIGHTS & RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: 17 February 1995
ORIGIN SITE: BODY DHARMA * Berkeley CA 510/836-4717 DharmaNet (96:101/33)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end of file]

LAY BUDDHIST PRACTICE

The Shrine Room, Uposatha Day, Rains Residence

by Bhikkhu Khantipalo

Wheel Publication No. 206/207
ISSN Cey. 0068-3345

First Edition 1974
Reprint 1982

Copyright 1974, 1982, 1995 Buddhist Publication Society

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY SRI LANKA

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription: David Savage
Proofreading & Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

CONTENTS

Preface
Introduction
Daily Practice
- The Shrine Room
- The Offerings
- Gestures of Respect
- The Preliminary Formula of Revering the Buddha
- The Three Refuges
- The Five Precepts
- The Recollection of the Three Treasures
- The Five Subjects for Daily Recollection
- The Development of Loving-kindness
- Meditation
- Anumodana
- Chanting
- The Laity's Practice of Dhamma

Uposatha
- The Eight Precepts

The Rains Residence
The Purpose of These Practices
The Discourse to Visakha on the Uposatha with the Eight Practices
Appendix of Pali Passages

* * * * * * * *

PREFACE

In the following pages I have tried to write about those things that a lay Buddhist can do even though his home is far away from Buddhist lands, or even from Buddhist temples and societies. I have had to consider the various daily and periodic events of the Buddhist calendar and retain here only those items which can be practiced by lay Buddhists without access to bhikkhus, monasteries, temples, stupas, and so on. Out of the rich traditions found in Buddhist countries, only three subjects have been dealt with: the daily service chanted in homage of the Three Treasures with some recollections and meditation; the Uposatha days with the Eight Precepts; and the Rains-residence of three months. Most has been here about the first of these as it is very important to have some regular daily Dhamma-practice.

Even where isolated Buddhists are fortunate enough to be near some Buddhist center, they will still benefit from these Buddhist practices, all of which are based on similar methods used in the East.

Bhikkhu Khantipalo
Sydney, Australia

* * * * * * * *

INTRODUCTION

These days there are many books on Buddhism, some reliable and more speculative, so that a Buddhist living in a country where his religion is quite newly introduced is likely to have some difficulty in discerning what is really the teaching of the Buddha. However, this difficulty can be overcome by the study of the original sources, the Pali Canon, and need not be a great hindrance. Of course, if the student can gain the help of some well learned and practiced Buddhist he will understand Dhamma more quickly and thoroughly.

He will also be able to practice more easily. For it is a great difficulty, even if one has a good acquaintance with the Suttas (the Discourses of the Buddha), to know //how// to practice their teaching.

This is more a problem for Buddhists who have to acquire all their knowledge about the Dhamma from books. One hears people like this say, "I am a Buddhist but what should I practice?" It is not enough to answer this question with more or less abstract categories, saying for instance, "Well, practice the Eightfold Path!" After all, it is not so easy to practice the Dhamma in an alien environment where bhikkhus (Buddhist monks), viharas (temple-monasteries) and stupas (monuments containing relics, also called cetiyas, pagodas or dagobas) are not found. In Buddhist lands where these and other signs of the Dhamma are to be seen, the lay person has many aids to practice and is not without help when difficulties arise. But elsewhere the layman must rely upon books. Leaving aside those which are misleading (frequently written by western people who have never thoroughly trained themselves in any Buddhist tradition) and if even the most authentic sources alone are studied, still the mind tends to be selective of the materials available so that it is possible to get one-sided views. Now it can be a good corrective to stay in a Buddhist country for some time and get to know how things are done but not everyone has the opportunity to do this. Here then I should like to touch upon a few common ways of Buddhist practice. I shall try to be as general as possible in these matters so that my descriptions are not peculiar to the Buddhist country that I know best, Siam, but may be common to many Buddhist traditions.

* * * * * * * *

DAILY PRACTICE

The Shrine Room

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

It is best to start with practices which are common to all Buddhist traditions for every-day observance. It is usual, among the more wealthy lay Buddhists, to have a small room set aside for their daily devotions, or at least a curtained-off recess. A few might even have a small separate building. Even poor people, with little space in their houses, have a special shelf high on the wall on which a Buddha-image or picture is placed together with the usual offerings (see below). Nowhere in the Buddhist world are Buddha-images treated as ornaments for a living room. And a Buddha image is always given the highest "seat" in the room, that is, the Buddha-image is displayed in the place of honor. In the shrine-room this will be on the highest part of a shrine. If on a special shelf (often carved and decorated with color and gold), then that shelf is usually high on the wall and has nothing above it. The fact that one places the symbol of one's Teacher in the highest place shows one's high regard for him. For this reason alone it is obvious that Buddha-images should not be placed on mantelpieces and miscellaneous furniture. Also, if the shrine occupies part of the room used for sleeping (this would be contrary to some Buddhist traditions), it should be near the head of the bed, not at its foot. This is because that part of the body which houses most of the organs of sense and is the physical base of much mental activity -- that is, the head -- the topmost part of a person, should be directed to what one esteems as the highest, in this case, the symbol of the Buddha. But feet, however useful, are easily dirtied and become ill-smelling quickly and should never be pointed at any person who is respected and certainly not at a shrine, whether Buddha-image or stupa.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Perhaps some may object to such matters. One may be able to hear some people growling, "Buddhism has nothing to do with such things!" But this attitude ignores the fact that the Dhamma is relevant to all circumstances, also that fine conduct was praised by the Buddha, not ignored by him. So such things do matter if one is going to have objects of reverence such as Buddha-images. Whenever we think that such matters are not worth troubling over then we are just careless and unmindful. A Buddha-image should be treated respectfully and it is a good way of training oneself to treat the Buddha-image as one would Gotama the Buddha himself. Reverence (apacayana) is a part of the Dhamma which should not be neglected for it helps in the overcoming of conceit. Buddhists of all traditions have shrines with images, paintings, stupas and so on, just because reverence is an essential part of Buddhist training. From practices based on reverence are born humility in oneself and harmonious relationships with others and the Buddha tells us that four qualities increase for those who are respectful and honor those who are senior to them: "Long life and beauty, happiness and strength" (Dhp 109). Who does not want them?

To digress a little here on the objection raised above. This might be made by a person of rational temperament who had been able to read some translations from the Pali Canon but who had never met with Buddhist teachers or been to Buddhist countries. From his reading such a person might get the impression that Theravada is coolly logical, in fact a sort of eastern humanism. But this shows the selectiveness of the mind since all through the Suttas there are examples of reverence and devotion. It is true that the Buddha did not encourage his followers to give full reign to their emotions with unrestrained outbursts (in contrast to Hindu and other teachers who have emphasized that bhakti (devotion to a god) is all). However, He did lay down three forms of reverence for bhikkhus; wearing the robe with the right shoulder bared, kneeling down, and holding the palms of the hands together in the gesture of reverence. Prostration at the feet of the Buddha is also mentioned many times in the Suttas. Lay people are free to show their reverence in any suitable way and people of those times were recorded in the Suttas as expressing their reverence variously:

> So the Kalamas of Kesaputta approached the Lord. Having approached him, some prostrated towards the Lord and sat down at one side; some greeted the Lord politely, and having conversed in a friendly and courteous way, sat down to one side; some raising their hands in anjali to the Lord sat down to one side, some called out their names and those of their clans and sat down to one side; while others saying nothing sat down to one side.
>
> [Kalama Sutta, Anguttara-nikaya iii 65 (PTS edition). See, "A Criterion of True Religion," Mahamakut Press, Bangkok, and "The Kalama Sutta," Wheel No. 8, BPS, Kandy, Sri Lanka]

No doubt these expressions depended upon their confidence and serenity (saddha-pasada). Down to the present time, Theravada tradition in any Buddhist country is rich in the various forms of reverence accorded to Buddha-images, stupas and to the Sangha. So a negative view as the one mentioned is neither an advantage for practice nor in agreement with tradition.

But other people too might have such ideas, for instance some who have read about the iconoclastic attitude of some Zen masters, or of the siddhas who were the last partly Buddhist teachers in India before the extinction of Buddhism there. There are remarks and actions recorded of some of the former teachers which might lead one to expect that whatever else Zen is, surely reverence plays no part in it. Such people are bound to be a little startled by the emphasis on reverence and the large devotional element present in the daily training of anyone, monastic or lay, who stays in a Zen training temple. The siddhas too spoke against rituals but that was because they were faced with a great overgrowth of Buddhist ritualistic devotion gradually accumulated through centuries of Mahayana and Vajrayana. In matters of devotion, as in other things, one should remember that the Buddha himself taught "Dhamma in the middle", with the rejection of extremes, Confidence (saddha) should be balanced with wisdom (panna), but one-sided practice will not lead to great fruits.

Another sort of objection which has been raised is that the forms of respect in Buddhist tradition are specially Asiatic and not suitable for Buddhists in other countries. One hears of calls for a peculiarly British or American Buddhism divested of "Asiatic trimmings". Perhaps the various non-Indian peoples to whom Buddhism has spread also raised such objections when Buddhist tradition contrasted with their own established cultures. However that may have been, the Dhamma requires some time before it puts its roots down in any culture and before one can even begin to imagine western forms of Buddhism, westerners who have long trained in the Sangha, become learned and serene in their hearts are necessary. The priority in Buddhism is on properly trained people, not on arguments as to exterior forms.

Now, to return to the shrine room. Lay people will find it most useful in the morning and evening, and perhaps on some days when more time can be given to the cultivation of calm and insight. The usual course of practice taught for lay people in Buddhist countries is that they should practice giving (dana) according to their faith, and as far as their circumstances allow make an effort to keep the precepts (sila) pure, and as far as they are able so develop the mind in meditation (bhavana). That is to say, those who are less interested in Dhamma practice should at least make an effort to be generous. If they give nothing, or very little when more could be given, they are making little or no effort to go against the worldly stream of craving. Some who cultivate generosity may not be very good at keeping some of the Precepts but they are practicing a valuable part of Dhamma. And it is reckoned much more practical to be open-handed and devoted to the Buddha than it is merely to have a lot of unpracticed book-learning. Next will come people who not only make an effort to give generously but also try to keep the precepts. They try to conform their actions to what agrees with the Five Precepts and perhaps on special occasions undertake Eight Precepts as well, a subject to be discussed below. Finally, there are those who are able to practice more than dana and sila and try to cultivate their minds every day through meditation. Now the shrine-room is the place where at least the last two of these Dhamma-practices may be undertaken.

It should be a quiet place and one which is screened or curtained off from the sight of people not interested in Dhamma. it is desirable to have some such place apart from ordinary living rooms, devoted only to Dhamma-practice and where the furnishings will remind one only of Dhamma. though these may be quite elaborate in Buddhist countries, really nothing is needed which is difficult to obtain. Probably the most difficult and perhaps expensive, is the Buddha-image. Failing to obtain that, an inspiring picture of the Buddha may be used. Or if one cannot be found then a good reproduction of some famous stupa could be one's focus. Whatever it is, with its beauty it should evoke harmony and peace. If there is an image then one requires a low table to place it on-so that the Buddha-image is just a little higher than one's head when kneeling down. So it will be an advantage if one can kneel down on a soft mat on the floor and dispense with chairs. Once kneeling, it is easy to seat oneself after offerings and recollections in meditation posture. The table upon which the Buddha-image is placed could be covered with a new cloth, perhaps something beautiful in color and texture, for beauty used with restraint, is an aid to devotion. In front of the Buddha-table another and lower one might be used for the offerings, something like the sketch on the facing page.

The Offerings

Apart from the Buddha-image in the place of honor, one may have other Buddhist objects round or on the shrine, such as scroll-paintings, Buddhist symbols such as the lotus-bud, wheel of Dhamma or the Bodhi-leaf, or miniature stupas, and so on. But three things are certainly needed on the shrine for making the usual offerings: candlesticks (lamps for oil, etc. in some traditions), an incense burner and vases or trays for flowers.

In Asian countries one may see many other things offered: food, water, drinks, fruit, etc. The idea behind this kind of offering is gratitude to the Teacher, and the consideration that one should not partake of good things without first having offered something, symbolically, to Lord Buddha. The word "offering" rather suggests that one expects those things to be "accepted" but of course the Buddha having attained Nibbana is beyond acceptance and rejection. the Pali word for these things makes this matter clearer: //sakkara// is that which should be //done properly// and means firstly, //honor// and //hospitality// given to guests and so by extension, to a symbol of one's Teacher.

Regarding the incense-burner, though various patterns are used in the East, the cleanest method is to part fill an open- mouthed bowl with clean sand and to place this on a saucer or other flat vessel. This should collect most of the ash. Some Buddhist traditions do not use vases but as in Sri Lanka arrange the flowers in patterns on trays or platters. This method, of course, requires time, while the flowers quickly demonstrated their impermanence.

People quite often ask why these three things in particular are offered. The offering of flowers is a bridge to the contemplation of the body's impermanence. An ancient Sinhalese Pali composition may be translated like this:

These flowers, bright and beautiful, fragrant and good-smelling, handsome and well-formed -- soon indeed discolored, ill-smelling and ugly they become.
This very body, beautiful, fragrant and well-formed, soon indeed discolored, ill-smelling and ugly it becomes.
This body of mine too is of the same nature, will become like this,
and has not escaped from this.

Candles or lights are lit to symbolize the light of Dhamma which one should find in one's own heart, driving out the darkness of the defilements there. In the Dhammapada (verse 387) there is a suitable verse for recitation while making this offering:

The sun is bright by day,
the moon lights up the night,
armored shines the warrior, contemplative, the brahmana,
but all the day and night-time too resplendent does the Buddha shine.

Incense having a good smell is lighted to remind one that the Dhamma-light can only be found with the aid of good moral conduct (sila) which has been so many times praised by the Buddha, as in these Dhammapada verses (56, 54, 55):

Slight is this perfume
of tagara and sandalwood, best the perfume of the virtuous blowing even to the devas.
The perfume of flowers does not go against the wind,
neither that of sandalwood, jasmine, or tagara:
but the perfume of the virtuous does go against the wind.
The good man suffuses all directions, Sandalwood or tagara, lotus or the jasmine great -- of these perfumes various, virtue's perfume is unexcelled.

If these offerings are made with mindfulness of their meaning then they are not without good results.[*] Also, they act as objects for focusing the mind, which in the morning may still be sleepy, or in the evening may be distracted by the events of the day. These offering lead one to concentrate the mind when reciting the Refuges and Precepts, the recollections and during meditation. So we can see that these actions agree with that quality of the Dhamma called "leading inward" (opanayiko). However, before we come to these aspects of practice a few words should be said on the traditional gestures of respect.

* [Perhaps at this point someone who has read the discourses of the Buddha might object, "But the Buddha before his Parinibbana said, 'Ananda, the twin sala trees are quite covered with blossoms though it is not the season. They scatter and sprinkle and strew themselves on the Perfect One's body out of veneration for him. And heavenly Mandarava flowers and heavenly sandalwood powder fall from the sky and are scattered and sprinkled and strewed over the Perfect One's body out of veneration for him. But this is not how a Perfect One is honored, respected, revered, venerated or reverenced: rather it is the bhikkhu or bhikkhuni, or the man or woman lay-follower, who lives according to Dhamma, who enters upon the proper way, who walks in the Dhamma that honors, respects, reveres and venerates a Perfect One with the highest veneration of all. Therefore, Ananda, train thus: "We will live in the way of the Dhamma, entering upon the proper way, and walking in the Dhamma."'" (Ven. Nanamoli's translation).

There is no doubt that the practice of giving (//dana//), moral conduct (//sila//), meditation (//samadhi//) and wisdom (//panna//) are the best way of honoring the Buddha -- they are called the //puja// of practice (//patipatti-puja//), but offerings and chanting are found useful by many people as it stimulates practice. It is only when //sakkara-puja//, the puja with material offerings, supplants patipatti-puja that there is the danger that peoples'

"Buddhism" becomes mere ceremonials. In time, these tend to become complex, like a strangling vine overgrowing the majestic tree of the Buddhasasana.]

Gestures of Respect

Dhamma is the way for training mind, speech and body. But the Buddha dhamma is sometimes regarded in way which is too intellectual and theoretical so that there is a danger that it is not practiced as a way of training. To help with the training of the body there are various gestures which are expressions of one's confidence in and reverence for the three Treasures. These actions when performed with due mindfulness are wholesome kamma made by way of the body. Repeated frequently they become habitual bodily kamma and it is good to have the habit of reverence as part of one's character. The Buddha, soon after his Enlightenment, thought that to live without reverence was not suitable, so he looked around with the divine eye to find some teacher under whom he could live, revering him and his teachings. But he found no teacher superior to himself, nor any teaching superior to the Dhamma which he had discovered. But out of reverence for that Dhamma he decided to make the Dhamma his Teacher and to live revering Dhamma. We who are his followers should follow in his footsteps and live with reverence for those three aspects of Enlightenment: Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha.

The gestures used for this are mainly two: respectful salutation with the hands (//anjalikamma//)[*], and the five-limb prostration (//panc'anga-vandana//)[].

* [Anjali, in many Asiatic lands, is the common form of greeting, just as shaking hands is in the west. The latter custom is said to have been derived from the need to show that one had no kind of weapon in one's right hand, while anjali perhaps derives from a gentle attitude towards other people. This respect becomes reverence when anjali is made to religious teachers, and so by extension to the objects symbolizing the Teacher of gods and men (the Buddha), such as images and stupas. In the Buddhasasana it does not have the significance -- that of prayer -- given to it in western religion.]

 [This is not "surrender," as such an action might be in a "devotion-only" religion, nor of course is it an abject debasement of oneself, a sort of fawning of favors, since Buddhists do not approach their shrines with such ideas. And of course it is not "bowing down to idols." It is rather the bowing down of one's own idol -- self-pride - to Enlightenment.]

The first of these, which may be remembered as "anjali" as there is no satisfactory English equivalent, is made by bringing the palms of the hands together, and raising them to the region of the heart or higher, according to circumstances. For instance, in the shrine room after kneeling down in front of the Buddha image, one makes anjali before offering flowers, lights and incense. And as the Teacher was the highest in the world and one to go beyond the world, so one respects him by placing one's hands are held in anjali at heart level. This action and others described here, should be done with mindfulness and therefore gracefully. And one should be careful to see that exaggerated and impetuous movements are avoided. As we remarked before, the Dhamma does not encourage unrestrained expressions of emotion, rather with its aid one endeavors to calm one's heart.

After all these preliminary remarks, we have just got into our shrine room, knelt down, made anjali and offered the three offerings. Now there are flowers placed in their vases or upon some offering tray, candles or lamps burning brightly and a blue column of incense smoke rising to the ceiling. It is time to pay one's respects with the whole body to the Teacher. When afterwards one says "Namo tassa...." that word "namo" (homage) comes from the root //nam// meaning "to bend". So now one bends oneself, one's mind and body, down and acknowledges that the Buddha was indeed the Perfectly Enlightened One that one's own understanding of Dhamma is insignificant. In the kneeling position, one's hand in anjali are raised to the forehead and then lowered to the floor so that the whole forearm to the elbow is on the ground, the elbow touching the knee. The hands, palm down, are four to six inches apart with just enough room for the forehead to be brought to the ground between them. Feet are still as for the kneeling position and the knees are about a foot apart. this is called the prostration with the five limbs, that is the forehead, the forearms, and the knees. This prostration is made three times, the first time to the Buddha, the second to the Dhamma, and the third to the Noble Sangha.

An ancient tradition from Thailand makes this more explicit as it adds a Pali formula to be chanted before each of the prostrations. Before the first one may chant:

> ARAHAM SAMMASAMBUDDHO BHAGAVA/
> BUDDHAM BHAGAVANTAM ABHIVADEMI.
>
> The Arahant, the Buddha perfected by himself, the Exalted One/
> I bow low before the Exalted Buddha.

Before the second prostration:

> SVAKKHATO BHAGAVATA DHAMMO/
> DHAMMAM NAMASSAMI.
>
> The Dhamma well-expounded by the Exalted One/
> I bow low before the Dhamma.

And before the last one:

> SUPATIPANNO BHAGAVATO SAVAKASANGHO
> SANGHAM NAMAMI.
>
> The Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples who have practiced well/
> I bow low before the Sangha.

Some people feel that this prostration is "foreign" and not at all important. They say that it may discourage people from the practice of Dhamma if their first sight of it is so alien a custom. As there are a few points to discuss here another digression must be made. Prostration in this way, or similar ways which may be more complicated (as in Chinese and Tibetan traditions) do not seem "foreign" at all when seen in a Buddhist country. There they are just the traditional ways of paying respect and western people, even some non-Buddhists, seldom have any difficulties. In these days when there are so many Asian religious and cultural movements in western countries, a practice of this sort loses its strangeness. Certainly it is a practice which any able-bodied Buddhist may do in the seclusion of his shrine room and not feel embarrassed but at public meetings where non-Buddhists may be present it is better perhaps to restrict one's courtesies to the anjali and a simple bow. It is well to consider whatever one's beliefs about this practice, that it is a long established way of showing respect in every Buddhist tradition, both in the Sangha and among lay people. It is part of the common inheritance of all Buddhists in Asia, while practices of this sort may be expected to spread in time to new Buddhists in other parts of the world with the increase in the number of Buddhist temples, images, stupas, and above all, with the gradual establishment of the Sangha in those countries.

The preliminary formula for revering the Buddha [see Appendix A1 for Pali]
~~~
~~~

"What do you think about this, Vacchayana? Has the Samana Gotama lucidity of wisdom? Do you think him wise?"

"But who am I, sir, that I should know whether the Samana Gotama has lucidity of wisdom? Surely only one like Him could know whether the Samana Gotama has lucidity of wisdom."

"Undoubtedly it is with lofty praise that the revered Vacchayana praises the Samana Gotama."

"But who am I, sir, that I should praise the Samana Gotama? Praised by the praised is the revered Gotama, chief among devas and men...."

When this had been said, Janussoni the brahmin got down from his all-white carriage (drawn by four white) mares, and having arranged his upper cloth over one (his left) shoulder, having bowed down to the Lord three times with his hands in anjali, he uttered these inspired words: "Namo tassa Bhagavato Arahato Samma-sambuddhassa! Namo tassa Bhagavato Arahato Samma-sambuddhassa! Namo tassa Bhagavato Arahato Samma-sambuddhassa!"

[translated by Dr. I.B. Horner in "Middle Length Sayings" (P.T.S.) Vol I, p 220, 222]

Evidently this sentence expressive of praise and devotion was quite widely known, as several lay people, some Buddhists and others not, some brahmins and at least one king, uttered these inspired words. So when today we chant these words, it is a sound that rings back through the ages to the Buddha-time. We may chant as the brahmin did:

NAMO TASSA BHAGAVATO ARAHATO SAMMA-SAMBUDDHASSA

three times in Pali while recollecting its meaning silently, or use may be made of a method of chanting which translates this formula, interspersing the Pali with English, like this:

NAMO TASSA BHAGAVATO [*]

I (we) wish to revere with body, speech and mind that Lord apportioning Dhamma

ARAHATO
that One far from defilements/

SAMMA-SAMBUDDHASSA
that One Perfectly Enlightened by himself.

(Repeat the Pali and English three times. This is according to an old Thai method of chanting, frequently heard today in that country's schools.)

* [BHAGAVA: a very frequent term of respect for the Buddha (usually translated, "Lord," "Blessed One," "Exalted One") is hard to render in English. It means: "The compassionate Lord who by his skillful means apportions Dhamma which exactly corresponds to the needs of those who hear."]

These three epithets of Gotama the Buddha express the three great qualities of Enlightenment. BHAGAVATO shows the Great Compassion (mahakaruna) of the Buddha and this we should recollect first as loving-kindness and compassion is the necessary base for our own practice of Dhamma. ARAHATO represents the Purity (visuddhi) of the Buddha, a purity unforced and ever- present to be approached by us through the practice of the Precepts. SAMMA-SAMBUDDHASSA stands for the quality of Wisdom (panna), the Unsurpassed Perfect Enlightenment (anuttara samma-sambodhi) which distinguishes a Buddha from all other men. Here, "//Samma//" means "perfect," "//sam//" stands for "by himself," and "//Buddhassa//" is "to the Enlightened" or "to the Awakened".

The Three Refuges (//Tisarana//) [See Appendix A2 for Pali]
~~~
~~~

who has accepted the Three Refuges" -- Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha, as his shelter and guiding ideal." [*] So now that we have paid our respects to the Teacher, it is usual for Buddhists to continue by affirming their Refuge in Enlightenment (bodhi) in three aspects: the Buddha, the rediscoverer of Enlightenment; the Dhamma, the way to that Enlightenment; and the Sangha, those who are practicing that way have discovered Enlightenment for themselves. That which has the nature of the Unsurpassed Perfect Enlightenment, unconfused and brilliant with the qualities of Great Compassion, Purity and Wisdom, that is a secure refuge. So we recite this sure refuge as a reminder every day: []

* [See "The Three Refuges," Wheel No. 75, B.P.S, Kandy]

 [The Pali of the Going-for-Refuge (etc.) is in the Appendix at the end of this book. Where "Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha" are felt to be more meaningful, they can be used in place of "The Enlightened One," "The Way to Enlightenment," and "The Enlightened Community."]

To the Enlightened One I go for refuge.
To the Way to Enlightenment I go for for refuge,
To the Enlightened Community I go for refuge.

For the second time to the Enlightened One I go for refuge.
For the second time to the Way to Enlightenment I go for refuge.
For the second time to the Enlightened Community I go for refuge.

For the third time to the Enlightened One I go for refuge.
For the third time to the Way to Enlightenment I go for refuge.
For the third tome to the Enlightened Community I go for refuge.

There is a reason for repeating each refuge three times. The mind is often distracted and if words are spoken or chanted at that time then it is as though they have not been spoken at all. There is no strong intention behind them and one's Going for Refuge will be like that of a parrot. Repeating words three times is common in many Buddhist ceremonies (such as ordination) and ensures that the mind is concentrated during at least one repetition.

When one has gone for refuge and so affirmed that one is following the way taught by the Buddha, then it is time to remind oneself of the basic moral precepts for daily conduct.

The Five Precepts (//Pancasila//) [See Appendix A3 for Pali]
~~~
~~~

day the Five Precepts while sitting with hands in anjali in front of the shrine. At that time one should resolve as strongly as possible to practice them and not to depart from them. They may be recited in translation as follows:

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from killing living creatures.
I undertake the rule of training to refrain from taking what is not given.
I undertake the rule of training to refrain from wrong conduct in sexual pleasures.
I undertake the rule of training to refrain from false speech.
I undertake the rule of training to refrain from distilled and fermented intoxicants which are the occasion for carelessness.

These precepts are the basic and minimal observance of moral conduct by a Buddhist. They are designed to restrain him from making bad kamma in speech and body and to serve as the basis for further growth in the Dhamma. If a Buddhist wishes to meditate, for instance, he must be trying to practice the Five Precepts. Meditation trains the mind away from unwholesome states but how could this be done if body and speech were uncontrolled? In connection with precepts and meditation, it may be said again that all kinds of drugs should be given up before trying meditation. They confuse the mind, or merely alter it temporarily -- and so fall under the fifth precept -- while meditation is the step by step purification of it.

Now that the Going-for-Refuge and the Five precepts have been recited, it is time to recollect the virtues of the three things most precious to a Buddhist in the world.

The Recollection of the Three Treasures [See Appendix A5 for Pali]
~~~
~~~

The Treasures (ratana) of the Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha are not excelled by any other sort of treasure, for these treasures have the nature of Enlightenment and are beyond the realm of arising and passing away. So that we appreciate well the value of these Three Treasures, this translation of the passages recollecting their virtues should be recited every day.

Recollection of the Virtues of the Buddha

~~~~~~

Indeed the Exalted One is thus: The accomplished destroyer of defilements, a Buddha perfected by himself, complete in clear knowledge and compassionate conduct, supremely good in presence and in destiny, the Knower of the worlds, incomparable Master of men to be tamed, the Teacher of celestials and men, the Awakened and Awakener, and the Lord by skill-in-means apportioning Dhamma.

Recollection of the Virtues of the Dhamma

~~~~~~

The Dhamma of the Exalted One is well-expounded, to be seen here and now, not delayed in time, inviting one to come and see, leading inwards, and to be known each wise man for himself.

Recollection of the Virtues of the Sangha

~~~~~~

The Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples who have practiced well, the Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples who have practiced straightly, the Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples who have practiced rightly, the Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples who have practiced properly -- that is to say, the four pairs of men, the eight types of persons -- //that// is the Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples, worthy of gifts, worthy of hospitality, worthy of offerings, who should be respected, the incomparable field of punna for the world.

The advantage in making these recollections, even in a brief form chanted once or twice a day, is a gradually increasing appreciation of the Three Treasures. It is like a precious balm contained in an unglazed vessel -- gradually the whole of the vessel is pervaded by the sweetness of its contents.
~~~~~~

Affirmation of Refuge in the Three Treasures [See Appendix A6 for the Pali]
~~~
~~~

The Five Subjects for Daily Recollection [See Appendix A7 for the Pali]
~~~
~~~

The Development of Loving-Kindness [See appendix A8 for the Pali]

Another practice which is beneficial, as it counteracts states of mind rooted in aversion (dosa) is metta bhavana, widely practiced by people in Buddhist countries. The advantages are many, ranging from an increase in personal happiness, through such social benefits as having many good friends, to ease of meditation practice, dying unconfused and at least gaining a good rebirth. So as part of one's daily practice one should recite this traditional passage used in all the Buddhist countries of Southeast Asia.

May I have no enmity may I have no hurtfulness may I have no troubles of mind and body may I be able to protect my own happiness Whatever beings there are -- may they have no enmity whatever beings there are -- may they have no hurtfulness whatever beings there are -- may they have no troubles of mind and body whatever beings there are -- may they be able to protect their own happiness.

While chanting both these recollections one should not be too hurried. Take time over them and pause for reflection after each phrase has been chanted. In this way one prepares the mind for the next part of one's practice.

Meditation

When the last reflection has been finished, one should change from kneeling seated on the heels to a cross-legged posture, whichever one is most suitable. Those who find it difficult to get their knees anywhere near the floor may find it useful to sit in the way illustrated, with a small hard cushion (or folded blanket) 3-6 inches thick under the buttocks. One should also sit on a reasonably soft surface, and a square of folded rug, soft carpet, etc., underneath one will make for the greater comfort of the knees.

When seated ready to meditate, one's body should be upright, and yet relaxed. Carefully notice any physical strain and try to correct it. Also one must ensure that the body is balanced and comfortable before meditating -- this can be done by moving the body around while seated -- for once started the body should not be moved. Clothes should be not moved. Clothes should be loose and not constricting in any way.

Of all the sitting positions, the lotus posture is the best and firmest. But not so many people are able to get their legs into this position without a good deal of practice; so the half- lotus posture may be tried as it also makes the body firm. Other people find the lion posture better, or where none of these can be done, just sit in the ordinary cross-legged way -- but the back must be straight. [*] If it is found difficult to keep the back straight (and drowsiness and sleep are the results of sitting hunched up), then put a cushion in the small-of the back and sit against a wall. This will help to straighten the back while it gives support to anyone who has a weak back. When all of these ways of sitting are impossible a chair may be used, although it is difficult to feel really firm on a chair.

> * [The lotus posture is made by placing the feet, soles up, on the opposite thighs. In the half-lotus one foot is on the opposite thigh, the other under the opposite upper leg. In the lion posture, one lower leg lies over the other, the foot on the knee, or slightly behind it.]

When the legs are stiff, it will be useful to try loosening the three joints of ankle, knee and thigh with these exercises: While standing, raise one leg keeping it straight, a foot off the floor. Support the body by grasping hold of something firm with the hand on the other side of the body. Revolve the foot from the ankle in the widest possible circle while keeping the rest of the leg still. Turn the foot a number of times both clockwise and anticlockwise. Then raise the top part of the leg until it is parallel with the ground and swing the lower leg in as wide a circle as possible from the knee. Do not move the upper leg. Reverse direction of swing and repeat several times. Then straighten the leg and swing it, keeping it straight, from the thigh in the largest possible circle, in both directions. Repeat these three exercises from the other leg. The whole procedure may be done two or three times a day but do not overdo it to begin with -- the result will be a lot of aching joints! After a month or two, the joints will have become more flexible and the leg muscles more relaxed. It should then be quite easy to adopt one of these cross-legged postures for a long period of time. So much for the body.

Having quietened the body and resolved not to move it while meditating, what about the mind? Most people find that it moves much too fast for their mindfulness to catch. Usually, what is called "mind" means the //present time// consisting of:

```
Eye-          Ear-      Nose-     Tongue-    Body (touch)- consciousness  consc.    consc.    consc.     consc.

 |              |        |         |          |
 -------------------------------------------------------
                         |
Past(memory) --- Mind-consciousness-element -- (hopes,fears) Future
                         |
                     Mind - element
                         |
        Dhamma (mental-emotional experiences)-element
                         |
                         |
        ____________________________________________________
        |                |                |
  Wholesome mental states        |    Neutral mental states
                         |
                 Unwholesome mental states
```

So a "mind" may be concerned with any one of the five sense consciousness, or it may be mind-consciousness-element having as object something from the past, present or the future, or again it can be the dhamma-element consisting of the three species of mental states. It will not be mind-element, which is the passive state of mind operating in deep sleep. Now a mind, or rather a mind operating in deep sleep. Now a mind, or rather a succession of "minds," which is concerned with such highly differentiated data cannot become very concentrated. Even when "minds" are not concerned with outer sensual stimulation and only with inward reflection, they will still be discursive with words, concepts, pictures and feelings, etc. In the state of meditation we try to cut out even these inward disturbances by fixing the mind upon one subject which is not discursive. This will conduce to our "minds" being only wholesome states (kusaladhamma) which tend towards concentration and peacefulness. The mental stream of "minds" concerned with many unwholesome states (akusaladhamma -- often fed by sense-stimulation), defiled by being rooted in greed, aversion and delusion (lobha, dosa, moha), are unconcentrated. Defilements lead to mental troubles, among them distraction, dullness, boredom, drowsiness, lust, attachment and aversion. But the absence of defilements means the growth of strong wholesome states and hence of increases clarity and concentration.

So when one has sat down already and made one's body comfortable, then reflect a little: This is not the time to think about the past or the future. Even thoughts about the present must be put down now. This is the time to quieten and concentrate the mind. To follow the Way of Lord Buddha to make the mind firm and unshakable. Now I shall only observe my meditation subject ... Breathe in ... out ... in ...

Two subjects in particular are suitable for a Buddhist who has no direct contact with a meditation teacher. One is mindfulness of breathing, the other the development of loving- kindness. There are many other subjects but these two are the most widely used and can usually be employed (given due care) without a meditation teacher's guidance. Here, each one will be treated briefly, as there are other books in which they are dealt with in greater detail.

Mindfulness of breathing [*] was, by tradition, the subject used by Gotama in his efforts to attain Enlightenment. It is most suitable for promoting calm and concentrated states and so for quelling the distracted mind. It is taught in a number of different ways but in all of them the meditator must first find one point in the breathing process where the breath can be watched. Concentration upon the breath entering and leaving the nostrils, or upon the upper lip, is good for encouraging clear and concentrated mental states, except for people who experience some tension in the head, of for those who find this subject too subtle. For both types of persons, or for people when affected in these ways, to concentrate upon the rising and falling of the diaphragm is beneficial. When one has sat down and begun meditation it is advisable not to change one's subject (except in case of fear or some other strong defilement, see below) but from time to time as the quality of meditation practice changes, for better or worse according to circumstances, the point of concentration or even the subject may be changed as it becomes necessary.

> * [For this in greater detail, see: "The Path of Purification," Ch. VIII, para 145ff, and "Mindfulness of Breathing," both translated by Venerable Nanamoli Thera (from BPS, Kandy).]

One should view the meditation subject as a medicine to cure the diseases of the mind (distraction, drowsiness, and so on), and as the symptoms of those diseases change, so the subject of one's meditation can be changed. For instance a person practicing with mindfulness of breathing may find that he is being disturbed by angry thoughts: it may become necessary then for the control of such thoughts to switch to the meditation on loving-kindness. However, before changing the subject of meditation, it is very helpful to get the advice of someone who is well-established in meditation practice.

Having fixed upon one point for watching the breath, keep the mind there. You can judge for yourself how successful you are by what happens after this. If the mind is continuously just fixed on "breathing-in-out" with no other sense-objects, not even of other parts of the body, and no discursive thought, then one is doing well, for meditation is fine and calm. If you do perceive other sense-objects, for instance, loud or soft noises from outside, but your mind is not shaken from the concentration, on breathing-in-out, merely having awareness of them which returns immediately to the breathing when they cease, without discursive thought, concentration is good. If the mind is mostly fixed on breathing-in-out but also strays to body (touch) consciousness elsewhere round the body but still without discursive thoughts, then it is not so bad. But if one's breathing-in-out-mind is frequently disturbed by other mental states consisting of ideas, pictures, etc., then there is still a lot of work to do. Even if one's meditation is up to the first standard, there is no need for complacency as there is plenty more to do. The more advanced aspects of meditation do require guidance and one should make every effort to get in contact with a reliable source of teaching.

The time that one gives to meditation must depend upon the individual although less than 15-20 minutes is of little benefit unless the mind is very well concentrated. Also, it is a good discipline to resolve to practice //every day// and //at the same time// (in so far as outside circumstances like work allow). One should not practice on some days but not on others. This shows a wavering mind and cannot accomplish much. And when one has determined to meditate every day one should also resolve to practice for //the same length of time// each day, not one day twenty and next only five minutes. If one's practice is not regular then this shows weakness of the mind and such a mind is good at suggesting "Today it is too hot," "Today I am too tired..." and a thousand and one other excuses. The best time for meditation is early morning when everything is quiet and while the mind and body are rested. If one meditates once a day then this is the best time to do it. Some people like to meditate twice and do some practice also in the evening. However personal experience will soon make it clear that while hunger is not conducive to meditation, neither is a full stomach. Tiredness may also be a limiting factor in the evening.

The Development of Loving-kindness [*] is another very valuable practice. it aims at the dissolution of angry, averse states of mind and the increase of that kind of love which is cool, capable of extension to all and non-possessive. A word here about love. In English we have only this one word which has to describe a great range of emotions, whereas in Pali there are several words describing three levels.

* [For this in greater detail, see: "The Path of Purification," Ch. IX; "The Practice of Lovingkindness," Wheel No. 7; and "The Four Sublime States," Wheel No. 6.]

The lowest is the one we share with the animals: lust, which is based on powerful desires for pleasant feelings and is completely selfish. This kind of love does not consider others at all and cares only for self-gratification. In Pali its name is //kama// (a word which has the wider, meaning also of the objective stimulants of the senses and the defiled sensual stimulation in the heart). When there is no kama, deliberate sexual intercourse is impossible (as for the Arahants). Kama causes sex to appear attractive and is strengthened when the senses are not guarded. Hence the Buddha's injunction for bhikkhus to restrain their senses, to some extent (for instance, limiting the amount of television that he watches, and other distracting amusements), and this will help to limit the arising kama making for greater peace of heart. Second is //sneha//, the viscous attachment which holds families together. This love is not totally selfish but rather regards the attachment as a bargain out of which oneself and others get something. For instance, the husband gets home cooking while the wife obtains security to rear a family. The terms of this bargain, of course, may differ quite widely. But //sneha// is only capable of being extended to a few people who are involved in this bargain. By contrast, //metta// or loving-kindness, is a love not hot with lust nor sticky with attachment: it is cool and does not consider personal benefits. The person who has metta is concerned with the happiness of others before he thinks about himself. No human relationship can last long and be of great benefit if it is not founded on metta, for only such love can be extended to other beings generally and without limitation to some group. Usually our relations with other people are made up of kama sometimes, sneha frequently, with a sprinkling of metta now and again. From the point of view of meditation practice, kama hinders it while metta helps it.

Metta must be practiced first towards oneself. That is to say, one cannot love others unless first one has established love in one's own heart. To try spreading metta to others before strengthening it in oneself is like a poor man who proposes to give out money for others" benefit. To have metta for oneself means a relative absence of conflicts in oneself, to be at peace with oneself. So the first thing to do in sitting meditation is to repeat over and over again: "May I be at peace." When the mind becomes calm and one can feel about one's heart the brightness of metta then it is possible to start practicing it towards other people. Having cultured loving-kindness in one's heart, one may next picture any person whom one respects deeply and constantly wish for that person "May he (or she) be happy!" Having developed towards that person the same, or greater intensity of metta, then go on to see in the mind a person with whom one is just friendly, and after that a neutral person. Only then may one consider a person who is disliked or even one who is hated. In each case, the emotional tone accompanying the mental picture should be the same and only when it has reached the same intensity should one move on to the next person to be considered. It is useless to begin with those one dislikes as such practice is merely the extension of what is already there -- aversion -- rather than the development of something new -- metta. To begin with the disliked just wearies oneself and gets one nowhere. In this meditation, thoughts of loving-kindness must be backed up by the emotional feeling associated with loving-kindness, if they are to be really effective in ridding oneself of aversion.

This power of metta is used to break down the "walls" which we erect around ourselves, the walls of aversion and dislike, so that metta, properly practiced, becomes by deep meditation not only widespread but infinite in extent. One to whom each person and each living being are equally dear, who wishes happiness for all sentient beings, visible and invisible in every direction and state of existence, whose heart is "endued with loving-kindness, abundant, exalted, measureless, free from enmity and free from affliction" has truly succeeded with this practice.

But metta fails when it falls into either of two extremes. The first of these is called "the near enemy," that is, selfish physical desire or kama. so one should not attempt to practice metta in meditation towards a person for whom one has kama. The second is known as "the far enemy" and means the opposite of metta -- ill-will, anger and so on. So much for the practice of metta as a meditation.

Besides mind, a human being has two other channels of communication

-- speech and bodily action. Therefore, digressing again from what is done in the shrine-room, one should make efforts to express loving-kindness in these two ways as well. As far as speech is concerned, make an effort to cut out sharp or harsh words when they are spoken in anger, while trying to cultivate kindly speech. And as speech to be convincing has to be backed up by bodily action, one's body should express loving- kindness too. See that it performs acts of helpfulness and service. See that one is "clean-handed" -- that is, that things which could be given do not "stick" to one's hands, for generosity is a companion and supporter of loving-kindness. If one makes an effort like this with one's speech and body, it will be helpful to one's meditation on metta, while that in turn will ensure that one's good actions are not just an empty facade.

The subject of meditation is vast, as the mind with which it deals is intricate and there are many different methods suited to different minds with their defilements. In this brief section only two methods have been mentioned and their development has only been outlined upon the side of calm. The development of calm is very necessary before going on to the development of insight, in which impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and non-self are investigated, as the mind must be strong and undistracted for insight to penetrate towards enlightenment. The development of calm, cannot be dealt with here and no book, however extensive, can replace the advice of a meditation master.

It is possible that if the mind becomes deeply concentrated and states quite new to the meditator are suddenly experienced, that fear may arise. Fear can also be troublesome if an object of mind comes up, a mental picture, which is horrible to the meditator. If such fear should arise then the meditator should leave that object and turn to the Recollection of the Three Treasures, mentally repeating: "Indeed the Exalted One is thus: The Accomplished destroyer of defilement...." If the fear is banished by the first Recollection then one's meditation can be resumed, otherwise one should go on to recite "The Dhamma of the Exalted One is well-expounded..." and "The Sangha of the Exalted One's disciples who have practiced well..." until all fear is cured in the mind. This is sure to be dispelled as the Buddha has said, in the Dhajagga Sutta (The Discourse on the Foremost Banner), because one is recollecting the qualities of Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha which are "free of greed, free of aversion and free of delusion" and are therefore free from fear. This is where strong and sure Refuge in the three Treasures is shown to be so valuable, for if strong confidence in them is present fear has no chance. But the mind in which there are many doubts is easily shaken and fear can get a hold there. Well-balanced Dhamma practice should dispel the causes giving rise to fears, but if these persist it is necessary to ask someone competent in meditation how they should be treated.

At the conclusion of meditation, one should gently bring the mind back to its usual state of engagement with the senses. During this time the limbs should not be moved quickly but gently rubbed if they are cool or have "gone to sleep". when one is quite ready, then it is time to chant the Anumodana.

Anumodana [See appendix A9 for the Pali]

~~~~~~~~~

This is one of those words which it is very difficult to translate into English. It means literally "rejoicing with or after" but implies "asking beings to rejoice in the good kamma which one has made and so benefit themselves." It is often translated "blessing" but this gives the wrong picture, as one is inviting other beings to rejoice at what one has done; one is not invoking some blessing of another power upon them.

The person who is inviting others to rejoice does not actually "share his merits," although this expression is often seen. How can merits (a poor translation of punna which means all kinds of actions which cleanse and purify the mind of the doer) be shared indeed? As punna is good kamma, one should remember "I am the owner of my kamma, heir to my kamma..." so how can it be "shared" with others? Good kamma or punna is not like a cake which can be cut up into pieces and handed round! What one does is not "sharing" but dedicating one's punna to other beings (either to particular beings who are suffering, such as parents, relatives, friends, etc.; or generally to all beings (see below), "infinite, immeasurable"). And these beings to whom one dedicates kamma may be either living this life or else reborn in other states. In dedicating it to them one asks them to rejoice ("By rejoicing in this cause, this gift of punna given by me...") and when they do so they also make good kamma which is the direct cause of their happiness ("a happy life and free from hate... and their good wishes all succeed"). The "Path Secure" mentioned in the verses below is the attainment of Stream-entry when a person has seen Nibbana for the first time, known the Truth of Dhamma for himself and is no longer liable to fall into low, subhuman births.
~~~~~~~~~

These verses are part of a longer Pali composition by King Mahamongkut (Rama IV) of Siam, possibly written while he was still a prince and bhikkhu holding the position of Abbot of Wat Bovoranives in Bangkok.

May the punna made made by me,
now or at some other time,
be shared among all beings here -- infinite, immeasurable,
By rejoicing in this cause,
this gift of punna given by me,
may beings all forever live
a happy life and free from hate, and may they find the Path Secure and their good wishes all succeed!

Having finished this recitation one should stay quiet with a heart full of loving-kindness for all beings just for a short while. Then to conclude the service one again makes the prostration with five limbs three times.

Chanting
~~~~~~~~

In Theravada Buddhist countries, the traditional verses and passages, as well as the Discourses of the Buddha, whether used in services or for other occasions, are usually recited in Pali, the language spoken by the Buddha. In each country there are somewhat different traditions of chanting and pronunciation of Pali. [*] (In other Buddhist lands also, traditions exist for the chanting of Buddhist scriptures, usually in a special and now archaic form of the vernaculars). Besides the established traditions of Pali chanting, there are also, in countries like Thailand, ways of chanting in the language of the people. Few lay people understand the grammar of Pali though many may know a number of important phrases and terms in that language, so we find that lay people (and sometimes bhikkhus as well) chant in Pali following each phrase with a translation in the vernacular. This can often be heard in Thailand where school children also chant verses composed in Thai on the respect that should be given to the Buddha, Dhamma, Sangha, parents and teachers (the Five Treasures).
~~~~~~~~

* [An LP record of Pali chanting in Sinhalese style may be had from the Buddhist Missionary Society, Brickfields Buddhist Temple, Jalan Berhala, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. Tapes of chanting (morning and evening services, paritta, etc.) can be had of the World Fellowship of Buddhists, 33 Sukhumvit Road, Bangkok 11, Thailand. These are in Thai styles of chanting.]

In countries where Buddhism is either newly introduced or again flourishing after a period of neglect, there may be very few who understand Pali, while, on the other hand, many may wish for some devotional and reflective practice for their daily lives. Hence the short number of texts suggested here are all in English. Then comes the question of how to chant in this language. Lay Buddhists can be guided by the Buddha's words when some bhikkhus began to sing the Dhamma: "Bhikkhus, there are these five dangers when Dhamma is chanted with a long, singing sound:

(1) He is pleased with himself regarding that sound, (= pride)
(2) others are pleases regarding that sound (they have regard for it but not for Dhamma)
(3) householders look down upon him (as music is for those who enjoy sense-pleasures)
(4) while trying for accuracy of sound his concentration is broken, (he neglects the meaning of what he is chanting)
(5) people coming after fall into views (by emulation) ("saying: Our teachers and preceptors sang it thus" [Commentary] -- a source of both pride and quarreling among later generations of Buddhists).

(Vinaya Pitaka, ii. 108)

From these five disadvantages we understand that it is disrespectful for a bhikkhu to sing or intone the Dhamma in such a way that its meaning is lost. [*] This rule, of course, does not apply to lay people but in Buddhist lands the latter, perhaps guided by the conduct of bhikkhus, have made little or no use of music for religious purposes. After all what are we trying to achieve by chanting the words relating to the Buddha and his teaching? Is it not to gain calm through a mind concentrated on Dhamma? Then music has rather an exciting effect on many people and so is opposed to our aim. Again, compared with western religion, Buddhism has a different aim. There, the object of chanting and singing is to make sounds pleasing to the Creator's ear, out of love or fear of him. But Buddhists are not burdened with such an idea, for our aim and goal lies within, to be attained by our own efforts, not by propitiation of an external power. Lord Buddha was one who spoke in praise of silence and restraint, so in preparing ourselves to be silent, restraint should be used in our chanting.

* [In "The Entrance to the Vinaya II" (Mahamakut Press, Bangkok, BE 2516) we read: "It is prohibited for a bhikkhu to preach Dhamma with a long-drawn intonation. To preach Dhamma or recite Dhamma in an artificial long-drawn way of chanting until it brings about mispronunciation, should not be done.]

The various passages which have been recommended here for this purpose are embedded in much explanatory matter and people who wish to use them and any other reflections which they have found stirring, could copy them all out to form a chanting book. [*] Then only one thing remains to be done and that will come about through daily use: //learn these texts by heart//. Even if one is far from home one can then quietly repeat them to oneself and so not break one's regular practice.

* [See the author's "Buddhist Texts for Recitation" (Buddhist Publication Society, Kandy; Vesak 1974]

In the various Buddhist countries there is a great variety of chants and recollections and even neighboring monasteries may have their own traditions and not use all the same items. Those given here in English translation are among the most popular and common to most traditions. Others can be added according to individual preference and knowledge. There is no such thing as a standard morning and evening service in the Buddhist world and even between these two there may be differences of items used. So much for daily practice in the shrine room.

The Laity's Practice of Dhamma

Then what about Dhamma-practice outside the shrine-room? This is really a subject which goes beyond the scope of this book. All the important aspects of a layman's practice of the Dhamma have been written about in other books. However, mention may be made of these things:

Dana (Giving)

The giving of material things (amisa-dana), for instance, to support bhikkhus, to give to the poor, starving and so forth. There is no lack of opportunity to practice this in our over- populated world. And Buddhists who have enough of this world's wealth, enough of clothes, food, shelter and medicine which are the basic necessities for life should practice dana bearing in mind that what is given away is truly well preserved while what is kept is wasted. The practice, running counter to the worldly way of craving and attachment, is very important in the present materialistic civilization with its emphasis upon gain and accumulation of possessions. Nothing much can be done in Dhamma until one is prepared to open one's heart and one's hands to others.

The giving of Dhamma (Dhamma-dana) means the gift of some useful teaching and advice for others. It is necessary to know what will benefit them if one would give this gift in the right way. Dhamma is the supreme gift in the world, as said by the Buddha:

All gifts the gift of Dhamma does excel,

all tastes the taste of dhamma does excel,
all joys the joy of Dhamma does excel -- the craving-ender overcomes all dukkha.

(Dhp. 354)

All material things wear out with use but the Dhamma increases as we practice it. And material things give benefit only in this life, while the Dhamma benefits the practice now and in future lives as well.

The giving of non-fear (abhaya-dana). This means acting in such a way that other beings do not have any cause to fear oneself. This is another name for the practice of loving-kindness (metta) and is based upon good moral conduct (sila).

Sila (Moral Conduct, Precepts) [*]

The Five Sila have been mentioned above. The Eight Sila will be dealt with in connection with the Uposatha day (below). Besides these lists of precepts which are guides to good conduct, one should study those discourses of the Buddha, like the Singalovada (The Exhortation to Singala -- see "Everyman's Ethics", Wheel 14) in which he has given the principles which will conduce to a harmonious society. This must be founded upon wholesome mental states in the individual and for this the following practices are essential:

* [See Wheels: 14, Everyman's Ethics; 55, The Five Precepts; 50, Knowledge and Conduct; 104, Early Buddhism and the Taking of Life; 175/176, Ethics in Buddhist Perspective.]

Bhavana (Development or cultivation of the mind)

The four Divine Abidings: Loving-kindness, compassion, joy-with-others, and equanimity, bring two blessings: harmony within and peace with other people. Their importance in Buddhist practice cannot be over-emphasized. They are the educators of the heart or emotions and from a Buddhist point of view it will be better to be gentle and non-aggressive though lacking intellectual knowledge of Dhamma. Such a person shows that he has been tamed by the Dhamma of non-harming, but mere knowledge of the Dhamma divorced from practice makes only for conceit and an increase of views (ditthi).

Reading the Suttas in translation, especially the //Anguttara-nikaya// (see the anthology in two parts with this title from BPS, Kandy, and "Gradual Sayings", the complete translation in 5 vols. from the Pali Text Society London), will bring to light many discourses containing valuable advice for lay Buddhist practice. It would be useful to collect these together and then read them through from time to time. A reading of such relevant suttas might be introduced into the evening service every day, or else read upon Uposatha days. This brings us to the subject of the second part of this book.

* * * * * * * *

UPOSATHA

The word means "entering to stay," in the Buddhist sense, in a vihara or monastery. But it has a long history before Buddhist times as it was the custom of the brahmins who performed the Vedic rites and sacrifices to go to the sacred place away from their homes and families and purify themselves by leading a secluded life for a day and night, returning after the rites were finished. The days when they kept this seclusion were determined by the phases of the moon, the most important being the Full Moon and the New Moon days. Two other days, the quarter-moon days, were also observed.

Here it may be helpful to say something about the lunar month. This is a month (originally this word is cognate with "moon") of 29 1/2 days. Two months have 59 days, that is, one of thirty and one of twenty-nine. Each month is divided into fortnights: of the waxing moon and of the waning moon. Each half is therefore of 14 or 15 days and in each half the days are numbered from the first of the waxing moon (the day after new moon day) to the fourteenth (or fifteenth) of the waxing moon, and then from the first of the waning moon to the fourteenth of the waning moon. A new lunar month always begins (in Buddhist reckoning) with the waxing half-month. The eighth day (usually) of both bright and dark halves is the quartermoon day.

In the Buddha-time, various groups of ascetics and wanderers used the traditional Full and New moon days for expounding their theories and practices, while the Buddha allowed bhikkhus to assemble on these days to listen to the recitation of the Patimokkha (the fundamental rules of a bhikkhu) and to teach Dhamma to the lay people who came to their monastery.

From that time down to the present, the Uposatha days have been observed by Buddhists, both ordained and laity, in all Buddhist countries. The practice of Buddhists, as known to the writer from Siam -- and there are many local variations -- is along these lines: Early in the morning lay people give almsfood to the bhikkhus who may be walking on almsround [*], invited to a layman's house, or the lay people may take the food to the monastery. Usually lay people do not eat before serving their food to the bhikkhus and they may eat only once that day, specially where the bhikkhus practice eating a single meal. In any case, their food is finished before noon. Before the meal the laity request the Eight Precepts (see below), which they promise to undertake for a day and night. It is usual for lay people to go to the local monastery and to spend all day and night there. In different monasteries, of course, the way they spend their time will not be the same and much depends on which aspect of the Dhamma is stressed there: study or practice. Where there is more study, they will hear as many as three or four discourses on Dhamma delivered by senior bhikkhus and they will have books to read and perhaps classes on Abhidhamma to attend. But they are quite free to plan their own time with meditation, discussion of Dhamma with the bhikkhus and so on. In a meditation monastery lay people will get less instruction and that will be about the //Practice// of Dhamma, while most of their time will be spent mindfully employed -- walking and seated meditation with some time given to helping the bhikkhus with their daily duties. So the whole of this day and night (and enthusiastic lay people restrict their sleep) is given over to Dhamma. The Bhikkhus on these days have to meet (if they are four or more in number) and listen to one bhikkhu recite by heart the 227 rules of training contained in the Patimokkha. This meeting may take an hour or more and lay people may, or may not, attend, according to the tradition of that monastery. Apart from this regular observance, some bhikkhus may undertake an extra austere practice, such as not lying down on the Uposatha night, which means the effort to try and meditate in the three postures of walking, standing, and sitting all night.

* [See Wheel 73, "The Blessings of Pindapata."]

This is the practice in brief, of "entering to stay at" (uposatha) a monastery in Asia. Obviously a Buddhist who has no facilities like these in a non-buddhist country must spend his Uposatha differently. Perhaps the first thing to consider is whether it is worth trying to keep the Uposatha days. Why are they kept on the phases of the moon? The origin of the Uposatha days in Buddhist teachings is found in the following story:

> The occasion was this: The Blessed One was living at Rajagaha on the Vulture-Peak Rock, and at that time Wanderers of other sects were in the habit of meeting together on the Half Moons of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth and the Quarter Moon of the Eighth and preaching about Dhamma. People went to hear about the Dhamma from them. They grew fond of the Wanderers of other sects and believed in them. So the Wanderers gained support.
>
> Now while Seniya Bimbisara, king of Magadha was alone in retreat he considered this, and he thought: "Why should the venerable ones not meet together too, on these days?"
>
> Then he went to the Blessed One and told him what he had thought, adding: "Lord, it would be good if the venerable ones met together too, on these days."

The Blessed One instructed the king with a talk on the Dhamma; after which the king departed. Then the Blessed One made this the occasion for a discourse on the Dhamma and he addressed the bhikkhus thus: "Bhikkhus, I allow meetings on the Half Moons of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth and the Quarter Moon of the Eighth."

So the bhikkhus met together on those days as allowed by the Blessed One, but they sat in silence. People went to hear the Dhamma. They were annoyed, and they murmured and protested: "How can the monks, the sons of the Sakyans, meet together on these days and sit in silence dumb as hogs? Ought not the Dhamma to be preached when they meet?"

Bhikkhus heard this. They went to the Blessed One and told him. He made this the occasion for a discourse on the Dhamma, and he addressed the bhikkhus thus: "Bhikkhus, when there is a meeting on the Half Moons of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth and the Quarter Moon of the Eighth, I allow preaching of the Dhamma.

(From: "The Life of the Buddha", trans. by the late Bhikkhu Nanamoli, p. 157).

We can see from this that the Uposatha day was already popular at that time; in fact India had already a lunar calendar. The Buddha sometimes allowed popular practices when he had investigated them to see whether they were profitable. In this case he saw that there were advantages for Dhamma-practice in the Uposatha days, so he allowed them. But we should understand clearly that Dhamma in its various aspects was not taught by him out of conformity with pre-Buddhist traditions. (How often one sees statements like "The Buddha accepted and taught the Hindu doctrine of karma and reincarnation"!) Dhamma was taught by him based on Enlightenment -- having seen everything as it truly is. So the teaching -- for instance, of kamma -- was because he had seen the truth of this for himself. Similarly with the Uposatha days, the importance of which are underlined by a number of discourses on the subject in the Anguttara-nikaya, the Book of the Eights (see the Appendix).

But if the timing of the Uposatha days in Buddhist tradition was fixed merely to coincide with the existing lunar calendar and the traditional observances connected with it, then today when most people work in countries which do not follow a lunar calendar it would seem sensible to have days for special Buddhist observance during the weekends. Is there any other significance to the Uposatha days falling on the phases of the moon? A fairly new branch of biology, called chronobiology, studies the rhythmicity in nature and appears to support the importance of the Uposatha days, particularly the full moon observance. Dr. W. Menaker of New York, writing in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology (77:905, 1959) has observed as the result of an analysis of data on birth and conception that the coincidences between the lunar month of 29.53 and the average duration of the menstrual cycle of 29 1/2 days "constitutes a combination of circumstances that points to the synodic lunar month as the time unit of the human sexual reproductive cycle." It seems as though the keeping of the Uposatha days by large numbers of the Buddhist laypeople until recent times will have helped to limit the growth of the population in Buddhist countries. Some people have also observed that sexual desire comes to a peak with the full moon. Those who understand that restraint in this and other sensual appetites is good, will see that there is a good cause for keeping at least the full moon as an Uposatha day. Chronobiologists are now working on the assumption that as the oceans are affected by the moon, so the water in the body is also affected -- "As our bodies are about two-thirds 'sea' and one- third 'land,' we must sustain 'tidal' effects." (Dr. Menaker, op. cit.) This seems reasonable looked at from the teaching given on the elements by the Buddha: " Whatever is internal liquid element and whatever is external liquid element, just these are the liquid element" (see Maharahulovada Sutta, M. 62) -- though the context for this quotation is the development of insight. At any rate, development in the Dhamma goes in the direction of becoming less affected by desires concerning the body, for to have such desires is to have a defiled mind.

The defilements and passions can best be controlled when they can be seen -- when they are strongest. It is impossible to restrain defilements in oneself when they are not apparent, though they may operate underground. For instance, the person who is well-provided with wealth and comforts may not be able to see greed or aversion at work in himself; these defilements have not surfaced since the sea of satisfied desires, in which they swim, is deep enough. But place this person in a bare little hut with poor food only once a day and a strict discipline to control his actions and then see what happens! The monsters of the deep all rise to the surface and clamor for more extensive waters in which to sport. On the other hand, the attitude of good bhikkhus shows the right way to deal with defilements. Some of the strongest -- sensuality and sloth -- manifest themselves at night, so the night was recommended by the Buddha as the time when they could be tackled most effectively. An enemy that one has not seen and known cannot be defeated, but an enemy well known and attacked with the weapons of Right Effort, Right Mindfulness and Right Collectedness, has no hope to win.

It is the same on Uposatha days. The defilements that show themselves then can be restrained and limited with the aid of the Uposatha discipline, which includes the Eight Precepts.

Let us consider it from another point of view. Renunciation is a thread which runs through all Buddhist practice. If one practices Giving then one renounces the pleasures that could be bought with that wealth. When the Five Precepts are practiced then one renounces the actions covered by them which may be pleasurable or thrilling to some and are, in any case, unwholesome. And when effort is made to meditate, the earnest practicer will soon find that certain pleasures and distractions offered by this world just do not go with a calm and mindful mind, so he renounces them.

The Eight Precepts to be discussed below are part of the same way of practice, a discipline for a lay person's temporary renunciation. In the Sutta mentioned above the Buddha speaks of a noble disciple reflecting: By undertaking the Uposatha with its eight precepts for a day and a night I renounce the way of common men and live as the Arahants do for all their lives, compassionate, pure and wise. So the Right Precepts are really a test of how far one can discipline oneself. That means really, to what extent do wholesome states of mind consonant with Dhamma-practice predominate in one's character over unwholesome desires built on greed, aversion and delusion? The practice of the Eight Precepts gives one a chance to find out about this. And this is an investigation which one can make four times a month if one wishes.

We have seen how lay people in Buddhist countries periodically withdraw for twenty-four hours to a monastery for the practice for some special Dhamma. But what is to be done where there is no monastery, no bhikkhus, and no possibility of taking time off from work?

First, on these days, or on some of them, one could be a bit more in the shrine room. This would include reciting the Eight Precepts instead of the five and if one knows any special discourse of the Buddha, in Pali or in English, they should be chanted or read through. A very appropriate sutta to chant or read is the Discourse on the Eight-part Uposatha (see Appendix) and to this could be added such popular suttas as the Discourse on Loving- kindness (Karaniya-metta Sutta) and the Discourse on the truly Auspicious (Mahamangala Sutta). Longer suttas such as the Discourse on Treasures (Ratana Sutta) and the Discourse on Setting in motion the Wheel of Dhamma (Dhammacakkappavattana Sutta) would be appropriate if one has time.

Apart from precepts and discourses, more time should be given to meditation on these days, so if one uses the shrine room only once on ordinary days, it should be used twice upon these days, while making the effort to sit rather longer. When the Eight Precepts are backed up by the calm strong mind produced in meditation then they become easy to keep.

The Dhamma that one can practice during the day at work must be decided by each person, taking account of his own personality and of the circumstances surrounding him. Of course, one tries to keep one's conduct within the bounds of the Eight Precepts and do only those things which are consonant with the spirit of the precepts. One may find it possible to practice Giving (dana) in some way on these days and some short periods devoted to some of the recollections might be possible -- it depends on each person to find his own ways and means.

This brings us to the Eight Precepts and some remarks upon them. The precepts are as follows:

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from killing living creatures.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from taking what is not given.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from unchaste conduct.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from false speech.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from distilled and fermented intoxicants which are the occasion for carelessness.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from eating outside the time.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from dancing, singing, music, going to see entertainments, wearing garlands, smartening with perfumes and beautifying with cosmetics.

I undertake the rule of training to refrain from a high or large sleeping-place.

It has always been understood by Buddhist lay people that if one undertakes these Eight Precepts then great efforts should be made not to break any of them. The Five Precepts represent a general measure for ordinary life and in practice people have a flexible attitude towards minor infringements of some of them. But the Eight Precepts are a more serious commitment and should not be undertaken lightly. If one does take them on, then one should feel reasonably certain, whatever one's interior and exterior circumstances, that none of the precepts will be broken.

In the case of the first one, not only should one not kill any living being but also one should not do the sort of work which might involve one in killing unintentionally, where one has no choice in the matter (work such as digging and cultivating). Even acts which are harmful in any way to others should be avoided on an Uposatha day. Few people have work which involves killing and fewer still of these people will be Buddhists, as such work must be repugnant to sincere Dhamma-practicers.

The second precept will need attention in such things as using for one's own purposes materials belonging to the firm (government, etc.) that one works for, or taking extra or surplus materials for oneself or others without permission to do so. Taking what is not given would also include such practices as adulteration of materials for sale and making others work without adequate remuneration.

The third precept is changed from the set of five. There "wrong conduct" means all kinds of sex which results in harm to others -- breaking up for others' marriages, rape and the seduction of minors, for instance. But under this precept "unchaste conduct" means that all kinds of sexual behavior are to be avoided whether they are wrong conduct or are allowable in normal lay life, whether they are wrong conduct or are allowable in normal lay life, whether with others or by self-stimulation. The Buddha has said:

> Do not engage in heedlessness!
> Do not come near to sexual joys!
> The heedful and contemplative > attains abundant bliss.
>
> (Dhp. 27)

And when this abstinence is to be practiced only for one, two or four days a month there should be no great difficulty.

The fourth precept requires a special watch on the runaway tongue. This means the effort to practice Right Speech that is, speech which is //true//, brings //harmony// between people, is //gentle// and has //meaning//. Dhamma has all these qualities and one's speech should be in accordance with it. One who has taken the Uposatha precepts should try not to become involved in worldly chatter or arguments. And similarly with words on paper: news-papers and magazines which just distract the mind should be avoided for this day. If one wants to read then it should be a book on Dhamma.

It should not be too hard to keep the fifth precept strictly on these days. Under this precept one must include any kind of intoxicant taken for pleasure and escape, so drugs soft and hard find a place here as well as alcohol. At all times a Buddhist is trying to increase in the quality of heedfulness --

> Heedfulness -- the path to Deathlessness, > heedlessness -- the path to death:
> the heedful ones do not die,
> the heedless are like unto the dead.
>
> (Dhp. 21)

But intoxicants only increase unwholesome states of mind so that a person becomes more heedless (or //careless// as pamada has been translated in this precept).

The sixth precept also follows the practice of bhikkhus and aims at cutting down the sloth which is experienced after a day's work and a substantial evening meal, while it ensures that the body is light and fit for meditative practice. In the precept, the words "outside the time" mean after twelve noon until dawn the following day. During this time no food is eaten. However, some flexibility will be needed here with people going out to work. For them it would mean no food after their midday lunch until breakfast the next day. If one is troubled by tiredness after work on a day when these precepts are undertaken then tea or coffee are allowable as refreshing drinks. If hunger is the trouble then cocoa (or even plain chocolate) should cure it. None of these refreshments should contain milk, which is considered a food, though sugar, honey and butter are allowed (to bhikkhus, and therefore to lay people keeping the Eight Precepts), presumably because one can take only a little of these things. Fruit juices which have been strained (without fruit pulp) are other possible drinks.

The seventh precept is really a compound of two in the Ten Precepts of a novice and therefore falls into two parts: the first on "dancing...entertainments," and the second concerned with "wearing garlands...cosmetics." The first half is aimed at keeping mind, speech and body away from all kinds of amusements. Not of course that they are "sinful," but that they turn the mind out through the senses, arouse defilements and cause conflicts where there might be peace. So these days, under this precept must be put radio, television, theatre, cinema and sporting events. These are all ways of escape from being quiet. The second half of the precept is directed against vanity and conceit arising by way of the body. The tradition in the East is for Buddhists who undertake these precepts to clothe themselves simply in white cloth with no adornments. This will not be possible for the lay Buddhist who goes out to work, but on such days jewelry could be left at home, scents and lotions not used on the body, nor cosmetics on the face.

The last precept concerns sleep. Just as all the other luxuries have been cut out, so the luxury of a large, soft bed should be dispensed with for this night. In warm Buddhist countries a mat on the floor is enough, but where the weather is colder a hard mattress or folded blankets on the floor could be used. On a hard surface the body actually relaxes more than on a soft one, also there is less desire to sleep long. On these nights an effort should be made to restrict sleep to the minimum. A "large bed" means one in which two people sleep. The Buddhist who practices these precepts for a day and a night always sleeps by himself.

This summarizes the practice of the Uposatha day. Some people may think these precepts too difficult to carry out in the midst of an alien society. Others may think them too easy to bother about. But before any judgment is passed on them try practicing them for a few Uposathas and then see what is the result. Effort made to practice Dhamma can never bear bad fruits.

According to tradition, one may practice the Eight Precepts on the Full Moon, New Moon and two Quarter-moon days. This is for someone who is really making an effort and whose circumstances allow him to do so. Others might undertake them on the two Uposatha days -- the Full and New Moon days. Or if they are to be undertaken one day a month this will usually be on the Full Moon.

Where this had been found by experience to be quite impossible, then the Uposatha could be kept on weekends. Better this than nothing at all! But then married lay people may find that this will conflict with their family responsibilities -- perhaps to others in the family who are not Buddhist. This is something for individual Buddhists to decide for themselves.

> This indeed is called the eight-part Uposatha
> taught by the Buddha, gone to dukkha's end.

(see the Discourse to Visakha, below)

* * * * * * * *

THE RAINS RESIDENCE [*]

> * [This should NOT be called "Buddhist Lent"! There is no basis for comparing Christian Len with Buddhist Rains-residence, as they do not spring from the same religious ideas, nor have the same purpose, nor apply to the same people.]

This is a period of three months when bhikkhus must reside in one place and cannot wander, though they may undertake all their usual duties provided that they do not take them away from their monasteries overnight. In special circumstances they may even be absent from the monastery or residence where they have vowed to keep the Rains for as long as seven days. As bhikkhus do not withdraw more than usual at this time from involvement with lay people, unless they are devoting all their time to meditation, it is better to translate //vassavasa// literally as "rains-residence" rather than "rains-retreat."

The rains residence was instituted by the Buddha to prevent bhikkhus traveling during the Rainy Season of India and S.E. Asia, and so damaging the crops, and the living creatures which are abundant then. No doubt he considered their health as well when he laid down that bhikkhus must spend the rains with four walls round them and a roof over their heads.

From the beginning this was a time when a bhikkhu could live near a teacher, a senior bhikkhu who had specialized in meditation, in the Discipline, or in the Discourses. He had the chance then to make intensive efforts and learn whatever the teacher taught. After the Rains, especially in the early days when bhikkhus mostly wandered and had few monasteries, the teacher might receive an invitation to go elsewhere and the settled association with pupils would be broken. And then during the Rains there are fewer visitors to the quieter and more secluded monasteries so that more intensive efforts are possible at this time.

In Buddhist countries this is still the time for intensive activity: the meditator meditates more and undertakes more of the austere practices; the student of books makes more effort to master his studies; the teacher-monk is more active in teaching Dhamma and the writer in writing. In some countries this is the time when many laymen, mostly the young, get temporary ordination as "Rains-bhikkhus" (fewer women also become nuns for some time), usually for about four months, after which they disrobe and return to the layman's state. They are honored by others with the name "pandit" (a learned man) for the learning and good conduct that they have acquired in the monastery and benefit their families and society in general by bringing this knowledge back with them. This general intensification of activities in the Sangha leads lay people to consider what they can do during this period.

Usually a lay person on the day of entering the Rains makes a vow or vows to practice in a certain way during the three months of the Rains-residence. This vow may be told to a senior bhikkhu or it may be kept private but in any case it is made in front of a Buddhist shrine. This is something which could be done by any one who wanted to tighten up on practice for the duration of the Rains-residence. The content of the vows vary with one's character, country and circumstances. Below are a number of typical vows made by lay people on Rains-entry day, some of which could be practiced by isolated Buddhists:

During the Rains I shall give almsfood to bhikkhus every day.

I shall give up smoking while the Rains are on.

For the Rains, I shall chant morning and evening service every day.

I shall go to the monastery to hear Dhamma on every holy day. (i.e. 4 days a month).

While the Rains are on I shall not take any intoxicants, or see or hear any form of entertainment.

During the Rains I shall undertake the Uposatha precepts on each Full Moon day.

For the whole Rains I shall practice meditation twice a day.

Each holy day during the Rains I shall keep the Eight Precepts and meditate twice, each time for an hour.

The vows must be practicable. It is no good making vows, perhaps quite exalted ones, which are out of one's range and only another extension of one's ego. A person who practices the Dhamma for a while gets to know his strength and weaknesses and will know therefore what it possible for him to undertake. At the end of the Rains, having accomplished one's vows without a break, one feels that something worthwhile has been done. And sometimes these temporary practices have a lasting effect -- the smoker does not go back to tobacco, or the meditator finds that his practice goes so much better that he continues to sit twice a day, and so on.

During the Rains residence, some lay people in Buddhist countries undertake one or two of the austere practices which were allowed by the Buddha for bhikkhus. [*] It is not possible for lay people to practice most of them but Acariya Buddhaghosa in his "Path of Purification" (Visuddhimagga) has written there (Ch. II para 92) that they can undertake the One-sessioner's practice and the bowl-food-eater's practice. For an isolated Buddhist who goes out to work, even these two could not be practiced.

* [See Wheel 83-84, "With Robes and Bowl."]

The One-sessioner's practice means eating one meal in one session a day. Practiced strictly a person does not even drink foods (such as milk and milk beverages) at other times but having sat down eats enough to last for twenty-four hours.

The Bowl-food-eater's practice is undertaken when a person does not have many plates and dishes but puts all the food to be eaten on one vessel -- the sweet with the main part of the meal, though without necessarily mixing them.

Both practices are good for limiting greed for food, for fine flavors and desires for fine textures, etc. Food is taken by such lay people as a medicine which is necessary to cure the disease of hunger. It is not used for the satisfaction of sensual desires. Particularly for greed characters (in which greed or desire is the strongest of the Roots of Evil) such restraint can be valuable.

And if during the Rains one cannot do anything else, at least one should at this time practice dana to the best of one's ability and in whatever personal ways it is possible to give. Impersonal giving, for instance, having amounts stopped out of one's wage packet, should be avoided as there is little or no good kamma made in such ways. It may be that giving time and sympathy with the effort to help others may be more effective than giving money or goods. The Rains traditionally is the time when lay people have the chance to increase their practice of dana and even though one may not live near to the Sangha there are still plenty of opportunities for giving.

* * *

THE PURPOSE OF THESE PRACTICES

This is simply to generate some zeal for Dhamma in oneself. To bring the Dhamma to life in oneself. To get away from reading books on it and into doing it. Not just to take a mild intellectual interest in it but to make it the basis of one's life. Not only to go to an occasional lecture on the subject but to consider. "What can I DO?" Not to be content to play with the ideas of "Buddhism" -- making sure that these do not touch one's precious self, but to get into Dhamma so that what is rotten in oneself is changed. Not to haggle about the finer points of //atta// and //anatta// (self- and non-self) when one has not even got round to making effort with the Five Precepts. Not to talk of the Void while one harbors hatred in one's heart. Not to be way up there with subtle ideas but to get down to being loving and generous. Not to be swayed at every turn by the world but to have a discipline based on Dhamma for one's life.

A lay person in a non-Buddhist country is not only surrounded by a culture which is opposed to the practice of many aspects of Dhamma but he is often without the help which can be got from bhikkhus and experienced lay teachers. If then he does make the effort to practice along the lines suggested here, sooner or later he will be engulfed. His mild interest in Dhamma fades away or gets lost in the jungle of conflicting desires.

One cannot stand still in Dhamma. Either one makes effort and cultivates oneself, or one slides away from Dhamma to deterioration. Everything suggested here is on the side of Dhamma and leads one to grow in Dhamma, so here is a chance to put into practice the Buddha's words:

Make haste towards the good and check your mind from evil.
Whoso is slow in making punna
his mind delights in evil.

If a man should punna make let him do it again and again;
he should make a wish for that:
happy is the piling up of punna.

(Dhp. 116, 118)

* * * * * * * *

THE DISCOURSE TO VISAKHA ON THE UPOSATHA WITH THE EIGHT PRACTICES

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Thus have I heard: At one time the Exalted One was staying near Savatthi at the Eastern monastery in the mansion (given by) Migara's mother. Then Visakha, [1] Migara's mother, approached the Exalted One; having approached and bowed down she sat down in a suitable place. When she was seated the Exalted One spoke thus to Visakha, Migara's Mother:

"Visakha, when the Uposatha undertaken with its eight component practices, [2] is entered on, it is of great fruit, of great advantage, of great splendor, of great range. And how, Visakha, is the Uposatha undertaken with its eight component practices, entered on, is of great fruit, great advantage, great splendor and great range?
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

"Here, [3] Visakha, a noble disciple considers thus:

" 'For all their lives the Arahants dwell having abandoned killing living beings, refrain from killing living beings, they have laid down their staffs, laid down their weapons, they are conscientious, [4] sympathetic, compassionate for the good of all living beings; so today I dwell, for this night and day, having abandoned killing living beings, refraining from killing living beings, I am one who has laid down my staff, laid down my weapon, I am conscientious, sympathetic, compassionate for the good of all living beings. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this first practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants dwell having abandoned taking what is not given, refrain from taking what is not given, they are takers of what is given, those who expect only what is given, themselves become clean without thieving; so today I dwell, for this night and day, having abandoned taking what is not given, refraining from taking what is not given. I am a taker of what is given, one who expects only what is given, by myself become clean without thieving. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this second practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants dwell having abandoned unchaste conduct, they are of chaste conduct, living aloof, refrain from sex which is way of common society; so today I dwell, for this night and day, having abandoned unchaste conduct, I am of chaste conduct, living aloof, refraining from sex which is the common way of society. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this third practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants dwell having abandoned false speech, refrain from false speech, they are speakers of truth, joiners of truth, [5] firm-in-truth, [6] grounded-on-truth, [7] not speakers of lies to the world; so today I dwell, for this night and day, having abandoned false speech, refraining from false speech, a speaker of truth, a joiner of truth, firm- in-truth, grounded-on-truth, not a speaker of lies to the world. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this fourth practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants dwell having abandoned distilled and fermented intoxicants which are the occasion for carelessness and refrain from them; so today I dwell, for this night and day, having abandoned distilled and fermented intoxicants which are the occasion for carelessness, refraining from them. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this fifth practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants are one-mealers, refrain from eating outside the time, desisting at night, [8] so today I am a one-mealer, refraining from eating outside the time, desisting at night. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this sixth practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants refrain from dancing, singing, music, going to see entertainments, wearing garments, smartening with perfumes and beautifying with cosmetics; so today I refrain from dancing, singing, music, going to see entertainments, wearing ornaments, smartening with perfumes and beautifying with cosmetics. By this practice, following after the Arahants, the Uposathas will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this seventh practice.

"(He considers:) 'For all their lives the Arahants having abandoned high beds [9] and large beds, [10] refraining from high beds and large beds, they make use of a low sleeping place, a (hard) bed or a strewing of grass; so today I have abandoned high beds and large beds, refraining from high beds and large beds, I make use of a low sleeping place, a (hard) bed or a strewing of grass. By this practice, following after the Arahants the Uposatha will be entered on by me.'

"It is undertaken by this eighth practice.

"Thus indeed, Visakha, is the Uposatha entered on and undertaken with its eight component practices, of great fruit, of great advantage, of great splendor, of great range.

"How great a fruit? How great an advantage? How great a splendor? How great a range?

"Just as though, Visakha, one might have power, dominion and kingship [11] over sixteen great countries abounding in the seven treasures [12] -- that is to say, Anga, Magadha, Kasi, Kosala, Vajji, Malla, Ceti, Vansa, Kure, Pancala, Maccha, Surasena, Assaka, Avanti, Gandhara and Kamboja, yet it is not worth a sixteenth part of the Uposatha undertaken with its eight practices. For what reason? //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss//.

"That which among men is fifty years, Visakha, is one night and day of the devas of the Four Great Kings, their month has thirty of those days, their year twelve of those months; the lifespan of the devas of the Four Great Kings is five hundred of those heavenly years. Now here a certain woman or man, having entered on the Uposatha undertaken with its eight practices, at the break up of the body, after death, may arise to fellowship with the devas of the Four Great Kings -- such a thing indeed is known, Visakha. It was in connection with this that I have said: //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss//.

"That which among men is a hundred years, Visakha, is one night and day of the devas of the Thirty-three, their month has thirty of those days, their year twelve of those months; the lifespan of the devas of the Thirty-three is one thousand of those heavenly years. [13] Now here a certain woman or man, having entered on the Uposatha undertaken with the eight practices, at the break up of the body, after death, may arise to fellowship with the devas of the Thirty-three -- such a thing indeed is known, Visakha. It was in connection with this that I have said: //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss.//

"That which among men is two hundred years, Visakha, is one night and day of the Yama devas, their month has thirty of those days, their year twelve of those months; the lifespan of the Yama devas is two thousand of those heavenly years. Now here a certain woman or man, having entered on the Uposatha undertaken with the eight practices, at the break-up of the body, after death, may arise to fellowship with the Yama devas -- such a thing indeed is known, Visakha. It was in connection with this that I have said: //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss.//

"That which among men is four hundred years, Visakha, is one night and day of the Tusita devas, their month has thirty of those days, their year twelve of those months; the lifespan of the Tusita devas is four thousand of those heavenly years. Now here a certain woman or man, having entered on the Uposatha undertaken with the eight practices, at the break up of the body, after death, may arise to fellowship with the Tusita devas -- such a thing indeed is known, Visakha. It was in connection with this that I have said: //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss//.

"That which among men is eight hundred years, Visakha, is one night and day of the Nimmanarati devas, their month has thirty of those days, their year twelve of those months; the lifespan of the Nimmanarati devas is eight thousand of those heavenly years. Now here a certain woman or man, having entered on the Uposatha undertaken with the eight practices, at the break up of the body, after death may arise to fellowship with the Nimmanarati devas -- such a thing indeed is known, Visakha. It was in connection with this that I have said: //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss//.

"That which among men is sixteen hundred years, Visakha, is one night and day of the Paranimmitavasavatti devas, their month has thirty of those days, their year twelve of those months; the lifespan of the Paranimmitavasavatti devas is sixteen thousand of those heavenly years. Now here a certain woman or man, having entered on the Uposatha undertaken with the eight practices, at the break up of the body, after death, may arise to fellowship with the Paranimmitavasavatti devas- such a thing indeed is known, Visakha. It was in connection with this that I have said: //Miserable is kingship over men compared with heavenly bliss.//

"Kill no life, nor take what is not given, speak no lie, nor be an alcoholic,
refrain from sex and unchaste conduct,
at night do not eat out-of-time food,
neither bear garlands nor indulge with perfume,
and make your bed a mat upon the ground:
this indeed is called the eight-part uposatha
taught by the Buddha gone to dukkha's end.
The radiance of the sun and moon,
both beautiful to see, follow on from each other,
dispelling the darkness as they go through the heavens, illumining the sky and brightening the quarters and the treasure found between them:
pearls and crystals and auspicious turquoises, gold nuggets and the gold called "ore," monetary gold with gold dust carried down -- compared with the eight-part uposatha, though they are enjoyed, are not a sixteenth part -- as the shining of the moon in all the groups of stars.
Hence indeed the woman and the man who are virtuous enter on uposatha having eight parts and having made merits [14] bringing forth happiness blameless they obtain heavenly abodes."

(Anguttara-nikaya, iv. 255-258)

* * *

(The upasaka Vasettha, when he heard this discourse, after the Buddha had finished speaking the above verses, exclaimed:)

"Lord, if my dear kin and relatives were to enter on the uposatha undertaken with its eight practices, it would be for their benefit and happiness for many a day. Lord, if all the warrior-nobles, brahmins, merchants and laborers were to enter on the uposatha undertaken with its eight practices, it would be for their benefit and happiness for many a day."

"So it is, Vasettha. If all the warrior-nobles, brahmins, merchants and laborers were to enter on the uposatha undertaken with its eight practices, it would be for their benefit and happiness for many a day. If this world with its devas, maras and brahmas, this generation with its samanas and brahmins, together with its rulers and mankind were to enter on the uposatha undertaken with its eight practices, it would be for their benefit and happiness for many a day. Vasettha, if these great sala trees were to enter on the uposatha undertaken with its eight practices it would be for their benefit and happiness for many a day, that is, if they were conscious, what to speak of mankind." (A.N. iv. 259)

Notes to Accompany the Sutta
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

[1] Visakha: a very generous woman lay-disciple who, by listening frequently to Dhamma, became a Streamwinner and who was, perhaps, already a noble disciple (ariya) when this discourse was spoken.

[2] //anga//: lit. part, component, practice; here meaning practices composing the Uposatha.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

[3] "Here": meaning "in the Buddhasasana," the Buddha's instructions or religion.

[4] //lajji//: one who has shame (hiri) of doing evil, and fear of doing evil (ottappa), the two qualities which are called "the world guardians."

[5] //saccasandha//: "they join the truth" (Comm.)

[6] //theta//: lit. "firm, established," that is, in the experience of ultimate truth.

[7] //paccayika//: truth that has been seen by perceiving its conditional arising.

[8] Bhikkhus do not eat after midday until the following dawn.

[9] High beds means luxurious beds which are soft and well-sprung.

[10] Large beds means those in which two people can sleep.

[11] //rajjam//: lit., "kingship," but meaning generally great authority.

[12] The seven treasures: gold, silver, pearls, crystal, turquoise, diamond, coral.

[13] If calculated in human years, the devas of the Four Great Kings live 9,000,000 years; of the Thirty-three 36,000,000 years; of the Yama 144,000,000 years; of the Tusita 576,000,000 years; of the Nimmanarati 2,304,000,000 years; of the Paranimminitavasavatti devas the life is 9,216,000,000 years. Man can live at most one day in the life of the Thirty-three. It is worth reading the story in the Dhammapada Commentary (trans. "Buddhist Legends," Harvard Oriental Series Vol. 29, reissued by the Pali Text Society, London, 1969), called //Husband-honourer//, which brings to life this comparative time scale.

[14] merit (punna): good kamma which purifies and cleanses the mind of the doer, such as the practice of the three ways of merit-making:

giving, moral conduct (or precepts), and meditation.

* * * * * * * *

The Precepts or Moral Conduct (sila) are:

"A great crossbar preventing entrance into the four woeful states,
a tree of the gods fulfilling all wishes,
an autumnal sun dispelling the miserable darkness,
a seedbed in which wholesome dhammas grow,
an adamantine casket full of various sorts of gems,
a ladder ascending to the palaces of the heavenly worlds.
a bubbling source from which the waters of loving-kindness flow,
a ship to cross over the great sea of all fears,
a great bridge to pass over the ocean of wandering-on,
a great cloud cooling the blaze of birth, decay and death,
the one vehicle for entering the City of Nibbana."

From "The Adornment of the Buddhist Laity" (Upasaka janalamkara)

* * * * * * * *

APPENDIX OF PALI PASSAGES
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Appendix A1 -- Preliminary formula (p. 17)
~~~~~~~~~~~~

NAMO TASSA BHAGAVATO ARAHATO SAMMA-SAMBUDDHASSA

NAMO TASSA BHAGAVATO ARAHATO SAMMA-SAMBUDDHASSA
NAMO TASSA BHAGAVATO ARAHATO SAMMA-SAMBUDDHASSA

Appendix A2 -- Three Refuges (p. 19)
~~~~~~~~~~~~

BUDDHAM SARANAM GACCHAMI
DHAMMAM SARANAM GACCHAMI
SANGHAM SARANAM GACCHAMI

DUTIYAMPI
BUDDHAM SARANAM GACCHAMI
DUTIYAMPI
DHAMMAM SARANAM GACCHAMI
DUTIYAMPI
SANGHAM SARANAM GACCHAMI

TATIYAMPI
BUDDHAM SARANAM GACCHAMI
TATIYAMPI
DHAMMAM SARANAM GACCHAMI
TATIYAMPI
SANGHAM SARANAM GACCHAMI

Appendix A3 -- Five Precepts (p. 21)
~~~~~~~~~~~~

1. PANATIPATA
VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
2. ADINNADANA
VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
3. KAMESU MICCHACARA
VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
4. MUSAVADA
VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
5. SURA-MERAYA-MAJJA-PAMADATTHANA
VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI

Appendix A4 -- Eight Precepts (p. 54)
~~~~~~~~~~~

1,2,4,5, are the same as the Five Precepts. The others are:

3. ABRAHMACARIYA
    VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
6. VIKALABHOJANA
    VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
7. NACCA-GITA-VADITA-VISSUKA-DASSANA MALA GANDHA-VILEPANA DHARANA-MANDANA-VIBHUSANATTHANA
    VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI
8. UCCASYANA-MAHASAYANA
    VERAMANI SIKKHAPADAM SAMADIYAMI

Appendix A5 -- Recollection of the Three Treasures (p.23)
~~~~~~~~~~~

ITI PI SO BHAGAVA ARAHAM SAMMA-SAMBUDDHO
    VIJJA-CARANA-SAMPANNO
    SUGATO LOKAVIDU ANUTTARO PURISA-DHAMMA-SARATHI
    SATTHA-DEVA-MANUSSANAM BUDDHO BHAGAVA'TI

SVAKKHATO BHAGAVATA DHAMMO
    SANDITTHIKO AKALIKO EHIPASSIKO
    OPANAYIKO PACCATTAM VEDITABBO
    VINNUHI'TI

SUPATIPANNO BHAGAVATO SAVAKASANGHO, UJUPATIPANNO BHAGAVATO SAVAKASANGHO, NAYAPATIPANNO BHAGAVATO SAVAKASANGHO, SAMICIPATIPANNO BHAGAVATO SAVAKASANGHO
    YADIDAM CATTARI PURISAYUGANI ATTHA PURISAPUGGALA, ESA BHAGAVATO SAVAKASANGHO, AHUNEYYO PAHUNEYYO DAKKHINEYYO ANJALIKARANIYO, ANUTTARAM PUNNAKKHETTAM LOKASSA'TI.

Appendix A6 -- Affirmation of Refuge in the Three Treasures (p. 24)
~~~~~~~~~~~

NATTHI ME SARANAM ANNAM
BUDDHO ME SARANAM VARAM
ETENA SACCAVAJJENA
VADDHEYYAM SATTHUSASANE

NATTHI ME SARANAM ANNAM
DHAMMO ME SARANAM VARAM
ETENA SACCAVAJJENA
VADDHEYYAM SATTHUSASANE

NATTHI ME SARANAM ANNAM
SANGHO ME SARANAM VARAM
ETENA SACCAVAJJENA
VADDHEYYAM SATTHUSASANE.

Appendix A7 -- Five subjects for daily recollection (p. 25)
~~~~~~~~~~~

1. JARADHAMMOMHI, JARAM ANATITO
2. BYADHIDHAMMOMHI, BYADHIM ANATITO
3. MARANADHAMMOMHI MARANAM ANATITO
4. SABBEHI ME PIYEHI MANAPEHI NANABHAVO VINABHAVO
5. KAMMASAKKOMHI KAMMADAYADO KAMMAYONI KAMMABANDHU KAMMAPATISA
   YAM KAMMAM KARISSAMI KALYANAM VA PAPAKAM VA TASSA DAYADO
   BHAVISSAMI

Appendix A8 -- The Development of Loving-kindness (p. 26)
~~~~~~~~~~~

AHAM AVERO HOMI
AHAM ABYAPAJJHO HOMI
AHAM ANIGHO HOMI
AHAM SUKHI ATTANAM PARIHARAMI
~~~~~~~~~~~

SABBE SATTA AVERA HONTU
SABBE SATTA ABYAPAJJHA HONTU
SABBE SATTA ANIGHA HONTU SABBE SATTA SUKHI ATTANAM PARIHARANTU.

Appendix A9 -- Anumodana (p. 38)
~~~~~~~~~~~

PUNNASSIDANI KATASSA
YANANNANI KATANI ME
TESANCA BHAGINO HONTU SATTANANTAPAMANAKA....
MAYA DINNANA PUNNANAM
ANUMODANAHETUNA
SABBE SATTA SADA HONTU
AVERA SUKHAJIVINO
KHEMAPPADANCA PAPPONTU
TESASA SIJJHATAM SUBHA.

* * * * * * * *

For further reading
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Devotion in Buddhism (Wheel No. 18)
The Mirror of the Dhamma Buddhist Recitations and Devotional texts (Wh 54)
Buddhist Texts for Recitation, by Bhikkhu Khantipalo
The Five Precepts -- Essays (Wh 55)
The Threefold Refuge -- Nyanaponika Thera (Wh 76)
The Four sublime States -- Nyanaponika Thera (Wh 6)

Other writings by Bhikkhu Khantipalo
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The Blessings of Pindapata (Wh 73)
With Robes and Bowl (Wh 83/84)
Practical Advice for Meditators (Wh 116)
The Buddhist Monk's Discipline (Wh 130/131)
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage.

Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Lay Buddhist Practice (The Wheel Publication No. 206/207)
FILENAME: WHEEL206.ZIP
AUTHOR: Bhikkhu Khantipalo
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: N/A
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1974, 1982, 1994)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1982
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: January 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

LESSONS IN SAMADHI

* * *

Groundwork

July 30, 1956

If, when you're sitting, you aren't yet able to observe the breath, tell yourself, 'Now I'm going to breathe in. Now I'm going to breathe out.' In other words, at this stage you're the one doing the breathing. You're not letting the breath come in and out as it naturally would. If you can keep this in mind each time you breathe, you'll soon be able to catch hold of the breath.

* * *

In keeping your awareness inside your body, don't try to imprison it there. In other words, don't try to force the mind into a trance, don't try to force the breath or hold it to the point where you feel uncomfortable or confined. You have to let the mind have its freedom. Simply keep watch over it to make sure that it stays separate from its thoughts. If you try to force the breath and pin the mind down, your body is going to feel restricted and you won't feel at ease in your work. You'll start hurting here and aching there, and your legs may fall asleep. So just let the mind be its natural self, keeping watch to make sure that it doesn't slip out after external thoughts.

When we keep the mind from slipping out after its concepts, and concepts from slipping into the mind, it's like closing our windows and doors to keep dogs, cats, and thieves from slipping into our house. What this means is that we close off our sense doors and don't pay any attention to the sights that come in by way of the eyes, the sounds that come in by way of the ears, the smells that come in by way of the nose, the tastes that come in by way of the tongue, the tactile sensations that come in by way of the body, and the preoccupations that come in by way of the mind. We have to cut off all the perceptions and concepts -- good or bad, old or new -- that come in by way of these doors.

Cutting off concepts like this doesn't mean that we stop thinking. It simply means that we bring our thinking inside to put it to good use by observing and evaluating the theme of our meditation. If we put our mind to work in this way, we won't be doing any harm to ourself or to our mind. Actually, our mind tends to be working all the time, but the work it gets involved in is usually a lot of fuss and bother without any real substance. So we have to find work of real value for it to do -- something that won't harm it, something really worth doing. This is why we're doing breath meditation, focusing on our breathing, focusing on our mind. Put aside all your other work and be intent on doing just this and nothing else. This is the sort of attitude you need when you meditate.

The Hindrances that come from our concepts of past and future are like weeds growing in our field. They steal all the nutrients from the soil so that our crops won't have anything to feed on and they make the place look like a mess. They're of no use at all except as food for the cows and other animals that come wandering through. If you let your field get filled with weeds this way, your crops won't be able to grow. In the same way, if you don't clear your mind of its preoccupation with concepts, you won't be able to make your heart pure. Concepts are food only for the ignorant people who think they're delicious, but sages don't eat them at all.

The five Hindrances -- sensual desire, ill will, torpor & lethargy, restlessness & anxiety, and uncertainty -- are like different kinds of weeds. Restlessness & anxiety is probably the most poisonous of the lot, because it makes us distracted, unsettled, and anxious all at the same time. It's the kind of weed with thorns and sharp-edged leaves. If you run into it, you're going to end up with a stinging rash all over your body. So if you come across it, destroy it. Don't let it grow in your field at all.

Breath meditation -- keeping the breath steadily in mind -- is the best method the Buddha taught for wiping out these Hindrances. We use directed thought to focus on the breath, and evaluation to adjust it. Directed thought is like a plow; evaluation, like a harrow. If we keep plowing and harrowing our field, weeds won't have a chance to grow, and our crops are sure to prosper and bear fruit.

The field here is our body. If we put a lot of thought and evaluation into our breathing, the four properties of the body will be balanced and at peace. The body will be healthy and strong, the mind relaxed and wide open, free from Hindrances.

When you've got your field cleared and leveled like this, your crops are sure to prosper. As soon as you bring the mind to the breath, you'll feel a sense of rapture and refreshment. The four bases of attainment (iddhipada) -- the desire to practice, persistence in the practice, intentness, and circumspection in your practice -- will develop step by step. These four qualities are like the ingredients in a health tonic. Whoever takes this tonic will have a long life. If you want to die, you don't have to take it, but if you don't want to die, you have to take a lot. The more you take it, the faster the diseases in your mind will disappear.

* * *

The Art of Letting Go

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

August 17, 1956

When you sit and meditate, even if you don't gain any intuitive insights, make sure at least that you know this much: When the breath comes in, you know. When it goes out, you know. When it's long, you know. When it's short, you know. Whether it's pleasant or unpleasant, you know. If you can know this much, you're doing fine. As for the various thoughts and concepts (sanna) that come into the mind, brush them away -- whether they're good or bad, whether they deal with the past or the future. Don't let them interfere with what you're doing -- and don't go chasing after them to straighten them out. When a thought of this sort comes passing in, simply let it go passing on. Keep your awareness, unperturbed, in the present.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

When we say that the mind goes here or there, it's not really the mind that goes. Only concepts go. Concepts are like shadows of the mind. If the body is still, how will its shadow move? The movement of the body is what causes the shadow to move, and when the shadow moves, how will you catch hold of it? Shadows are hard to catch, hard to shake off, hard to set still. The awareness that forms the present: That's the true mind. The awareness that goes chasing after concepts is just a shadow. Real awareness -- 'knowing' -- stays in place. It doesn't stand, walk, come, or go. As for the mind -- the awareness that doesn't act in any way coming or going, forward or back -- it's quiet and unperturbed. And when the mind is thus its normal, even, undistracted self -- i.e., when it doesn't have any shadows -- we can rest peacefully. But if the mind is unstable and uncertain, it wavers: Concepts arise and go flashing out -- and we go chasing after them, hoping to drag them back in. The chasing after them is where we go wrong. This is what we have to correct. Tell yourself: Nothing is wrong with your mind. Just watch out for the shadows.

You can't improve your shadow. Say your shadow is black. You can scrub it with soap till your dying day, and it'll still be black -- because there's no substance to it. So it is with your concepts. You can't straighten them out, because they're just images, deceiving you.

The Buddha thus taught that whoever isn't acquainted with the self, the body, the mind, and its shadows, is suffering from avijja -- darkness, deluded knowledge. Whoever thinks the mind is the self, the self is the mind, the mind is its concepts -- whoever has things all mixed up like this -- is lost, like a person lost in the jungle. To be lost in the jungle brings countless hardships. There are wild beasts to worry about, problems in finding food to eat and a place to sleep. No matter which way you look, there's no way out. But if we're lost in the world, it's many times worse than being lost in the jungle, because we can't tell night from day. We have no chance to find any brightness because our minds are dark with avijja.

The purpose of training the mind to be still is to simplify things. When things are simplified, we can see. The mind can settle down and rest. And when the mind has rested, it'll gradually become bright, in and of itself, and give rise to knowledge. But if we let things get complicated -- if we let the mind get mixed up with sights, sounds, smells, tastes, tactile sensations, and ideas -- that's darkness. Knowledge won't have a chance to arise.

When intuitive knowledge does arise, it can -- if you know how to use it -- lead to liberating insight. But if you let yourself get carried away by knowledge of the past or future, you won't get beyond the mundane level. In other words, if you dabble too much in knowledge of physical things, without gaining wisdom with regard to the workings of the mind, it can leave you spiritually immature.

Say, for example, that a vision arises and you get hooked: You gain knowledge of your past lives and get all excited. Things you never knew before, now you can know. Things you never saw before, now you see -- and they can make you overly pleased or upset. Why? Because you take them all too seriously. You may see a vision of yourself prospering as a lord or master, a great emperor or king, wealthy and influential. If you let yourself feel pleased, that's indulgence in pleasure. You've strayed from the Middle Path. Or you may see yourself as something you wouldn't care to be: a pig or a dog, a bird or a rat, crippled or deformed. If you let yourself get upset, that's indulgence in self-affliction -- and again, you've strayed from the path. Some people really let themselves get carried away: As soon as they start seeing things, they begin to think that they're special, somehow better than other people. They let themselves become proud and conceited -- and the true path has disappeared without their even knowing it. If you're not careful, this is where mundane knowledge can lead you.

But if you keep one principle firmly in mind, you can stay on the right path: Whatever appears, good or bad, true or false, don't let yourself feel pleased, don't let yourself get upset. Keep the mind balanced and neutral, and discernment will arise. You'll see that the vision or sign displays the truth of stress: it arises (is born), fades (ages), and disappears (dies).

If you get hooked on your intuitions, you're asking for trouble. Knowledge that proves false can hurt you. Knowledge that proves true can really hurt you. If what you know is true, and you go telling other people, you're bragging. If it turns out to be false, it can backfire on you. This is why those who truly know say that knowledge is the essence of stress: It can hurt you. Knowledge is part of the flood of views and opinions (ditthi-ogha) over which we have to cross. If you hang onto knowledge, you've gone wrong. If you know, simply know, and let it go at that. You don't have to be excited or pleased. You don't have to go telling other people.

People who've studied abroad, when they come back to the rice fields, don't tell what they've learned to the folks at home. They talk about ordinary things in an ordinary way. They don't talk about the things they've studied because (1) no one would understand them; (2) it wouldn't serve any purpose. Even with people who would understand them, they don't display their learning. So it should be when you practice meditation. No matter how much you know, you have to act as if you know nothing, because this is the way people with good manners normally act. If you go bragging to other people, it's bad enough. If they don't believe you, it can get even worse.

So whatever you know, simply be aware of it and let it go. Don't let there be the assumption that 'I know.' When you can do this, your mind can attain the transcendent, free from attachment.

* * *

Everything in the world has its truth. Even things that aren't true are true -- i.e., their truth is that they're false. This is why we have to let go of both what's true and what's false. Once we know the truth and can let it go, we can be at our ease. We won't be poor, because the truth -- the Dhamma -- will still be there with us. We won't be left empty-handed. It's like having a lot of money: Instead of lugging it around with us, we keep it piled up at home. We may not have anything in our pockets, but we're still not poor.

The same is true with people who really know. Even when they let go of their knowledge, it's still there. This is why the minds of the Noble Ones aren't left adrift. They let things go, but not in a wasteful or irresponsible way. They let go like rich people: Even though they let go, they've still got piles of wealth.

As for people who let things go like paupers, they don't know what's worthwhile and what's not, and so they let it all go, throw it all away. And when they do this, they're simply heading for disaster. For instance, they may see that there's no truth to anything -- no truth to the khandhas, no truth to the body, no truth to stress, its cause, its disbanding, or the path to its disbanding, no truth to Liberation. They don't use their brains at all. They're too lazy to do anything, so they let go of everything, throw it all away. This is called letting go like a pauper. Like a lot of modern-day sages: When they come back after they die, they're going to be poor all over again.

As for the Buddha, he let go only of the true and false things that appeared in his body and mind -- but he didn't abandon his body and mind, which is why he ended up rich, with plenty of wealth to hand down to his descendants. This is why his descendants never have to worry about being poor.

So we should look to the Buddha as our model. If we see that the khandhas are worthless -- inconstant, stressful, not-self, and all that -- and simply let go of them by neglecting them, we're sure to end up poor. Like a stupid person who feels so repulsed by a festering sore on his body that he won't touch it and so lets it go without taking care of it: There's no way the sore is going to heal. As for intelligent people, they know how to wash their sores, put medicine and bandages on them, so that eventually they're sure to recover.

In the same way, when people see only the drawbacks to the khandhas, without seeing their good side, and so let them go without putting them to any worthwhile use, nothing good will come of it. But if we're intelligent enough to see that the khandhas have their good side as well as their bad, and then put them to good use by meditating to gain discernment into physical and mental phenomena, we're going to be rich. Once we have the truth -- the Dhamma -- as our wealth, we won't suffer if we have money, and won't suffer if we don't, for our minds will be transcendent.

* * *

At the Tip of Your Nose

August 26, 1957

If feelings of pain or discomfort arise while you're sitting in meditation, examine them to see what they come from. Don't let yourself be pained or upset by them. If there are parts of the body that won't go as you'd like them to, don't worry about them. Let them be -- because your body is the same as every other body, human or animal, throughout the world: It's inconstant, stressful, and can't be forced. So stay with whatever part does go as you'd like it to, and keep it comfortable.

* * *

The body is like a tree: No tree is entirely perfect. At any one time it'll have new leaves and old leaves, green leaves and yellow, fresh leaves and dry. The dry leaves will fall away first, while those that are fresh will slowly dry out and fall away later. Some of the branches are long, some thick, and some small. The fruits aren't evenly distributed. The human body isn't really much different from this. Pleasure and pain aren't evenly distributed. The parts that ache and those that are comfortable are randomly mixed. You can't rely on it. So do your best to keep the comfortable parts comfortable. Don't worry about the parts that you can't make comfortable.

It's like going into a house where the floorboards are beginning to rot: If you want to sit down, don't choose a rotten spot. Choose a spot where the boards are still sound. In other words, the heart needn't concern itself with things that can't be controlled.

You can compare the body to a mango: If a mango has a rotten or a wormy spot, take a knife and cut it out. Eat just the good part remaining. If you're foolish enough to eat the wormy part, you're in for trouble. Your body is the same, and not just the body -- the mind, too, doesn't always go as you'd like it to. Sometimes it's in a good mood, sometimes it's not. This is where you have to use as much thought and evaluation as possible.

Directed thought and evaluation are like doing a job. The job here is concentration: centering the mind. Focus the mind on a single object and then, giving it your full attention, examine and reflect on it. If you use a meager amount of thought and evaluation, your concentration will give meager results. If you do a crude job, you'll get crude results. If you do a fine job, you'll get fine results. Crude results aren't worth much. Fine results are of high quality and are useful in all sorts of ways -- like atomic radiation, which is so fine that it can penetrate even mountains. Crude things are of low quality and hard to use. Sometimes you can soak them in water all day long and they still don't soften up. But as for fine things, all they need is a little dampness in the air and they dissolve.

So it is with the quality of your concentration. If your thinking and evaluation are subtle, thorough, and circumspect, your 'concentration work' will result in more and more stillness of mind. If your thinking and evaluation are slipshod, you won't get much stillness. Your body will ache, and you'll feel restless and irritable. Once the mind can become very still, though, the body will be comfortable and at ease. Your heart will feel open and clear. Pains will disappear. The elements of the body will feel normal: The warmth in your body will be just right, neither too hot nor too cold. As soon as your work is finished, it'll result in the highest form of happiness and ease: nibbana -- Liberation. But as long as you still have work to do, your heart won't get its full measure of peace. Wherever you go, there will always be something nagging at the back of your mind. Once your work is done, though, you can be carefree wherever you go.

If you haven't finished your job, it's because (1) you haven't set your mind on it and (2) you haven't actually done the work. You've shirked your duties and played truant. But if you really set your mind on doing the job, there's no doubt but that you'll finish it.

Once you've realized that the body is inconstant, stressful, and can't be forced, you shouldn't let your mind get upset or excited by it. Keep your mind normal, on an even keel. 'Inconstant' means that it changes. 'Stressful' doesn't refer solely to aches and pains. It refers to pleasure as well -- because pleasure is inconstant and undependable. A little pleasure can turn into a lot of pleasure, or into pain. Pain can turn back into pleasure, and so on. (If we had nothing but pain we would die.) So we shouldn't be all that concerned about pleasure and pain. Think of the body as having two parts, like the mango. If you focus your attention on the comfortable part, your mind can be at peace. Let the pains be in the other part. Once you have an object of meditation, you have a comfortable place for your mind to stay. You don't have to dwell on your pains. You have a comfortable house to live in: Why go sleep in the dirt?

We all want nothing but goodness, but if you can't tell what's good from what's defiled, you can sit and meditate till your dying day and never find nibbana at all. But if you can set your mind and keep your mind on what you're doing, it's not all that hard. Nibbana is really a simple matter because it's always there. It never changes. The affairs of the world are what's hard because they're always changing and uncertain. Today they're one way, tomorrow another. Once you've done something, you have to keep looking after it. But you don't have to look after nibbana at all. Once you've realized it, you can let it go. Keep on realizing, keep on letting go -- like a person eating rice who, after he's put the rice in his mouth, keeps spitting it out.

What this means is that you keep on doing good but don't claim it as your own. Do good and then spit it out. This is viraga-dhamma: disengagement. For most people in the world, once they've done something, it's theirs -- and so they have to keep looking after it. If they're not careful, it'll either get stolen or else wear out on its own. They're headed for disappointment. Like a person who swallows his rice: After he's eaten, he'll have to defecate. After he's defecated he'll be hungry again, so he'll have to eat again and defecate again. The day will never come when he's had enough. But with nibbana you don't have to swallow. You can eat your rice and then spit it out. You can do good and let it go. It's like plowing a field: The dirt falls off the plow on its own. You don't need to scoop it up and put it in a bag tied to your water buffalo's leg. Whoever is stupid enough to scoop up the dirt as it falls off the plow and stick it in a bag will never get anywhere. Either his buffalo will get bogged down, or else he'll trip over the bag and fall flat on his face right there in the middle of the field. The field will never get plowed, the rice will never get sown, the crop will never get gathered. He'll have to go hungry.

Buddho, our meditation word, is the name of the Buddha after his Awakening. It means someone who has blossomed, who is awake, who has suddenly come to his senses. For six long years before his Awakening, the Buddha traveled about, searching for the truth from various teachers, all without success. So he went off on his own and on a full-moon evening in May sat down under the Bodhi tree, vowing not to get up until he had attained the truth. Finally, toward dawn, as he was meditating on his breath, he gained Awakening. He found what he was looking for -- right at the tip of his nose.

Nibbana doesn't lie far away. It's right at our lips, right at the tip of our nose. But we keep groping around and never find it. If you're really serious about finding purity, set your mind on meditation and nothing else. As for whatever else may come your way, you can say, 'No thanks.' Pleasure? 'No thanks.' Pain? 'No thanks.' Goodness? 'No thanks.' Evil? 'No thanks.' Attainment? 'No thanks.' Nibbana? 'No thanks.' If it's 'no thanks' to everything, what will you have left? You won't need to have anything left. That's nibbana. Like a person without any money: How will thieves be able to rob him? If you get money and try to hold onto it, you're going to get killed. If this thief doesn't get you, that one will. Carry 'what's yours' around till you're completely weighed down. You'll never get away.

In this world we have to live with both good and evil. People who have developed disengagement are filled with goodness, and know evil fully, but don't hold onto either, don't claim either as their own. They put them aside, let them go, and so can travel light and easy. Nibbana isn't all that difficult a matter. In the Buddha's time, some people became arahants while going on their almsround, some while urinating, some while watching farmers plowing a field. What's difficult about the highest good lies in the beginning, in laying the groundwork -- being constantly mindful, examining and evaluating your breath at all times. But if you can keep at it, you're bound to succeed in the end.

* * *

The Care & Feeding of the Mind

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

May 7, 1959

The breath is a mirror for the mind. If the mirror is abnormal, it gives abnormal reflections. Say you look into a convex mirror: Your reflection will be taller than you are. If you look in a concave mirror, your reflection will be abnormally short. But if you look into a mirror that's flat, smooth, and normal, it'll give you a true reflection of yourself.

* * *
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Knowing how to adjust the breath, putting it in good order, is tantamount to putting the mind in good order as well and can give all kinds of benefits -- like a good cook who knows how to vary the foods she serves, sometimes changing the color, sometimes the flavor, sometimes the shape, so that her employer will never grow tired of her cooking. If she fixes the same thing all year around -- porridge today, porridge tomorrow, porridge the next day -- her employer is bound to go looking for a new cook. But if she knows how to vary her offerings so that her employer is always satisfied, she's sure to get a raise in her salary, or maybe a special bonus.

So it is with the breath. If you know how to adjust and vary the breath -- if you're always thinking about and evaluating the breath -- you'll become thoroughly mindful and expert in all matters dealing with the breath and the other elements of the body. You'll always know how things are going with the body. Rapture, ease, and singleness of preoccupation will come on their own. The body will be refreshed, the mind content. Both body and mind will be at peace. All the elements will be at peace, free from unrest and disturbances.

It's like knowing how to look after a small child. If the child starts crying, you know when to give it milk or candy, when to give it a bath, when to take it out for some air, when to put it in a playpen and give it a doll to play with. In no time at all, the child will stop crying, stop whining, and leave you free to finish whatever work you have to do. The mind is like a small, innocent child. If you're skilled at looking after it, it'll be obedient, happy, and contented, and will grow day by day.

* * *

When the body and mind are full and content, they won't feel hungry. They won't have to go opening up the pots and pans on the stove or pace around looking out the windows and doors. They can sleep in peace without any disturbances. Ghosts and demons -- the pains of the khandhas -- won't come and possess them. This way we can be at our ease, because when we sit, we sit with people. When we lie down, we lie down with people. When we eat, we eat with people. When people live with people, there's no problem; but when they live with ghosts and demons, they're sure to squabble and never find any peace. If we don't know how to evaluate and adjust our breathing, there's no way our meditation will give any results. Even if we sit till we die, we won't gain any knowledge or understanding at all.

There was once an old monk -- 70 years old, 30 years in the monkhood -- who had heard good things about how I teach meditation and so came to study with me. The first thing he asked was, 'What method do you teach?'

'Breath meditation,' I told him. 'You know -- bud-dho, bud-dho.'

As soon as he heard that, he said, 'I've been practicing that method ever since the time of Ajaan Mun -- buddho, buddho ever since I was young -- and I've never seen anything good come of it. All it does is buddho, buddho without ever getting anywhere at all. And now you're going to teach me to buddho some more. What for? You want me to buddho till I die?'

This is what happens when people have no sense of how to adjust and evaluate their breathing: They'll never find what they're looking for -- which is why adjusting and spreading the breath is a very important part of doing breath meditation.

* * *

Getting to know yourself -- becoming acquainted with your body, your mind, the elements (earth, water, fire, wind, space, and consciousness), knowing what they come from, how they arise, how they disband, how they're inconstant, stressful, and not-self: All of this you have to find out by exploring on your own. If your knowledge simply follows what's in books or what other people tell you, it's knowledge that comes from labels and concepts, not from your own discernment. It's not really knowledge. If you know only what other people tell you, you're following them down a road -- and what could be good about that? They might lead you down the wrong road. And if the road is dusty, they might kick dust into your ears and eyes. So in your search for the truth, don't simply believe what other people say. Don't believe labels. Practice centering the mind until you gain knowledge on your own. Only then will it be insight. Only then will it be trustworthy.

* * *

'Just Right' Concentration

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

October 4, 1960

When you meditate, you have to think. If you don't think, you can't meditate, because thinking forms a necessary part of meditation. Take jhana, for instance. Use your powers of directed thought to bring the mind to the object, and your powers of evaluation to be discriminating in your choice of an object. Examine the object of your meditation until you see that it's just right for you. You can choose slow breathing, fast breathing, short breathing, long breathing, narrow breathing, broad breathing; hot, cool, or warm breathing; a breath that goes only as far as the nose, a breath that goes only as far as the base of the throat, a breath that goes all the way down to the heart. When you've found an object that suits your taste, catch hold of it and make the mind one, focused on a single object. Once you've done this, evaluate your object. Direct your thoughts to making it stand out. Don't let the mind leave the object. Don't let the object leave the mind. Tell yourself that it's like eating: Put the food in line with your mouth, put your mouth in line with the food. Don't miss. If you miss and go sticking the food in your ear, under your chin, in your eye, or on your forehead, you'll never get anywhere in your eating.

So it is with your meditation. Sometimes the 'one' object of your mind takes a sudden sharp turn into the past, back hundreds of years. Sometimes it takes off into the future and comes back with all sorts of things to clutter your mind. This is like taking your food, sticking it up over your head, and letting it fall down behind you -- the dogs are sure to get it; or like bringing the food to your mouth and then tossing it out in front of you. When you find this happening, it's a sign that your mind hasn't been made snug with its object. Your powers of directed thought aren't firm enough. You have to bring the mind to the object and then keep after it to make sure it stays put. Like eating: Make sure the food is in line with the mouth and stick it right in. This is directed thought: The food is in line with the mouth, the mouth is in line with the food. You're sure it's food and you know what kind it is -- main course or dessert, coarse or refined.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Once you know what's what, and it's in your mouth, chew it right up. This is evaluation: examining, reviewing your meditation. Sometimes this comes under threshold concentration -- examining a coarse object to make it more and more refined. If you find that the breath is long, examine long breathing. If it's short, examine short breathing. If it's slow, examine slow breathing -- to see if the mind will stay with that kind of breathing, to see if that kind of breathing will stay with the mind, to see whether or not the breath is smooth and unhindered. This is evaluation.

When the mind gives rise to directed thought and evaluation, you have both concentration and discernment. Directed thought and singleness of preoccupation fall under the heading of concentration; evaluation, under the heading of discernment. When you have both concentration and discernment, the mind is still and knowledge can arise. But if there's too much evaluation, it can destroy your stillness of mind. If there's too much stillness, it can snuff out thought. You have to watch over the stillness of your mind to make sure you have things in the right proportions. If you don't have a sense of 'just right,' you're in for trouble. If the mind is too still, your progress will be slow. If you think too much, it'll run away with your concentration.

So observe things carefully. Again, it's like eating. If you go shoveling food into your mouth, you might end up choking to death. You have to ask yourself: Is it good for me? Can I handle it? Are my teeth strong enough? Some people have nothing but empty gums and yet they want to eat sugar cane: It's not normal. Some people, even though their teeth are aching and falling out, still want to eat crunchy foods. So it is with the mind: As soon as it's just a little bit still, we want to see this, know that -- we want to take on more than we can handle. You first have to make sure that your concentration is solidly based, that your discernment and concentration are properly balanced. This point is very important. Your powers of evaluation have to be ripe, your directed thought firm.

Say you have a water buffalo and tie it to a stake. If your buffalo is strong, it just might walk away with the stake. You have to know your buffalo's strength. If it's really strong, pound the stake so that it's firmly in the ground and keep watch over it. In other words, if you find that your thinking is getting out of hand, going beyond the bounds of mental stillness, bring the mind back and make it extra still -- but not so still that you lose track of things. If the mind is too quiet, it's like being in a daze. You don't know what's going on at all. Everything is dark, blotted out. Or else you have good and bad spells, sinking out of sight and then popping up again. This is concentration without directed thought or evaluation, with no sense of judgment: Wrong Concentration.

So you have to be observant. Use your judgment -- but don't let the mind get carried away by its thoughts. Your thinking is something separate. The mind stays with the meditation object. Wherever your thoughts may go spinning, your mind is still firmly based -- like holding onto a post and spinning around and around. You can keep on spinning, and yet it doesn't wear you out. But if you let go of the post and spin around three times, you get dizzy and -- Bang! -- fall flat on your face. So it is with the mind: If it stays with its one object, it can keep thinking and not get tired, because your thinking and stillness are right there together. The more you think, the more solid your mind gets. The more you sit and meditate, the more you think. The mind becomes more and more firm until all the Hindrances (nivarana) fall away. The mind no longer goes looking for concepts. Now it can give rise to knowledge.

The knowledge here isn't ordinary knowledge. It washes away your old knowledge. You don't want the knowledge that comes from ordinary thinking and reasoning: Let go of it. You don't want the knowledge that comes from directed thought and evaluation: Stop. Make the mind quiet. Still. When the mind is still and unhindered, this is the essence of all that is good. When your mind is on this level, it isn't attached to any concepts at all. All the concepts you've known -- dealing with the world or the Dhamma, however many or few -- are washed away. Only when they're washed away can new knowledge arise.

This is why you should let go of concepts -- all the labels and names you have for things. You have to let yourself be poor. It's when people are poor that they become resourceful. If you don't let yourself be poor, you'll never gain discernment. In other words, you don't have to be afraid of being stupid or of missing out on things. You don't have to be afraid that you've hit a dead end. You don't want any of the insights you've gained from listening to others or from reading books, because they're concepts and therefore inconstant. You don't want any of the insights you've gained by reasoning and thinking, because they're concepts and therefore not-self. Let all these insights disappear, leaving just the mind, firmly intent, leaning neither to the left, toward being displeased; nor to the right, toward being pleased. Keep the mind still, quiet, neutral, impassive -- set tall. And there you are: Right Concentration.

When Right Concentration arises in the mind, it has a shadow. When you can catch sight of the shadow appearing, that's vipassana: liberating insight.

The knowledge you gain from Right Concentration doesn't come in the form of thoughts or ideas. It comes as Right Views. What looks wrong to you is really wrong. What looks right is really right. If what looks right is really wrong, that's Wrong View. If what looks wrong is really right, again -- Wrong View. With Right View, though, right looks right and wrong looks wrong.

To put it in terms of cause and effect, you see the four Noble Truths. You see stress, and it really is stressful. You see the cause of stress arising, and that it's really causing stress. These are Noble Truths: absolutely, undeniably, indisputably true. You see that stress has a cause. Once the cause arises, there has to be stress. As for the way to the disbanding of stress, you see that the path you're following will, without a doubt, lead to Liberation. Whether or not you go all the way, what you see is correct. This is Right View. And as for the disbanding of stress, you see that there really is such a thing. You see that as long as you're on the path, stress does in fact fall away. When you come to realize the truth of these things in your heart, that's vipassana-nana.

To put it even more simply: You see that all things, inside as well as out, are undependable. The body is undependable, ageing is undependable, death is undependable. They're slippery characters, constantly changing on you. To see this is to see inconstancy. Don't let yourself be pleased by inconstancy. Don't let yourself be upset. Keep the mind neutral, on an even keel. That's what's meant by vipassana.

As for stress: Say we hear that an enemy is suffering. 'Glad to hear it,' we think. 'Hope they hurry up and die.' The heart has tilted. Say we hear that a friend has become wealthy, and we become happy; or a son or daughter is ill, and we become sad. Our mind has fallen in with suffering and stress. Why? Because we're unskilled. The mind isn't centered -- i.e., it's not in Right Concentration. We have to look after the mind. Don't let it fall in with stress. Whatever suffers, let it suffer, but don't let the mind suffer with it. The body may be in pain, but the mind isn't pained. Let the body go ahead and suffer, but the mind doesn't suffer. Keep the mind neutral. Don't be pleased by pleasure -- pleasure is a form of stress, you know. How so? It can change. It can rise and fall. It can be high and low. It can't last. That's stress. Pain is also stress: double stress. When you gain this sort of insight into stress -- when you really see stress -- vipassana has arisen in the mind.

As for anatta, not-self: Once we've examined things and seen them for what they really are, we don't make claims, we don't display influence, we don't try to show that we have the right or the power to bring things that are not-self under our control. No matter how hard we try, we can't prevent birth, ageing, illness, and death. If the body is going to be old, let it be old. If it's going to hurt, let it hurt. If it's going to die, let it die. Don't be pleased by death, either your own or that of others. Don't be upset by death, your own or that of others. Keep the mind neutral. Unruffled. Unfazed. This is sankharupekkha-nana: letting sankharas -- all things fashioned, conditioned, and caused -- follow their own inherent nature.

This, briefly, is vipassana: You see that all things fashioned are inconstant, stressful, and not-self. You can disentangle them from your grasp. You can let go. This is where it gets good. How so? You don't have to wear yourself out, lugging sankharas around.

To be attached means to carry a load, and there are five heaps (khandhas) we carry: attachment to physical phenomena, to feelings, to concepts and labels, to to mental fashionings, and to sensory consciousness. We grab hold and hang onto these things, thinking that they're the self. Go ahead: Carry them around. Hang one load from your left leg and one from your right. Put one on your left shoulder and one on your right. Put the last load on your head. And now: Carry them wherever you go -- clumsy, encumbered, and comical.

bhara have pancakkhandha Go ahead and carry them. The five khandhas are a heavy load, bharaharo ca puggalo

and as individuals we burden ourselves with them.

bharadanam dukkham loke Carry them everywhere you go, and you waste your time suffering in the world.

The Buddha taught that whoever lacks discernment, whoever is unskilled, whoever doesn't practice concentration leading to liberating insight, will have to be burdened with stress, will always be loaded down. It's a pity. It's a shame. They'll never get away.

Their legs are burdened, their shoulders burdened -- and where are they going? Three steps forward and two steps back. Soon they'll get discouraged and then, after a while, they'll pick themselves up and get going again.

Now, when we see inconstancy -- that all things fashioned, whether within us or without, are undependable; when we see that they're stressful; when we see that they're not our self, that they simply whirl around in and of themselves: When we gain these insights, we can put down our burdens, i.e., let go of our attachments. We can put down the past -- i.e., stop dwelling in it. We can let go of the future -- i.e., stop yearning for it. We can let go of the present -- i.e., stop claiming it as the self. Once we've let our burdens fall, we can walk with a light step. We can even dance. We're beautiful. Wherever we go, people will be glad to know us. Why? Because we're not encumbered. Whatever we do, we can do with ease. We can walk, run, dance, and sing -- all with a light heart. We're Buddhism's beauty, a sight for sore eyes, graceful wherever we go. No longer burdened, no longer encumbered, we can be at our ease. This is vipassana-nana.

* * * * * * * *

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers viaanonymous FTP an
on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU]The document's ftp filename and the full directory path
thecoombspapers top level INDEX file][This version: 8 November 1993]----------BUDDHIST ATTITUDE TO LIFE*by Lama Choedak[reprinted from: SAKYA LOSAL CHOE DZONG CLEAR MIND QUA extermely happy to be given the opportunity to come and share withyou the contribution Buc better the well being ofhuman society. Tonight we have come together to discuss the benef sharing of good things we value in our society in general andparticularly religion. Those of u in one or anotherreligion have seen the benefits of religious practices if and when wepractise ourselves. We have also seen the danger andsuffering which come out of direct misuse of powerand religious fanaticism. The benefit or harm caused by religion ineveryday life is not or demerit of the religions. It isentirely dependent on the behaviours of the people who profe to be religious. Since the problems of the world are createdby human beings they can only human beings, by properlyfollowing the fundamental principles of human values, taught and men and women of the world. Let us not be in theillusion that there were only one or few su who came assaviours of the world. We must credit ourselves and thank others forthe good life and be responsible for the bad thingswe experience. According to Buddhism, Religion o nomore than a raft or a path for people who wish to journey on it. If wehave an accident on not the road's fault and if we travelwell, we do not thank the road. However if we stand in ofthe road and tell other people that they do not know how to walk, thatis not just an acciden arrogance and ignorance.I have come here to share with you the Buddhist perspective and ideas and practices can benefit individuals and our societyat large. Buddhism and its teachi other religions andin fact, in Buddhism, it is a transgression to speak ill of anybody or agroup or their philosophical or religious ideas. Condemningother people or their religion is conside non-religious conduct andis an idle-talk which is one of the ten non-virtues deeds one musta is no devil outside other than one's own inability toaccept and respect other religions. There external god other thanthe kindness and compassion that can flow through us to other living dog who shows her kindness to her puppy is a muchbetter example of compassion foe one propagatingteachings which discriminate against colour, race, religion or gender.If one religi tolerate another how can it teach to tolerateanything in this world? Religious intolerance and narrow-mindednessamong Church and religious leaders have let down many of their adhere "free thinkers". These are not the benefits ofreligious practice but the failure to understand a religion.Over the years I have met many people who wish to be identified as "freethinkers" ra belonging to any religious denomination. Manyregard religion as that which narrows their th limits theirfreedom to reason. Many modern thinkers, who have otherwise distancedthemse religious dogma have become attracted to theBuddhist way of life and its powerful ideas, ha Buddhism as away of life rather than a religion. Many Australians I have known, whoconsid Buddhists have become interested in Buddhism andhave adopted its non-pressured approa because they donot have to believe in things they have not examined and experiencedthem taught to think for themselves rather than have ablind faith in something and are not even al of itlogically. They are encouraged to find a safe way for themselves ratherthan accept the c ready-made highway. There is no onehighway to enlightenment, but there are different foot pastmasters we can follow if we wish. Learn from everbody and everycircumstance and tak to you, but let us not beover-ambitious and try to make a highway to lead everyone. This is religious fanaticism are planted.Several years ago there was a big inter-religious conference Londonwhich was represented by all major religions. Buddhism was representedby a Sri La conference was held in a beautiful Church andmost of those attending were Christians. All t on thestage and the Sri Lankan monk who was the smallest in physical size wasasked to sp first remark he made was nothing but a fewminutes of total silence and the people in the auc wasnot going to say anything and the Master of the Ceremony acted ratheranxiously. Then towards the Master of the ceremony andnodded as if he was going to say something after a said:"I am sorry, Ladies and Gentlemen, there is no God".Well, I am not going to repeat it h comments do raisequestions as to what Buddhism is all about and the role of Buddha forBu frank Buddha was a great critic of the idea ofcreation of the world by some supreme God-He theoriginal sin and eternal heaven and hell. To the Buddha, most importantthing was "now", moment and how we go from here rather thanwhat happened in the past and what might or future.Past is gone and future is not yet due except what we are creating now.He did this no believing in some theory but examining it forhimself through analysis and rationality.Buddha four fundamental principles which he thought wasuniveral to all human problems. Even to h disciples,the Buddha after his enlightenment, warned of the danger of "blindfaith" and asked believe everything what he said justbecause he taught them. He emphasised the importanc totest and examine the authenticity of his teaching through personalexperience, not through belief.These four principles are called the four Noble Tuths. The first iscalled the Truth of Su (Dukkha Satya). When people face sufferingin their lives, the first thing they do is deny it, rej worstof all they try to avoid it. This he said was the obvious reason why wesuffer in life, bec to see the truth, the meaning and itspurpose of suffering. Although nobody desires suffering alwaysget it, not because of the suffering itself, but because they fail toapply the correct anti problem. He explained that peoplefail to apply the antidotes to their suffering, not because t notwant to but because they do not know the causes of the suffering. Wethink that the caus is something or someone outside usand this, he says "is barking up the wrong tree" as the s Wemust remember that suffering is a mental phenomenon and it can only bechanged or elir perception and transformation of ourmental attitude. For instance if a person called John lov friendBarry, and Barry has become very fond of Chris, who John dislikes, Johnwill be upset. of upset, John believes is due to thebehaviour of his friend Barry who has become fond of C weexamine it carefully, the cause of upset is largely due to John's owndislike, resentment ar towards Chris, rather than therelationship of Barry and Chris. If friendship is to be admired a then one must be able to rejoice in other's friendship. Thatwhich is causing John to be upse his feeling ofinsecurity and jealousy provoked by his own anger which he had not dealtwith e the past.Let me elaborate this from the point of view of the importance ofsolving a problem a than of the distant past. If a man isshot by an arrow into his eyes, what should he do? Mos toremove the arrow struck in their eyes but instead waste time trying toapprehend and convi

They are more interested to find outwhat happened before the arrow struck in the eye than t from the eyes. If the hurt is caused by the arrow in the eye,then obviously the arrow must b first. But we don't. We wantto find out the beginning of the problem how it all started fromsc
"the creation". The spillover of this way of dealing withsuffering is so epidemic and extremel overcome. We deny anddisapprove the hurt that we have already experienced but attempt not heavier hurt upon someone else, whether provenguilty or innocent. Blaming the past an treated in ourchildhood, by our parents does not address the problem at hand but makesthe more resentful towards their past to the extent ofdeveloping self-hatred.This takes us to the the truth of the origin of thesuffering. In Buddhism, the basic ignorance, greed and hatred in called "the three poisons". The benefits of religiouspractice can only be appreciated if indivi full responsibilityfor their own poisons of the mind. The events of the past are nothappening by oneself playing it back in one's own mind. Wecan see how our mental problems are crea factors. Toreduce or eliminate suffering caused by one's own poisons of the mind,one must bad or eternally evil. People who do not knowanything about poison become its victims. Th numbersof people who know the danger of the poisons of the mind but theysuppress them w to detoxify them. Familiarity andundertsanding of this second truth is crucial to be able to do somethingabout the upset which I referred to earlier. When we become aware thatall humar of their own poisons of the mind, we haveno time to become angry at the other person, but i empathyfor the other person. This feeling of empathy brings ourselves to thesame level as and become more connected. By doing thiswe will not dwell in our own misery to deepen ar itsharpens one's focus on the other person's needs. If the cause of thehurt is the event of th has already gone and is not happeningnow except oneself playing it back in one's own mind wasunforgettable. The moment we express our feelings and care for theother person, we w is in a similar if not worsemental state than we were. There will be an instant cure of the hur has been experiencing out of misunderstanding. This changesthe mental climate of anger in one will feel powerfulto bring this change in one's mind without feeling powerless andhopele Holiness the Dalai Lama has said that anger does not helpus to solve the problem at hand, sleep, appetite andmake us unable to appreciate the good things we have in life.Compassio religions but compassion without wisdom islikened in Buddhism to a bird with only one wing.
believein compassion and its virtues, we mustn't use anything to impose uponothers in the n compassion. If someone does not want ourcompassion, we must have the wisdom to accep ourcompassion but at the same time not to be discouraged by suchexperiences. This raises need of balance andmoderation in whatever we do in our lives, be it religious,compassionate

If we go into extremes, religion can bringmore suffering than it can benefit the world, as we Thereare certain things we should not be too certain about. So let the lawof cause and effe course of reality. Some things we justhave to accept. They will change in their own time for ispermanent in the world.No matter how hurtful it may have been, it will pass or it mustn't ha at all. So do not dwell on the past whether good or bad for itmay obscure the good things w you now. The ability tomaintain the mind in a free and accepting state is an art of happiness
 This is called the truth of the path, the third nobletruth. It is also the path known as "The Mid (Madyam marga). Thiscomprises of eight fold paths:1. Right View: All things are in a state o dissatisfaction, whetheryou are young or old, have a partner or do not have a partner, or you do not have a job and so forth. Even if you obtainsomething you desire, it will never remain things areimpermanent. If we wish things were permanent instead, you are askingfor more t enjoying this meeting, that is because itwas not here before and it will soon be over. If we s longerthan it is comfortable, we will be in heaps of trouble, so we must moveon. Reflection o impermanence can resuscitate you when youare short of breath in certain problems of life a cultivateright view.2. Right Thought: Through the correct attitude that things are not asreal, satisfactory and durable as it appears or we want them to be, itwill enable us to let go of thin become more flexible andless rigid and thus experience less stress. This helps us to sort ou and to get rid of certain thoughts which are harmful todwell on. Certain thoughts such as kin impermanence andcompassion towards other living beings can become a very powerful way energy. Lots of the sufferings come from one'sselfishness and the unability to think of positi Therefore itis important to choose the right things to think about. We see and hearwhat is in Right Concentration: This way we will sort out the priorities in ourlives and we will not waste trivial matters. There will be asense of focus and discipline in life which will inject much neededmotivation to live and help others rather than cherish for one's ownwelfare. This requ adoption of a practice of meditation whichone should learn from qualified teachers; not from whohave not invested devotion and faith in teachers, and lineage in whichsuch teachings ar from books without any experience andauthority. Like a camera, one's mind has to be caref focussedthrough attentive concentrated meditation to see the clear picture ofreality as it is.
camera of mind is out of focus, then ourmental lens will project the incompetence of the car inturn blame the object for being too close or far. His picture will beunclear if any.4. Right Ac
One will have the ability to restrain one's senses(particularly when things are going into extre refrain frominflicting lots of unnecessary suffering by sheer carelessness andindulgence. By the physical energy one will carefullyutilise them to benefit others but not to cause any injur theirlife, health, property and relationship. A person practising rightaction, who is able to giv to others enjoy good health andwill be full of energy. He will not feel worn out or exhausted Speech: Excercising restaint over one's physical energy willenable one to conserve one's e suffering in our lives arecreated by our mouth's Karma. So if we understand the meaning of should watch out for our mouth. Go for a short retreat andsee how much peace there is in s much garbage we talkevery day. Gain some power over your speech so that no hurtful wor your mouth. Say what is good for the many and thatwhich is only truthful and helpful. Wher will hearboth praise and blame as the echo of voidness and oneself will beunaffected by oth abuse. Rather they will become objects ofcompassion.6. Right Livelihood: This world is for not just for humanbeings and the powerful ones. We must give a fair go and act decentlytow beings. It is not considered clever to takeadvantage of others who are weaker than ourselve theability to treat others with respect as an individual just as oneselfdesires to be happy. Th animals and their welfare if you cannotdeal too many unruly human beings. Focus on what withoutcausing direct harm on others and share things you have with others whoneed them needy and do not hoard wealth for it willonly become one's own prison and create many ene takeanything with you when you die anyway.7. Right Mindfulness: We know we should be fa withoutdeliberate mindfulness we are often very forgetful to do the very thingswe want to do may become angry with ourselves justbecause we were not mindful enough to bring the key tablebefore closing the door. You may become very cranky and may have a veryhard day a create a very bad working environment foryour colleagues who will blame it on your temper forth.Mindfulness practice requires consistent daily meditation practice onhow to integrate it day life. In one Sutra it says: "Onewith mindfulness is happy and one without is unhappy".8

One must be diligent to change one's habitual patterns.Just as weight conscious people get morning to jog anddo excerice, likewise one who is concious of the actual health of mind,or right effort to break the negative habitual pattern ofone's attitude to life and its problems. Th come heretonight can be regarded as right effort but we must implement what wehave learn tonight. You do not learn these things inschool, college, univeristy, on the soccer field or in Oneshould create an environment in the house to change one's habits, in thebed room, in th wherever you are by yourself. Developstrong will inside you and this undying will and coura forthe benefit of many will be of great benefit whether you regard yourselfas religious or not.
individuals who adopt this theory of the eight noble pathsthey will experience the fourth nobl truth of the cessationof suffering. Whether you believe in god or you are an aethiest, orbelie reincarnation or in an eternal heaven and hell, it does notmatter. You will only experience w deserve. You will be a kindand sincere person, that is the purpose of religion. Who cares w in? It largely depends on how we conduct our everyday lives.That is the essence of religio eight noble paths I havespoken about tonight are one of the many ways to practise it.In brief too happy when everything is fine with you for thereare many less fortunate beings who are very moment. Donot forget the poor, sick, abandoned children, the lonely and agedpeople.
happiness by thinking of their welfare. Think ofthose caught in the war in former Yugoslavia like Cambodiaand do something useful with compassion instead of indulging in your ownfort be too sad when things are not going well withyou. You are one of the many fortunate peop Appreciateand be grateful for the things you have, this will reduce yoursufferings. In order to the cessation of suffering, thefourth noble Truth, learn to be durable like the earth, fluid like t creative and light like the air and free and vast like the sky.Learn these qualities you yearn to from the mother nature, ifone fails to find any human being devoid of fault. Finally may thei humanity not defile the ever shining truth of the enlightenedones, like the lotus flower untain soil in which it grows.Accept what you can now, for this cannot be repeated again. What yo now, do not reject it straight away, for you might findit useful later on. Let there be awarenes and toleranceamong all living beings.*This was delivered at the Australian Parliament of Wo Religions,Pilgrim House, Canberra 26 June, 1993 and was subsequently published inBhakti magazine.----------end of file

The Life Of the Buddha

The Buddha was a human like any of us. However he was an extra-ordinary human being. As a lay person he was born a prince and named Siddhartha, son of King Suddodana the Sakyan monarch of Kapilawattu, in Northern India near the border of Nepal. His mother Queen Maha-Maya passed away when baby Siddhartha was just seven days old. The task of nursing little Siddhartha fell on the hands of Pajapati, Maha-Maya's younger Sister.

From very early days young Siddhartha showed signs of greatness. The father being the Ruler of a mighty Kingdom naturally wished to raise the son in a manner befitting a future King. According to the advisors to the King, the young Prince was to be shielded from the outside Palace activities and be raised in luxury, and every attempt was made to make the young Prince's life pleasent. From early childhood Siddhartha received a liberal education compatible with that of a future Ruler. He was very clever at what ever he was taught by the Royal Tutors and he excelled in all the studies, sports and other activities he did.
.PA

At a young age the King arranged a marriage for young Siddhartha with another youthful Royal bride princess Yasodara. Siddhartha's up-bringing was mainly within the Palace gates and as such he was well insulated from the real life activities beyond the Palace confines. As a result of this sheltered up-bringing Siddhartha did not see and experience any old-age, suffering, sickness or death until he was fairly advanced in age. However the moment he came in contact with the realities of life outside the Palace gates, Siddhartha began seriously to contemplate on life, suffering and allied human problems. He was unhappy that his father, the King and his advisors had kept him away from reality and learning the truth about life.
This state of affairs triggered his ardent search for the truth and he resolved that he will not rest until he found the ultimate truth regarding human existence and the suffering it caused.
.PA

When Siddharta was in his 29th year, Yasodara gave birth to their one and only son who was later named Rahula. The day Rahula was born, Siddharta decided to leave the palace in his quest for the search of truth. This act of a Husband leaving a young mother and an infant son would normally be considered as a grave offence if done by any ordinary person. However possesing the wisdom of a Buddha-to-be he knew exactly what he was doing, and how his loved ones would react. Naturally his father was very disappointed that his son deserted his responsibilities and has become even worse than a commoner.

Siddhartha, now wishing not to be treated as a prince, donned the robes of an ascetic and started living the life of a homeless recluse. No matter what happened to him in the process, his aim was to discover the truth pertaining to suffering mankind and other beings.

In his pursuit of the truth, he went and apprenticed himself under many well known Teachers at that time. He was quick to learn all the known techniques of meditation that the teachers could show. He tried them all in the hope of finding the ultimate truth and the answers to life's problems he was seeking.

.PA

As was suggested by some of his teachers and fellow seekers he even tried extreme forms of self-mortification, without success. So here was a man who during his youth lived in extremes of Royal luxury, and failed to know of life's problems, and now trying the other extreme, also failing to realize any truth. At this stage he intuitively knew that these two extremes are not conducive to seeking the truth and then decided a middle course. Six years of strenuous wandering reached a climax one day when he resolved that he would not leave the bottom of the Fig tree under whose shade he started deep meditation. That night he worked harder than ever before and at long last reached the goal he was seeking. He discovered the four noble truths and the law of dependent origination, and he was able to clearly see what life was about and how and why beings pass through 'samsara' the way they did. From that moment of enlightenment he knew he had attained Buddhahood.

.PA

What he discovered appeared simple but very complex to teach others. So he was wondering what to do with his newly acquired wisdom. After careful consideration he concluded that henceforth he will dedicate his life to diseminating the Dhamma he had discovered. His first audience was five of his earlier colleagues he had associated with during his six years of struggle. He knew where they would be and decided to go and preach to them. After listening to the Buddha the five ascetics were convinced of the validity of the doctrine they heard, and were immediately converted to be true followers of the Buddha.

From the first sermon which was addressed to the five followers, there began the spread of the Dhamma both in India and its neighbouring lands, and even now it continues to do so.

The Buddha continued his mission of explaining the Dhamma, practicing compassion and relieving the suffering of every one he came accross. In a way he was a true revolutionary, for at that time in India, there was a lot of discrimination practiced by the Hindu Brahamins against depressed classes based on the cast system. The Buddha's teachings were against the established cast system, which of course did not please the vested interests at the time. The Buddha expressed his loving kindness to every one, be it a Ruler of a Kingdom or an unfortunate 'Un-touchable'.
.PA

At the ripe old age of eighty, after a busy forty-five years of strenuous activity he quietly passed away finally, in a wooded park near Benares, and was cremated with the honours befitting a King of Kings.

HOUSEHOLDER SERIES

by Jack Kornfield

5. The Eightfold Path: Right Livelihood

~~~~~~

Finally, the third of the steps of virtue is Right Livelihood. What's interesting is that virtue is so infrequently spoken of in our culture, in our modern California culture anyway, because it's Victorian and old and repressive; it needn't be any of those things.

Virtue is on one level a training. It's learning to speak, to act, in our sexual life, in our business life, in our family life -- to train to act more consciously, more mindfully, more compassionately. And it takes practice. It is also, quite wonderfully, an expression of our awakening, a foundation of our awakening. You can't awaken if you're involved in killing, lying or stealing. Even in the more subtle levels of it, it's hard to pay attention. Your mind is caught up, busy, and paranoid. So it's a foundation for a clear mind, and the training of it is a foundation for being more mindful. But even more beautifully, it's the expression of an awakened heart and an awakened mind.

What is Right Livelihood? I will say some things about it without defining it completely. I'll say a lot of things. They're traditional teachings and some contemporary associations, and then maybe we can take a little time for discussion, especially if I get through them in relatively reasonable time.

I remember going to a conference recently with the Reverend Cecil Williams. I don't know if any of you have watched him on TV but he's great. He's a black minister of the Glide Memorial Church in San Francisco, who has done all kinds of very wonderful projects in the community and in the state for years. He got up and he spoke. It didn't come from his head. He spoke the way many black ministers are able to do, partly through the culture that allows it or embodies it, but his voice came from a place really deep, and he said to people, "What you need to learn is you need to learn about love." He put it out in such a powerful way. He said, "What I'm talking about is not what love you get, but how much love you give." He said it over and over in his speech in that kind of repetitive way of a preacher, and it was so beautiful. He kept saying it in different ways. "It's not how much love you get; it's how much you give."
~~~~~~

I could just end the talk right now. It's really quite beautiful.

What is Right Livelihood? Right Livelihood, like the rest of these aspects of the Eightfold Path, is a path to become happier in our lives and to become enlightened or awakened. There are five aspects.

The first is non-harming. The traditional non-harming means not to take a livelihood that involves weapons, or exploitation, or drugs, or things that hurt people. Not much more to say about it. You can look at it in your life and look at in the society you're around. If you don't do it, great; and if you see other people doing it, and there's a way that you can help it not to happen, do it. It's pretty simple. That's non-harming.

The second part of Right Livelihood is an appropriate happiness. There is a sutra from the Buddha that talked about appropriate happiness in Right Livelihood; First is the "having." It's essential to have a trade or a career. Even if you change it five times in your life, that doesn't matter. But to feel decent about yourself, it's really important or helpful -- I don't care how much money you have or what you have to do or don't have to do -- to have some way of contributing to society, because you're not happy if you don't contribute. So to find a trade or a livelihood or a career; maybe you use it for a while and then you change it. There's a happiness or a joy in having a career or having work that you can do. And if you haven't found it, it's really a crucial part of spiritual practice to look for it. It doesn't mean it's going to be some big special thing.

There's a mythology in our country that is false. It tells you that you can have whatever job you want; anyone who grows up here can be president -- God spare you -- and that you will find just the right job and it will make you happy, the perfect job for you, the one where your creativity and all your talents are used, and so forth. That is the same American myth like the one of the perfect relationship. I don't know how many of you are still looking for that. Is there anyone who hasn't gotten that one yet? Okay, you got that one. It's true about jobs too; there is not the perfect job. I had the perfect job, traveling around the world to glamorous places, getting a lot of care and respect, relating to people on issues of Dharma and meditation, sitting together. It really was wonderful. I got tired sometimes. People came and they called me in the middle of the night. There were things I didn't like about it. Plus which I couldn't have a house and I didn't settle down until recently. So I gave it up to teach in a different way because it wasn't as perfect as I thought it would be. It seemed perfect. It was wonderful.

There is no perfect relationship and there is no perfect job. Find one, or something, and really give yourself to it; that's a happiness. Secondly, there's a happiness in producing from the job, which is basically to make money. It's both producing goods or services for other people, which we'll get to, but it's also in having things and using them. And as householders, money is necessary, and it's fine, and that's part of our dharma, of our way of being in the world. And to have a career or to find some way to work, even if it's your career for a year or several years, and then to use it to create a home or to create the financial things that are appropriate for you, is great; it's really wonderful.

Also, in terms of being happy, there is a wide range to "using". It can be using in a very simple way or it can be using in a more extravagant way. You're not so happy if it's based on a lot of indulgence. Not that you shouldn't do it, you're welcome to try it, but the people I know who have tried it for awhile found it not so satisfying. So there's a a happiness in having a career and work, and in producing and using the things that come from it, including one's money.

The third happiness is to be free from debt. That's a good one for our country, isn't it? Funny, it was said 2,500 years ago. It seems to still be true because you worry and you're anxious, and you struggle, and it really has to do with contentment. See if you can learn fundamentally or basically to live within your means.

I'm just going to put this stuff out about Right Livelihood. You can do what you want with it. It's not commandments or anything like that; it's suggestions. It says, "Wake up to these different areas of your life; that you're happier if you live within your means, and that people who don't, find themselves unhappy.

Frankly, if you've ever lived in a Third World country or some simple situation for awhile, you discover you don't need one-quarter of what you think you do to be happy. You can live with a lot less than you think you can. And you can be as happy watching a sunset or taking a walk as having an extravagant night out on the town because you know how to relate to those things.

The third happiness is freedom from debt, "having and using," and the fourth is being free from blame or fault in your livelihood, from your work; that you do it not to please the world around you or because of what people will think, but you let it somehow come from inside; that what you choose, and where your actions come from, are not from how they look, because after a while you get caught by that, and you get into pain and sorrow, but that you start to reference inwardly to what matters and what you care about, and that affects your livelihood and your work.

The third aspect of Right Livelihood is growth and awareness; that you can use your livelihood to grow in consciousness.

You know, it's so interesting. We get very identified with our jobs in this country. We meet someone and one of the first things we ask is: "Well, what do you do?" That is what we want to know about somebody. "Oh, I'm a psychologist, I'm a meditation teacher, I'm a nurse, I'm a librarian, I'm a waitress." You're all therapists, I know. "I'm a" -- whatever it happens to be -- "businessman." It's so interesting, when you go to India, nobody ever asks you what you do. It's a very different culture. As far as I can tell, in India nobody does anything. You meet someone, and there's this baba kind of person sitting at the tea stand, and he's been there for awhile, and you talk to him. They don't ask you what you do. They might ask you what form of God you worship; is it Krishna or Shiva or Kali or Durga or Buddha, or whoever it happens to be, but it's not a big thing in that culture to know what you do. It's much more about how many children you have or what form of God you worship.

It's a big thing for us, "What do you do?" It's what we choose in this particular drama. We picked to be born in America somehow. "Alright, I'll sign up for one there," and then in the script of living in America, it's what you do that is a big thing. Okay, do something decent, alright? But it's important to remember that it's part of the theater.

With growth and awareness, the first thing is you don't need to be too identified with what you do. We think what we do is who we are. When you die you aren't going to be who you are, you're going to be something else, or when you get sick, or when things change around, or when the earthquake comes, or whatever, what you do isn't going to matter a lot; it's something that you do. You can do it instead in a spirit of adventure or a dance or an exploration.

Don Juan was talking to Carlos Casteneda about the qualities of being a warrior. In this place he is training him to be a hunter in the wilds but also a hunter of knowledge. He said:

> I told you already, to be inaccessible as a hunter does not mean to hide or to be secretive. It doesn't mean that you cannot deal with people either. A hunter uses their world sparingly and with tenderness regardless of whether the world might be things or plants or animals or people or power. A hunter deals intimately > with their world and yet they remain inaccessible to that same world.

Carlos as usual says, "I don't understand." There's a contradiction, it makes no sense. How can you be inaccessible if you're there in your world day after day?

> "You did not understand." says Don Juan patiently. "A hunter is inaccessible because they're not squeezing their world out of shape. They tap it lightly, stay for as long as they need to, and then move away leaving hardly a mark."

What a lovely way to think of it. It's to live lightly on the earth, to take what we do, and use it, and care for it, to be tender, to be careful with it, but not to get so identified or so caught up in it.

There are a lot of ways that one can begin to bring awareness to one's work. There are the simple ones of exercises. For example, Gurdjieff used to give awareness training exercises where he'd tell people to do things in a different way than they were used to. Tie your shoes and do the bow around the other direction, or open your car door with your left hand instead of your right hand, and let it be a signal for a little while, maybe for two minutes, that you're going to wake up and you'll go off automatic pilot and be conscious as the door opens and you sit down in the car and you begin to drive. It becomes a meditation.

Bring that kind of thing into your work. Do things a little differently; do them backwards. Use your meditative awareness or mindfulness to start to make the work that you do a meditation. Especially after these hours of training in monasteries, where you just walk back and forth doing walking meditation, and then you sit down, and then you walk some more, I've often thought, "Gee, I could be on an assembly line somewhere and get enlightened because it looks like the same thing, if I did it right." And I worked on an assembly line once at the Beacon Gauge Company, putting these screws into this little part, into a gauger. It was not very different than what I did in the monastery, except that everyone there was resenting being there and waiting for their paycheck, or stoned on Quaaludes, or whatever got them through the day.

Growth and awareness means that we can begin to use our work, whatever it is, to wake up, to awaken. To do that requires some discipline. For many people it requires a lot of discipline and a lot of repetition.

Discipline and repetition in work. Most every kind of work that you do, whether it's as an artist, or as a therapist, or as a mechanic, or whatever kind of business thing that you do, will have repetition and boredom. One way to react is to put yourself on automatic pilot and go to sleep. Sometimes it's useful. I'm not saying that automatic pilot doesn't have its place in our life. But it's possible to begin to use it more as a discipline, to begin to awaken in some fashion, to be willing to take it as your meditation.

I ask you a question, to reflect: What could you do in your work more meditatively? How could you bring more mindfulness into the particular work that you do? You can start to look at that. It might be little ways of how you open the door, it might be in ways where you take a pause between people you see, and promise yourself that you'll just sit there at your desk or at your place for a minute or five between people that you deal with and get centered again on your breath. It might be in regard to this next thing or the next two things of Right Livelihood which I'll come to.

The first was non-harming, the second was appropriate happiness, the third is to begin to use it to wake up. You can do walking meditation, you can work with your breath, you can do meditation as a mechanic, you can do meditation as a doctor or a nurse, by paying attention to your body, to your posture, to your heart, to your mind states, to your moods. You can start to listen. Then maybe you can answer Cecil Williams' question as you go along through the day. It's not how much love you get but how much you give.

The fourth is simplicity. It's a little hard to talk about in Marin County. Maybe it is in our whole culture. I'll do my best, okay?

Ryokan, the old Zen poet, says:

> My hut lies in the middle of a dense forest.
> Every year the green ivy grows longer.
> Not much news of the affairs of men,
> only the occasional song of a woodcutter.
> The sun shines and I mend my robe
> when the moon comes out I read Buddhist poems.
> I have nothing to report, my friend.
> If you want to find the true meaning, > stop chasing after so many things.

What a nice poem. That which we seek, which we long for most deeply in our hearts, doesn't come from so much complexity or chasing around. It really comes from being in touch with ourselves, with listening, with feeling, with awareness. Simplicity!

There's a beautiful and contemporary movement of Right Livelihood that has been sparked by Gandhi teaching people to spin and live more simply in India, and it's been picked up by people like Schumacher, who wrote the book on //Small is Beautiful and Buddhist Economics//. And there's a lovely foundation called The Friends of Right Livelihood Foundation who offer an alternative Nobel Prize each year in Stockholm the day before the Nobel Prize is offered, not quite as much money. But the people that they've had win it and for what reasons are just beautiful. Some of the winners in the past were Stephen Gaskin from the farm who started his own Peace Corps which now goes to about a half dozen countries in the Caribbean and Africa with medical services and agricultural things; or Mike Cooley, who's a person in charge of the Air Space Workers at Lucas Air Space Factory. He did a brilliant thing. He got a plan together that's very wonderful. He asked all the chief scientists to look at what the military/industrial factories and complexes could make to serve the world rather than destroy it. They couldn't think of anything. Not very much came out of them. So then he asked all the people who worked for them, all the workers in the factories, and got some groups in different factories around England, and came out with a thousand wonderful suggestions of things that those skills and those factories could make that would be an alternative to building weapons. Or a man named Bill Mallison, who is a founder of Permaculture, which is a whole new much more sensitive agricultural system, particularly in Australia, and it is starting to be spread around the Third World. There's a whole list of people like that who started to make their livelihood and their relationship to work somehow connected with the sense of living lightly on the earth, of living with some care or some tenderness.

It's a very beautiful thing, this quality of simplicity, of seeing that we don't need as much as we thought we did to be happy, and really asking yourself the question: "What do I really, really want?" or "What would I want when I'm old and I look back, what will I have cared about?" or "What do I care about for this world that I live in?" Some sense of our connectedness with it.

And that leads to the last of these aspects of Right Livelihood which is Service, and in some ways the most beautiful of all -- seeing that what we do is totally interconnected with the rest of life, of discovering our connectedness, and seeing that the world is entrusted to us somehow. It's our planet and it's entrusted.

Ram Dass one time asked his teacher, Neem Karoli Baba Maharaji, what his teaching was, and he said that his whole teaching was, "Love people and feed them;" that was all.

It's so nice at intensive meditation retreats that I've taught so often to watch the people who come and volunteer to cook, because they're not cooking in a restaurant in order to get their paycheck and kind of get the stuff out and get home and do something more interesting. The people come there to cook because they want to, because they like to cook, and they want to support people's practice, and their sitting, and their retreat. And there's so much caring. A pan of food goes out and there's flowers on it, or there's some decoration, or there's something that's done to it, or just the way that it's cooked. Sometimes they'll just sing when they cook, as a way to let that very simple act of cooking, which we all do, become an expression of caring, of service. We can do that in our work. There are fifty little ways that one can be mindful in service.

In a very nice book by Zen Master Thich Nhat Hanh called //The Miracle of Mindfulness// -- it's the best book that I know of on mindfulness in daily life -- he said that his teacher gave him a whole series of little exercises.

For example, when he washed his hands, he would recite this thing, "As I clean my hands, so too may I bring the cleanliness or purity of heart to all the people that I meet today." Or, "As I drive in the traffic, may I wish well on all the other people that I meet, that I pass by." It's a very different relationship. I've sat on buses. You sit in your cocoon. You're reading, or whatever, and everyone else has got their book or their paper, and they're in their little cocoon, and you don't want to be too connected. Then I sat there and I've looked up, and without being too obvious or hokey about it, I just started to do loving-kindness meditation, looking around, since I'm not doing anything but daydreaming anyway, or planning, which is worse, and I start to think, "May I be happy and peaceful," or whatever, and then I look around in an unobvious way, "May all these people be happy." I let myself be tuned into them. Some of them are bent over with suffering and sorrow, and some are teenagers who are just kind of booming with energy or with aggression, or whatever it happens to be. Some are happy and some are sad. I just send each one of them a little loving-kindness. It totally changes your relationship to the bus trip completely. You get off that bus and it's like you just took a trip to India to some wonderful ashram. It's true if you do it because you feel connected with the world and the people around you.

That's the spirit of service. It can be in giving what you actually do, because any kind of livelihood, as long as it's not harming, is a fine one. It really is. We need it all. We need farmers, we need plumbers. As I've said in retreats, "I'd much rather live in San Francisco with no doctors than with no plumbers." It's a very crucial thing. And we're all needed together and we all find something to do for awhile. It's beautiful. You can see it as well, "I do it to get through the night or the day, and get my money" or "I'm going to do this thing and awaken and serve, even if I'm a plumber or I'm doing something that may seem at first mundane, I'm going to use it to serve."

You know how nice it is to have somebody who is your waiter or waitress, or at the checkout counter at the supermarket, or the person who comes to fix your refrigerator in your house, be a nice human being who cares when they do their work, both about their work and about you. It's like the Buddha walks in and says, "Hey, I'm going to fix your refrigerator today but really I'm the Buddha. I'm just here in the guise of a refrigerator repair person." They say a few nice things to you and remind you that you can love the world around you a little bit more, and you can awaken, and they fix the refrigerator and go off. What a fantastic thing! We each have that capacity to bring that kind of light to the work we choose.

Zen Master Soen-Sa-Nim -- who now has temples all around the country, ten or fifteen Zen centers -- when he first came to this county he knew no one, and he wanted to teach Zen. After talking at Brown University, he got a job in Providence to support himself. He was a Zen Master in Korea and quite famous and had many disciples, and he wanted to teach in America. He didn't speak English very well. The only job he could get was to work in a laundromat, mopping the floors and fixing the machines when they broke down. So there's this guy with a bald head, in a gray robe, down there cleaning up the laundromat. Students from the university who would come down to the laundromat got curious. "Who is this strange guy down there?" They talked to him. "I Zen teacher." He still doesn't speak such good English. And they said, "Yeah?" He said, "Yeah." After a while people started to come down and hang out in his laundromat. This is a true story. They would really get interested in who this guy was and what he taught. Then they started to come up to his apartment and he taught them how to sit Zen meditation. He would go to the laundromat and leave them sitting there, and so forth. .Gradually it switched around and over the last 12 years he has many Zen centers and many hundreds of students. That was a fine thing to do.

There's a beautiful whole chapter in the //Bhagavad Gita// on Karma Yoga.

> I've already told you, in this world -- says Krishna -- > aspirants may find enlightenment in two different paths.
> For the contemplative, there's the path of knowledge, > and for the active there's the path of selfless action.
> Freedom from activity is never achieved by abstaining from > action.
> Nobody can become perfect by merely ceasing to act.
> In fact, nobody can rest from their activity, even for a moment.
> All are helplessly forced to act by the movement of life.
>
> Do Your dharma, your work.
>
> Do your duty always, but without attachment
> This is how a person reaches the truth,
> by working without anxiety about results.
> The ignorant work for the fruit of their actions,
> the wise must work also but without desire or attachment, > pointing their feet in the path of the Dharma, > giving their heart to it, > working without attachment.
> Let them show by example
> how work is true practice.

The whole chapter in the //Bhagavad Gita//, is about beginning to use our work through the path of selfless action. It's not how much you get that makes you happy; it's how much you give.

I want to end with a guided meditation. Don't move, stay where you are. It doesn't require sitting up or anything. Let your eyes close for a second. Actually, it will just be a minute or two. Let yourself picture the place where you work. See it, or sense it, or feel it, or if it's not where you work, then where you go to school, if that's what you do, or if not that, then the place where you live if you don't work right now. For most people it will be the place where you work.

There are two questions we're going to ask: One is: How can I make this work more conscious?" And the other: How can I make it more of a loving service? In the place where you work, the Buddha or the Bodhisattva of Awareness, Manjushri, has left a gift for you. It's a box, and you'll discover it there at your place of work. Let yourself sense it, or see it, or know where it is, and go over to it. When you find this gift from the Buddha of how to make your work more conscious, inside the box will be a clear symbol of something that you can do, a very clear symbol of how to make your work more conscious for yourself.

Let yourself open the box and be aware of what that gift is, this symbol of how to make your work more conscious. Let yourself know it, or see it, or sense it. If it's not clear to you, then there's a light switch over on the wall. Turn it on. Bring a little more light into the box. You'll be able to see it. The Buddha leaves very good gifts for you. Just the right thing. If you need a little explanation of how to do it, in the bottom of the box you'll find a little note left by the Buddha. Pick it up and you'll hear, or see, or know. It will say two or three words, just what you need to learn, what the symbol stands for.

There is a second gift left for you. Stay at your work-place. This gift was left by the Bodhisattva of Compassion. It's left just at the place where you work. There's another wonderful package, and it's the answer to the questions: How can I make this work more of a loving service? What do I need to do or how can I do it? What must I remember? So let yourself find that gift, whatever way you need to, and open this package left by the Bodhisattva of Compassion. Let yourself see it clearly. If it's not clear, then take it over to the window and let the sunlight stream into it. You'll see it, a clear symbol of how to make your work a service of love.

If you need any more information, look in the bottom of the box, and there will be a note again with two or three words on it that will tell you, explain what it is or how to use it.

Then just stay inside for a moment. I'll ask you a few questions and you can just let the answers come out of your own heart. The questions are: How can I begin to discover or continue to discover peace and harmony where I am at work, just where I am? How can I begin to discover the Dharma or truth within this work, just where I am?

Let yourself finish up and gently let your eyes open and come back when you're ready. You know, you can work and treat each person you meet as somebody else to deal with in your work, or you could treat each person you meet as your brother or your sister, or you could do what Mother Teresa does in her work and treat each person you meet as Jesus, and care for them, and wash their feet, or love them, or do whatever you do in the same way you might love Jesus or the Buddha.

You can work on one day and just get through the day or the night. And you can work on another day and have each person that comes to you, and each person you meet, be a place where your heart really opens, and where you share a love and a caring and a tenderness.

I close with reading this last thing again from Don Juan. It's actually Don Genaro, who is the most playful of them. He says:

> Genaro's love is the world. He was just now embracing this enormous earth, but since he's so little, all he can do is swim on it. But the earth knows that Genaro loves it and it bestows on him its care and that's why Genaro's life is filled to the brim, and his state wherever he'll be will be plentiful.
>
> Only if one loves this earth, this life, with unbending passion can one release one's sadness. Warriors are always joyful because their love is unalterable and their beloved, the earth embraces them and bestows upon them inconceivable gifts.
>
> Only love of this splendrous life can give freedom to a warrior's spirit, and his freedom is joy, efficiency, and abandon in the face of any odds. That's the last lesson. It's always left for the very last moment, for the moment of ultimate solitude.

When a person faces death and aloneness, only then does it make sense.

Only if one loves this earth and this life with unbending passion can one release one's sadness.

So those are some thoughts or reflections on Right Livelihood.

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: The Eightfold Path for the Householder: Ten Talks (Transcribed from audio tape)
FILENAME: JKHOLDER.ZIP
AUTHOR: Jack Kornfield
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: Spirit Rock Meditation Center
PO Box 909
Woodacre, CA 94973
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: N/A
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Jack Kornfield (1995)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1995
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: February, 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

Letter From Lola (Lola & friends surprise boyfriend at hotel) bylolastories©

Hi Baby,

So I have been thinking about this series of scenarios and want to share them with you. I am will be glad to see me after over a month of celibacy. I know I will be very excited to see you wear underwear to pick you up from the airport. I think I will wear something low cut so that y a hint of cleavage. Maybe a skirt so that I am all the more accessible to you and your hands car just outside so that I don't have to go to the parkade (really) and my darling Bunny will co door with his crushing amount of luggage on a luggage cart so that his hands are free to giv and luscious kiss.

After we have loaded it into the trunk and squeezed the lid shut we pile in and neck for a few the privacy of the car. Your lips are so soft and I get this overwhelming feeling of pleasure. It too much to be able to touch you after this long. I can feel my pussy flooding with the sheer skin on mine. I want you so badly but the airport traffic official keeps waving that orange flas us along and so we must depart.

Somehow we manage to make it to the hotel I have made reservations at with very few near can't keep my hands away from you during the drive and kiss you at every opportunity. It is s I run my hand down your chest and to your cock. It is thickening with my touch and keeps ge rub it softly through your pants. I can feel the heat emanating from it as you moan a bit. You freed my nipples from my top and they are jutting out in readiness for sucking. The cooler ai hard as rocks.

They get even harder when you gently lick them and leave them wet and aching for more. I as wide as possible given the fact that I am driving and am treated to the sensation of your f moving up my thighs to touch my smoothly shaved pussy. I am dripping wet and catch my b your fingers come in contact with my swollen lips. It is like an electric shock that anything co good. It is like when you first touched me and I can barely keep my eyes open much less co driving. There is no way that I want you to stop though. I just unconsciously hold your cock f feel the front of your jeans dampen with pre-cum. I have to go in to get the key because you too apparent for dealing with the public. Luckily we can drive the car very close to the door t that takes us to the 9th floor. As I turn the key in the lock we are greeted with the sight of an scantily clad bombshell holding a tray of drinks

She is very busty and has a corset on that doesn't quite cover her nipples. Her skirt is so sho her bald pussy peeking out. She has fish net stockings on (which I forgot to draw) that are h garter belt. Her hips are ample and her ass round and full. Her only purpose for the night is t again and again. She is our fuck toy to do whatever we want to.

It helps that she is a nymphomaniac and enjoys sex in all its forms so much that she can't g
In fact her cunt is so wet that she is dripping down her leg already with anticipation of our se

Behind her, sitting on the edge of the hot tub is a man that is fully naked. He is a nondescrip with a hard on. He seems to be of the snowboarder genre but doesn't talk much. At the mon he fucks his hand with his very lubricated cock. It isn't as big as yours but is still thick and so

He is watching a tv intently and as our eyes go to the screen we see a young college girl in a skirt (pulled up to her waist) and tube top (pulled down just below her aereolas) bent over a man in a chair. The man is apparently a teacher. They are mostly hidden behind his desk as students carry on with their work. The girl is at first being very subtle and almost surreptitiou the man's pants to release a very hard mammoth cock. Her eyes widen as she sees the cha but she bravely opens her mouth and tentatively licks the length of his penis with a wide flat hardening her tongue she rubs the point of it all around the head and back down again. She of his pants gently and starts to lather them softly with her tongue.

As you and I watch this very hot scene I notice that the bombshell has been keeping pace w doing the same things to you as the girl in the movie does to her teacher. I start to finger my your cock jutting out from your jeans getting sucked very lasciviously by this sexy woman on front of you.

I look back at the movie, as do you, to see that the girl has been becoming less and less con concealing her activities and is now moaning as she franticly bobs her head up and down on member. The teacher has his head thrown back and is also moaning and saying "Yeah -mm cocksucker you are. -mmmm- Fuck- yeah- suck it baby suck it all down -take it all. -mmm-yo so wet --mmmm-"The class full of students is getting restless and we see a few shots of ther undress or rub themselves.

One guy is so excited already that he has gotten on his knees behind the blowjob girl and ha his tool into the girl's obviously very tight and very wet cunt. This makes her moan even mor continues to lick and rub the cock and balls in her mouth. She briefly pulls out her huge brea from the tube top to rub them and wrap them around her teacher's dick in order to tit fuck hi sight of this and pinches her nipples until they are very pink and hard.He grabs her hair and he pushes her head down on his cock like it was a pussy and starts to fuck her mouth hard.

The guy behind her responds in kind and they are both fucking her hard for all they're worth. class has also begun a mass orgy and they are all madly fucking and humping on their desk floor and against the wall. Back at the teacher's desk the action is very intense. The girl is cu and is moaning very vocally around the cock that is fucking her throat. Two other guys have masturbate while watching the slutty girl get fucked so hard by two cocks. The guy behind h out faster and faster until he pulls out to cum all over her little pink asshole.

The teacher grabs her head with both hands now and holds it down and his balls tighten as down her throat. big spurts come dribbling back up through her mouth. The other two mastu quickly serviced with this cum filled mouth. She takes them one by one- jerking one while sh As they finish they cum all over her tits in big globs.

All this on screen sexiness has been intensified by being able to watch our girl worshiping yo still touching you, rubbing your ass and licking and biting your nipples as you are getting this blowjob. She is suckling on it as though it were going to feed her (which it will) She has your now and is rubbing her tits against your legs. She plays with her pussy with one hand and st with the other. You are so excited and so close to cumming. I can tell by your tight breath an muscles. Its as though every part of your body is erect and all focussed on this central part o is your painfully hard throbbing fuck tool.

I am still rubbing your cheeks and now get on my knees too to help with my mouth. I take yo mouth one by one sucking them gently in and rolling them around inside then both at once. base of your shaft as the girl is busy with the head and then we both start licking up and dow also kiss and play with each others tongues but then resume fucking your cock with both of sight of two girls on your dick is enough to put you over the edge. Just before you cum you a loudly that I can feel the vibrations of your voice on my tongue. You start shooting right into t mouth-involuntarily jerking your cock down her throat which is wide open for you. Your cum and the girl and I lick it up.

The room is full of the smell of sex as the heat rises from our four bodies. I kiss you as the g undressing you. You are exhausted from your ejaculatory efforts and need to relax in the ho beckons you over and you go to sit in the hot swirling water facing me and the girl. The guy of the tub behind you and begins to massage your neck and shoulders.

I am still dressed but the girl is there to facilitate my nudity. She starts to kiss me and run he and down the sides of my body. I respond to her touch and am very turned on by now from a whole body is aching for an orgasm and I am already pushing my cunt against her, humping fingers through my hair and then lifts it out of the way as she nibbles and sucks on my ear v top is being unbuttoned at the same time and I feel my breasts being cupped and lifted halfv

bra. She works her way down my throat to my tits with her mouth and gently licks my nipples lifts the whole of my tits in her hands- massaging them tenderly. She licks and suckles and I down and join her with my mouth, sharing our tongues on my nipple.

This is making my nipples so wet and hard. They are burning with the need for more. My ba my tits up as much as I can. With my shoulders back, I slip my top to the floor and at that sh from my jutting bust to push my skirt down .It falls to my ankles. I grab her slutty ass and pul me as I grind into her thigh with my slippery pussy. I am sucking madly on her protruding bre her head flung back. I lift her skirt (such as it is) and feel her full creamy ass under my hands cheeks, pour some lube on and and slide my hand up and down her crack pulling her closer finger finds her ass bud and I push against it making her moan and hunch her own pelvis ag as she comes forward to slide her cuntlips up and down me, she pushes her ass back to me anal entrance. She lubes my ass and proceeds to do the same thing to me and soon we are other's ass cheeks, spreading them wide for you and the guy to see as we massage each ot while mashing our pussies together, rubbing clitoris on clitoris. The gushing slippery sounds out by our urgent whimpers and panting The girl's breathing becomes very erratic and she is movements with her hips and is pulling my clit into her pussy as she fucks hard against me.
for me to for me to "fuck...unnggh... my ass... unnggh.. now ..unngghh now!!"

I slide two fingers into her ass and she is taut with excitement. I can feel the contractions of start though the membrane between her ass and her cunt. I have to feel it closer and shove other hand into her cunt. She is abandoning any propriety she ever had with her wild thrashi hard on my fingers fucking her two holes. She is grunting out "Fuck me...Fuck me...uunngh.
her orgasm subsides into whimpers I carefully extricate my hands and she leads me to a tow spread out in front of you guys by the jacuzzi.

She gently lays me down for a serious lick session. I am overheated like crazy but manage t to allow her to start slowly by again giving attention to my heaving cleavage. She takes as m mouth as she can before turning to the other and doing the same. My tits are slick with her s nipples are intensely sensitive and hard in the cool air. She doesn't think they are slick enou pours lube all over them. I am moaning as she massages and slides her hands up and down rubbing my nipples. Still slipping her hands all over me she moves her head to my mound. S the upper v without going anywhere near my clitoris. She softly kisses the outer lips by hardl but her hot breath is driving me mad. With her tongue relaxed and flat she slowly licks me w meets my outer labia.

I am pushing my cunt up now as I get so hot I can barely stand it. She does not allow me mo tongue but moves slightly away- teasing me further. She has thoroughly soaked one side of moves to the other side. She takes the puffy lips wholly in her mouth one by one and runs h down the exterior sides and then the interior sides. My cunt is so engorged at this point she the lips in her mouth and my clit is so erect that it is increasingly difficult for her to avoid it pr from the top of my snatch. after what seems an eternity she pulls her mouth away a little, sti and again barely touching me at all runs her tongue up the middle of my slit. She does this a and each time I get a heated shudder of frustration and anticipation. The fifth time, she takes spreads my pussy as wide as she can.

My clitoris is on fire as she proceeds to run her tongue again from vag to clit very slowly and touching with a semi hard tongue. Then when it is almost more than I can bear, she relaxes flatly licks up again, this time pushing a bit. I moan loudly-from relief and tension and becaus wants that tongue so badly I would beg for it. She repeats this action very slowly and each ti down a bit more with her head until the pressure and rapidity are just right. I am really moan spreading my legs as far as I can. It feels so fucking good to have this brazen whore licking

She allows me to hold my cuntlips open as she pulls my ass cheeks apart and returns one h crack. There are several vibrators within arm's reach of her and she grabs a rather wide sho other hand. Turning the vibrator on to a medium setting she places it at the mouth of my pus thick and needs to be worked in slowly even though my cunt is dripping wet. Now there is at to my entire genital region- it is the most amazing feeling. It is like the rest of my body doesn

I love having her finger rhythmically pushing ever so slightly into my ass-having her fuck my broad vibrating dick (now turned on high) and licking my clitoris sooo softly at the same time in my body is tensed and I am so ready. At this point she rolls her tongue into a tube and be a tiny vagina to fuck my extremely erect clitoris. In and out. I want to entirely consume her in push her head down into my pussy and beg her to "suck on my clitoris -suck it hard and fuck of my holes. I need it - hard - fuck my tight ass - pound my cunt -hard- mmmm- sooo good-s cuntlicker- keep sucking baby-suck! Yeah- drill that finger in - as far as you can- up my ass b good -now faster-yeah- ram it uunngh, fuck- baby, I'm cumming I'm cumming I'm cumming s uuuunnngghh fuck uuunnnghhh The pumping grinding licking and fucking of my whole cunt much and I start uncontrollably exploding in waves of contractions that go on and on. I am je spasming and can barely keep her attached to my cunt. It is sooo good and seems to last fo finally subside and I am able to see again. I am greeted with the sight of the both of you guy edge of the hot tub jerking your extremely stiff cocks.

To be continued...

(I have to get to my sociology class so I will lick you later.)

Love Lola

ACDSee 3.1 RETAIL

License Key : 1327281752497814 41

How many med-it-a-tion teach-ers does it take to change a light bulb?

Fifty. One to actu-ally do the work, and forty-nine to offer reflec-tions on it.

How many joss-stick Buddhists does it take to change a light bulb?

Why bother? Kwan Yin will do it for us.

How many monks does it take to change a light bulb?

They can't. There's no light bulbs in the Vinaya.

How many vipas-sana med-it-at-ors does it take to change a light bulb?

No need. Just mind-fully note: 'dark-ness, dark-ness, darkness'.

How many tan-tric adepts does it take to change a light bulb?

Two; but they have to do it in full lotus posture.

How many Nagar-junas does it take to change a light bulb?

Since there's no Nagar-juna and no light bulb, how can there be any change?

How many Buddhist schol-ars does it take to change a light bulb?

An inter-na-tion-ally respec-ted com-mit-tee of aca-dem-ics, after delib-er-at-ing all night, co failed to agree on the mean-ing of the word ‘light bulb’. Mean-while, the sun came up.

How many Zen mas-ters does it take to change a light bulb?

The peach blos-soms fall softly on the warty old frog.

How many Ajahn Brahms does it take to change a light bulb?

The light bulb just has to get into jhana, then it’ll glow by itself.

How many Abhid-hamma schol-ars does it take to change a light bulb?

There are 20W light bulbs, 40W light bulbs, 80W light bulbs, 100W …200W…

There are 6V light bulbs, 12V light bulbs, 120V light bulbs, 240V light bulbs…

There are incan-des-cent bulbs, fluor-es-cent bulbs…

There are clear light bulbs, pearled light bulbs, colored light bulbs…

There are screw-in light bulbs, bay-onet light bulbs…

There are 20W light bulbs that are 6V, there are 20W light bulbs that are 12V…120V…240V

There are 40W light bulbs that are 6V…240V…

80W…100W…200W…

There are 20W light bulbs that are 6V incandescent…

There are 200W light bulbs that are 240V, flor-es-cent, colored, and bayonet.

How many ara-hants does it take to change a light bulb?

One.

http://www.tipitaka.net/pali/palidd/#B

Lisa Tries a Strip Club (Couple meets hot slut at strip club) bygreek goddess©

This is a quasi-true story based on the several different trips up north to visit the same club a special dancer. I hope you enjoy it.

And don't forget to vote or send me a message if you like it.

* * * * *

We'd had a long lunch with plenty to drink before Lisa dropped me at the front door, and hea bar a mile down the road. I'd told her to give me half an hour before she came back, and to w parking lot. "Drive carefully" I said to her as I closed the door and entered the dimly lit strip c

I stepped inside and waited a second, letting my eyes adjust from the brilliant Canadian sun interior of the strip club. It was two-thirty in the afternoon and predictably the place was virtu with maybe twenty men sprinkled about the bar. Ten or so strippers casually sauntered arou waitresses lounged at the bar, mostly killing time before the late afternoon rush. Once I coul made my way to a far corner and took a seat beside the wall and noticed for the first time th stage, gyrating to a slow song.

As I took my seat, I looked around the place. It was large, capable of holding 400 or 500 peo tastefully decorated, with plush carpet and comfortable tables and chairs sprinkled around th
The black lighting coupled with the black walls and ceilings provided a very dim atmosphere of a planetarium or dark movie theatre. The stage, however, was well lit and set against one point of the bar. The dancers entered down a flight of marble stairs at the side, and performe around the large spacious stage. As the three dances progressed, the woman would gradua and become more suggestive. From dancing around the stage clothed in a tight skirt and top she would eventually progress by the third song to being fully naked and rolling around on a simulating torrid sex and masturbating herself for the audience.

As the girl on stage slowly rolled about, her legs spread and hips pumping at the air while he at her cunt to gently masturbate herself, I quickly looked her over to see if she would be suit long blonde hair, a pretty face, long toned legs and small firm breasts. As she slowly rolled o her ass high in the air and aimed at the audience as she worked at her pussy, you could see developed from the hours spent bending and arching for her lap-dancing clients.

"Hi there, honey. My name's Sue. What can I get you?" The question from the waitress snap trance. As she smiled down on me and leaned into the table, I could see that they took as m their waitresses as they did their dancers. She was a beauty, with reddish brown hair and a large firm breasts jutted against her tight white halter-top, and her black stockings started at heels and ran all the way up to her tight black shorts. "Hi" I replied. "Just a bottle of Blue, tha

She disappeared back to the bar, and I looked around at the dancers as they casually circul seating area, looking for lap dances. By any standards, almost all were gorgeous, blondes a dressed in sexy lingerie and high heels. There were all shapes and sizes represented from s to taller, more voluptuous girls. But given that they make their living using their bodies, they thing in common: they were all in great shape.

"Here you go, honey" the waitress smiled as she set the beer down. "That'll be $4.50."

As I fished my wallet out of my pocket, I seized my opportunity. "So what's the deal for danc asked casually.

Sue sat down beside me. "Well, a table dance here is $20, and there's only limited touching.
the members lounge with one of the girls and enjoy a little more privacy. Personally, I think t is well worth it. It's a $100 cover, but then the dances are the same price. But there's a minir dances if you go back there with a girl."

"And what's it like inside the members area, Sue?" I asked, wanting to make sure it would be "Well, you passed it right at the front entrance when you came in. There are about ten enclo it," she explained "each with a small couch and candle light so you can get very comfortable private and nobody can see what's going on. I think you'd like it" she smiled.

I pulled out a twenty-dollar bill and passed it to her, indicating that she should keep the chan That's very generous" she smiled.

"No problem" I said, and then leaned closer and started to explain the situation. "Sue, my wi wanted to try a strip club. Do any of the girls here do dances for women?"

Sue smiled. "Honey, they absolutely love doing dances for women. Most of them spend thei surrounded by beautiful women, and almost all of them are bisexual. And you gotta rememb some pretty ugly guys in here, so feeling a good looking woman up against them is a nice ch at you, I know you're wife is beautiful."

"She is" I replied. "She's the most beautiful woman I've ever seen," I told her truthfully. "But i or will she feel out of place?" I queried, wanting to make sure this would be a good experien

"Oh, it's pretty common" Sue reassured. "I'd say we get five or six couples in every day, so p use to it. Most of them are content to watch the stage show and maybe have a lap dance ou area, but probably two or three a night go back into the members area for more privacy. But if I were her. It's so dark in here that nobody's going to see anything, and nobody will ever re

Feeling better, I took the next step. "Tell me, are there any girls here you'd recommend for h

"Well, there's a few who work during the day I'd recommend and there's a couple more who What time did you and your wife want to come in?" Sue asked.

"Well, she'll be here in ten minutes" I informed her.

"Ah, right, well, we'd better get to it. Any particular look your wife likes?" Sue asked, clearly h through this before.

"Well, she's quite partial to voluptuous but firm bodies. And if they're dark-haired and slightly much the better."

Sue glanced around at the dancers milling about the crowd. "How about Jasmine over there indicating a red-haired young-looking girl of about twenty dressed in knee-high boots and a l
The girl was certainly gorgeous, being about 5'10" tall with a tight firm body.

"Beautiful, but maybe too young" I replied. "Someone perhaps with a little more experience."

"Mmmm, OK. Let me think for a second." Her eyes cast around the bar, seeking someone s said, and slightly slutty right?"

"Yeah, about a 36C but a firm body. And she has to be gorgeous." I said.

"And is this for a dance here, or in the members lounge?"

"Members lounge, definitely." I stated.

"Wait here for a second, honey. I've got a girl in mind. Let me go see if she's busy." Sue got disappeared into the distance. I looked back to the stage and watched as a Californian blond final song of her set and sat on her knees, her legs spread, while slowly caressing her nipple the audience. She pulled one breast to her mouth and began to delicately lick her nipple wit casually moving the other between her legs to stroke her clit. She let her breast fall, and ger so that she was sitting on her ass with her legs spread toward the audience and bent slightly her clit. Her head tilted back as she stroked her cunt, her blonde hair cascading down her ba breasts heaving as she simulated her orgasm. Her pussy glistened in the spotlight, and she herself a few final strokes at the end of her song before getting to her feet and disappearing

"Honey, this is Tera" I heard Sue say. I looked up to see a beauty standing in front of me. Sh 5'6", and was supported by four-inch spiked heels. Her legs were wrapped in hold-up black up to her toned thighs. A black leather g-string held her pussy snugly and her stomach was muscled, smoothly arcing up towards her breasts. Her tits were large and firm, and were cle and not enhanced. They were held by a black leather bra that matched her g-string.

"Hi, I understand you have a special request today." Tera smiled as she slowly turned aroun do," she purred over her shoulder as she let me see her back. Her ass, thighs and calves w toned from days spent dancing and bending. She tossed her long dark hair over her shoulde a smile that any bikini model would be proud of. "What do you think?" she asked smiling as beside me.

"Whew" I whistled. "You are stunning. You look remarkably like Tera Patrick, the porn star."

"Why do you think I use Tera as my dancing name?" the woman smiled as she turned back

"Good point." I replied catching on. "Listen, has Sue explained everything to you?" I asked.

"Yes, she has. There's no problem there."

The waitress leaned into us. "What do you think, honey?"

"She's perfect Sue. But I want this to be really good for my wife. Do you really like dancing f Tera?"

"I love it, babe. There's nothing that makes me hotter than having a hot couple get worked u tell me about her."

"Lisa's gorgeous." I started. "She's about as tall as you with brown hair and a similar body. A best breasts I've ever seen."

"Mmmm, she sounds nice. Tell me, has she ever done this before? Or been with a woman?"

"No, but she's really curious. And I really want this to be a good experience for her."

"That's no problem" the dancer assured. "I'll go as fast or slow as she wants, and make sure relaxed. I'll treat her like a queen for the day. Tell me, am I dancing for just her or for the two

"Let's start with just her, and see how it goes."

"Fair enough. When will she be here?"

I looked at my watch and noticed that Lisa should have arrived back five minutes ago. That i nerve. "She should be waiting outside." I told the two women.

"Why don't you go get her" Sue started, "and take her straight into the members area. You'll on your right just as you enter the bar. I'll go get some drinks and we'll see you in there."

The two women got up and moved off towards the bar, while I watched them go. Two gorge one encased in a tight spandex shorts, the other with a thin strip of leather running down her disappearing between her tanned thighs.

I quickly drained my beer, adjusted my stiff cock in my pants and made my way to the door. sunlight momentarily blinded me, but I looked around the lot and quickly spotted our rental c holding up a newspaper high around herself, making sure no one could see who was behind passenger window, and she let me in.

I moved over and put my arm around her and gave her a deep kiss. "Well, it's all set-up. The in there and we've got a totally private booth."

"Oh god, I don't know," Lisa hesitated. "What if someone sees us?"

"Lisa, there's only about twenty guys in there, and the place is the size of a hockey rink. Bes as we go in, we just duck into the private area that's right by the front door. No one will have see us."

"Did you arrange for a dancer?" Lisa asked shyly.

"I did. Her name's Tera, she loves dancing for women and couples, and she's gorgeous."

"Tell me about her" Lisa whispered, snuggling into me. Clearly she'd had a few more gin and while she'd been waiting and now I knew she'd go through with it. I let my hand wander up th shorts and started to caress her ass as I kissed my way up and down her neck and whispere

"She's about your height, with a toned body. She's got large natural breasts, and she's wear leather bikini. Her legs are gorgeous, she's got a great ass, long dark shiny hair, she's weari lipstick and she looks like a model. And..." I paused for effect " she loves the sound of you."

"Oh Christ, she sounds nice" Lisa moaned. "OK, let's do it. But you stay with me, OK?"

"Of course, babe. I wouldn't miss a second."

We entered the club, and I guided Lisa quickly into the private members area. It was deserte hostess. "Hi Lisa, I'm Sue. Come on this way."

We followed the waitress into one of the booths, and sank into the sofa. I wrapped an arm a shoulders and gave her a squeeze. Lisa took off her dark glasses and glanced around. The ten-by-ten, and its walls extended up to about eight feet high, over which the music from the drifted in. The entranceway to the booth didn't have a door due to city regulations, but it was the corner of the private lounge so that no-one could see in. Besides, the area was discretel candle burning in the corner of the booth, so nothing could be seen. The sofa was pushed a leaving an open area in front of us, and I stretched my legs out while Lisa smiled nervously.

"Here's a couple of gin and tonics," our hostess said. As she placed Lisa's drink on the table leaned into Lisa. "Lisa, you're going to love this. Try not to be nervous. Tera does this day in and she'll be totally comfortable with the situation. I've had her dance for me a lot of times, a best. Just relax and enjoy it. And if there's anything you need, just press the button here and round" she said, indicating the button on the side tables before she left.

Lisa reached over and took a large gulp of her drink before looking up at me. "God, this isn't imagined. This place is kinda nice, not seedy like I expected. But I'm still pretty nervous." Sh gulp and was just placing it down when Tera appeared at the door of the booth and stepped

"Hi, I'm Tera. You must be Lisa" the dancer smiled, crouching down in front of my wife and p Lisa's knee. Tera looked up at my wife and then down her body, drinking in Lisa's beauty. "Y beautiful as your husband said you are, Lisa."

"Thanks. So are you" my wife offered nervously.

"You're sweet, honey" the dancer replied smiling. "Before we get started, I just want you to k get uncomfortable with anything, just let me know and we'll stop. Your man wants this to be for you, and so do I. Alright?" My wife nodded hesitantly. As a new song started, Tera smile shifted up and whispered into my wife's ear "God, you are a stunner. I've never danced for a as you before. I think I'm really going to enjoy this."

With my arm around her, I could feel Lisa tremble as the woman nuzzled her neck then pulle started to sway slowly in front of us, all the time looking directly into my wife's eyes. Her han legs and over the straps of her g-string around her hips, till they finally cupped her leather-co breasts. She smiled seductively at Lisa from beneath her dark hair, and then slowly turned a looked over at me, and smiled quickly. "God, she's gorgeous" she whispered in my ear, and kiss on my cheek before turning back to the stripper in front of us.

Tera had bundled her long dark hair in her hands on top of her head, and was looking back Lisa's reaction as she swayed her ass in time to the music. "Do you like my ass Lisa?" she a like to feel it later?" Her hips continued to slowly gyrate, rhythmically riding some imaginary stripper slowly bent over, grasping her ankles and looking back at my wife as she exposed h and pussy to her.

My wife quietly let the air whistle between her teeth as she watched the dancer tantalise us hands leisurely over her smooth ass, gradually pulling her cheeks apart and then squeezing again. Only the merest strip of leather covered her ass and the round pucker of her anus co on either side of it.

The dancer turned back to us and knelt down to gently pried Lisa's legs apart. Lisa hesitated but I nodded reassuringly and my wife let her knees separate. Tera gracefully turned away a edge of the sofa between my wife's legs, her ass in contact with Lisa's spread crotch. Lisa s and looked over at me as if to say 'Whew'.

The stripper gathered her hair in her hands again, looked over her shoulder at my wife who surprise, shifted back and started to grind her ass against my wife's pussy as if Lisa were fu behind. Lisa gasped and placed her hands on the woman's hips, pulling at her and letting he woman sexually for the first time.

Tera was a pro, her dark hair cascading down her back as she shook her head and ground wife's cunt. She alternated between insistent front-to-back motions, then switched to slow, s grindings as she looked back to watch my wife's reaction. Lisa's eyes were almost shut now was already close to cumming already as she imagined fucking this hot slut.

But Tera wanted to draw the experience out and make it memorable. The dancer slowed the gradually leaned back into my wife and pressed her back into Lisa's firm tits. Her head reste shoulder as she turned to look into my wife's eyes. "Do you like that Lisa? Would you like to that?" she breathed as she circled her ass against Lisa's pussy. My wife could only nod in re the woman's hips harder against her crotch as she tried to reach a climax.

Still lying back into my wife, Tera stopped her grinding and moved her hands up to her own breasts, diverting Lisa's attention. She squeezed and cupped her tits as my wife, her chin re dancer's shoulder, peered down into the cleavage of the woman's bikini top. Tera slowly sto to face my wife again. As she continued to slowly gyrate back and forth to the music, she slo from the waist just inches in front of us, so that her firm tits hung down, bulging against the s top. "Do you like women with large breasts, Lisa?" Tera breathed, as she slowly massaged the leather. "Would you like to suck on a pair of nice firm tits, baby?"

I felt my wife take a deep breath and slowly exhale as she nodded quickly. Tera cupped ther seconds, then slowly knelt in front of Lisa, reached behind her own back and undid her leath let it slowly fall away, exposing her 36C tits to my wife and I. "Do you like them Lisa?" she as looking up at my wife while massaging her mounds together. Lisa nodded, this time venturin

Tera gently took Lisa's knees and moved them apart so she could move closer again. She r pulled my wife's hips toward her so that Lisa was slumping down slightly against the back of my wife's legs were wide apart, Tera took advantage of the fact that Lisa was wearing shorts nuzzling Lisa's legs, starting at her inside knee and working her way north. She licked lightly soft inner thigh, and then looked up mischievously at her. The dancer kept sliding up till her at my wife's pussy, her face now level with Lisa's own large breasts. Tera reached forward t hips, and then leaned her chest into Lisa's crotch so that her voluptuous tits pressed against "What do you think so far, baby?" the stripper asked seductively, as she began to slowly ma groin with her firm breasts. Lisa could only moan in response.

After a minute, Tera moved her hands away from my wife's hips and up to cup Lisa's breasts
"You've got great tits, baby" she breathed to my wife. "Your husband's a very lucky guy. Do this?" she asked as she began to gently squeeze my wife's 36C's. Lisa shook her head as h and she began to breathe heavier. The woman knew what she was doing as she gently but chest, and at the same time continued to grind her tits into Lisa's aching cunt.

Lisa let out a quiet moan as Tera, looking intently into my wife's eyes, slowly licked her red l this good" my wife breathed. Tera took that as an indication to go further. She reached dow wife's cotton t-shirt, sliding her hands underneath. With one hand she reached up towards L and with the other she reached around to undo my wife's cotton bra. Lisa froze momentarily what was about to happen, but then smiled under the effects of the gin and let the dancer ha

With a technique that I was envious of, Tera quickly unhooked my wife's bra and Lisa's large into her loose t-shirt. The voluptuous stripper moved her hands back to the front and, knowi probably the first woman to caress my wife's chest, began to move lightly over Lisa's firm br love chicks with big tits. Your man's a very lucky guy" Tera smiled, looking up at Lisa as she palms over my wife's stiffening nipples. "I only wish I could really play with these. I'd love to nipples right now, Lisa."

Lisa was in heaven, letting another woman massage her tits for the first time. "Oh Christ, I c this is happening" my wife sighed in pleasure.

Tera gave one last squeeze, then slowly stood and placing her knees on either side of my w straddled Lisa's legs. The stripper's crotch rested about three quarters of the way up my wife as she faced my wife and started to slowly grind her leather-covered cunt against Lisa's legs up wide-eyed at the woman, realising that the brunette was simulating how she'd like to get After a moment, she gently took Lisa's head in her hands and pulled her face to hers, kissin passionately, their large firm breasts pressing together for the first time, separated only by th material of my wife's t-shirt. The dancer moved her lips down Lisa's cheek and breathed into to be able to fuck you for real Lisa. Would you like that?" Lisa's head tilted back, her eyes cl escaped her lips. Tera pressed into my wife to nuzzle into her neck, the two woman's breast one another, the stripper's tits pushing against Lisa's cotton top.

As Tera moved back to kiss Lisa's mouth more insistently, my wife's hands instinctively wen breasts and began to caress them. "Can I do this?" she shyly asked the dancer.

"Baby, you just do anything you want unless I tell you to stop" Tera smiled, then nuzzled her more confidently savoured the feel of another woman's breasts for the first time. Sensing my explore, Tera sat back watching, her chest jutting out as Lisa ran her hands around the danc feeling them, stroking them, and squeezing the woman's nipples. "God, you have great tits, sighed, revelling in the ability to at long last explore one of her strongest fantasies.

Tera slowly bent forward and pulled Lisa's mouth to her breasts, allowing my wife to lick and tits. "Oh Christ" I heard Lisa exclaim, her voice muffled by the other woman's chest. The con gin and her own passion caused Lisa to let go of her inhibitions, and she eagerly started to l Tera's nipples, while the dancer continued to grind her cunt on my wife's thigh. I looked on in my wife urgently take one of the woman's nipples in her mouth, sucking at it with a passion u for my cock. Lisa's hands squeezed Tera's breasts from the side, pushing them forward and she drank in the feel and aroma of the stripper's tits. Tera looked over at me and winked, as lose herself in the brunette's chest. I sat transfixed as my wife let her tongue roll around the nipple, lapping and sucking at it, biting it gently and rubbing her face around and between ea strippers firm globes.

After a moment, Tera leaned back, and Lisa collapsed back into the couch, smiling a little er at me. "God, this is hot. Why didn't we ever do this before?"

Still sitting astride my wife's thighs, Tera gently moved her feet forward onto the couch besid her crotch splaying wide open as she used my wife's thighs as a seat. Reaching one hand b herself on Lisa's knee, the woman used her other to start tentatively rubbing her own leather front of my astonished wife. The dancer's knees were wide apart, her heaving breasts wet w she aimed her leather covered crotch directly at my wife. "Want to see more?" the stripper c began to slowly massage the leather pouch. "I want to show you my cunt, Lisa. Would you li woman's cunt this close? Want to see me play with it? Want to feel it against your legs?"

Lisa's eyes were glazed over as she watched this display just inches in front of her. She unc her lips and nodded her head, her gaze focused intently on the stripper's hand rubbing her g the leather g-string. The dancer stroked at her cunt for another moment, then without breaki my wife, reached slowly to untie her g-string at the side. One strap flopped open. Gracefully other, and then slowly lowered the leather to reveal her moist, wet cunt. "See how wet you m breathed as she leisurely massaged her clit in front of my wife. "See how wet my cunt gets w women as beautiful as you?" The dancer's pussy lips were swollen and a clear liquid glisten her cunt oozing with excitement.

The dancer slowly slid one finger into her pussy, letting it disappear up to the knuckle. She p running it up over her clit, then over her breasts and finally into her mouth. She lewdly sucke finger, showing us how she sucked cock, running her tongue around her digit. "Don't you wis me, Lisa? Don't you wish you could suck my cunt right now?" the dancer moaned as she ret her cunt with more intensity. After using one finger, Tera added a second, the two disappear as she pumped at her tight wet cunt for several minutes, letting my wife drink in the sight of a masturbating in front of her.

Lisa looked at me, slowly shaking her head as if this was too much to comprehend. But Tera tricks up her sleeve. After one last deep thrust of her fingers into her pussy, Tera swivelled o legs and stood up on the couch either leg astride Lisa's hips. With her crotch at Lisa's eye le began to gyrate her cunt in Lisa's face, her inner thighs almost touching my wife's cheeks, a just an inch away from Lisa's lips. Slowly, in time to the music, the woman pumped her hips wife, her glistening finger working at her clit and moving as close as she could to my wife's f actually making contact. Lisa stared intently, watching the woman's swollen lips move slowly inch from her mouth. My wife had never seen a cunt this close, and she was amazed at the the pink skin. She breathed in deeply, savouring the smell of another woman for the first tim fix this image in her brain, the sight of a wet, excited pussy just an inch from her face. She s extend her tongue to take her first taste when Tera pulled back.

The stripper bent down and kissed Lisa on her lips, and said "Sorry, babe, it's a little too high me standing like that. Let's try something else."

The dancer moved onto the floor and got onto her knees facing my wife. Lisa instantly sprea needing no encouragement now. Tera smiled to herself, knowing how far she had brought h the last hour, and knowing how far she was about to take her. She bent down slowly, lookin the eye and started licking along my wife's inner thigh towards the crotch of her shorts. With contact, she moved her mouth directly over my wife's crotch, then slowly sank her mouth do covering Lisa's swollen cunt. At the same time, she slipped her hand up one leg of my wife's finding my wife was not wearing any panties, thrust two fingers directly into her wet pussy.

Lisa arched her back in ecstasy, pushing at the woman's mouth and squeezing her head wit fingers plunged into Lisa's slippery cunt, then pulled back out and then thrust in again. After Lisa started to moan. "Ohhhhhhh, fuuuuuuccckkkkk. You're such a hot fucking slut. Come o your hot cunt-licking mouth."

Tera knew that in her heightened state, Lisa wouldn't last more than a minute. The dancer w pro, pumping her cunt a few more times with her fingers, all the time her mouth working at th wife's shorts. With expert timing, the dancer intensified her oral assault on Lisa's clit, and my feverishly pumped her hips at the dancer's wet mouth. "Ohhhh, yeeeaaaaahhhh. Ohhhh, yo You're going to make me cum. Ohhhhh yeeaaahhhh." Lisa went off like a rocket, her hips th against Tera's face, her head buried in the arm of the sofa to muffle the noise as she ground the woman's fingers and experienced her first orgasm at the hands of another woman.

"Oh fuck, that was soooo good" my wife slurred through the combined effects of the gin and orgasm. I looked down at my wife, slumped against the couch, her hair a mess, her bra und breasts moved freely under her loose t-shirt, the crotch of her shorts soaked with a mixture o saliva and her own juices starting to soak through. She looked like a total slut, and I knew sh

"Can I try making you cum now, Tera?" my wife asked looking into the woman's face and ins hands to squeeze the dancer's large breasts again.

"You're a hot little bitch aren't you Lisa?" Tera whispered, smiling at my wife's wanton sexua playing with hot bitches who want to suck my cunt and make me cum." Then she rose and tu wife once more, her ass at Lisa's crotch. "Here, give me your hand" Tera instructed, reachin spread thighs to take Lisa's hand from behind and place it on her shaved cunt. Lisa's eyes w hand disappear past the woman's toned, tanned ass so that her palm cupped the brunette's were placed on her clit. The stripper sat back into Lisa, sitting on my wife's hand and pulling arm across her tits, resting her head back onto her client's shoulder. As my wife began to ca once more, the woman turned to Lisa, and licked briefly at her ear. "OK baby, want to finger cunt now?" she whispered. "Go ahead, try it."

Lisa turned her head toward Tera and kissed her hard. At the same time, she pressed her h dancer's cunt and began to tentatively explore it. "Oh God, she's so wet" my wife moaned as two of her fingers began to explore the dancer's pussy. I watched as a smile began to sprea face as it dawned on her that she had two of her fingers buried deep in another woman for th
"Christ, this is so hot" she sighed, her face perched on Tera's shoulder looking down at the d breasts. "Can I make you cum?" she whispered to the dancer. "I want to make your cunt spa and watch you cum all over my hand."

"Just do what comes natural baby, and you'll do fine" Tera answered back, looking intently in while gyrating her pussy on my wife's fingers. "Can you feel this?" she asked, squeezing her

Lisa's eyes lit up and she smiled. "God, that's cool. Do that again."

The dancer repeated it and then smiled at my wife. "Can you reach my clit, Lisa? Play with m moment." My wife leaned into the dancer, reaching further under the woman's ass to get bet clit. "Oh, Lisa, that's it. Just keep rubbing it for a minute if you want to get your first woman o

Lisa looked over at me and smiled, the sweat forming on her brow as she concentrated on fi swollen clit. "Cum for me baby. I want to get my dirty little slut off now," my wife breathed in t ear, her fingers alternately plunging into the girl's pussy, then pulling out to rub at her swolle was grinding her hips down against Lisa's hand, her eyes screwed shut as she tried to reach

My wife moved more and more intently while whispering into the dancer's ear. "Cum for me you to be the first bitch I finger until she cums. You want to cum all over my hand you little s to rub your clit until you explode? Cum on bitch, ride my fingers with your juicy little cunt. Co on..."

Finally, the woman exploded over the edge. She leaned back hard against my wife, her hea tits pointing upward heaving with excitement, her mouth open in a silent scream while Lisa's their final magic. "Oh fuck" the brunette moaned, as Lisa thrust two fingers into her tight twa feel the woman's spasms. "Fuck that's so good" Tera breathed, turning her head to lick lewo Lisa remained transfixed on her fingers buried up to the knuckle in the dancer's cunt, feeling squeeze her fingers as the stripper's orgasm swept out of her body.

"Fuck, baby, that was so good." Tera sighed, collapsing back into Lisa's chest. "We should c often."

Lisa's eyes were closed as she savoured the last feelings of the stripper's cunt. Noticing tha over at me and smiled, then reached between her legs to find Lisa's fingers still slowly pump Lisa started to ease her hand out from under the dancer, but the dancer had other ideas and hand.

"Here, try this" she whispered, placing her hand over top of Lisa's, moving it back slightly an wife's fingers against her anus. Lisa's eyes lit up, and she looked at Tera and started to say "Shhhh" Tera admonished. "Just try it. This is not something I do every day, but fuck, I really you."

Lisa smiled to herself and accepted the compliment. At Tera's urging, she moved her hand f some of the dancer's cunt juices, then dragged her hand back and began spreading them a asshole, feeling round the brunette's soft smooth anus. Once her anus was sufficiently lube insistently at Lisa's finger and forced her to apply some pressure. With a little effort, my wife finger pop through the woman's ring and start to slide slowly up the dancer's ass.

"Oh fuck. I'm fingering this bitch's ass," my wife moaned up at me. "It feels so fucking smoot

"Keep going, Lisa" Tera sighed. "Your finger feels so good. I just wish it was your husband's She looked over at me and licked her lips suggestively, and I nearly lost my load right then.
finger was buried completely inside the woman's tight asshole, the dancer looked at her and try another finger, Lisa?" Lisa smiled and nodded quickly. My wife reached a spare finger fu brunette to gather some of the woman's juices back to the woman's anus. Then, working the alongside the first, my wife gently penetrated the stripper's tight pink ring again. I saw the da briefly and could tell that Lisa had succeeded in sliding another finger into her asshole.

"Oh fuck, that feels good" Tera moaned as my wife started to slowly pump her fingers in and dancer's ass. "I could really use a good assfuck. Any chance you guys want to take this offs

Our eyes flew open and Lisa and I glanced quickly at each other. Slowly, she started to smil plunging her fingers in and out of a woman's ass that she had just met an hour earlier. I shru shoulders as if to say it was up to her, and then she nodded her head.

I leaned closer to the stripper and whispered in her ear. "Uh, what's involved in offsite, Tera?

"Just a little party for the three of us. I finish my shift in ten minutes. There's no payment or a just really like you guys, and I can't wait to get your wife naked and fuck her good and ahrd" looking over her shoulder at Lisa and smiling. "Wanna fuck around with me, baby?" she ask

"Yeah, I'd love to, Tera" Lisa answered. "But would my husband be a spectator or a full parti pleased to see that after her first lesbian experience, Lisa hadn't forgotten totally about me.

"Full participant, babe" the dancer answered. "Judging by the size of the bulge under that pa there's more than enough for the two of us to handle."

"You're right about that" my wife replied, reaching over with her free hand to give my cock a with the effects of witnessing the last hour, nearly made me cum right on the spot. "But I rea him fuck your ass. Will you really do that?"

"I love it up my ass, can't you tell." Tera replied, giving Lisa's fingers a little squeeze with her muscles. "I think I'd just love to suck your pussy while he slides his cock into that nice tight a have your fingers in. Wanna go to my place, or somewhere else?"

"Why don't you come over to our resort?" I answered. "We've got a condo with a private terr that looks out over the ocean. It's really nice."

"Sounds good" Tera answered, leaning forward and gently pulling my wife's fingers out of he wait to get a little more personal with you guys."

Part II

The three of us entered the condo just after six, the early evening sunlight pouring through t over the large apartment.

"Hey, this is nice" Tera said, the dancer now dressed in an almost obscenely short, tight pinl that barely covered her ass and pussy. The faint outline of a g-string disappeared between h the skirt, drawing eyes down to her long, toned legs encased in black leather thigh-high boo t-shirt let her large breasts sway freely as she walked. Her dark hair fell loosely around her s she wore deep red lipstick to complete the effect of a woman who wanted to get seriously fu

Tera moved into the living room and looked around. As she moved forward, Lisa grabbed m against the hallway wall and kissed me hard, her hand reaching down to grab my aching co insistently through my shorts.

"You sure you want to do this?" she asked me looking deeply into my eyes. I drank in the be her dark hair tousled around her beautiful face, and her large firm breasts pressed hard aga straining to escape her cotton shirt. I cupped her tight ass and ground my crotch back into h can't wait for this" I replied. "You know how much I've always wanted to see you with anothe think what happened back there at the strip club was just a warm-up."

"I know. Me too. She's really fucking hot, isn't she? I can't wait to have all three of us in bed.
going to let loose, OK?"

I kissed Lisa hard in reply and ground my throbbing cock into her. Fuck, my wife can get me "Aren't you guys forgetting someone?" we heard Tera say from the end of the hallway, her h squeezing and caressing her large firm breasts through her white t-shirt as she looked towa

"Mmmm, sorry Tera" Lisa said. "I just wanted to make sure everything's alright with my husb she laughed, walking towards the dancer. I watched as my wife, her inhibitions completely g Tera, wrapping her arms around the stripper to cup her firm ass cheeks through her lycra sk close. Their breasts mashed together as Lisa moved her mouth over the lush lips of the dark kissed her, her tongue snaking into the other woman's mouth.

"God, I'm looking forward to fucking you," my wife hissed. "I can't wait to feel your soft lips o

"Baby, I'll suck your cunt nice and slow all weekend if you want. I'll be the dirtiest slut you've dreamed of" Tera smiled. "But first I want to take a quick shower and get cleaned off from a work." She looked coyly at us both. "Do you guys want to join me?" she asked.

Lisa just smiled, grabbed the bottom of her shirt and pulled it over her head, releasing her m to the open air. I watched Tera gaze down at them and then slowly move her hands over my mounds. "Fuck, they're beautiful Lisa" she sighed, gently squeezing them together, then ber nipple in turn. Lisa's eyes lit up and her head fell back, her dark hair cascading down her ba woman sucked on her breasts for the first time.

"Oh fuck, that's nice. Your lips are so soft, Tera" she moaned, pulling the brunette's head int
"Mmmm, yeeaaahh. Suck my tits, you little bitch. You like chicks with nice big firm tits, don't getting hot having this stripper make love to her breasts, and when she gets hot, she loves t you want to rub your cunt on my tits, Tera? Do you want to make yourself cum on my tits, so your juice off my nice firm breasts?"

Tera looked up and smiled. Standing up to kiss my wife on the lips, she said "Fuck, Lisa, I w that, but let's go try the shower first." The dancer took my wife by the hand and started leadi to the master bathroom.

"You coming baby?" Lisa asked, looking back over her shoulder at me.

"I'll be in in a minute" I replied as the women went up the stairs.

I moved over to the couch and collapsed back on it, my mind swirling under the effects of th gin and tonics we'd consumed that afternoon, and from knowing that my wife was up in the b another hot babe right now. My cock ached in my shorts, and I unbuttoned them and eased stroke myself. 'What the fuck' I thought, and quickly threw off all my clothes and sat back na to dream about the coming night, and to slowly massage my hard dick.

I looked around the condo and thought we had everything we'd need for a great night of pas room had a large couch and several large luxurious chairs around the big-screen TV and vid away from the entrance hall was the sliding door that led out to the spacious terrace and hot bedroom and bathroom were located upstairs, and were designed so that the bedroom loft o room where I now sat. I glanced up there now and wondered what the girls were getting up t

Rising quickly, I went upstairs and into the steamy bathroom to find that the women had skip moved straight to the heart-shaped bath. They had just finished filling it, and the bubbles spi over the side. Lisa was leaning forward against the marble sink and a now topless Tera was last of my wife's clothes, affording me a good view of their tanned and toned bodies. I love c women with nice large breasts and full hips, and these two babes were definitely of that mou great shape, their smooth legs and stomachs and lean tight asses showing their commitmen bodies in top condition. But their large firm breasts and round hips showed that they were w invited the notion that they were built for fucking.

"We wondered how long it would take you" Tera smiled, bending down to help Lisa step out face now level with my wife's gorgeous ass. She leaned forward and gave one of Lisa's ass-sensuous lick. "Looks like someone's ready for action" the stripper smiled, looking at my ere as I took in the sight of her suckling at my wife's smooth round ass-cheeks, her hands mass
the tanned mounds together as her mouth explored her new friend. "Do you like it when I lic Want me to rim her asshole later so you can ease your cock deep into it?" Tera asked.

This babe knew how to get me hot, and my hand moved instinctively to my dick to stroke it.
from the afternoon's activities that I knew I couldn't hold back much longer, and Lisa knew it from the counter and Tera's hot mouth, my wife stepped over to me, her breasts mashing ag wrapped her hand over my cock and stopped me from shooting my load right there and ther covered mine and she kissed me deeply while squeezing my dick to make sure I didn't cum.
got something else in mind" she smiled up at me.

Tera eased herself back to her feet, peeled down her skirt and g-string, exposing her shaver ass, then kicked off her heels and slid slowly in to the giant tub. Lisa guided me over to the r against the wall opposite the tub, sat me down and turned around to snuggle back into me. I against my aching erection. "Mmmm, look at her honey," my wife moaned, leaning back into allowing her to swivel her ass into me. "Isn't she fucking hot? I can't wait to fuck her all night slumped back against the wall, reaching around to knead my wife's full breasts and positioni lay nestled in the crack of her ass, the underside of my dick rubbing along her anus. I marve
I had in my hands.

"Are you coming in Lisa, or do you just want to watch for a while?" Tera smiled from the tub, body covered in suds.

"I'm just going to watch for bit" Lisa replied. Then, hesitantly, she added, "You know, I'd reall you make yourself cum, Tera. Would you do that for me?"

"Mmmm, you'd like that would you," murmured the woman smiling mischievously at my wife the bubbles, her eyes dancing over my wife's form. "OK, Lisa. I'll play with myself for you. Bu you make yourself cum too."

I felt a quick intake of breath by my wife as she considered the dancer's reply. "I've never do of a woman before. But....I guess this seems to be a day of firsts" Lisa answered, her body l mine as her hand moved down between her parting thighs. Tera moved back against the mi and sat up on the ledge. She gently leaned back against the wall letting the water and suds breasts as her legs spread and her fingers moved to explore her moist pussy.

"Oh fuck, look at her, honey," Lisa moaned, her body squirming against mine as she fingere cunt. I continued to massage my wife's large breasts together, kneading her tits and pulling help increase her arousal. The stripper mirrored my movements on her own body, one hand her slippery tits while the other worked at her cunt. She gazed intently at my wife, watching l movement and echoing them in time.

Lisa's smile broke slowly across her face as she realised that the dancer was copying her m breaking her gaze, she circled one finger around her swollen clit and Tera matched her mov let out a low moan, feeling her power over the other woman and plunging her fingers deep i

Tera did the same, her slim fingers sliding between her delicate labia and into her sopping h back and used two fingers to sensuously massage her clit before guiding them back deep in and I watched Tera slowly do the same, her hand rubbing her swollen bud before plunging b cunt. Her fingers glistened as they were buried up to the last knuckle in her tight tunnel, slow her sex while her eyes remained fixed on the gorgeous form of my wife.

"Do you like the taste of pussy, Tera?" my wife asked. "Will you suck your fingers for me?" V pulled her hand away from her drenched vagina and moved her fingers up to her mouth. Lo dancer, she slowly licked her fingers as if they were my cock, her soft red tongue moving lux her digits before sliding them into her mouth and sucking them clean. I'd never seen her do raunchy, and I knew she was as aroused as she gets.

As my wife continued sucking the juices from her fingers, Tera smiled and slipped her finger dripping pussy. Looking into Lisa's eyes, she extended her long wet tongue and licked her fi sensuously from the base to the top, her tongue wrapping around her fingers and savouring own juices. Teasing us, the voluptuous beauty paused slightly before sliding them into her m them clean.

"Think your man would like me to suck his cock like that after he's cum in your pussy, Lisa?"
asked, smiling mischievously. "Think I could get him hard again if I sucked him like that?"

"Oh yeah, we could both suck his cock and get him hard again" Lisa answered, her hand no circling her hard bud and bringing her closer to a climax. My cock throbbed as it lay pressed wife's firm butt cheeks.

Tera's hands were working at her body too, squeezing her wet breasts and moving back dov legs. "Now you follow me, Lisa," she instructed, a devious smile spreading across her full re

My wife smiled back and started to match Tera's movements around her clit, her fingers slov nub and slipping periodically between her wet lips. The dark haired woman moved one foot the bath, and Lisa matched her, her leg now perched up on my knee. Without taking her eye then slowly sank two fingers deep into her own snatch, rhythmically plunging them into her c glistening on her hand. Lisa did the same and for a moment the two women moved in unison shamelessly pleasuring themselves as they spread their sexes before each other.

Looking deep into Lisa's eyes, Tera removed her fingers from her cunt, but instead of pulling swollen clit, she shifted her hips forward, lifted her legs slightly to expose her puckered assh her dripping fingers down to her pink hole. Raising her eyebrows as if to dare my wife, the d slippery fingers around her rosebud, massaging her own juices into her ring.

"Rub your juice into your asshole for me, Lisa" Tera breathed. "Let me see you play with you implored, slipping a slender finger past her anus and up into her own asshole, methodically out of her tight cavity.

Lisa's face broke into a wide smile, her eyes lighting up as she watched the woman shamele own anus. Without hesitating, Lisa moved her finger down to her pink, exposed asshole. I kn enjoys getting her tight ass fucked and I was sure she wouldn't back away from this challeng she quickly positioned her slippery index finger at her anus, rubbed some of her juices arour entrance, and then gently pushed her digit in, going deeper and deeper until her finger was tight rectum. With my cock placed firmly along the length of her crack, I could feel her finger underside of my dick as it made its way into her butthole.

"Oh this is so fucking hot" Lisa hissed at me as she ground back against my cock, her finger forth along my cock as she began to pump at her own anus. "Look at her get her ass ready want to fuck that tight hole? I want to guide your cock into her wet ass, honey. I want to see into her asshole. Would you like that?" my wife moaned. Her squirming against my aching c intense and I knew this time that I couldn't hold back. Grabbing Lisa forcefully by the hips, I back hard against me.

Sensing my urge, my wife slipped her finger from her asshole and lifted her hips to pull my c so that the top my dick was now positioned along the length of her slick pussy lips, my cock-her swollen clit. This was one of her favourite tricks, and I loved the feeling too. With the top rubbing along the entire length of her pussy, she could easily increase her own excitement b and clit back and forth over the top of my dick. Lisa began to slowly pump her hips, holding r against her pussy with her hand and being careful not to let it slip inside. My length glided be sopping furrow of her labia and my cock-head pulsed back and forth over her excited clit, dri frenzy as she gazed at the dark-haired dancer in front of us with a finger up her ass.

Still watching Tera ply her asshole with her fingers, Lisa pumped my cock between her swol gliding it along the length of her glistening cunt and bringing me closer with every second. "T come all over me. I want your sperm to spray all over my cunt so our little slut can lick it up" moaned. "Do you want to lick my husband's cum off my cunt, bitch? Maybe I'll have you kee asshole while you bury your face in my wet pussy." With every one of my wife's moans, we w closer, watching our stripper blatantly finger her asshole for us as we stroked each other off.
both close.

"You could assfuck her baby, while she licks your sperm off my cunt" Lisa continued, her hip my aching erection. "Would you like that bitch? You want my husband to ease his cock into Lisa's climax hit her like a train as she pumped her hips along my cock. Her back arched off head pressing back on my shoulder and her sweating breasts heaving in the air as wave aft pulsed through her body. Watching my beautiful big-titted wife cum sent me over the edge to exploded with an entire afternoon's worth of cum. The first blast hit Lisa's hand as she held r along her pussy. She quickly shifted and aimed it up over her crotch and up onto her flat sto blast arced up over my wife's body, landing in molten globs of white sticky cum that clung to

As we both slowly began to come down, Lisa turned her head and kissed me passionately o that was good," she sighed. "I love it when you spray your cum all over me baby," she added me and letting my cock slip from her hand. Our gaze turned back to Tera who was now mov towards us with a glint in her eye. She climbed out of the tub and moved across the short sp were sitting, about to demonstrate what a dirty slut she could be. Without a word, she knelt d spread legs, leaned forward and began to slowly lick my cum off of Lisa's wet body. Her tong my wife's labia, sucking off any sperm lying there, and then moved up and over Lisa's throbb my wife jump from the sensation. The brunette buried her face deep back into Lisa's cunt, o visible to us as her tongue snaked into Lisa's sex to softly savour the flavours of my wife's ju with my sperm.

After a few minutes of gentle cunt licking, Tera turned her attention to Lisa's thighs, her soft lips cleaning off the spunk from my wife's beautiful form. Moving down again, I felt her lips ci of my cock and then slowly felt her warm mouth engulf my member as it slowly softened. He down over my dick, her eyes level with my wife's gaping wet pussy and her dark hair glisten she worked at sucking me dry.

Once satisfied, she began working north again, letting her soft tongue trail through Lisa's pu across her tender clit. Up onto her stomach, Tera continued licking off my cum that had almo Lisa's tits, splashing instead onto my wife's tanned skin. Gripping Lisa's breasts in her hands the last of my fluid from my wife, her face shining with Lisa's juices and my sperm.

"That was fucking hot" Lisa sighed as Tera leaned into her, their sweaty breasts mashing tog soft, wet tongues began to explore each other's mouths. "I've always wanted to have a slut s we've come on each other" my wife whispered. "And you're a wonderful cunt licker, Tera. Th

"You'll just have to wait until I get to suck your cunt until you cum, Lisa. Then you'll be impre stripper smiled.

Suddenly I felt the weight of the two women as I perched upon the marble bench and suppo don't we try out that bath, you two?" I suggested and they readily agreed.

With one last lingering kiss, the two goddesses moved off of me and helped each other into Sinking down into the white foam, they began to explore each other's bodies again, twisting kissed and gently caressed each other. I sat slumped against the wall, my hand idly stroking cock as I took in the scene. The large marble bathroom was completely steamed, and there wife beginning to make love to another woman for the first time.

"Sit up on the edge, Tera" she said. "It's your turn now."

The dark haired slut perched herself up on the side of the tub, leaning back against the stea letting her legs fall open to once again reveal her glistening vagina. Lisa got to her knees, tu smiled, her eyes lighting up at the thought of eating another woman's cunt for the first time.

As Lisa's head moved forward between Tera's legs and made contact with her clit, the stripp forward, revelling in the pleasure my wife's mouth was giving her. "Oh yeah, you slut. That's wet cunt. Mmmmmm." Tera unconsciously grabbed Lisa's head and pulled her closer to her hips at my wife's face. From the side, I could see Lisa's jaw moving rhythmically around the cunt, first concentrating at her swollen lips then moving up over her engorged clit.

Tera's head snapped forward, staring down at Lisa's head between her legs. "Oh fuck, your fucking good on my clit, you little cunt-licking bitch. You like licking my nice wet cunt, don't y

Lisa pulled her head back and looked up the dancer, her mouth and cheeks glistening with t juices. "Your pussy tastes so good, Tera. Want me to suck it till you cum all over my face? Is want, baby? You want to cum all over my nice wet face and then suck your own juice off it?"

Tera reached down, grabbing Lisa's hair and pulled her face to her own, kissing my wife rou her own juices on Lisa's lips. "You like licking cunt, don't you bitch?" Tera hissed. "You like s hot slut's cunt in front of your husband don't you? Well, I'm going to teach you how to be a g cunt-licker before this weekend's over." Tera slumped back against the wall and pulled my w roughly between her legs.

My cock was rock-hard again, and I stroked it as I watched my demure wife becoming a tota me. She knelt in the bath on all fours, her dark hair bobbing between Tera's legs as she exp sex with her mouth for the first time. Bubbles clung to her full, firm hips as her ass poked out water level, her own cunt wet and glistening in the light. Her toned ass-cheeks pointed direct parting slightly to reveal her puckered anus still wet from when she fingered it.

"Your wife's a hot little cunt licker," Tera said, watching me as I drank in Lisa's beauty and st rigid cock. "Why don't you come in and fuck her tight wet pussy while she sucks my cunt? W Would you like to fuck your dirty little slut wife while she sucks on another woman's cunt?"

I smiled at the thought and then eased myself into the bath and quickly moved over behind L her hips, I positioned my hard cock at the entrance to her sopping pussy. My wife paused fo her head to smile back at me, her face glazed with Tera's juices. "Yeah, honey, fuck me with cock. Slide your cock right up my tight pussy while I suck this babe's cunt."

I moved forward and slid my length up my wife with one long thrust, burying it balls deep in h tunnel. Grinding my hips against hers, I luxuriated in the feeling of her cunt engulfing my dick it and gripping it tightly as it moved slowly in and out. I looked up at Tera, her legs spread br gripped Lisa's head and mashed her cunt into my wife's face. The stripper's large firm breas face dripped with sweat as she smiled over at me, watching me start to slowly fuck my wife.

"Is she wet?" Tera moaned over at me. "Is her cunt nice and tight and wet now?"

I smiled back and slowly nodded, pumping my cock more insistently at Lisa's tight vagina. "D eating your cunt, Tera? Is my hot slut wife a good cunt licker?"

"Oh yeah, your wife gives great head. I bet she really knows how to suck your cock too."

The scene was getting too hot, and I had to slow down or I was going to blow my next load i pussy. I slumped forward onto Lisa's back, my head at her shoulder as I rocked my cock ger her vice-like snatch. I gathered my wife's dark auburn hair and flicked it over the other shoul could get a direct view of Lisa's mouth working at the dancer's spread pussy. I nuzzled her e turned her head, her lips and cheeks glazed with Tera's juices as she kissed me fully, letting tongue snake into my mouth.

"Oh fuck, honey, she tastes so good" my wife moaned. "I never thought I'd like eating pussy

As I pumped slowly at her cunt, Lisa turned back to Tera's wet vagina and ran her tongue up woman's swollen lips. Finishing her wet lick with a swirl around the stripper's throbbing clit, r her head towards me and smiled. "I bet you like that honey. I bet you love seeing your little s another woman's cunt, my face all wet with her juices, don't you babe?" My answer was to p into my wife's sopping cunt, filling her with my meat.

Lisa grunted, pushing back at my dick. "Mmmm, that feels good. Does that mean the better pussy, the better I get fucked?" she smiled back at me, a wicked gleam in her eye.

"Baby, you keep sucking Tera's cunt, and I'll fuck you all night long" I assured her. "I just wa use your mouth on this slut till she creams all over your beautiful face."

"I think I'm getting better at giving her head" my wife stated. "Do you think I'm getting better, asked, looking up at the sweating body of the dancer, the woman's legs spread obscenely in wife's glistening face poised just inches from the slut's gaping pussy.

"Oh yeah" Tera breathed. "You've got such a beautiful face for a cunt-sucking bitch, Lisa. I ju a nice little wife turn into a total slut and go down on me while her husband fucks her nice ar hissed starting to grind her hips into my wife's face. "Pretty soon I'm going to have him fuck y while you tongue my anus. Would you like that you little bitch? You want to lick my anus whi fucks your tight little puckered ass with his big hard cock?"

Watching the spread dancer, I could see she was working herself towards her orgasm, one dark luxurious hair and pulling her tighter to her cunt so she could use my wife's face to get Her hips were pumping at Lisa's mouth, almost as if she was fucking it, her cunt lips riding fr chin, up over her mouth, and then up again over her nose and face. Lisa's head remained st brunette literally masturbate herself on my wife's now shining face.

"Just keep licking my pussy, baby," Tera breathed. "I just want to fuck your nice hot face till it, you little slut. You like me fucking your face Lisa? You like a nice hot bitch grabbing your fucking your face while your man fucks you deep with his hard cock? Ohhhh fuuuucccccck, so fucking horny. Ohhhh yeeeeeaaaggggghhh, here I cum Lisa. Here I cum over your nice ho one last thrust, the woman's sweating body tensed, her thighs now locked around my wife's her cunt contracting over Lisa's tongue as she buried it into the dancer's heaving pussy. Loo wife's shoulder, I could se her jaw muscles pumping at the woman's slot, trying to work her f into Tera's throbbing cunt.

After a few moments, Tera's orgasm swept past and the voluptuous woman turned to jelly, h against the mirrored wall, her large tanned breasts heaving to either side of her chest as cau

Lisa smiled, knowing she could make this hot slut explode again whenever she wanted. "Wa smiled back at me, her face a slick mess of pussy juice and saliva. Lisa extended her tongue lightly at Tera's clit. The dark haired woman immediately arched her back and moaned at the feeling. Lisa backed off, and Tera slumped back against the steamed mirror, her hands pulli glistening breasts.

Lisa's head moved forward again, this time lower, her tongue pushing tenderly between the into her sopping cunt. Lisa kept pushing forward until her whole face seemed to be buried in her jaw working rhythmically as she sucked at the other woman's sex.

Gently, Lisa pulled her face back, her lips and cheeks soaking with Tera's juices, and turned deeply. I kissed my wife back, the dancer's juices mingling between our tongues as I licked a revelling in the taste of another woman on my wife's previously innocent face.

"She tastes good, doesn't she babe?" Lisa asked me, her eyes dancing with excitement. I no pushing my cock deep into my wife's cunt as I continued to savour the taste of pussy on Lisa

"Oh god, I'm so fucking horny. I wanna try something even dirtier now" Lisa said. She grabb pulled them roughly forward so that the woman was half-lying, half-sitting against the mirror.
shoulders and used her hands to prop Tera's legs up stirrup-style, exposing the woman's cro before. "Watch this," my wife whispered back at me. She moved her head back to the slut's lightly, eliciting a few whimpers from the woman. She continued going lower, her tongue run side of the dancer's sopping labia, up through the middle furrow, then back down the other s dipped still lower, teasing the soft patch of skin between the woman's cunt and now exposed slightly, she gently flicked at that soft skin, savouring the juices that had dripped down from pussy.

Glancing back at me out of the corner of her eyes one last time, Lisa's head moved lower or tongue extending out to tentatively touch Tera's pink asshole. She pulled back momentarily courage then moved back towards the woman's rosebud. This time her broad tongue swabb her saliva starting to mix with Tera's own pussy juice that had leaked down over her puckere

The voluptuous brunette started moaning again, her hands kneading her tits and pulling at h mind lost in ecstasy as my wife licked at her asshole for the first time. I watched intently as L became bolder, first rimming around the stripper's anus, and then flicking at its centre before broad strokes over the pink ring. After swabbing the slut's asshole, my wife moved up throug cunt and clit before moving back down to spend more time making love to her butthole. Gain wife's mouth covered over the woman's anus, her jaw pumping as her tongue bathed the da mixture of saliva and pussy juice.

After several minutes of enjoying the feeling of my wife's tongue, I could see that Tera was n her orgasm and her excitement was starting to rise again. "Oh fuck, Lisa. You're going to ma Tera moaned, her eyes half-lidded with lust. "Please, suck my clit again until I cum all over y little cunt-licker."

My wife grinned back at me, grinding her pussy back on my cock as a satisfied smile spread partly from knowing that she had the dancer in the palm of her hand and partly from knowing becoming the ultimate slut. She looked back over her shoulder and kissed me again, sharing with me.

"You want to cum now, slut?" Lisa teased, turning back to the brunette. "You want me to brin nice red lips and my nice soft tongue? Is that what you want?"

Tera could only nod, begging my wife to make her cum again as she squirmed on the edge sweating body half lying, half sitting up against the mirror, her large full breasts heaving as s release.

"OK, get ready to cum bitch" my wife hissed, her face framed by the other woman's spread t to cum again on my mouth while my husband pumps his cock into my tight, wet cunt. Come again to get off while my man fills me with his hot sperm."

"Ohhh fuuuck, I'm going to cum on your face, Lisa" Tera moaned. "I want to come all over th of yours again."

Lisa smiled again, then raised her hand to Tera's pussy and plunged two fingers into its dep moaned, shaking her head as my wife pumped at her cunt. Pulling her hand away, Lisa repo at the entrance to Tera's pink puckered asshole.

"Want me to finger your ass, bitch, while I suck on your clit?" my wife hissed at the moaning

"Mmmm, yeah, pump my ass Lisa. Pump my ass and suck my clit while your husband pump cum."

With that my wife pushed back against my cock, filling herself completely with my rigid meat she eased a finger into Tera's tightest hole, twisting it round until slowly knuckle after knuckl into the woman's rectum.

"Oh Christ, her ass is so warm and tight honey," Lisa exclaimed. "She's clamping down and asshole throbbing around my finger."

Lisa slowly started to pump her finger in and out of Tera's ass until she had developed a ste then lowered her mouth once again to the dancer's swollen clit. I watched as the stripper's b writhe in the pools of water gathered on the surface of the marble ledge, her head twisting fr from the combination of my wife's finger pumping in her puckered ass and her tongue lashin swollen clit.

With my beautiful wife sucking off another woman right in front of me, I knew I was getting cl back up so that I could fuck my wife properly. With one leg propped up, I started to skewer m of Lisa's delicious cunt. Her head bobbed at Tera's crotch while her finger pumped continuou asshole. The scene was rapidly becoming too much for me and I increased my pace until I w Lisa's cunt as it nestled neatly between her wet, curved ass cheeks.

"Oh yeah, fuck her hard while she sucks my cunt" Tera moaned at me as Lisa continued her woman's holes. "Fill her with your big hard cock. I'm gonna suck your cum out from her agai over my face. You want to see that, baby? You want to see my face coated with your cum a juice?"

Tera's hips were pumping at my wife's mouth, as her hands gripped Lisa's hair holding her t cunt. "Cum on you little cunt licker" she moaned. "Push your finger into my ass and suck my bitch. Suck me off like the hot fucking slut you are." The woman's hips were thrusting frantic wife's face as she approached her own orgasm. "Come on bitch, suck me, suck me, ohhh, c

UNNNGGGGGHHHHHH....."

With one final lunge, her second orgasm overwhelmed her, her hips arched upward towards my wife's finger stuck far up the stripper's clenched asshole as wave after wave of ecstasy f over the dark haired woman. After a few final involuntary thrusts of her hips, Tera slumped b mirror, almost lying along the marble ledge, her face covered in sweat and tangled hair, her limp as she savoured her second orgasm by the mouth of my transformed wife.

Lisa looked up at her, then back at me with a satisfied smile, amazed at her own power to se the edge. I continued pumping at my wife's sopping cunt, knowing that at any second I was sensing my impending ejaculation, smiled back mischievously and said simply "Look." I follo finger still planted in Tera's asshole, the entire digit wedged firmly up the woman's rectum.

"It's so tight" my wife breathed, knowing that this would send me over the edge. "It's so warm and I bet she wants you to fuck her up her ass later." Lisa started pumping her finger slowly asshole, letting me see the dancer's ring pull at her finger on the way out and accept it slowl in.

"Would you like me to help you fuck her ass later?" Lisa continued. "I'll lick her asshole agai nice and wet for you. And you can fuck my ass too. You wanna watch Tera lick my ass and can fuck my ass too. We'll get on our knees together on the bed and let you screw both our tonight? Would you like that baby? You can bury your cock deep in both our asses while we off..."

With that last image in my mind I erupted into my wife's cunt, my dick buried balls-deep in he vagina, my cum rocketing out and spilling into her tight cavity. I ground my dick hard into her mind filled with the bliss of my own orgasm with my cock buried deep inside this beautiful wo

Slowly, I came to, looking round to see that Tera had slipped back into the tub and was nuzz woman's soapy breasts rubbing together as they kissed.

"That was fucking excellent" Tera smiled over at me. "I love partying with couples, and you t

I slowly let my cock slip from Lisa's sopping pussy, and sank down into the suds against the The women snuggled into either side of me, their hands busy exploring my softening cock a breasts beneath the foam. Looking down at my wife, I smiled and raised my eyebrows as if t you think about that?"

My beautiful woman beamed back at me. "Fuck that was good. I feel like such a slut -- and I

Tera smiled too, satisfied with her role in turning my wife into an uninhibited slut. "I couldn't b when you pushed your finger into my ass, Lisa. That was really hot".

"I know. I was a little surprised myself. But it sure was fun" my wife giggled.

Tera giggled back, her eyes lighting up at the memory of my wife as she sucked her off. "I gu question now is 'How do we follow that?'"

A thought occurred to me and I jumped up. "I'll be back in a sec, girls" and disappeared arou a moment I was back with a large bottle of champagne and three glasses. "No use going dry our options, is there?" I said as I poured out three generous helpings.

Taking a large slug directly from the bottle, I leaned back against the side of the tub and dra around the two women, letting my hands casually caress their full and soapy breasts. The gi into me and sipped their champagne as their hands wandered about, gently massaging a br

"I guess the important thing is to get my guy's cock back in gear" Lisa said between large gu champagne. "He's cum twice already tonight, but I bet we can coax one or two more out of h

"Mmmm, I think so" Tera replied, her glass already drained. "It might take a bit of effort from sure it'll be worth it" she added as she gripped my semi-hard cock beneath the water and ga squeeze.

"Let's see that big fucking cock of yours, honey," my wife whispered into my ear. "I want to s Tera so we can both suck it hard before I let you fuck her with it." She motioned for me to sit of the tub and I quickly took my spot, leaning back against the mirrors with my cock hanging between my spread legs. I seriously doubted my ability to get it up again, but I was all for let

The two girls got up on their knees, the water coming up to their waists and leaving their drip swaying freely. Lisa gently moved my legs wide apart and knelt between them, her hand grip stroking it. Tera moved in too so that the two women knelt almost facing each other, only my their beautiful faces.

"Do you like my husband's cock, Tera? Would you like to suck it hard, take him deep into yo him shoot his cum into you?" Lisa was clearly on autopilot, her talk indicating how horny -- a she was. "Want to see how he likes it sucked, Tera?" Lisa continued.

The stripper smiled and nodded. "I want to suck him hard with you Lisa. Then I want to mak our faces and tits. Would you like that?" Lisa broke into a broad grin, leaned in and kissed T breaking off and slowly lowering her head to take my swelling dick into her mouth. Inch by in her mouth over my organ, taking it deep and sucking firmly at the semi-rigid flesh. Her hand at its base and squeezed it firmly so that the veins and head popped out and rubbed on her

"Your hot little slut's a good cocksucker" Tera breathed up at me from between my legs, her my chest while the other disappeared into the water behind Lisa's ass. "Do you like her suck babe? Does she suck you off a lot, and drink your hot cum down her throat? I'm going to try strong cock too, and suck you off with your hot little slut wife so we can share your cum. Wo that? Do you want to fuck both of our mouths today?"

Her talk and the whole situation were getting me hot again, and Lisa's mouth continued to pu my dick. I took in the scene of my wife giving cock-sucking lessons to another woman, and n afternoon. 'Who would have thought I'd end the day in a bath with two goddesses doing thei cock hard again so I could fuck them with it?' I thought to myself as I leaned back and enjoy feelings of Lisa's wet mouth around my dick.

After a moment, Lisa let my cock pop from her lips and smiling at Tera, leaned over and kiss bobbing under their chins as they explored each other's mouths. After a moment, they parte took my cock in her hand and motioned it towards the stripper. "I think he's got a beautiful bi you Tera?"

"Mmmm, it's so thick and long, Lisa. Can I try it now?"

With one hand grasped firmly around my stiffening shaft, Lisa moved my dick towards the br few strands of dark hair back out of the way so she could feed it into the woman's mouth and slut suck my cock for the first time. Tera's warm lips enveloped my aching member, and her insistently down my shaft. Lisa watched intently, smiling as she shared her prize with this ho

"It's good isn't it, Tera?" The dancer looked over at my wife, her mouth extended with my thi between her lips. I watched as inch after inch slowly disappeared into her wet mouth, her lip the shaft towards the base. After pausing for a moment at the deepest point, the dancer slow back, my dick re-emerging from her mouth, her red lips leaving a trail along my swelling mem what she saw.

"Mmmm, I think my husband's going to like you" she exclaimed, watching the dancer suck w wife leaned in to rejoin Tera, moving down to lap at my sagging balls, taking each into her m sucking gently at them while Tera continued to concentrate on my shaft.

After a few moments, the two girls pulled back, smiling at each other as they shared my coc Tera leaned over and kissed my wife hard, her tongue probing at Lisa's mouth as they revell of the moment. Slowly they turned back to my dick, including it in their kiss as they both beg swab at either side of its length, their tongues mixing together as they lapped at my rising co

"Mmmm, I love sucking your husband with you" Tera whispered to my wife. "It's so fucking d with another woman, especially if it's her husband's nice big wet dick, don't you think Lisa?"

Lisa moaned softly, pumping my hard-on with her hand. "Mmm hmmm, I love sucking my ma
But I want to see his cum all over your face." With that she pulled my swelling erection over plunged down upon it, the sensation shooting sparks through my crotch.

"You'd like to lick his cum off my lips, wouldn't you Lisa?" the stripper hissed at my wife, driv into a higher gear. "You want to kiss me with a mouth full of his cum and twist it around my t bitch?"

Lisa moaned again, pulled my cock out of her mouth and then shoved it over so it parted the lips and eased down her throat. My wife watched for a moment, breathing deeply with excite disappearing below the water to work at her own swollen clit. Deciding Tera had had enough from the woman's mouth and quickly engulfed it back into her own. A few more bobs along r repeated the process, sharing my length with the voluptuous brunette and helping another w Back and forth my hard-on passed, each woman taking a few deep sucks before relinquishin other. Periodically, the woman not sucking my dick would reach lower to gently take my balls sucking and rolling them around her soft warm tongue.

Because I'd cum twice already that afternoon, I knew I could control my own response and w cumming too soon. I leaned back enjoying the feeling of my erect cock being sucked back a sluts, concentrating on the feeling of each of their mouths as they shared their prize between mouth was soft and warm and she took me deep into her throat on every suck. Tera too tool but she used more saliva in her mouth to make her blowjob much sloppier. Both of their tech good, and I couldn't decide whose I approach I favoured as they took turns sucking at my di

Slumped back against the wall, my groin luxuriating in the feeling of the two slut's mouths tw sucking at my cock and balls, I was suddenly aware that we'd spent the last hour in the bath danger of getting waterlogged. Looking down on the two brunettes lapping hungrily together chins to look at me, my dick popping out of Tera's mouth one last time. "Why don't we get ou and carry on in the bedroom. We don't was to end up like prunes, do we?"

The women laughed, becoming aware that we'd played away most of the early evening in th right, honey" Lisa said, rising slowly out of the water and pulling Tera up with her. "Let's go s bedroom."

The women stepped out of the tub together, allowing me a good view of their tanned bodies my seat on the side of the tub, I leisurely stroked my semi-hard cock and watched the girls t dry. "Aren't you going to join us, honey? I think you'll like it" Lisa finally asked, teasing me by into Tera's body and kissing her wetly, the women's breasts mashing together and pressing up and stepped out of the tub, Lisa giving me a warm towel as she leaned close and kissed this, babe. I really love getting dirty with another woman" she said, her eyes sparkling with th discovery.

I smiled back, and at the same time felt a towel rubbing my legs and ass, followed by a warm my cock. The mouth bobbed several times on my length, the feeling indescribable as my wif
"She's really a slut isn't she?" my wife whispered. "I think we can really get kinky with her, do think?"

Before I could answer, I felt Tera's mouth slide off my cock, and the stripper moved around b knees. I felt a pair of soft hands gently spreading my ass cheeks, followed by a warm tongue lapping and kissing at my exposed asshole. "Ohhhh, jeez" I exclaimed as the pleasure of the shot across my anus. "She's licking my ass, Lisa!" Her tongue greedily lapped at my rosebu my hips close to her face and her warm soft cheeks nestled softly between my own buttchee

My wife kissed me hard, pressing her firm tits into my chest, then sinking quickly down to he mouth level with my rapidly hardening cock. Lisa paused only for a second to peer through r Tera's wet, pink tongue working at my asshole, and then she quickly engulfed my dick and s deep into her wet mouth. The sensations of the stripper's tongue dancing across my sensitiv feeling of my wife's warm throat pumping at my cock were indescribable.

Tera's tongue swirled around my anus, alternating between swabbing at my asshole and pu ring. Her soft cheeks rubbed against my butt cheeks as her mouth lapped hungrily at my hol her saliva, her soft tongue dancing around my rosebud. At the same time as the slut tongue looked down to see my beautiful wife sucking hard at my throbbing cock, her cheeks suckin another load of cum from my balls.

After a few minutes of revelling in the feeling of having two gorgeous women working at my areas, I felt Tera detach her mouth from my asshole and get slowly to her feet behind me. P into my back, she peered around my shoulder to watch Lisa work at my cock.

"You're wife's a great cocksucker, do you know that? I know a lot of guys who would kill to h suck them off like that," she breathed into my ear. "Especially if they could have another hot asshole at the same time. Did you like that, babe?" she asked. "Did you like me sucking at y your hot slut wife sucks at your hard cock?"

I could only groan in response, as Lisa's mouth completely swallowed my cock.

"I bet we could make you cum right now" the stripper continued, her breath hot against my n of us could suck you off all over our faces." With that, I felt her hand slip between my ass ch my lubed asshole still soaking with her own saliva. "I bet if I pushed my finger up your ass, w you cum all over your wife's beautiful face." I felt the slut press her index finger hard against hole until it yielded to her pressure. Slowly, she started working it into my ass, pressing agai prostate and sending bolts through my cock still warmly engulfed by my wife's mouth. My dic and it was an effort not to cum, but I wanted to hold off for even more of this attention.

"Do you like me fingering your ass while your wife sucks your hard cock, babe? Does it feel eyes closed and head tilted back, it was all I could do to nod my head as waves of ecstasy r and into my cock.

"Perhaps you'd like us both to suck your dick while we play with your ass" Tera whispered, h probing into my ear as her finger worked farther up my rectum. "Would you like that? Would sluts sucking your big cock while we fuck your ass with our fingers?"

Quickly, the woman slipped her finger out of my ass and sank down to her knees beside my the dancer, her mouth distended with my aching dick sliding between her lips. I felt Tera's ha between my legs, run over my balls and move back between my crack, searching again for r Quickly, her finger found it and sank deep into my ass again, just as Lisa went deep on my c started pumping simultaneously, Tera's hand working at the same time as Lisa's mouth.

After a few moments, my wife slipped my cock from her mouth and pushed it towards Tera.
him off like a couple of whores" Lisa urged the other woman. "I know he loves two hot sluts s cock, and I bet he's ready to blow a load right across our faces. Especially" and she paused she slowly wet her slim index finger with her wet, red mouth "if they're both playing with his a time." Lisa's hand joined Tera's, and I felt her delicate finger worm its way into my asshole, s beside Tera's. Both fingers rubbed at my prostate, while I looked down to see both faces lap

"Oh fuuuuck" I moaned. I felt my wife go deep on my cock a few more times, then push it tov slut. "Quick, he's going to cum soon, Tera!" my wife implored. "Suck him off, bitch. Suck him over us." Lisa's used her free hand to grab Tera roughly by the hair and push her face down cock, the brunette's warm slippery mouth engulfing my dick Their fingers moved in unison in sliding easily in and out of my tight ring. Overcome with lust, I grabbed both women roughly pushing their heads together as I started pumping my hips at their faces and forcing my coc Tera's mouth

"Come on you whores, suck my cock," I moaned. "Pump your fingers in my ass and suck my load all over your beautiful fucking faces." Their slim fingers continued to work at my rectum was within seconds of blowing another load. I released my wife's hair with one hand and, pu Tera's red mouth, pumped it hard above their upturned faces. "Oh fuck, I'm gonna cum" I mo Tera's hair tightly in one hand as I jacked my cock in the other. Their fingers continued to pu butthole and I could feel my cum starting to rise.

"Oh fuuuuuck meeeee," I wailed. "I'm gonna blow a load across your hot fucking faces while With one last stroke, I felt my balls tighten and erupt, my ass constricting around the girls' fir after jet of sperm shot out of my dick and landed in streams across the women. "Ohhhhhh, f moaned, my hand pumping my rock hard dick as I emptied my nuts across the brunettes kn after stream of spunk landed across their cheeks, noses and hair until with one last final stro was empty.

Slowly, I regained awareness of where I was, and looked down to see my wife and her frien their faces streaked with my cum as they licked their lips to catch any drips sliding by their m to each other, they leaned in and kissed, their tongues pushing into each others mouths, sha their tongues while their fingers were stilled joined in my throbbing rectum. Breaking away fr their tongues gently explored the others lips and cheeks, licking up any remaining sperm an

"Fuck I love sharing your hot spunk with another bitch" my wife smiled up at me, white globs hanging on her cheeks and in her hair. Turning back to my cock, Lisa took my softening dick and sucked it into her mouth, letting it slowly roll around her warm tongue before she passed she did, she slowly slipped her finger out of my ass and I felt the dancer's finger follow. Lisa to her feet, wrapped her arms around me and kissed me deeply.

"How'd you like that, honey?" she smiled. "Bet ya didn't think when we went into the strip clu going to end the afternoon by spraying your cock across two beautiful sluts while they each your ass, did you?"

"That's certainly a first" I replied, still enjoying the feeling of the stripper's mouth slowly clean cock. "We should do that again some time."

Lisa smiled back at me. "Something tells me we will."

|| namo tassa bhagavato arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa ||

lokanÄ«ti

1. paá¹‡á¸• itakaá¹‡á¸• o

<1> á¹• 21 lokanÄ«tiá¹ƒ \Be 1/ pavakkhÄ• mi, nÄ• nÄ• satthasamuddhaá¹-aá¹ƒ.

mÄ• gadheneva saá¹…khepaá¹ƒ,

vanditvÄ• ratanatthayaá¹ƒ ||

<2> á¹• 21 nÄ«tiloke purisassa sÄ• ro, mÄ• tÄ• pitÄ• Ä• cariyoca mitto.

tasmÄ• hi nÄ«tiá¹ƒ puriso vijaÃ±Ã±Ä• ,

Ã±Ä• á¹‡Ä« mahÄ• hoti bahussutoca ||

<3> á¹• 21 alasassa kuto sippaá¹ƒ, asippassa kuto dhanaá¹ƒ.

adhanassa kuto mittaá¹ƒ,

amittassa kuto sukhaá¹ƒ.

asukhassa \Be 2/ kuto puÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ,

apuÃ±Ã±assa kuto varaá¹ƒ ||

<4> á¹• 21 sippÄ• samaá¹ƒ dhanaá¹ƒ natthi, sippaá¹ƒ corÄ• nagaá¹‡hare.

idha loke sippaá¹ƒ mittaá¹ƒ,

paraloke sukhÄ• vahaá¹ƒ ||

<5> á¹• 21 appakaá¹ƒ nÄ• timaÃ±Ã±eyya, citte sutaá¹ƒ nidhÄ• paye.

vammikodakabindÅ«va,

cirena paripÅ«rati ||

<6> á¹• 21 khuddoti nÄ• timaÃ±Ã±eyya, vijjaá¹ƒ vÄ• sippameva vÄ• .

ekampi pariyodÄ• taá¹ƒ,

jÄ«vitakappakÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ ||

<7> á¹• 21 sele sele na mÄ• á¹‡ikaá¹ƒ, gaje gaje na muttikaá¹ƒ.

vane vane na candanaá¹ƒ,

á¹-hÄ• ne á¹-hÄ• ne na paá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ ||

<8> á¹• 21 paá¹‡á¸• ito sutasampanno, yattha atthÄ«ti ce suto.

mahussÄ• hena \Be 3/ taá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ,

gantabbaá¹ƒva sutesinÄ• ||

<9> á¹• 21 sine sippaá¹ƒ sine dhanaá¹ƒ, sine pabbatamÄ• ruhaá¹ƒ.

sine kÄ• massa kodhassa,

ime paÃ±ca sine sine ||

<10> á¹• 21 suti sammuti saá¹…khyÄ• ca, yogÄ• nÄ«ti visesakÄ• .

gandhabbÄ• gaá¹‡ikÄ• ceva,

dhanu bedÄ• ca pÅ«raá¹‡Ä• ||

<11> á¹• 21 tikicchÄ• itihÄ• sÄ• ca,

joti mÄ• yÄ• ca chandati.

ketu mantÄ• ca saddÄ• ca,

sippÄ• á¹-á¹-hÄ• rasakÄ• ime ||

<12> á¹• 21 apuá¹-á¹-ho paá¹‡á¸• ito bherÄ«, pajjunno me hoti pucchito.

bÄ• lo puá¹-á¹-ho apuá¹-á¹-hopi,

bahumpi bhaá¹‡ate sadÄ• ||

<13> á¹• 21 potthakesu ca yaá¹ƒ sippaá¹ƒ, parahatthesu yaá¹ƒ dhanaá¹ƒ.

yathÄ• kicce \Be 4/ samuppanne,

na taá¹ƒ sippaá¹ƒ na taá¹ƒ dhanaá¹ƒ ||

<14> á¹• 21 jalappamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kumuddanÄ• laá¹ƒ, kulappamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ vinayo pamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ.

byattippamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ kathÄ«tavÄ• kyaá¹ƒ,

pathaviyÄ• pamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ tiá¹‡a milÄ• taá¹ƒ ||

<15> á¹• 21 appassuto sutaá¹ƒ appaá¹ƒ, bahuá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±ati mÄ• navÄ• .

sindhÅ«dakaá¹ƒ apassanto,

kÅ«pe toyaá¹ƒva maá¹‡á¸• uko ||

<16> á¹• 21 pathamaá¹ƒ parÄ• jaye sippaá¹ƒ, dutiyaá¹ƒ parÄ• jaye dhanaá¹ƒ.

tatiyaá¹ƒ parÄ• jaye dhammaá¹ƒ,

catutthaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ karissati ||

<17> á¹• 21 byatta putra kimalaso, abyatto bhÄ• rahÄ• rako.

byattako pÅ«jito loke,

byatta putra dine dine ||

<18> á¹• 21 mÄ• tÄ• verÄ« pitÄ• satru, kena bÄ• le na sikkhitÄ• .

sabhÄ• majjhe \Be 5/ na sobhanti,

haá¹ƒsamajjhe bakoyathÄ• ||

<19> á¹• 21 kaá¹‡á¹-akaá¹ƒ giri ko tikkhati, ko aÃ±janaá¹ƒ migakkhikaá¹ƒ.

uppathaá¹ƒ pallale ko sugandhaá¹ƒ,

kula-putta-rÅ«po ko pavattati.

sÄ• maá¹ƒ-bhÄ• vo ||

<20> á¹• 21 na rasaá¹ƒ akotambulaá¹ƒ, adhanassa, laá¹…katampi.

alonakantu byaÃ±janaá¹ƒ,

byÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ asippassa ||

<21> á¹• 21 sussusÄ• sutasampanno, sutÄ• paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya pavaá¸• á¸• hati.

paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya atthaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• ti,

Ã±Ä• to attho sukhÄ• vaho ||

<22> á¹• 21 bhojanaá¹ƒ methunaá¹ƒ niddÄ• , goá¹‡e posepi vijjati.

vijjÄ• viseso posassa,

taá¹ƒ hÄ«no gosamo bhave ||

<23> á¹• 21 natthi vijjÄ• samaá¹ƒmittaá¹ƒ, naca byÄ• dhisamo ripu.

naca \Be 6/ attasamaá¹ƒ pemaá¹ƒ,

naca kammasamaá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ ||

<24> á¹• 21 haá¹ƒso majjhe na kÄ• kÄ• naá¹ƒ, sÄ«ho gunnaá¹ƒ na sobhate.

gadrabhamajjhe turaá¹…go,

bÄ• lamajjhe ca paá¹‡á¸• ito ||

<25> á¹• 21 yÄ• vajÄ«vampi ce bÄ• lo,

paá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ payirupÄ• sati.

na so dhammaá¹ƒ vijÄ• nÄ• ti,

dabbi sÅ«parasaá¹ƒ yathÄ• ||

<26> á¹• 21 muhuttamapi ce viÃ±Ã±Å«,

paá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ payirupÄ• sati.

khippaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ vijÄ• nÄ• ti,

jivhÄ• sÅ«parasaá¹ƒ yathÄ• ||

<27> á¹• 21 vinÄ• satthaá¹ƒ na gaccheyya, sÅ«ro saá¹…gÄ• mabhÅ«miyaá¹ƒ.

paá¹‡á¸• itvÄ• ddhagÅ« vÄ• á¹‡ijo,

videsagamano tathÄ• ||

<28> á¹• 21 dhananÄ• saá¹ƒ manotÄ• paá¹ƒ, ghare duccaritÄ• ni ca.

vaÃ±canaÃ±ca \Be 7/ avamÄ• naá¹ƒ,

paá¹‡á¸• ito na pakÄ• saye ||

<29> á¹• 21 pattÄ• nurÅ«pakaá¹ƒ vÄ• kyaá¹ƒ, sabhÄ• varÅ«pakaá¹ƒ piyaá¹ƒ.

attÄ• nurÅ«pakaá¹ƒ kodhaá¹ƒ,

yo jÄ• nÄ• ti sa paá¹‡á¸• ito ||

<30> á¹• 21 a-dhanassa rasaá¹ƒ khÄ• dÄ• , a-balassa hathÄ• narÄ• .

a-paÃ±Ã±assa vÄ• kya-kathÄ• ,

ummattaka-samÄ• ime ||

<31> á¹• 21 anavhÄ• yaá¹ƒ gamayanto,

a-pucchÄ• bahu-bhÄ• sako.

atta-guá¹‡aá¹ƒ pakÄ• sento,

ti-vidhaá¹ƒ hÄ«na-lakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ||

<32> á¹• 21 appa-rÅ«po bahuá¹ƒ bhÄ• so, appa-paÃ±Ã±o pakÄ• sito.

appa-pÅ«ro ghaá¹-o khobhe,

appa-khÄ«rÄ• gÄ• vÄ« cathe ||

<33> á¹• 21 maá¹‡á¸• Å«kepi ukre sÄ«he,

kÄ• kaggahe piye piye.

a-paá¹‡á¸• Ä«pi \Be 8/ paá¹‡á¸• Ä« hutvÄ• ,

dhÄ«rÄ• pucche vaye vaye ||

<34> á¹• 21 maá¹‡á¸• Å«kepi ukre sÄ«he,

sÅ«karepi uhe dÄ«pe.

biá¸·Ä• re sadise byagghe,

sabba dhÄ«re sippa-same ||

<35> á¹• 21 na titti rÄ• jÄ• dhanamhi, paá¹‡á¸• itopi su-bhÄ• site.

cakkhuá¹ƒpi piya-dassane,

jale sÄ• garo na titti ||

<36> á¹• 21 rÅ«pa-yobbana-sampannÄ• , visÄ• tha-kutha-sambhavÄ• .

vijjÄ• -hÄ«nÄ• na sobhanti,

nigandhÄ• iva kiá¹ƒsukÄ• ||

<37> á¹• 21 hÄ«ne putto rÄ• jÄ• macco, bÄ• la-putto ca paá¹‡á¸• ito.

a-dhanassa dhanaá¹ƒ bahu,

purisÄ• naá¹ƒ na maÃ±Ã±atha ||

<38> á¹• 21 yo sippa-lobhena, bahuá¹ƒ gaá¹‡hÄ• ti taá¹ƒ sippaá¹ƒ.

mÅ«gova \Be 9/ supinaá¹ƒ passaá¹ƒ,

kathetumpi na ussahe ||

<39> á¹• 21 bhijjetuá¹ƒ kumbhakÄ• ro, sobhetuá¹ƒ kumbha ghaá¹-á¹-ati.

na khipituá¹ƒ apÄ• yesu,

sissÄ• naá¹ƒ vuá¸• á¸• hi-kÄ• raá¹‡Ä• ||

<40> á¹• 21 taggaraÃ±ca palÄ• sena, yo naro upanayhati.

pattÄ• pi surabhi vÄ• yanti,

evaá¹ƒ dhÄ«rÅ«pasevanÄ• ||

paá¹‡á¸• itakaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

sujanakaá¹‡á¸• o

<41> á¹• 21 sabbhireva samÄ• setha, sabbhi kubbetha santhavaá¹ƒ.

sataá¹ƒ saddhammamaÃ±Ã±Ä• ya,

seyyo hoti na pÄ• piyo ||

<42> á¹• 21 caja dujjana saá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ, bhaja sÄ• dhu samÄ• gamaá¹ƒ.

kara puÃ±Ã±amahorattiá¹ƒ,

sara niccamaniccataá¹ƒ ||

<43> á¹• 21 yathÄ• \Be 10/ udumbarapakkÄ• , bahirattakamevaca.

anto kimÄ«hi sampuá¹‡á¹‡Ä• ,

evaá¹ƒ dujjanahaddayÄ• ||

<44> á¹• 21 yathÄ• pi panasÄ• pakkÄ• , bahi kaá¹‡á¸• akameva ca.

anto amatasampannÄ• ,

evaá¹ƒ sujanahadayÄ• ||

<45> á¹• 21 sukkhopi candanataru na jahÄ• ti gandhaá¹ƒ, nÄ• go gato naramukhe na jahÄ• ti lÄ«á¸·aá¹ƒ.

yantÄ• gato madhurasaá¹ƒ na jahÄ• ti ucchu,

dukkhopi paá¹‡á¸• itajano na jahÄ• ti dhammaá¹ƒ ||

<46> á¹• 21 sÄ«ho nÄ• ma jighacchÄ• pi, paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• dÄ«ni na khÄ• dati.

sÄ«ho nÄ• ma kisocÄ• pi,

nÄ• gamaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ na khÄ• dati ||

<47> á¹• 21 kula-jÄ• to kula-putto, kula-vaá¹ƒsa-surakkhato.

attanÄ• dukkha-pattopi,

hÄ«na-kammaá¹ƒ na kÄ• raye ||

<48> á¹• 21 candanaá¹ƒ \Be 11/ sÄ«talaá¹ƒ loke, tato candaá¹ƒva sÄ«talaá¹ƒ.

canda-candanasÄ«tamhÄ• ,

sÄ• dhu vÄ• kyaá¹ƒ subhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ ||

<49> á¹• 21 udeyya bhÄ• á¹‡u pacchime, merurÄ• jÄ• nameyyapi.

sÄ«talÄ• narakaggipi,

pabbatagge ca uppalaá¹ƒ ||

vikase na viparÄ«taá¹ƒ,

sÄ• dhuvÄ• yyaá¹ƒ kudÄ• canaá¹ƒ ||

<50> á¹• 21 sukhÄ• rukkhassa chÄ• yÄ• va, tato Ã±Ä• ti mÄ• tÄ• pitu.

tato Ä• cariyo raÃ±Ã±o,

tato buddhassanekadhÄ• ||

<51> á¹• 21 bhamarÄ• pupphamicchanti, guá¹‡amicchanti sujanÄ• .

makkhikÄ• pÅ«timicchanti,

dosamicchanti dujjanÄ• ||

<52> á¹• 21 mÄ• tÄ• hÄ«nassa dubbhÄ• sÄ• , pitÄ• hÄ«nassa dukriyÄ• .

ubho \Be 12/ mÄ• tÄ• pitÄ• hÄ«nÄ• ,

dubbhasÄ• ca dukÄ«riyÄ• ||

<53> á¹• 21 mÄ• tÄ• seá¹-á¹-hassa subhÄ• sÄ• , pitÄ• seá¹-á¹-hassa sukriyÄ• .

ubho mÄ• tÄ• pitÄ• seá¹-á¹-hÄ• ,

subhÄ• sÄ• ca sukÄ«riyÄ• ||

<54> á¹• 21 saá¹…gÄ• me sÅ«ra-micchanti, mantÄ«su akÅ«tÅ«halaá¹ƒ.

piyaÃ±ca annapÄ• nesu,

atthe jÄ• te ca paá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ ||

<55> á¹• 21 sunakho sunakhaá¹ƒ disvÄ• , dantaá¹ƒ dasseti hiá¹ƒsituá¹ƒ.

dujjano sujanaá¹ƒ disvÄ• ,

rosayaá¹ƒ hiá¹ƒsamicchati ||

<56> á¹• 21 mÄ• ca vegena kiccÄ• ni, karosi kÄ• rÄ• pesi vÄ• .

sahasÄ• kÄ• ritaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ,

mando pacchÄ• nutappati ||

<57> á¹• 21 kodhaá¹ƒ vihitvÄ• na kadÄ• cinasoce, makkhappahÄ• naá¹ƒ isayo avaá¹‡á¹‡ayuá¹ƒ.

sabbesa \Be 13/ phÄ• rusa-vacaá¹ƒ khametha,

etaá¹ƒ khantiá¹ƒ uttamamÄ• hu santo ||

<58> á¹• 21 dukkho nivÄ• so sambÄ• dhe, á¹-hÄ• ne asucisaá¹…kate.

tato arimhi appiye,

tatopi akataÃ±Ã±unÄ• ||

<59> á¹• 21 ovÄ• deyyÄ• nusÄ• seyya, gÄ• pakÄ• ca nivÄ• raye.

sataÃ±hi so piyo hoti,

asataá¹ƒ hoti appiyo ||

<60> á¹• 21 uttamattanivÄ• tena, sÅ«raá¹ƒ bhedena nijjaye.

nÄ«caá¹ƒ appaka dÄ• nena,

vÄ«riyena samaá¹ƒ jaye ||

<61> á¹• 21 na visaá¹ƒ visamiccÄ• hu, dhanaá¹ƒ saá¹…ghassa uccate.

visaá¹ƒ ekaá¹ƒva hanati,

sabbaá¹ƒ saá¹…ghassa santakaá¹ƒ ||

<62> á¹• 21 javane bhadraá¹ƒ jÄ• nanti, baliddaÃ±ca vÄ• henÄ• .

duhena \Be 14/ dhenuá¹ƒ jÄ• nanti,

bhÄ• samÄ• nena paá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ ||

<63> á¹• 21 dhanamappampi sÄ• dhÅ«naá¹ƒ, kÅ«pe vÄ• riva nissayo.

bahuá¹ƒ api asÄ• dhÅ«naá¹ƒ,

naca vÄ• rÄ«va aá¹‡á¹‡ave ||

<64> á¹• 21 najjo pivanti no Ä• paá¹ƒ, rukkhÄ• khÄ• danti no phalaá¹ƒ.

vassanti kvaci no meghÄ• ,

paratthÄ• ya sataá¹ƒ dhanaá¹ƒ ||

<65> á¹• 21 apattheyyaá¹ƒ na pattheyya, a cinteyyaá¹ƒ na cintaye.

dhammameva sucinteyya,

kÄ• laá¹ƒ moghaá¹ƒ na accaye ||

<66> á¹• 21 acintitampi bhavati, cintitampi vinassati.

na hi cintÄ• mayÄ• bhogÄ• ,

itthiyÄ• purisassavÄ• ||

<67> á¹• 21 asantassa piyo hoti, sante na kurute piyaá¹ƒ.

asataá¹ƒ \Be 15/ dhammaá¹ƒ roceti,

taá¹ƒ parÄ• bhavato mukhaá¹ƒ ||

sujanakaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

4. bÄ• ladujjanakaá¹‡á¸• o

<68> á¹• 21 atippiyo na kÄ• tabbo, khalo kotÅ«halaá¹ƒ karo.

sirasÄ• vahyamÄ• nopi,

aá¸• á¸• hapÅ«ro ghaá¹-o yathÄ• ||

<69> á¹• 21 sappo duá¹-á¹-ho khalo duá¹-á¹-ho, sappo duá¹-á¹-hataro khalo.

mantosadhehi so sappo,

khalo kenupasammati ||

<70> á¹• 21 yo bÄ• lo maÃ±Ã±ati bÄ• lyaá¹ƒ, paá¹‡á¸• ito vÄ• pi tena so.

bÄ• lova paá¹‡á¸• itamÄ• nÄ«,

so ve bÄ• loti vuccati ||

<71> á¹• 21 madhuá¹ƒva maÃ±Ã±atÄ« bÄ• lo, yÄ• va pÄ• paá¹ƒ na paccati.

yadÄ• ca \Be 16/ paccatÄ« pÄ• paá¹ƒ,

atha dukkhaá¹ƒ nigacchati ||

<72> á¹• 21 na sÄ• dhu balavÄ• bÄ• lo, sahasÄ• vindate dhanaá¹ƒ.

kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• duppaÃ±Ã±o,

nirayaá¹ƒ sopapajjati ||

<73> á¹• 21 ghare duá¹-á¹-ho ca mÅ«sÄ«ko ca, vane duá¹-á¹-ho ca vÄ• naro.

sakuá¹‡e ca duá¹-á¹-ho kÄ• ko,

nare duá¹-á¹-hoca brÄ• hmaá¹‡o ||

<74> á¹• 21 dÄ«ghÄ• jÄ• garato ratti, dÄ«ghaá¹ƒ santassa yojanaá¹ƒ.

dÄ«gho bÄ• lÄ• na saá¹ƒsÄ• ro,

saddhammaá¹ƒ a-vijÄ• nataá¹ƒ ||

<75> á¹• 21 tila mattaá¹ƒ paresaá¹ƒva, appa dosaÃ±ca passati.

nÄ• á¸·ikerampi sadosaá¹ƒ,

khala-jÄ• to na passati ||

<76> á¹• 21 nattadosaá¹ƒ pare jaÃ±Ã±Ä• , jaÃ±Ã±Ä• dosaá¹ƒ parassatu.

guyhe \Be 17/ kummo aá¹…gÄ• ni,

para dosaÃ±ca lakkhaye ||

<77> á¹• 21 paá¹‡á¸• itassa pasaá¹ƒsÄ• ya, daá¹‡á¸• o bÄ• lena dÄ«yate.

paá¹‡á¸• ito paá¹‡á¸• iteneva,

vaá¹‡á¹‡itova suvaá¹‡á¹‡ito ||

<78> á¹• 21 luddhaá¹ƒ atthena gaá¹‡heyya, thaddhaá¹ƒ aÃ±jali kammunÄ• .

chandÄ• nuvattiyÄ• mÅ«á¸·haá¹ƒ,

yathÄ• bhÅ«tena paá¹‡á¸• itaá¹ƒ ||

bÄ• ladujjanakaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

4. mittakaá¹‡á¸• o

<79> á¹• 21 hitakÄ• ro paro bandhu, bandhÅ«pi ahito paro.

a hito dehajo byÄ• dhi,

hitaá¹ƒ araÃ±Ã±amosadhaá¹ƒ ||

<80> á¹• 21 parokkhe guá¹‡a-hantÄ• raá¹ƒ, paccakkhe piyavÄ• dinaá¹ƒ.

vajjeyya \Be 18/ tÄ• disaá¹ƒ mittaá¹ƒ,

visakumbhe yathÄ• madhuá¹ƒ ||

<81> á¹• 21 dhanahÄ«ne caje mitto, puttadÄ• rÄ• sahodarÄ• .

dhanavantaá¹ƒva sevanti,

dhanaá¹ƒ loke mahÄ• sakhÄ• ||

<82> á¹• 21 jÄ• neyya pesena bhaccaá¹ƒ, bandhuá¹ƒ vÄ• pi bhayÄ• gate.

appakÄ• su tathÄ• mittaá¹ƒ,

dÄ• raÃ±ca vibhavakkhaye ||

<83> á¹• 21 so bandhu yo hite yutto, pitaro honti posako.

taá¹ƒ mittaá¹ƒ yattha vissÄ• so,

sÄ• bhariyÄ• ca yassa nibbÅ«ti ||

<84> á¹• 21 na vissase a-vissattaá¹ƒ, mittaÃ±cÄ• pi na vissase.

kadÄ• ci kupito mito,

sabbaá¹ƒ dosaá¹ƒ pakÄ• saye ||

<85> á¹• 21 sakiá¹ƒ duá¹-á¹-haÃ±ca yo mittaá¹ƒ, puna sandhitumicchati.

so \Be 19/ maccuá¹ƒ upagaá¹‡hÄ• ti,

gabbhamassatarÄ« yathÄ• ||

<86> á¹• 21 vahe a-mittaá¹ƒ khandhena, yÄ• va kÄ• lo anÄ• gato.

tameva Ä• gate kÄ• le,

sele bhinde ghaá¹-aá¹ƒ iva ||

<87> á¹• 21 iá¹‡aseso aggiseso, satruseso tatheva ca.

punappunaá¹ƒ vivaá¸• á¸• hanti,

tasmÄ• sesaá¹ƒ na kÄ• raye ||

<88> á¹• 21 padumaá¹ƒva mukhaá¹ƒ yassa, vÄ• cÄ• candana sÄ«talÄ• .

tÄ• disaá¹ƒ nopaseveyya,

hadayetu halÄ• halaá¹ƒ ||

<89> á¹• 21 na seve pharusaá¹ƒ sÄ• miá¹ƒ, naca seveyya maccharia¹ƒ.

tato apaggaá¹‡haá¹ƒ sÄ• miá¹ƒ,

neva niggahitaá¹ƒ tato ||

<90> á¹• 21 siá¹…gÄ« paÃ±Ã±Ä• sa hatthena, vajje satena vÄ• jinaá¹ƒ.

hatthiá¹ƒ \Be 20/ dantiá¹ƒ sahassena,

desa cÄ• gena dujjanaá¹ƒ ||

<91> á¹• 21 kudesaÃ±ca kumittaÃ±ca, kukulaÃ±ca kubandhavaá¹ƒ.

kudÄ• raÃ±ca kudÄ• saÃ±ca,

dÅ«rato parivajjaye ||

<92> á¹• 21 rogÄ• ture ca dubbhikkhe, byasane sattu viggahe.

rÄ• jadvÄ• re susÄ• ne ca,

ye tiá¹-á¹-hanti sumittakÄ• ||

<93> á¹• 21 sÄ«tavÄ• co bahumitto, pharuso appamittako.

upamaá¹ƒ ettha Ã±Ä• tabbÄ• ,

canda-sÅ«riya-rÄ• jÅ«naá¹ƒ ||

mittakaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

5. itthikaá¹‡á¸• o

<94> á¹• 21 kokilÄ• naá¹ƒ saddaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, nÄ• rÄ«rÅ«paá¹ƒ patibbatÄ• .

vijjÄ• \Be 21/ rÅ«paá¹ƒ a-rÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ,

khamÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ tapassinaá¹ƒ ||

<95> á¹• 21 itthÄ«naÃ±ca dhanaá¹ƒ rÅ«paá¹ƒ, purisÄ• naá¹ƒ vijjÄ• dhanaá¹ƒ.

bhikkhÅ«naÃ±ca dhanaá¹ƒ sÄ«laá¹ƒ, rÄ• jÄ• naÃ±ca dhanaá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ ||

<96> á¹• 21 tapassino kisÄ• sobhÄ• , thÅ«lÄ• sobhÄ• catuppadÄ• .

purisÄ• vijjavÄ• sobhÄ• ,

itthÄ« sobhÄ• sa sÄ• mikÄ• ||

<97> á¹• 21 paÃ±ca ratyÄ• sugandhabbÄ• , satta ratyÄ• dhanuggahÄ• .

eka mÄ• sÄ• subhariyÄ• ,

aá¸• á¸• ha mÄ• sÄ• sissÄ• malÄ• ||

<98> á¹• 21 hiá¹ƒ ramati paá¹…a, haá¹…a ramati poka ||

thÄ« ramati pu,

khu ramati dhaá¹ƒ ||

<99> á¹• 21 jiá¹‡á¹‡amannaá¹ƒ pasaá¹ƒseyya, dÄ• raÃ±ca gatayobbanaá¹ƒ.

raá¹‡Ä• punÄ• gatÄ• sÅ«raá¹ƒ,

sassaÃ±ca gehamÄ• gataá¹ƒ ||

<100> á¹• 21 dvatti-patikÄ• \Be 22/ nÄ• rÄ« ca, bhikkhu dvatti-vihÄ• riko.

dvatti-pÄ• sa-mutto pakkhÄ«,

kata-mÄ• yÄ• bahÅ«tharaá¹ƒ ||

<101> á¹• 21 dujjanaá¹ƒ pahÄ• rÄ• dame, mittaá¹ƒ dame a-bhÄ• á¹‡ikÄ• .

itthiÃ±ca byasanÄ• dame,

rÄ• ginaá¹ƒ appa bhojanÄ• ||

<102> á¹• 21 na ratti vinÄ• candimÄ• , vÄ«ciá¹ƒ vinÄ• ca aá¹‡á¹‡avo.

haá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ vinÄ• pokkharaá¹‡Ä«,

patiá¹ƒ kaÃ±Ã±Ä• ca sobhate ||

<103> á¹• 21 patinÄ• janito bhogo, itthiyÄ• va saá¹ƒgoppito.

purisova hi padhÄ• no,

itthÄ« suttaá¹ƒva sÅ«ciyÄ• ||

<104> á¹• 21 sabbÄ• nadÄ« vaá¹…kanadÄ«, sabbe kaá¹-á¹-hamayÄ• vanÄ• .

sabbitthiyo kare pÄ• paá¹ƒ, labhamÄ• ne nivÄ• take ||

<105> á¹• 21 vivÄ• dasÄ«liá¹ƒ \Be 23/ usÅ«yabhÄ• á¹‡iniá¹ƒ, sampassataá¹‡hiá¹ƒ bahupÄ• kabhuttiniá¹ƒ.

aggantabhuttiá¹ƒ paragehavÄ• siniá¹ƒ,

nÄ• riá¹ƒ caje puttasatampi pÅ«mÄ• ||

<106> á¹• 21 bhuttesu maá¹‡á¸• esu janÄ«va kantinÄ«, guyheca á¹-hÄ• ne bhaginÄ«va hiriá¹‡Ä«.

kammesu pattesu karoti dÄ• sÄ«va,

bhayesu mantÄ« sayanesu rÄ• maye.

rÅ«pÄ«su sikkhÄ« kupanesu khantinÄ«, sÄ• nÄ• rÄ« seá¹-á¹-hÄ• ti vadanti paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• .

kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• ca divebhaveyya sÄ• ||

<107> á¹• 21 sÄ• mÄ• migakkhÄ« tanumajjhagattÄ• , sÅ«rÅ« sukesÄ« samadantapantÄ«.

gambhÄ«ranÄ• bhÄ« yuvatÄ« susÄ«lÄ«,

hÄ«ne kule jÄ• tÄ• pi vivÄ• hyÄ• ||

<108> á¹• 21 saradaá¹ƒratu-kÄ• lÄ• naá¹ƒ, bhariyÄ• naá¹ƒ rÅ«pavatÄ«.

jeá¹-á¹-ho padhÄ• naá¹ƒ puttÄ• naá¹ƒ,

disÄ• naá¹ƒ uttarÄ• disÄ• ||

<109> á¹• 21 yÄ• icche puriso hotuá¹ƒ,

jÄ• ti jÄ• ti punappunaá¹ƒ.

sÄ• mikaá¹ƒ \Be 24/ apacÄ• yeyya,

indaá¹ƒva pÄ• ricÄ• rikÄ• ||

<110> á¹• 21 yo icche puriso hotuá¹ƒ,

jÄ• ti jÄ• ti punappunaá¹ƒ.

paradÄ• naá¹ƒ vivajjeyya,

dhotapÄ• dova kaddamaá¹ƒ ||

<111> á¹• 21 atikkanta vayo poso,

Ä• neti timbaruttaniá¹ƒ.

tassÄ• issÄ• asaddhÄ• ti,

taá¹ƒ parÄ• bhavato mukhaá¹ƒ ||

itthikaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

6. rÄ• jakaá¹‡á¸• o

<112> á¹• 21 ekayÄ• maá¹ƒ saye rÄ• jÄ• , dviyÄ• maÃ±Ã±eva paá¹‡á¸• ito.

gharÄ• vÄ• so tiyÄ• maá¹ƒva,

catuyÄ• maá¹ƒ tu yÄ• cako ||

<113> á¹• 21 dhanavÄ• sutavÄ• rÄ• jÄ• , nadÄ« vejjo cimepaÃ±ca.

yattha \Be 25/ dese na vijjanti,

na tattha divasaá¹ƒ vase ||

<114> á¹• 21 yasmiá¹ƒ padese na mÄ• no,

na pemaá¹ƒ naca bandhavÄ• .

naca vijjÄ• gamo koci,

na tattha divasaá¹ƒ vase ||

<115> á¹• 21 aputtakaá¹ƒ gharaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ, raá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ arÄ• jakaá¹ƒ.

a sippassa mukhaá¹ƒ suÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ,

sabba suÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ daliddakÄ• ||

<116> á¹• 21 dhanamiccheyya vÄ• á¹‡ijjo, vijjamicche bhajesutaá¹ƒ.

puttamicche taruá¹‡itthiá¹ƒ,

rÄ• jÄ• maccaá¹ƒ vasaá¹ƒ game ||

<117> á¹• 21 naá¹-á¹-hoyati asantuá¹-á¹-ho, santuá¹-á¹-ho ca mahÄ«pati.

lajjÄ• ca gaá¹‡ikÄ• naá¹-á¹-hÄ• ,

nillajjÄ• kuladhÄ«tikÄ• ||

<118> á¹• 21 pakkhÄ«naá¹ƒ balamÄ• kÄ• so, macchÄ• namudakaá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ.

dubbalassa \Be 26/ balaá¹ƒ rÄ• jÄ• ,

kumÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ rudaá¹ƒ balaá¹ƒ ||

<119> á¹• 21 khamÄ• jÄ• gariyuá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ, saá¹ƒvibhÄ• go dayikkhaá¹‡Ä• .

nÄ• yakassa guá¹‡Ä• ete,

icchitabbÄ• sataá¹ƒ guá¹‡Ä• ||

<120> á¹• 21 sakiá¹ƒ vadanti rÄ• jÄ• no, sakiá¹ƒ samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• .

sakiá¹ƒ sappurisÄ• loke,

esa dhammo sanantano ||

<121> á¹• 21 alaso gihÄ« kÄ• mabhogÄ« na sÄ• dhu, asaÃ±Ã±ato pabbajito na sÄ• dhu.

rÄ• jÄ• anisammakÄ• rÄ« na sÄ• dhu,

paá¹‡á¸• ito kodhano taá¹ƒpi na sÄ• dhu ||

<122> á¹• 21 bahavo yattha nettÄ• ro, sabbe paá¹‡á¸• itamÄ• nino.

sabbe mahattamicchanti,

tesaá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ vinassati ||

<123> á¹• 21 Ä• yaá¹ƒ khayaá¹ƒ sayaá¹ƒ jaÃ±Ã±Ä• , rÄ• jÄ• sayaá¹ƒ katÄ• kataá¹ƒ.

niggahe \Be 27/ niggahetabbaá¹ƒ,

paggahe paggahÄ• rahaá¹ƒ ||

<124> á¹• 21 piá¹-á¹-hitokkaá¹ƒ niseveyya, kucchinÄ• va hutÄ• sanaá¹ƒ.

sÄ• mikaá¹ƒ sabbabhÄ• gena,

paralokaá¹ƒ amohavÄ• ||

<125> á¹• 21 aggi Ä• po itthimÅ«á¸·ho, sappo rÄ• ja-kulÄ• nica.

apayantena gantabbÄ• ,

acceka-pÄ• á¹‡ahÄ• rakÄ• ||

<126> á¹• 21 paduá¹-á¹-ha-bhariya-saá¹ƒvÄ• so, paduá¹-á¹-ha citta dÄ• sako.

sa-sappe ca ghare vÄ• so,

maccu eva na saá¹ƒsayo ||

<127> á¹• 21 mÅ«á¸·ha sisso padesena, kunÄ• rÄ« bharaá¹‡ena ca.

asatÄ• sampayogena,

paá¹‡á¸• itoppavasÄ«dati ||

<128> á¹• 21 mÄ• tÄ• puttakaraá¹ƒ pÄ• paá¹ƒ, sissapÄ• paá¹ƒ gurukatÄ• .

rÄ• jÄ• \Be 28/ raá¹-á¹-hakaraá¹ƒ pÄ• paá¹ƒ,

rÄ• japÄ• paá¹ƒ purohito ||

<129> á¹• 21 akodhena jine kodhaá¹ƒ, asÄ• dhuá¹ƒ sÄ• dhunÄ• jine.

jine maccharią¹ƒ dÄ• nena, saccenÄ• lÄ«kavÄ• dinaá¹ƒ.

<130> á¹• 21 adantaá¹ƒ damanaá¹ƒ dÄ• naá¹ƒ, dÄ• naá¹ƒ sabbattha sÄ• dhakaá¹ƒ.

dÄ• nena piya vÄ• cÄ• ya, unnamanti namanti ca.

<131> á¹• 21 dÄ• naá¹ƒ sinehabhesajjaá¹ƒ, maccheraá¹ƒ dosanosadhaá¹ƒ.

dÄ• naá¹ƒ yasassÄ« bhesajjaá¹ƒ,

maccheraá¹ƒ kapaá¹‡osadhaá¹ƒ ||

<132> á¹• 21 bahÅ«namappasÄ• rÄ• naá¹ƒ, sÄ• maggiyÄ• jayaá¹ƒ jaye.

tiá¹‡ehi vattate yottaá¹ƒ,

tena nÄ• gopi bajjhate ||

<133> á¹• 21 sahÄ• yo asamatthopi, tejasÄ• kiá¹ƒkarissati.

nivÄ• te \Be 29/ jalito aggi,

sayame vÅ«pasampati ||

<134> á¹• 21 na raÃ±Ã±Ä• samakaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±je, kÄ• mabhogaá¹ƒ kudÄ• canaá¹ƒ.

Ä• kappaá¹ƒ rasa bhuttiá¹ƒvÄ• , mÄ• lÄ• gandha vilepanaá¹ƒ.

vatthaá¹ƒ sabbaalaá¹…kÄ• raá¹ƒ,

na raÃ±Ã±Ä• sadisaá¹ƒ kare ||

<135> á¹• 21 na me rÄ• jÄ• sakhÄ• hoti, na rÄ• jÄ• hoti methuno.

eso sÄ• miko mayhanti,

citte niá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ suthÄ• paye ||

<136> á¹• 21 nÄ• tidÅ«re bhaje raÃ±Ã±o, nÄ• ccÄ• sannopavÄ• take.

ujuke nÄ• tininne ca,

na bhaje uccamÄ• sane ||

chadose vajje sevako,

tiá¹-á¹-he aggiá¹ƒva saá¹ƒyato ||

<137> á¹• 21 guá¹‡Ä« sabbaÃ±Ã±u tulyopi, nasobhati anissayo.

anagghamopi \Be 30/ maá¹‡iseá¹-á¹-ho,

hemaá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya sobhati ||

rÄ• jakaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

7. pakiá¹‡á¹‡akakaá¹‡á¸• o

<138> á¹• 21 itthimisse kutosÄ«laá¹ƒ, maá¹ƒsa bhakkhe kutodayÄ• .

surÄ• pÄ• ne kutosaccaá¹ƒ, mahÄ• lobhe kutohirÄ«.

mahÄ• tande kutosippaá¹ƒ,

mahÄ• kodhe kutodhanaá¹ƒ ||

<139> á¹• 21 surÄ• yogo vikÄ• lo ca, samajja caraá¹‡Ä• lasaá¹ƒ.

khiá¸• á¸• Ä• dhutto pÄ• pamitto,

bhoganÄ• samukhÄ• ime ||

<140> á¹• 21 divÄ• nÄ• dikkhÄ• vattabbaá¹ƒ, ratto nÄ• vacanena ca.

saÃ±careyya bhayÄ• bhÄ«to,

vane vanacarÄ« yathÄ• ||

<141> á¹• 21 jÄ«vantÄ• pi matÄ• paÃ±ca,

byÄ• sena parikittitÄ• .

dukkhito \Be 31/ byÄ• dhitomÅ«á¸·ho,

iá¹‡avÄ• nityasevako ||

<142> á¹• 21 anÄ• gataá¹ƒ bhayaá¹ƒ disvÄ• ,

dÅ«rato parivajjaye.

Ä• gataÃ±ca bhayaá¹ƒ disvÄ• ,

a bhÄ«to hoti paá¹‡á¸• ito ||

<143> á¹• 21 niddÄ• luko pamattoca, sukhatto rogavÄ• laso.

mahiccho kammÄ• rÄ• moca,

satte te satthavajjitÄ• ||

<144> á¹• 21 duggataá¹ƒ gaccha he lÄ• bha, lÄ• bhÄ« lÄ• bhena pÅ«rati.

thale pavassa pajjunna,

sindhu Ä• pena pÅ«rati.

natthidaá¹ƒ kammappadhÄ• nakaá¹ƒ ||

<145> á¹• 21 na hi koci kate kicce, kattÄ• raá¹ƒ samupekkhate.

tasmÄ• sabbÄ• ni kiccÄ• ni,

sÄ• va sesena kÄ• raye ||

<146> á¹• 21 tÅ«laá¹ƒ sallahukaá¹ƒ loke, tato cÄ• palla-jÄ• tiko.

tato \Be 32/ vuá¸• á¸• ha manovÄ• do,

pamatto buddhasÄ• sane ||

<147> á¹• 21 pÄ• sÄ• á¹‡achattaá¹ƒ garukaá¹ƒ, tato devÄ• nacikkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ.

tato vuá¸• á¸• hÄ• namovÄ• do,

tato buddhassa sÄ• sanaá¹ƒ ||

<148> á¹• 21 kÄ• yassa dakkhiá¹‡a hattho, doso ettha kaniá¹-á¹-hako.

kaá¹‡á¹‡a ghÄ• nÄ• na-makkhÄ«naá¹ƒ,

vÄ• mo tu pÄ• da-pÄ• sako ||

<149> á¹• 21 tambÅ«lassa majjha patte, kuvero rakkhatÄ« sadÄ• .

mÅ«lamhi rakkhati yakkho, aggamhi kÄ• lakaá¹‡á¹‡ikÄ• .

tÄ• ni bhuÃ±jeyya chinditvÄ• ,

sirÄ« evaá¹ƒ pavaá¸• á¸• hati ||

<150> á¹• 21 sampuá¹‡á¹‡arakkho brahmÄ• va, accurakkho ca bissaá¹‡o.

tasmÄ• hi te pÅ«jayantu,

sadÄ• mÄ• nenti taá¹ƒ naraá¹ƒ ||

<151> á¹• 21 goá¹‡Ä• \Be 33/ hi sabbagihÄ«naá¹ƒ, posakÄ• bhogadÄ• yakÄ• .

tasmÄ• hi mÄ• tÄ• pitÅ«va,

mÄ• naye sakkareyya ca ||

<152> á¹• 21 yeca khÄ• danti gomaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ, mÄ• tu maá¹ƒsaá¹ƒva khÄ• dare.

matesu tesu gijjhÄ• naá¹ƒ,

dade sote ca vÄ• haye ||

<153> á¹• 21 gurusiddho sippÄ• rambho, ravi sokrÄ• ca majjhimo.

na sippo buddhacandaro,

sorÄ« aá¹…gÄ• ca maraá¹‡aá¹ƒ ||

<154> á¹• 21 aá¹-á¹-hamiyaá¹ƒ guruá¹ƒ hanti, sissaá¹ƒ hanti catuddasiá¹ƒ.

sippaá¹ƒ hanti dasa sippaá¹ƒ,

mÄ• tÄ• pitÄ• ca puá¹‡á¹‡amiá¹ƒ ||

<155> á¹• 21 nÄ• á¸·ikaá¹ƒ satta nabhuÃ±je, na lÄ• buá¹ƒ navamaá¹ƒ tathÄ• .

dvÄ• dasa prinnaá¹ƒ triminaá¹ƒ,

bhuÃ±je sippaá¹ƒ vinassati ||

<156> á¹• 21 ekaá¹ƒ \Be 34/ caje kulaatthaá¹ƒ, gÄ• massatthaá¹ƒ kuvaá¹ƒ caje.

gÄ• ma caje janapadatthaá¹ƒ,

attatthaá¹ƒ pathaviá¹ƒ caje ||

<157> á¹• 21 desaá¹ƒ ossajja gacchanti, sÄ«ho sappuriso gajo.

tattheva nidhanaá¹ƒ yanti,

kÄ• ko kÄ• puriso migo ||

<158> á¹• 21 yamhi padese na mÄ• no,

na pemaá¹ƒ na ca bandhavÄ• .

na ca vijjÄ• gÄ• ho koci,

na tattha vasanaá¹ƒ kare ||

<159> á¹• 21 caratyekena pÄ• dena, tiá¹-á¹-hatyekena paá¹‡á¸• ito.

a nisamma paraá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ,

na pubbamÄ• layaá¹ƒ jahe ||

<160> á¹• 21 dhana dhaÃ±Ã±a payogesu, tathÄ• vijjÄ• gamesu ca.

dÅ«tesu apacÄ• resu,

cajjÄ• lajjÄ• tadÄ• bhave ||

<161> á¹• 21 dvi \Be 35/ guá¹‡o thÄ«namÄ• hÄ• ro, buddhicÄ• pi catugguá¹‡o.

chagguá¹‡o hoti vÄ• yÄ• mo,

kÄ• motvaá¹-á¹-ha-guá¹‡o bhave ||

<162> á¹• 21 pabbe pabbe kamenucchu, visesarasavÄ• ggato.

tathÄ• sumettiko sÄ• dhu,

viparÄ«tova dujjano ||

<163> á¹• 21 kassako vÄ• á¹‡ijo macco, samaá¹‡o suta sÄ«lavÄ• .

tesu vipula jÄ• tesu,

raá¹-á¹-hampi vipulaá¹ƒ siyÄ• ||

<164> á¹• 21 asajjhÄ• ya malÄ• mantÄ• , anuá¹-á¹-hÄ• na malÄ• gharÄ• .

malaá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡assa kosajjaá¹ƒ,

pamÄ• do rakkhato malaá¹ƒ ||

<165> á¹• 21 hÄ«nÄ• naá¹ƒ gacchate vittaá¹ƒ, vÄ«rÄ• naá¹ƒ santakattanaá¹ƒ.

vadanti ca hÄ«nÄ• janÄ• ,

pubba-kammappadhÄ• nakÄ• ||

<166> á¹• 21 na \Be 36/ vadanti cevaá¹ƒdhÄ«rÄ• , vÄ• yamiá¹ƒsu sabbakamme.

na ce sijjhati taá¹ƒ kammaá¹ƒ,

a-phalaá¹ƒ eva ko doso ||

<167> á¹• 21 nÄ«caá¹ƒ kulaá¹ƒ nipaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ vÄ• , nirÅ«paá¹ƒ nibalaá¹ƒ samaá¹ƒ.

imaá¹ƒ kÄ• laá¹ƒ chuttakÄ• laá¹ƒ,

dhanameva visesakaá¹ƒ ||

pakiá¹‡á¹‡akakaá¹‡á¸• o niá¹-á¹-hito.

paá¹‡á¸• ito sujano kaá¹‡á¸• o, dujjano mitta-itthi ca.

rÄ• jÄ• pakiá¹‡á¹‡ako cÄ• ti,

satta-kaá¹‡á¸• a-vibhÅ«sitaá¹ƒ ||

visuddhÄ• cÄ• ra-therena, visuddhÄ• rÄ• ma-vÄ• sinÄ• .

sabba-kulÄ• namatthÄ• ya,

visodhitaá¹ƒ pathakkhaye ||

Beyond Good and Evil? A Buddhist Critique of Nietzsche
by David R. Loy
Asian Philosophy
Volume 6
March 1996
pp.37-57

ABSTRACT In what ways was Nietzsche right, from a Buddhist perspective, and where did he go wrong? Nietzsche understood how the distinction we make between this world and a higher spiritual realm serves our need for security, and he saw the bad faith in religious values motivated by this need. He did not perceive how his alternative, more aristocratic values, also reflects the same anxiety. Nietzsche realized how the search for truth is motivated by a sublimated desire for symbolic security; philosophy's attempt to create the world reflects the tyrannical will-to-power, becoming the most "spiritualized" version of the need to impose our will. Insofar as truth is our intellectual effort to grasp being symbolically, however, Nietzsche overlooks a different reversal of perspective which could convert the "bad infinite" of heroic will into the good infinite of disseminating play. What he considered the crown of his system -- eternal recurrence -- is actually its denouement. Having seen through the delusion of Being, Nietzsche still sought a Being within Becoming. Nietzsche is able to affirm the value of this moment only by making it recur eternally. Rather than the way to vanquish nihilism, will-to-power turns out to be pure nihilism, for nihilism is not the debacle of all meaning but our dread of that debacle and what we do to avoid it.

> Buddhism already has -- and this distinguishes it profoundly from Christianity--the self-deception of moral concepts behind it--it stands, in my language, beyond good and evil. (The Anti-Christ)[1]

Although Nietzsche viewed Buddhism as superior to Christianity, and went so far as to call eternal recurrence "the European form of Buddhism", he considered both religions nihilistic. Buddhism, which fights ressentiment, was a convenient whip for Christianity born out of ressentiment. Inasmuch as Buddhism attempts to view the world as it is, without the distortions of metaphysics, Nietzsche believed that it offers no moral interpretation of the suffering that necessarily attends the human condition: no one is responsible for that suffering. Yet this did not amount to a recommendation, for Buddhism is nonetheless a religion for the end and fatigue of a civilization, the consolation of weary spirits longing for a dreamless sleep.[2] Sakyamuni Buddha was not an Ubermensch.

Such a conclusion is not surprising for someone who learned his Buddhism largely through Schopenhauer. But we have learned much more about Buddhism since Nietzsche's day, enough to consider a Buddhist response: in what ways was Nietzsche right, from a Buddhist perspective, and where might he have gone wrong?

The answer is complex, of course, and there is much that Buddhists can learn from Nietzsche, the first postmodernist and still the most important one. In order to reach that answer, however, it will first be necessary to gain some understanding of anatman, the "no self" doctrine central to Buddhism and to the still-widespread misunderstanding of Buddhism as nihilistic. Of the various ways for us to approach anatman, one of the most insightful is through modern psychology. Buddhism anticipated its reluctant conclusions: guilt and anxiety are not adventitious but intrinsic to the ego. That is because our dissatisfaction with life derives from a repression even more immediate than death-terror: the suspicion that "I" am not real. For Buddhism, the sense-of-self is not some self-existing consciousness but a mental construction which experiences its own groundlessness as a lack. On this account, our most problematic dualism is not so much life fearing death as a fragile sense-of-self dreading its own no-thing- ness. By accepting and yielding to that groundlessness, however, I can discover that I have always been grounded, not as a self-present being but as one manifestation of a web of relationships which encompasses everything.

What does this understanding of self-as-lack imply about ethics, truth, and the meaning of life for us? That is the question which motivates this paper, for to raise these issues in the Western tradition is to find ourselves in a dialogue with Nietzsche, whose own texts resonate with many of the same insights: for example, his critiques of the subject ("The 'subject' is not something given, it is something added and invented and projected behind what there is." WP 481) and substance ("The properties of a thing are effects on other 'things'... there is no 'thing-in-itself.'" WP 557). From this critique, Nietzsche also drew some conclusions quite similar to those of Buddhism: in particular, that morality, knowledge and meaning are not discovered but constructed -- internalized games we learn from each other and play with ourselves. Perhaps the history of his own psyche reveals how momentous these discoveries were; and inevitably his insights were somewhat distorted.

Nietzsche understood how the distinction we make between this world and a higher spiritual realm serves our need for security, and he saw the bad faith in religious values motivated by this need. He did not understand how his alternative, more aristocratic values, also reflects the same anxiety. Nietzsche ends up celebrating an impossible ideal, the heroic-ego which overcomes its sense of lack, because he does not see that a heroic ego is our fantasy project for overcoming lack.

Nietzsche realized how the search for truth is motivated by a sublimated desire for symbolic security; his solution largely reverses our usual dualism by elevating ignorance and "untruth" into conditions of life. Philosophy's attempt to create the world reflects the tyrannical will- to-power, becoming the most "spiritualized" version of the need to impose our will. Insofar as truth is our intellectual effort to grasp being symbolically, however, those who no longer need to ground themselves can play the truth-versus-error game with lighter feet. Nietzsche overlooks a different reversal of perspective which could convert the bad-infinite of the heroic will-as-truth into the good infinite of truth-as-play.

What he considered the crown of his system--eternal recurrence -- is actually its denouement. Having seen through the delusion of Being, Nietzsche could not let it go completely, for he still sought a Being within Becoming. "To impose upon becoming the character of being -- this is the supr eme will to power" (WP 617). Having exposed the bad faith of believing in eternity, Nietzsche is nonetheless able to affirm the value of this moment only by making it recur eternally. In place of the neurotic's attempt to rediscover the past in the future he tries to rediscover the present in the future, yet the eternal recurrence of the now can add something only if the now in itself lacks something.

Rather than the way to vanquish nihilism, Nietzsche's will-to-power turns out to be pure nihilism, for nihilism is not the debacle of all meaning but our dread of that debacle and what we do to avoid it. This includes compulsively seizing on certain meanings as a bulwark against that form of lack. If so, the only solution to the dread of meaninglessness is meaninglessness itself: only by accepting meaninglessness, by letting it devour the meanings that we use to defend ourselves against our no-thing-ness, can we realize a meaning-free-ness open to the possibilities that arise in our world.

In sum, when the lack-driven bad infinite transforms into a lacking-nothing good infinite, the dualisms of good-versus-evil, truth-versus-error, and meaningfulness-versus- meaninglessness are realized to be games. Do I play them or do they play me? As long as we do not understand what is motivating us, we play with the seriousness of a life-versus-death struggle, for that is what the games symbolize for a self preoccupied with its lack. We are trapped in games which cannot be escaped yet cannot be won, since playing well does not resolve one's sense-of-lack. When there is no need to get anything from the game or gain cloture on it, we can play with the seriousness of a child absorbed in its game.[3]

The Lack of Self

Existential psychologists such as Ernest Becker believe that our primary repression is not sexual wishes, as Freud thought, but the awareness that we are going to die.4 This is closer to Buddhism, yet the anatman doctrine implies a subtle although significant distinction between fear of death and dread of the void: our worst problem is not death, a fear which still keeps the feared thing at a distance by projecting it into the future, but the more immediate and terrifying (and quite valid) suspicion each of us has that "I" am not real right now.

Sakyamunimuni Buddha did not use psychoanalytic terms, yet in trying to understand the Buddhist denial of self we can benefit from the concept of repression and the return of the repressed in symbolic form. If something (a mental wish, according to Freud) makes me uncomfortable, I can ignore or "forget" it. This allows me to concentrate on something else, but what is not consciously admitted into awareness tends to irrupt in obsessive ways--as symptoms--that affect conscious ness with precisely those qualities it strives to exclude. What does this imply about anatman?

Buddhism analyzes the sense-of-self into sets of impersonal mental and physical phenomena, whose interaction creates the illusion of self-consciousness--i.e., that consciousness characterizes a self distinct from the world it is conscious of. The death-repression emphasized by existential psychology transforms Freud's Oedipal complex into what Norman Brown calls an Oedipal project: the attempt to become father of oneself, i.e., one's own origin. The child wants to conquer death by becoming the creator and sustainer of its own life.5 Buddhism shifts the emphasis: the Oedipal project is better understood as the attempt of the developing sense-of-self to attain autonomy, like Descartes' supposedly self-sufficient consciousness. It is the quest to deny one's groundlessness by becoming one's own ground: the ground (socially conditioned and maintained yet nonetheless illusory) we know as being an independent, individual subject.

If so, the Oedipal project derives from our intuition that self-consciousness is not something "self-existing" but a mental construct. As with Nietzsche, consciousness is more like the surface of the sea: dependent on unknown depths that it cannot grasp because it is a manifestation of them. The problem arises when this conditioned consciousness wants to ground itself--i.e., to make itself real. If the sense-of-self is a construct, it can real-ize itself only by objectifying itself in some way in the world. The ego-self is this never-ending project to objectify oneself, something consciousness can no more do than a hand can grasp itself or an eye see itself.

The consequence of this perpetual failure is that the sense-of-self has, as its inescapable shadow, a sense-of-lack, which it always tries to escape. In deconstructive terms, the ineluctable trace of nothingness in our non-self-present being is a feeling of lack. The return of the repressed in the distorted form of a symptom shows us how to link this basic yet hopeless project with the symbolic ways we try to make ourselves real in the world. We experience this deep sense of lack as the feeling that "there is something wrong with me," but of course that feeling manifests, and we respond to it, in many different ways. In its "purer" forms lack appears as an anxiety that gnaws on one's very core. For that reason such anxiety is eager to objectify into fear of something, because then we have ways to defend ourselves against feared things.

The problem with objectifications, however, is that no object can ever satisfy if it's not really an object we want. When we do not understand what is actually motivating us -- because what we think we want is only a symptom of something else (our desire to become real, according to my interpretation of Buddhism) -- we end up compulsive. Then the neurotic's anguish and despair are less the result of symptoms than their source; those symptoms are necessary to shield him from the tragedies that "normal" people are better at repressing: death, meaninglessness, groundlessness.

> The ultimate problem is not guilt but the incapacity to live. The illusion of guilt is necessary for an animal that cannot enjoy life, in order to organize a life of nonenjoyment."[6]

Buddhism agrees yet shifts our focus from the terror of future annihilation to the anguish of a groundlessness experienced here and now. A Buddhist interpretation of self-as-lack accepts much of the psychotherapeutic understanding while offering a way to resolve our unhappiness. Buddhism traces human suffering back to desire and ignorance, and ultimately to our lack of self. Deconstructing the sense-of-self into interacting mental and physical processes leads to Nietzschean conclusions: the supposedly simple self is an economy of forces.[7] The Buddhist solution to its lack is simple although not easy. If it is no-thing-ness I am afraid of (i.e., the repressed intuition that, rather than being autonomous and self-existent, the "I" is a construct), the best way to resolve that fear is to face up to what has been denied: that is, to accept my no-thing-ness by becoming no-thing. The 12th century Japanese Zen master Dogen summarizes this process:

> To study the buddha way is to study the self. To study the self is to forget the self. To forget the self is to be actualized by [or: perceive oneself as] myriad things. When actualized by myriad things, your body and mind as well as the bodies and minds of others drop away. No trace of realization remains, and this no-trace continues endlessly.[8]

Forgetting" ourselves is how we lose our sense of separation and realize that we are manifestations of the world, not subjects confronting it as an other. Meditation is learning how to become nothing by learning to forget one's self, which happens when I become absorbed into my meditation-exercise. If the sense-of-self is consciousness reflecting back upon itself in order to grasp itself, such meditation practice is an exercise in de-reflection. Consciousness unlearns trying to grasp itself, objectify itself, real-ize itself. Enlightenment occurs in Buddhism when that usually-automatized reflexivity ceases, which is experienced as a letting-go and falling into a void.

> Men are afraid to forget their minds, fearing to fall through the Void with nothing to stay their fall. They do not know that the Void is not really void, but the realm of the real Dharma." (Huang-po)[9]

When I no longer strive to make myself real through things, I find myself "actualized" by them, says Dogen.

This process implies that what we fear as nothingness is not really nothingness, for that is the perspective of a sense-of-self anxious about losing its grip on itself. According to Buddhism, letting- go of myself and merging with that no-thing-ness leads to something else: when consciousness stops trying to catch its own tail, I become no-thing, and discover that I am everything--or, more precisely, that I can be anything. The problem of desire is solved when, without the craving-for-being that compels me to take hold of something and try to settle down in it, I am free to experience my nonduality with it. Grasping at something merely reinforces a delusive sense of separation between that-which-is-grasped and that-which-grasps-at-it. The only way I can become a phenomenon is to realize I am it, according to Buddhism. A mind that real-izes this is ab-solute in the original sense of the term: unconditioned. Meditative techniques decondition the mind from its tendency to circle in safe, familiar ruts, thus enabling its freedom to become anything. The most-quoted line from the best-known of all Mahayana scriptures, the Diamond Sutra, encapsulates all this in one phrase: "Let your mind come forth without fixing it anywhere."[10]

When anatman is understood this way, as a self-as-lack shadowing our illusory sense-of-self, Nietzsche and Buddhism have a lot to talk about.

Qualifying for Being

"There are no moral phenomena at all, only a moral interpretation of phenomena."[11] That brings the ethical issue back from the other "true" world to this one, as we inquire into the genealogy of our moral interpretations. Why do we make the interpretations that we do? As we become more conscious of our motivations, what other interpretations become possible?

Nietzsche distinguishes two basic types of morality. Master morality does not hesitate to affirm the exercise of power, whereas slave morality is based upon rejecting master morality as evil and valuing the opposite of that evil. Behind the piety of conventional Christian morals, Nietzsche detected the fear and ressentiment of the weak who use ethical codes to control the strong. When this fear is projected onto the universe, it becomes a God who tells us to love each other even as he loves us, who will take care of us if we do and punish us if we do not. We may cower before such a God, yet this scheme seems to afford us some grip on our ultimate fate -- and, as Nietzsche emphasizes, a pretty good grip on our fellow man. We know who we are, what we can do and where that is likely to get us. But this also destroys the innocence of our existence.

> That no one is any longer made accountable, that the kind of being manifested cannot be traced back to a causa prima, that the world is a unity neither as sensorium nor as "spirit,"--this alone is the great liberation--thus alone is the innocence of becoming restored... The concept "God" has hitherto been the greatest > objection to existence... We deny God; in denying God, we deny accountability: only by doing that do we redeem the world. (TI 54)

We would be accountable to God because he would want to accomplish something through us. Nietzsche calls our bluff. We say we want to be free, yet we also want somebody, somewhere, to be taking care of us. There seems to be a correspondence between monotheism (a consciousness unifying and controlling the external world) and the ego-self (a consciousness unifying and controlling the internal). Then the issue is not only accountability but ego-integrity: without a God to keep us straight, who is strong enough to determine one's own direction? If God expires all is permitted, and the century since Nietzsche's proclamation has certainly fulfilled his predictions of nihilism.

Perhaps a period of chaos is unavoidable.

> One interpretation has collapsed; but because it was considered the interpretation it now seems as if there were no meaning at all in existence, as if everything were in vain" (WP 55).

As with the adolescent forging an independent identity, some disorientation is inevitable before humankind matures enough to forego its projected parent and determine this-worldly criteria for moral interpretations. This would also explain the difficulty with Nietzsche's own solution, which understands the problem yet cannot quite escape it. Nietzsche saw that the dualism of good versus evil is an internalized game we learn to play with ourselves. "In every ascetic morality man worships a part of himself as God and for that he needs to diabolize the other part" (BGE 227). Since Christianity is the victory of pity over aristocratic values, his alternative is, in part, revaluing those aristocratic virtues. "The great epochs of our life are the occasions when we gain the courage to rebaptize our evil qualities as our best qualities" (BGE 116). This includes embracing the fact that "life itself is essentially appropriation, injury, overpowering of the strange and weaker, suppression, severity, imposition of one's own forms, incorporation and, at the least and mildest, exploitation" (BGE 259).[12] However, this famous passage is easily misunderstood. Nietzsche idealizes the aristocrat, and especially the overman, insofar as they are masters of their own "inward chaos", self-overcome men: "You shall become master of yourself, master also over your virtues. Formerly they were your masters; but they must be only your instruments beside other instruments."[13] Yet from a Buddhist perspective the concept of self-mastery contains a problematic ambiguity: who is master of whom? If the ego-self is that which vainly tries to grasp itself, the project of self-mastery is not only questionable but impossible. That for the sake of which it is worthwhile to live on earth: does that happen when I master myself or when I let go of myself?

For Buddhism these questions reduce to how our sense-of-lack may be overcome, and for Nietzsche that involves our embodiment of will-to-power. Retracing the genealogy of this, his master concept if he has one, will help us relate his will-to-power to the Buddhist sense-of-lack.

The will-to-power cannot be separated from its sublimation (or "spiritualization"), for Nietzsche discovered them together. He was one of the first classicists to realize that the original Olympic games were a sublimated form of war. Nietzsche contended that Greek civilization was noble and sublime precisely because it had been so cruel and bloodthirsty; the "golden age" was created by bringing this original ferocity under control. "The thought seems to be: where there is 'the sublime' there must have been that which was made sublime -- sublimated -- after having been for a long time not sublime."[14] Having detected this phenomenon in ancient Greece, Nietzsche began to notice sublimated "base" impulses in many kinds of activity; for example, Wagner's ferocious will sublimated into the Bayreuth festival. This makes Nietzsche the first, as far as I know, to undertake a systematic study of repression.

Nietzsche sees the sublimity of Greek culture as the sublimation of its original ferocity, yet here perhaps the genealogist of morals does not trace his genealogy back far enough. What makes man so ferocious? Can even the will to power, irreducible for Nietzsche, be deconstructed? What, after all, does power mean to us?

> All power is in essence power to deny mortality. Either that or it is not real power at all, not ultimate power, not the power that mankind is really obsessed with. Power means power to increase oneself, to change one's natural situation from one of smallness, helplessness, finitude, to one of bigness, control, durability, importance. (Becker)[15]

We feel we are masters over life and death when we hold the fate of others in our hands, adds Becker; and we feel we are real when the reality of others is in our hands, adds Buddhism. From that perspective, however, desire for power is little different from the slave morality Nietzsche criticizes. Both become symptoms of our lack, equally frustrating inasmuch as we are motivated by something that cannot be satisfied in the way we try to satisfy it. No wonder Nietzsche's will-to-power can never rest, that it needs to expand its horizons, and that for most of us morality has been a matter of collecting religious brownie points. In both cases we think that we have found the way to get a grip on our eligibility for immortality -- or being.

> The whole basis of the urge to goodness is to be something that has value, that endures.... Man uses morality to try to get a place of special belongingness and perpetuation in the universe .... Do we wonder why one of man's chief characteristics is his tortured dissatisfaction with himself, his constant self-criticism? It is the only way he has to overcome the sense of hopeless limitation inherent in his real situation. (Becker)[16]

When I realize that I am not going to attain cloture on that diabolical part of myself, it is time to project it. "The Devil is the one who prevents the heroic victory of immortality in each culture--even the atheistic, scientific ones."[17] As long as lack keeps gnawing, we need to keep struggling with the Devil, and as we all know the best devil is one outside our own group. Evil is whatever we decide is keeping us from becoming real, and since no victory over any external devil can yield the sense of being we seek, we have become trapped in a paradox of our own making: evil is created by our urge to eliminate evil. Stalin's collectivization program was an attempt to build a more perfect socialist society. The Final Solution of the Nazis was an attempt to purify the earth of its vermin.

The Buddhist critique of such ressentiment includes understanding the self-deception involved in such dualistic thinking, when I identify with one pole and vainly try to eliminate its interdependent other.[18] Buddhism gets beyond good and evil not by rebaptizing our evil qualities as our best, but with an entirely different perspective. As long as we experience ourselves as alienated from the world and society as a set of separate selves, the world is devalued into a field-of-play wherein we compete to full-fill ourselves. That is the origin of the ethical problem we struggle with today: without some transcendental ground such as God, what will bind our atomized selves together? When my sense-of-self lets-go and disappears, however, I realize my interdependence with all other phenomena. It is more than being dependent on them: when I discover that I am you, the trace of your traces, the ethical problem of how to relate to you is transformed.[19]

Of course, this provides no simple yardstick to resolve knotty ethical dilemmas. Yet more important, I think, is that this absolves the sense of separation between us which usually makes those dilemmas so difficult to resolve, including the conceit that I am the one who has privileged access to transcendental principles, or who embodies more fully the will-to-power. Loss of self-preoccupation entails the ability to respond to others without an ulterior motive which needs to gain something from that encounter. Buddhist ethical principles approximate the way of relating to others that nondual experience reveals. As in Christianity, I should love my neighbor as myself--in this case because my neighbor is myself. In contrast to the "Thou shalt not--or else!" implied in Mosaic law, the Buddhist precepts are vows one makes not to some other being but to one's t o-be-realized-as-empty self: "I vow to undertake the course of training to perfect myself in non-killing," and so forth. If we have not developed to the degree that we spontaneously experience ourselves as one with others, by following the precepts we endeavor to act as if we did feel that way. Yet even these precepts are eventually realized not to rest on any transcendental, objectively-binding moral principle. There are, finally, no moral limitations on our freedom -- except the dualistic delusions which incline us to abuse that freedom in the first place.

Grasping the Symbols that Grasp Reality

> How much one needs a belief in order to flourish, how much that is "firm" and that one does not wish to be shaken because one clings to it, that is a measure of the degree of one's strength (or, to put the point more clearly, of one's weakness).[20]

If one's final delusion is the belief that one has lost all delusions, and if there is no greater delusion than the one that eliminates all others, mustn't that delusion be... the truth? "What really is it in us that wants 'the truth'?" begins Beyond Good and Evil, a question that echoes throughout Nietzsche's writings. The value of truth must be called into question. Perhaps no one yet has been sufficiently truthful about what truthfulness is -- in which case we should be careful, for that may be for good reason. Nietzsche warns that one might get hold of the truth about truth too soon, before humankind is strong enough to give up the need for truth.

> Look, isn't our need for knowledge precisely this need for the familiar, the will to uncover under everything strange, unusual, > and questionable, something that no longer disturbs us? Is it not the instinct of fear that bids us to know? And is the jubilation of those who attain knowledge not the jubilation over the restoration of a sense of security?[21]

Then what might truth become for a person who no longer seeks to restore a feeling of security? Nietzsche saw the relationship between our will-to-truth and our need for being: "Man seeks 'the truth': a world that is not self-contradictory, not deceptive, does not change, a true world--a world in which one does not suffer; contradiction, deception, change--causes of suffering!" (WP 585) The will-to-truth manifests will-to-power; the problem with this form of will is when it thinks the world rather than creates it. "Actual philosophers, however, are commanders and law-givers... Their 'knowing' is creating, their creating is a law-giving, their will to truth is--will to power" (BGE 211). Even basic logical categories reflect our need to perceive things in a stable way. That some things are equal, that there is such a thing as matter, that things naturally fall into categories: these are fictions, even if more or less indispensable in daily life. Such instrumental truths work to preserve us and give us a grip on our situation. In his later writings, when Nietzsche saw through the illusion of a unitary ego-self, he realized that these truths derive from the sense-of-self objectifying its own self-image. Then what would happen if we could cease believing in ego as a self- determining cause? If we cling to these "facts" for survival, can those who let-go of themselves let go of them?

Nietzsche does not consider this Buddhist possibility, yet he contemplates "the most extreme form of nihilism," which might also be called "a divine way of thinking": the view "that every belief, every considering-something-true, is necessarily false because there simply is no true world. Thus: a perspectival appearance whose origin lies in us (in so far as we continually need a narrower, abbreviated, simplified world)." Nietzsche describes this as another reversal: just as our rebaptized evil qualities trade places with our best qualities, so truth becomes lie --

> Truths are illusions about which one has forgotten that this is what they are. Truth is the kind of error without which a certain species of life could not live. The value for life is ultimately decisive.[22]

--and lie becomes a kind of truth, for this makes the will to appearance, even the will to deception, "deeper, more metaphysical, than the will to truth" insofar as that will-to-truth is motivated by the need for security. Nietzsche accordingly calls his own philosophy "inverted Platonism: the further it is from actual reality, the purer, more beautiful, and better it becomes. Living in illusion as the ideal." There are no objective facts, no Immaculate Perception, no ultimate revelation of truth. Everything becomes a matter of perspective since "there is no solely beatifying interpretation."23 Like eternal recurrence, perspectivism is a test and an intensification of our will-to-power. Perspectives gain in power by competing with each other. Superior perspectives develop by refuting or refining lesser ones. In this way the will continually surmounts itself, as individuals develop according to their own ability.

Ernest Becker also believes that illusion is necessary. The Denial of Dea th starts with an insight of William James: "mankind's common instinct for reality... has always held the world to be essentially a theater for heroism." Why do we want to be heroes? Our narcissistic need for self-esteem mean that each of us yearns to feel of special value, Òf irst in the universe Ò. Heroism (in the broad sense: e.g., Nietzsche as an intellectual hero) is how we justify that need to count more than anyone or anything else. Human society can be understood as a codified hero system, a symbolic-action structure whose roles and rules function as a vehicle for heroism. That raises the essential question:

> If transference is a natural function of heroism, a necessary projection in order to stand life, death, and oneself, the question becomes: What is creative projection? What is > life-enhancing illusion?... Man needs a "second" world, a world of humanly created meaning, a new reality that he can live, dramatize, nourish himself in. "Illusion" means creative play at its highest level. Cultural illusion is a necessary ideology of self-justification, a heroic dimension that is life itself to the symbolic animal.[24]

"The essence of normality is the refusal of reality", a refusal that Becker, like Nietzsche, justifies as psychologically necessary. Yet he too goes for what Nietzsche calls the bloody truths, peeling away repressions to arrive at "the potentially most liberating question of all, the main problem of human life: How empirically true is the cultural hero system that sustains and drives men?"[25] Thus Becker ends up with a double-tiered truth similar to Nietzsche's, between a life- enhancing illusion and the truth about this illusion, too painful for most of us to cope with. From the first perspective, the important truths for Becker too are the ones that defend my existence, all the more important if they are believed to help me qualify for eternal existence (or self-being, according to Buddhism). From the second and deeper perspective, however, the question is how much truth we can bear.

Buddhism also has a two-truths doctrine which distinguishes the usual truth of the everyday world from a higher truth that is not only difficult to understand but dangerous to misunderstand. The paradigmatic formulation is in chapter 24 of the Mulamadhyamikakarikas[26] of Nagarjuna, the most important Buddhist philosopher:

> The teaching of the Buddhas is wholly based on there being two truths: that of a personal everyday world and a higher truth which surpasses it.
>
> Those who do not clearly know the true distinction between the two truths cannot clearly know the hidden depths of the Buddha's teaching.

Unless the transactional realm is accepted as a base, the surpassing sense cannot be pointed out; if the surpassing sense is not comprehended nirvana cannot be attained.

The feeble-minded are destroyed by the misunderstood doctrine of sunyata, as by a snake ineptly seized or some secret knowledge wrongly applied.

For this reason the mind of the enlightened one was averse to teaching the Truth, realizing how difficult it would be for those of feeble insight to fathom it. (MMK XXIV: 8-12)

In this version, the higher truth that is fatal to the feeble-minded is sunyata, a term usually translated as "emptiness" yet better understood as "lack of self-existence". In the West the two-truths have often been understood in a Kantian way, as distinguishing the higher Absolute from the relative phenomenal world. Yet they do not presuppose another Reality transcendent to this world. If the terms absolute and relative are used, it is better to reverse their meaning: the Òl ower truth Ó is our usual, commonsense but illusory world of apparently discrete, hence self-existing, un- conditioned (ab- solute) things, while the Òh igher truth Ó is that phenomena are empty of self-existence because they are relative to each other.

Candrakirti's commentary on this MMK passage explains that someone who misunderstands sunyata will reject the self-existence of things only to fall into the opposite extreme of believing that everything is merely illusion, and will get into trouble by ignoring the physical and moral laws of cause-and-effect. Yet the higher truth is bloodier than that. Buddhism is more than a philosophy that refutes self-existence: it is a practice which deconstructs our sense-of-self, and letting-go of ourselves in order to realize our own sunyata is seldom easy. If normality is the refusal of reality, it is because few of us are ready to face the truth about our lack of self-existence and the social games whereby we reassure ourselves. For many, the alternative to self- illusion is not Becker's creative play but a nihilism that no longer sees any reason to live. No wonder, then, that after his enlightenment Sakyamuni Buddha hesitated to teach what he had realized, according to the traditional account. The problem is not only that we are unable to understand such a difficult doctrine "beyond the reach of reason"; we resist it, for it does not grant us the kind of salvation we want, a grounding being fo r the ego-self.

One form of that danger is that we will cling to sunyata, by accepting it as the correct description of the way things are. So Nagarjuna emphasizes that the concept of sunyata is relative to the self-existing things it refutes; having fulfilled that function, sunyata refutes itself. Sunyata is "the exhaustion of all theories and views" and those who make sunyata into a theory are "incurable." (MMK XIII: 8) While Nietzsche ends up with an infinity of possible perspectives, Nagarjuna seems to conclude with none, since sunyata is merely a heuristic device. Are these really contradictory, or does the exhaustion of perspectives liberate us for the polyvalence of many perspectives?

> Ultimate serenity is the coming to rest of all ways of taking things, the repose of named things; no Truth has been taught by a Buddha for anyone, anywhere." (MMK XXV:24)

If truth is a matter of grasping the symbols that grasp reality, all truth is error on the Buddhist path. When nirvana is the end of all ways of taking things, the game of truth-and-delusion is turned upside-down. There is no truth to be taught because nothing needs to be attained; delusion is something to be unlearned. In the Diamond Sutra Subhuti asks the Buddha if his realization of supreme enlightenment means that he has not gained anything.

> Just so, Subhuti. I have not gained the least thing from supreme enlightenment, and that is called supreme enlightenment."[27]

Buddhism does not provide a metaphysical system to account for reality but shows how to deconstruct the socially-conditioned metaphysical system we know as everyday reality. It does not give us truths but shows how to become aware of and let go of the automatized truths we are normally not aware of holding. Buddhism agrees with Nietzsche's and Becker's insight that our truth consists of illusions which we have forgotten are illusions, yet the Buddhist path is predicated on the possibility of deconstructing the ones that cause us to suffer: most of all, the ones that maintain our delusive sense-of-self.

The crucial issue is whether our search for truth is another attempt to ground ourselves by fixating on certain concepts that are believed to give us an effective fix on the world. When there is this compulsion, certain ideas become seductive: i.e., they become ideologies. The difference between samsara (this world of suffering) and nirvana is that samsara is this world experienced as a sticky web of attachments which seem to offer something we feel the lack of, a grounding for the groundless sense-of-self. Intellectually, that seductive quality manifests as a battleground of conflicting ideologies competing for our allegiance. Ideologies offer to ground the sense-of-self by providing the mind with a sure grasp on the world: now we know how the world is meaningful and what our role in that meaning is.

> Ideology is the assumption that since the beginning and end of history are known there is nothing more to say. History is therefore to be obediently lived out according to the ideology."[28]

If there is no specifiable difference between nirvana and the everyday world (MMK XXV:19), then very different ideologies such as religions, metaphysical systems, Marxism and psychoanalysis are in the same dimension insofar as they serve the same psychological function: trying to resolve the sense-of-self's intellectual sense-of-lack by identifying with a belief-system. The problem is that ideologies tend to become computer-viruses of the mind. When we assent to them -- let them in--ideologies take it over and fill it up.

> What, then, is truth? A mobile army of metaphors, metonyms, and anthropomorphisms--in short, a sum of human relations which have > been enhanced, transposed, and embellished poetically and rhetorically, and which after long use seem firm, canonical, and obligatory to a people: truths are illusions about which one has forgotten that this is what they are: metaphors which are worn > out and without sensuous power; coins which have lost their pictures and now matter only as metal, no longer as coins. (Nietzsche)[29]

As metaphors lose their sensuous power they gain another role, as emblems. The freshness of the original meaning decays into tokens. Once objectified and socially-validated, a truth enters the exchange market: it can be gained, possessed, and lost.

> Explanations succeed only by convincing resistant hearers of their error. If you will not hear my explanations until you are suspicious of your own truths, you will not accept my explanations until you are convinced of your error. Explanation is an antagonistic encounter that succeeds by defeating an opponent. It possesses the same dynamic of resentment found in other finite play. I will press my explanations on you because I need to show that I do not live in the error that I think others think that I do.
>
> Whoever wins this struggle is privileged with the claim to true knowledge. Knowledge has been arrived at, it is the outcome of this engagement. Its winners have the uncontested power to make certain statements of fact. They are to be listened to. In those areas appropriate to the contests now concluded, winners possess a knowledge that can no longer be challenged. (Carse)[30]

In this antagonistic encounter the will-to-truth is readily identifiable as will-to-power. When sense of lack evaporates because sense-of-self evaporates, however, the seductive web of samsara transforms into polyvalence, where each viewpoint is able to appreciate others because it no longer identifies with a Truth-project that is threatened by those others. This is not Nietzsche's perspectivism, the competition among perspectives each trying to impress its own will-to-truth upon the world, but a non-abiding wisdom that can wander freely among truths since it does not need to fixate on any of them.

Is this relativism, the bugaboo of all value-theory? Even if all ideologies are competing in the same intellectual arena, there are some important internal differences. Many ideologies are difficult to escape once you are committed. An old-style Marxist who began criticizing Marxism would be told to purge himself of his bourgeois tendencies; a psychoanalyst will tell the analysand that she is resisting. On the other side are what might be called meta-ideologies because they are designed to self- negate: to free us from all ideologies including themselves. Derrida writes about the need to lodge oneself within traditional conceptuality in order to destroy it31, which nicely expresses one of the reasons Nagarjuna insists on two truths: the everyday transactional realm must be accepted in order to point to the higher truth that negates it. According to Nagarjuna's Madhyamika Buddhism, sunyata is like a poison-antidote that expels the poison from our bodies and then expels itself, for if the antidote stays inside to poison us we are no better off than before. The difference between ideologies and meta-ideologies rests on whether the sense-of-self's anxious groundlessness is to be resolved by providing something to identify with or by letting-go of itself. Then the important issue is the liberating function of any truth or practice. The same thought that is liberating in one situation may be binding in another. Even the most valuable insights can lose their freshness and become "sticky" because they are now understood as something to cling to rather than a pointer to freedom; or rather, clinging to them is now misunderstood as the path to freedom.[32]

If everything manifests the will to power in one way or another, why bother to sublimate? Nietzsche found his answer in eternal recurrence, which solves the problem ingeniously: not by grounding this life in some otherworldly eternity but by impressing the form of eternity on this life. Eternal recurrence has been celebrated as the capstone of his philosophy, yet I shall argue that, instead of vanquishing nihilism, it eternally defers it. That is because nihilism is not the always- impending debacle of all meaning, but our fear of that debacle and flight from it -- which perpetuates the debacle and gives it power over us. The dread of nihilism, which Nietzsche rightly saw as our collective shadow, the ghost that haunts Western civilization, is the true nihilism. From a Buddhist perspective the problem is not our nothingness but the ways we try to evade it.

This puts Nietzsche in the same camp as Plato. If the Platonic invention of another Reality is an attempt to escape the lack we experience now, so too is Nietzsche's attempt to fill in the lack of that now by making the now recur eternally. The basic problem is that eternal recurrence of the now can add nothing unless the now-as-now lacks something. Again we encounter sense-of-lack, here in its implications for meaning. This lack is not the meaninglessness of life but the threat of meaninglessness, and therefore it manifests as the devices we use to deny meaninglessness. In this way too the repressed returns, sublimated into symbols/symptoms. Tillich believed that the problem of meaninglessness is the form in which nonbeing poses itself in our time, and that all human life can be interpreted as a continuous attempt to avoid despair.33 He also gave the solution: the meaning of life must be reduced to despair about the meaning of life, in order to take more nonbeing of the world into ourselves. Yet one must despair in the right way.

How to overcome nihilism was the fundamental problem for Nietzsche, whose sensitive nose detected its stink almost everywhere. It is not a late development of Western civilization but man's normal condition, which is why the Overman is an overcoming of man. Then does nihilism have an essential connection with lack, also humankind's normal condition? Nietzsche defines nihilism as increasing gloom, then terror at the exhaustion of all meaning, a grand disgust directed at oneself as well as at the world. Goals are missing, the desert grows. What Nietzsche the posthumous man predicted we postmodern men are now living, and no one can say yet when or how nihilism -- today becoming recognized as a global problem -- might be resolved.

At first, nihilism disguised itself by creating Platonic-type values. Nihilism shows its disgust at life by creating a "true world" having all the attributes that life does not: unity, stability, identity, goodness, happiness. This invention of another world is the nihilistic act par excellence because it devalues this world. The incomplete nihilism which constitutes the development of Western civilization is the slow decomposition of that true world, and when it finally disappears we are left with this one, the "apparent" world that can no longer be considered apparent if there is nothing to juxtapose it with, yet nonetheless remains devalued and therefore experienced as unsatisfactory.

Nietzsche's solution to this is eternal recurrence. As many have noticed, the key to what is otherwise a peculiar doctrine seems to be the ethical motivation behind it. "The question in each and every thing, ÔD o you desire this once more and innumerable times more?' would lie upon your actions as the greatest weight", because this thought would transform us in one way or the other: either crush us under its weight or prompt the supreme affirmation that Zarathustra makes: "Was that life? Well then! Once more!"[34] This would be the great liberation that restores the innocence of Becoming because it makes one accountable only to oneself -- which from a Buddhist viewpoint, however, is still one too many.

Given Nietzsche's attitude towards truth ("Every philosophy also conceals a philosophy..."), this may have been his self-conscious attempt to promulgate a myth. By what myth do you live? asked Jung. Well, this one is better than most. Like Heidegger's analysis of death in Being and Time, it can inspire us to live the way we want to live rather than let life pass by while we are making other plans. For Nietzsche and the early Heidegger, the future is necessary to focus us in the now, for otherwise we are diverted and scattered by chance possibilities. In lack terms, both try to resolve our sense-of-lack by making the sense-of-self more efficient. But do their solutions replace one type of evasion with another? Unamuno dismissed eternal recurrence as "a sorry counterfeit of immortality," yet that puts the shoe on the wrong foot: the problem is not that it is a poor immortality but that it is an immortality, which still reflects a felt need to "stamp the for m of eternity upon our lives." Eternal recurrence seems to exalt the now by refusing to evaluate it according to some other standard or to ground it in some other reality, yet here too the now is weighed and found wanting: its lack can be filled up only by repeating it. The now as now --just this!-- is still not enough. A Buddhist may agree with Nietzsche that "this life is your eternal life!", but the eternity of this life must be understood differently, as a not-falling-away eternal now that, when it lacks nothing, may be discovered to be all we need.

Nietzsche calls eternal recurrence the basic conception of Thus Spake Zarathustra, yet it becomes a dominant theme only near the end of part four. Zarathustra teaches the Higher Men how to overcome the Spirit of Gravity, and at the beginning of "The Intoxicated Song" one of them asserts: "For the sake of this day -- I am content for the first time to have lived my whole life.... 'Was that -- life?' I will say to death. 'Very well! Once more!'" At that moment Zarathustra hears the sound of the midnight bell and sings its song, "whose name is 'Once More', whose meaning is 'To all eternity!'":

O Man! Attend!
What does deep midnight's voice contend?
'I slept my sleep,
'And now awake at dreaming's end:
'The world is deep,
'Deeper than day can comprehend,
'Deep is its woe,
'Joy -- deeper than heart's agony:
'Woe says: Fade! Go!

'But all joy wants eternity,
'--wants deep, deep, deep eternity!'

This roundelay is so important that it appears at the end of both part three and part four; and the reason it is so important is that it reveals the origin of eternal recurrence to be joy. This joy wants to recur eternally, and because it is deeper than the heart's agony such joy can even will that suffering to recur again too, if necessary for its own recurrence.

> Did you ever say Yes to one joy? O my friends, then you said Yes to all woe as well. All things are chained and entwined together, all things are in love;
>
> If you ever wanted one moment twice, if you ever said: 'You please me, happiness, instant, moment!' then you wanted everything to return.[35]

Alas, for the failure of Nietzsche's moment of joy! However deep it was it was not deep enough, for he needed it again, and again...: "Joy, however, does not want heirs or children, joy wants itself,... wants everything eternally the same." (Z, p. 331) This reaction is natural yet nonetheless ruinous. Ironically, that very desire for its recurrence is the worm which burrows in to destroy it, as in those most-cherished musical moments that inspire us to think "this is so beautiful, I wish it would never stop" -- only to discover that the moment has ceased, destroyed by the self-consciousness which reflexively distinguishes itself from the music in order to enjoy enjoying it. Nietzsche yearns for that moment of joy again, because it absolves his sense of lack, yet his desire for its recurrence is itself part of the problem that the deepest joy resolves. For contrary to his roundelay the deepest joy does not even will to recur: it wills nothing because it lacks nothing, if it is the deepest joy. By wanting to retain that joy Nietzsche separates himself from it and thereby loses it into the past as a memory, then can only try to bring it back by willing the recurrence of everything -- not realizing that his moment of pure joy was a temporary collapse of willing. Since the will-to-power always strives to overcome itself, it must project a future, which is why the only consummation it can attain is in the eternal recurrence of such moments. However, striving to find the past in the future is less a formula for joy than a psychoanalytic definition of neurosis.

What is attractive about eternal recurrence is that it foregoes the need for any other Reality to compensate for the defects of this one. It is an affirmation of this world, yet this world not as let-go but as grasped-at, fixated by being brought back again and again. "Very well: once more!" is his deep affirmation; yet deeper would be: "To all that has been: thanks! To all that will be: yes!" To say yes! to a single moment of joy, completely affirming it, is by definition an experience of no lack. At that instant one wants nothing else, no void needs to be filled in or evaded, which means (if, as Buddhism implies, sense-of-lack is the shadow of sense- of-self) that this must be a moment of egolessness. Then one cannot have such a joy, one can only be such a joy. Blessed are those who have had or rather been such a moment, for it transforms all other moments as well -- although not because of the entwined contingency that Nietzsche refers to. "An affirmation that is truly full and complete is also contagious: it bursts into a chain of affirmations that knows no limits." (Haar)[36] Yes, but this chain is not each contingent affirmation causing another. Just the opposite: a complete affirmation breaks all causal chains. The joy of just this! -- the Buddhist experience of tathata thusness -- needs nothing, desires nothing , and thus reveals that the causal chain is a succession of just this! in an eternal-now where there is nothing to gain or lose. Paradoxically, when the causal chain is such a succession, our experience is that there is no causal chain and no succession. As long as we experience the causal chain as a means to get somewhere else, we lose just this! and the eternal-now. In sum, life becomes joyous not when we get something from it but when we become it.

So a moment of deepest joy does not banish woe by discovering the interdependence of joy with everything else, past and future. Rather, it reveals that what we thought was the means for solving our lack is what maintains the problem. End of lack is not an effect that can be experienced at the conclusion of some causal chain, but the shattering of all causal chains insofar as they are our means for trying to overcome lack. Eternity is found not in the recurrence of time but in the evaporation of that objectified time whereby and wherein we hope to end our lack. This realization is embodied in perhaps Nagarjuna's most important verse, which distinguishes between samsara and nirvana:

That which, taken as causal or dependent, is the process of being-born and passing on, is, taken non-causally and beyond all dependence, declared to be nirvana." (MMK XXV:9)[37]

Nirvana cannot be caused and therefore cannot be attained. We might think of it as some kind of substratum pervading all our experience but that is still too dualistic: it is simply the nature of our experience when there is not the delusive sense of a self-conscious yet ungrounded self that has the experience and therefore feels something to be lacking in it. The joy of that experience is deeper than the heart's agony.

On this account, happiness in the form we seek it -- "that too-hasty profit snatched from approaching loss"[38] -- cannot be gained. All we can do is realize that nondual "perspective" where nothing has ever been lacking. The amor fati Nietzsche celebrates is not accepting everything due to its interdependence with a moment of complete Yes! but the absence of any need to will that things be any different. The amor is not willing that everything be exactly the same, over and over again, but that everything be as it is; that, however, is not something which needs to be willed. Or, finally, which can be willed. In The Birth of Tragedy Nietzsche came close to this: only as an aesthetic phenomenon is existence justified, which amounts to saying that existence experienced aesthetically does not need to be justified. Are what we call "aesthetic experiences" tip-of-the-tongue tastes of something that we have always been immersed in?

Instead of yielding to this groundlessness, eternal recurrence is a last gasp at self-grounding being, for it attempts to fill up lack by discovering a being within becoming. "That everything recurs is the closest approximation of a world of becoming to a world of being" (WP 617). Nietzsche can find infinite value in the now only by having it recur an infinite number of times. Therefore he ends up not with the end of nihilism but with another, more will-ful reconstitution of it.

For Buddhism the problem of lack can be resolved only by ceasing to avoid it and instead becoming-one with it: letting-go of oneself and falling into the void, in order to realize that the void is not really void but the nondual realm of the Buddha- dharma, as Ch Õa n master Huang-po put it. What does this mean in terms of nihilism? To stop evading the debacle of all meaning and accept it, which requires experiencing the meaninglessness of one's life -- an anguish not to be recommended lightly. Such understanding of the solution also transforms our understanding of the problem, for this solution is usually understood as the problem. This implies that true nihilism is less the debacle of meaning than our terror of that debacle and the ways we flee it, which includes a compulsive need to find some meaning in life as a bulwark against that threat. If so, nihilism is not our lack but the fear and denial of that lack, experienced in this instance as impending loss of meaning. Insofar as Nietzsche's will-to-power is in flight from lack, then, the will- to-power is nihilism. Eternal Recurrence insures that flight will have no cloture, for it tries to fill up lack by flight itself, by repeated recurrence of the passing moment. Thus eternal recurrence would not be final victory over nihilism, but the final victory of nihilism: in grasping at the fleeting now by making it recur, it misses and loses the now that right now does-not-fall-away, and deflects us from the opposite solution of yielding to the nonbeing we most dread, which we might discover to be not so dreadful after all.

The "discovery" of objective meaning is one of our main ways of dealing with lack. As Zarathustra points out, man assigns values to things only to maintain himself. We can usually cope with anxiety and guilt as long as we know what the meaning of life is, for there is security in that even if we don't a lways do what that meaning implies we should do. However, such meaning-systems corrupt "the innocence of becoming" because in projecting and understanding them as objective we repress the fact that these meanings are our own creations, socially-constructed and - validated. Insofar as they originate in lack they are based on fear, so a test of our maturity is whether we are able to face that fear. "It is a measure of the degree of strength of will to what extent one can do without meaning in things, to what extent one can endure to live in a meaningless world because one organizes a small portion of it oneself" (WP 585A).

If the autonomy of ego-self is a delusion, we can see why that is difficult. Commonsense subject-object dualism presumes the sense-of-self to be the locus of awareness; subjectivism goes further to make the subject the only source of value and meaning, which devalues the world into a field-of-activity wherein the self labors to fulfill itself. Apparently objective meanings paper over the problem of lack because they provide some objective security. In order for the illusory self to feel secure, however, its meanings must be unconsciously projected. The sun that motivates me must not be realized to be my own creation, if I am to be inspired by it. When I am aware of constructing my own meaning, the absence of any external grounding for that meaning means I have nothing to lean upon. The natural response is a deepened sense of lack, experienced as anguish and ontological guilt: by what right do I create such meanings? Who am I to decide that this is the way to live?

Juxtaposing the possibilities in this way clarifies the Buddhist approach, which contra Nietzsche does not find any solution in strength of will. If the collapse of objective meaning exposes my sense of lack, that will be painful yet it is nonetheless desirable, since becoming aware of my lack is necessary in order to eventually solve it. Then realizing the subjectivity of meaning does not by itself resolve the matter, for it becomes a stage to be endured in order to realize something else.

If despair is a stage, however, one must despair in the right way. Odd as it sounds, the danger with despair is that one will cling to it. In Kierkegaard's school of anxiety (recommended in The Concept of Anxiety) despair is the final exam: it dredges up our most cherished meanings and devours them, leaving us disconsolate. But we do not become completely empty unless despair devours us wholly and also itself. Despair (literally "no hope") is the reverse side of hope and both are relative to the sense-of-self, for the ego-self alternates between the hope it will finally fixate itself and the dread it never will. Then despair evaporates with the self, like the matter and anti-matter of particle physics which disappear by collapsing back into each other. Yet often this does not happen, because when despair finally occurs after a lifetime of avoiding it, it appears with a force that makes it seem more real than the meanings it roots out, which had been used to repress it. From the Buddhist standpoint, the recurring thoughts and feelings that constitute despair are no more real and no less impermanent than any other thoughts and feelings. When we despair, however, our usual psychological defenses fail and we identify with self-pitying thoughts and self-destructive inclinations. Then, instead of despair consuming the self, it reinforces the worthlessness of that self. We end up not becoming-nothing but with a sense-of-self nourishing itself on self-disgust. This is the "reactive" tendency that so disgusted Nietzsche and he saw what the problem is: "He who despises himself still nonetheless respects himself as one who despises." (BGE 78) Man would rather will nothingness than not will.[39] Yet the void Huang-po recommends is not something that can be willed.

When we despair in the right way, what happens? Abandoning the hope that we will eventually become something, we yield to our nothingness and discover how we have always been everything. As Dogen expressed it in Genjo-koan, to forget oneself is to be actualized by myriad things, which is to perceive oneself as all things. What does such mutual interpenetration imply about the meaning of life? For Buddhism, meaning too is neither objective nor subjective. Life is neither meaningful nor meaningless but what might be called meaningfree. To forget oneself and become nothing is to wake up and find oneself in or, less dualistically, as a situation -- not confronted by it but one with it -- and if one is not self-preoccupied then meaning arises naturally within that situation. As Buber put it, you start with yourself in order to forget yourself and immerse yourself in the world; you understand yourself in order not to be preoccupied with yourself.

The existential psychotherapist Irvin Yalom has discussed the formidable problem posed by the "galactic" point of view, which seems to trivialize us into microscopic specks flickering in the vast expanse of cosmic time. He point s out that this renders life meaninglessness only from that perspective, a perspective that moreover is delusive from the Buddhist point of view: it abstracts me from my actual situation, yet there is no such "sub specie aeternitas " perspective outside our various perspectives. We are nondual with the whole only by virtue of our particular position within that whole. We are free to experience and appreciate different perspectives, but there is no perspectiveless-perspective. The therapist's goal, according to Yalom, is:

> not to create engagement nor to inspirit the patient with engagement -- these the therapist cannot do. But it is not necessary: the desire to engage life is always there within the patient, and the therapist's clinical activities should be directed toward removal of obstacles in the patient's way."[40]

Searching for the meaning of life is searching for something that enables us to stop searching. When lack comes to an end, so does the problem of meaninglessness. And life becomes... play.[41]

Conclusion

Mature manhood: that means to have rediscovered the seriousness

> one had as a child at play. (BGE 94)

For Nietzsche, like Derrida today, the death of God unleashes limitless play.[42] Yet whether our god has died or not, we are already playing. The question is not whether we play but how. Do we suffer our games as if they were life-or-death struggles, because they are the means whereby we hope to ground ourselves, or do we dance with the light feet that Nietzsche called the first attribute of divinity? His philosophizing exceeds any system that can be constructed out of it, for, the will to power notwithstanding, it demonstrates how thinking can be such play.

> I do not know what the spirit of a philosopher might wish more to be than a dancer. For the dance is his ideal, also his art, and finally also his only piety, his 'service of God.'" (GS 381)

A friend once complained to Samuel Johnson that he had tried to be a philosopher but cheerfulness kept breaking in; Nietzsche shows that the two need not be incompatible.

Zarathustra teaches three metamorphoses: from camel (a weight-bearing spirit) to lion (who captures freedom) to the child, who "is innocence and forgetfulness, a new beginning... a sacred Yes." Unless we become children, we shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven--which does not mean that children will enter therein, for they are already there, since without a matured sense-of-self they do not yet have a debilitating sense-of-lack.

> Of course, the normal child can soon distinguish easily and quickly between what adults call "real life" and "play." The more psychological way of stating the matter is to say that the child acts out his fantasies and seriously tries, through the play-situation, to resolve conflicts in which these fantasies play a part. But he normally recognizes reasonably well which of these selves and lives are defined as real by the adults around him; and he learns to go along with their game -- until finally he is quite > unaware that it was their game, for it is now his, too.[43]

One grows up by learning the socially-acceptable ways to try to overcome lack.

Becker, like Nietzsche, concludes that "childlike foolishness" is the calling of mature men.44 But few of us are ready to hear it. "So the grand destiny of man is... to play?" Does our incredulity reflect the absurdity of the proposal, or how far we have trudged from the Garden of Eden? Perhaps the negative connotations of the word reveal less about play than about us: our self-importance, our need to stand out from the rest of creation (and from the rest of our fellows) by accomplishing great things -- the ones we hope will make us more real. We are to play not because there is nothing else to do, not because the lack of some higher meaning means we just while away our time, but because we realize the nature of meaning and time. This is not inconsistent with the selflessness of the bodhisattva, for loss of self- preoccupation is what makes true play possible, what enables the bodhisattva to manifest the liberation he or she teaches:

> To be playful is not to be trivial or frivolous, or to act as though nothing of consequence will happen. On the contrary, when we are playful with each other we relate as free persons, and the relationship is open to surprise; everything that happens is of consequence. It is, in fact, seriousness that closes itself to consequence, for seriousness is a dread of the unpredictable outcome of open possibility. To be serious is to press for a specified conclusion. To be playful is to allow for possibility whatever the cost to oneself.[45]

The problem, ultimately, is "not enjoying yourself", Nietzsche's definition of original sin which is as good a definition of lack. This fits nicely with an equally simple definition of Buddhism offered by the Vietnamese teacher Thich Nhat Hanh: a clever way to enjoy your life.

David Loy,Faculty of International Studies, Bunkyo University, 1100 Namegaya, Chigasaki 253,Fapan.

NOTES

[1]NIETZSCHE, FRIEDRICH(1968)in: Twilight of the Idols [hereafter "TI" in the text, with section number] and The Anti-Christ, tran. R. J. Hollingdale (Trans and Ed.)(Harmondsworth:Penguin), No. 20, p.129.

[2]NIETZSCHE,FRIENDRICH(1968)in: WALTER KAUFMANN & R. J. HOLLINGDALE (Trans.) The Will to Power ["WP"] (New York: Random House, 1968), No. 55. See also, e.g., WP Nos. 179, 23, 64, 55.

[3] This paper does not address the important question about how much Nietzsche's texts constitute a system or whether "there is no such thing either as the truth of Nietzsche, or of Nietzsche's text" (Derrida, Spurs). I assume that it is valuable to discover/construct a consistent philosophy. My interpretation of eternal recurrence is more "literal" than is fashionable nowadays, yet there is abundant textual support for it. In my opinion the apparent absurdity of such an identical repetition, rather than any lack of textual evidence, has led to the vast literature denying its literality. But to argue for this would leave little space for the rest of the paper.

Some other comparative studies, with rather different approaches, are found in Freny Mistry's monograph Nietzsche and Buddhism (De Gruyter, 1981), Nishitani's Religion and Nothingness (University of California Press, 1882), and Graham Parkes, ed., Nietzsche and Asian Thought (University of Hawaii, 1990).

4.See, for example, Ernest Becker, The Denial of Death and Escape from Evil (New York: The Free Press, 1973, 1975) and Irvin D. Yalom, Existential Psychotherapy (New York: Basic Books, 1980).

5.See Norman O. Brown, Life Against Death: The Psychoanalytic Meaning of History (New York: Vintage, 1961), p. 118 and passim.

6.Life Against Death, p. 268.

7.See, e.g., WP nos. 489, 518, 561.

8.TANAHASHI, KAZUAKI(Ed.)(1985)Moon in a Dewdrop: Writings of Zen Master Dogen (San Francisco: North Point Press), p.70.

9.The Zen Teaching of Huang Po, trans. John Blofeld (London: Buddhist Society, 1958), p. 41.

10.For more on the Buddhist approach to repression and the return of the repressed, see David Loy, Lack and Transcendence: the problem of death and life in psychotherapy, existentialism and buddhism (Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey: Humanities Press, 1995).

11.NIETZSCHE, FRIEDRICH(1973) in: R.J. HOLLINGDALE (Trans.) Beyond Good and Evil ["BGE"] (Harmondsworth: Penguin), No.108, p. 78.

12.See also WP 273.

13.NIETZSCHE, FRIEDRICH(1973) in: R. J. HOLLINGDALE (Trans.) Human, All Too Human (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press), p.9.

14.HOLLINGDALE, R. J. in a note to his ed. of Nietzsche's Twilight of the Idols and The Anti-Christ, p. 196.

15.Escape from Evil, pp. 81, 114.

16.The Denial of Death, p. 154.

17.Escape from Evil, p. 123.

18.BGE 2 also identifies the fundamental faith of metaphysicians as "faith in antithetical values", but the Buddhist solution is different than, e.g., WP 272, where Nietzsche is concerned to demonstrate "how everything praised as moral is identical in essence with everything immoral." Buddhism instead emphasizes how the meaning of each term in such dualisms is dependent upon the other, so that, e.g., concern to be "pure" involves a preoccupation with "impurity".

19.WP 786 dreams of the antithesis between egoism and altruism disappearing in the future, when finally "one grasps that altruistic actions are only a species of egoistic actions -- and that the degree to which one loves, spends oneself, proves the degree of individual power and personality." Buddhism implies the reverse, that egoistic actions are a subspecies of altruistic (i.e., nondual) ones, inverted by the delusion of a self/subject which believes itself to be other than the world.

20.KAUFMANN, WALTER(Trans.) (1974) The Gay Science "GS",(New York: Vintage), No. 347, p.287.

21. GS 355. Because Nehamas, in his Nietzsche: Life as Literature (Harvard University Press, 1985), does not perceive how this desire for security motivates our search for truth (which becomes a sublimated, intellectualized form of being), his discussion of truth in ch. 2 is weakened.

22. "On Truth and Lie in the Extramoral Sense," in The Viking Portable Nietzsche, tran. and ed. Walter Kaufmann (New York: Viking, 1964), 47; WP 493. On the necessity of ignorance, see, e.g., WP 609.

23.Letter to Fuchs, 26 August 1888.

24.Escape from Evil, p. 124; The Denial of Death,pp. 1, 5, 189.

25.The Denial of Death, pp. 178, 6.

26.The translation ["MMK"] used here is Mervyn Sprung's in his edition of Lucid Exposition of the Middle Way (Boulder, CO: Prajna Press, 1979), Candrakirti's classic commentary on the MMK. The following verses, and Candrakirti's commentary on them, is on pp. 230-234.

27.The Diamond Sutra and the Sutra of Hui Neng,trans. A. F. Price and Wong Mou- lam (Boston: Shambhala, 1990), p. 43.

28.James P. Carse, Finite and Infinite Games (New York: Free Press, 1986), p. 145.

29."On Truth and Lie in the Extramoral Sense," pp.46-47.

30.Finite and Infinite Games, p. 106.

31.Jacques Derrida, Writing and Difference, trans. Alan Bass (Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 197 8), p. 111.

32.The particular danger with Buddhist meta-ideology is the version of dualistic thinking that motivates it: the distinction between nirvana and samsara, enlightenment and delusion. Enlightenment includes realizing how the distinction we come to make between enlightenment and delusion is itself delusive, that enlightenment does not liberate us in the fashion we look to be saved. What makes the game of enlightenment-versus-delusion a meta-ideology is that this realization is essential to the game.

33.Paul Tillich, The Courage to Be (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1952), p. 57.

34.GS 341, p. 274; Friedrich Nietzsche, Thus Spoke Zarathustra ["Z"], tran.R. J. Hollingdale (Harmondsworth: Penguin, 1961), "The Intoxicated Song" dsworth: Penguin, 1961), "The Intoxicated Song" p. 326.

35.Z pp. 333, 331-2. The passage from GS that discusses ER says: "Or have you once experienced a tremendous moment..." (no. 341) See also WP 1032.

36. Michel Haar, "Nietzsche and Metaphysical Language," in David B. Allinson, ed., The New Nietzsche [New York: Delta, 1979], p. 31.

37. In this way that Madhyamika dependent-origination refutes itself to become non-dependent non-origination. For more on the Buddhist understanding of time and causality, see David Loy, Nonduality: A Study in Comparative Philosophy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1988), ch. 6.

38. Rainer Maria Rilke, Duino Elegy IX.

39. The last sentence of The Genealogy of Morals.

40. Irvin D. Yalom, Existential Psychotherapy (New York: Basic Books, 1980), p. 482.

41. The Buddhist concern to overcome the delusion of subject-object duality adds another dimension: to become enlightened is to forget one's own suffering only to wake up in (or one with) a world of suffering. Mahayana Buddhism found its ideal in the bodhisattva, who is devoted to helping others: not because one ought to, but because one is the situation and through oneself that situation draws forth a response to meet its needs.

42. Jacques Derrida, The Archaeology of the Frivolous, trans. J. P. Leavey (Pittsburg: Duquesne University Press, 1980), 118. In Derrida's terms, it is the difference between dreaming of deciphering a truth which will end play by restoring self-presence, and affirming the play which no longer seeks to ground itself.

43. James Hillman, Re-Visioning Psychology (New York: Harper and Row, 1975), p. 191.

44. The Denial of Death pp. 201, 202. The "need for legitimate foolishness" was Otto Rank's cure for neurosis.

45. Finite and Infinite Play, p. 15.

Lust For Mother In Law (Mother in a law is all he wants) byLovely_Emma_21©

I've always loved my wife but she's a bit of a prude. I met her in high school and back then h sweet. It was a turn on too because she was willing to be taught. Yeah, I taught Stacy every move her hips when I was buried inside her to how to move her tongue when she gave me a grew up and left for college, Stacy turned to religion. I think she was bored and needed som her time.

So then, she found everything about sex dirty. Of course, she'd still do what she termed her more blowjobs and definitely no other position but missionary. In fact, no matter what I tried, get her to cum. She said women weren't meant to enjoy sex and she didn't want to go again say, it wasn't really worth the effort anymore when she wasn't even wet enough to make it fe the time, I came in my own hand instead of in my wife. She seemed grateful. I was miserabl

Every Christmas, our son, Jeff, comes home for college and Stacy's parents stay with us wh month. Stacy's parents, Gwen and Dan, don't come up to New Jersey from Florida very ofte house is full, it's great to have everyone around. I had no idea this particular Christmas woul very good.

My son and my father in law enjoy golf, but I never really got into it. The spent a lot of time d and going to indoor ranges while they were in New Jersey. Stacy went to church often, beca festivities, and she would also shop often. I'd find myself alone with Stacy's mother, Gwen. S shopping because she's a bit overweight and walking wears her out easily. She's a great wo with humor and always smiling.

Gwen actually carries most of her weight in her tits, though her hips are pretty wide too. May coldness in the bedroom was really making me horny as hell but when my mother in law car morning in her nightgown, my dick got hard. I don't know why I found her saggy tits a turn on huge and I wanted to bury my face and dick in them. I also wanted to grab onto her hips, esp behind, and plunge my rock-hard, nine-inch dick all the way inside her. I was almost breathle images as she moved around the kitchen.

Now, Gwen is not a prude about things like Stacy. In fact, when she tells some of her jokes, crude and sometimes make me blush. No, Stacy does not get her obsession with pure thoug Still, though, I doubt Gwen would be opened to getting fucked by her own son in law.

Oh, but I wanted her. She tried to make conversations with me – we've always gotten along could concentrate on were those tits of hers. They were mammoth and amazing. I wanted to to excuse myself anyway when my erection became too painful. I actually almost blew my lo sweatpants when Gwen leaned over the table to reach for the salt. Shit, her tits ended near Why did that make me want to grab them? I went to the bathroom and didn't last long but the

I knew the following days would be exactly the same from us being alone to her wearing her kitchen and me restraining myself from fucking her brainless. I could have left the house to a situation but I was horny enough to see only one solution. I had to have her.

"Don sure does love his golf," I said to her.

"Oh, he does. That's all he every does anymore."

And just like that, I had my advantage. "I hope he doesn't ignore you.

"Oh, I spend a lot of time alone but he does have fun so . . ."

"If I were Dan, I'd never want to leave your bed."

She looked up from her breakfast. "Mike, you don't have to say things like that to me."

"I know that," I said, my eyes locked on hers. "But it's true. You're an amazingly sexy woman

Now, she said, "You shouldn't say things like that to me, Mike."

I got up from my chair and stood right beside her. Her breathing was heavy and her eyes slo
I wanted them to focus. My dick, though covered in my sweatpants, was all but pointing at h tell you I want to fuck you?"

She gasped, her eyes glued to my dick. "Mike…"

The phone rang before either one of us could make the next move. When I finally got the an off the phone, Gwen was no longer in the kitchen. I jerked off right there and after I cleaned figured I'd leave her alone. Tomorrow was a new day after all.

The next morning, Gwen said, "Mike, we need to talk about what you happened yesterday. Y sorry for me. You don't need to say those things.

I sat across from her calmly. “You’re right, Gwen. What I need to do if fuck you.”

She stood and went to the sink, her breathing heavy. She was struggling with herself, I coul her, pressed my erection into her ass and she moaned, leaning against me slightly. “I love m said in a whisper. “I don’t want to hurt him or Stacy.”

I put my hands on her hips and squeezed. I was near heaven. “Me neither,” I told her. “But I Now.”

“Oh, Mike.” She pushed back against me harder and I had to grit my teeth from the pleasure

Slowly, I gathered her nightgown until I could see her large ass, covered by her underwear.
over her ass cheeks and she leaned over further to put all of her ass into my hands. I pushe further and told her to hold it. As she did, I pulled her underwear down even while I freed my couldn’t wait. I pushed a hand onto her back so that her face all but rested on the counter. W finger into her pussy, I was surprised first by how incredibly wet she was and then by how tig was. Either Dan had a tiny dick or it had been a hell of a long time since she’d been fucked.

She cried out and came as I finger-fucked her. Then, I put my cock at her entrance and grab just the way I imagined.

“Tell me you want it,” I told her.

“I want you to fuck me,” she said harshly. “I want you to bury that huge cock of yours deep in

“Yeah,” I said. “Me too.”

So I plunged into my mother in law and she screamed as I let out a shout of my own. She w and I had been without just that for too long.

“Jesus! Fuck me, Mike! God, you’re huge! Fuck me hard!” She yelled things over and over a
She was so hot as she moved her hips to take me deep as I drove in and out, in and out, ov came with a great groan and then she came too for probably the third of forth time.

We were both panting as I stepped away from her and she rested heavily against the counte at the table but as I watched her, sweaty with her ass still hanging out and our mixed juices legs, I started to get hard again.

“Let’s go upstairs,” I said to her.

She looked at me and since my cock still hung out of my pants, she knew damn well why I w mother in law shook her head. “I can’t. Christ, I can’t even walk.”

I stood up. “The living room then. I want to see your tits this time.”

Her only reaction was to let her nightgown fall around her as she straightened and led the w room.

I sat on the couch while she waited for instruction. It was such a turn on that she was willing anything. It had been so long since Stacy had been willing. I pushed my sweatpants down a Gwen’s eyes were glued to my rapidly growing cock once again.

“Jesus, you’re huge.”

I wanted to tell her it was all for her but I realized I’d rather show her. “Take it off,” I told her.

She stripped her nightgown off so that she stood in front of me naked. The sight of my moth hanging on either side of her bellybutton had my dick at full attention. It was sick that saggy want to shoot all over them.

“Come here,” I told her. “Sit on me.”

She hesitated. “I’m too heavy.”

“I said sit on me.”

Her nipples were responding so I know she liked me ordering her around. Slowly, she move dripping pussy resting on my thighs.

I pulled her hips so that my cock rested right at the entrance to her snatch, my head against moan pushed her tits towards me. It was the moment I had longed for. I took one of her giga hands and brought it up to my lips, sucking her large and extended nipple into my mouth.

She continued to moan. I pushed forward slightly with my cock and she came, saying, “Fuck

But I wasn’t done yet. I moved to her other tit and gave it the same attention. Then, I made h couldn’t stop touching her tits then and I tried to get as much of one in my mouth as possible much but I licked and bit at her nipples until she held my head between her hands, pulling m she couldn’t stand it and moved her hips forward quickly so that my cock drove deeply into h us lasted long this time since the tit action had us both so far gone.

After I came into my mother in law’s wet, hot pussy, I continued to chew on her tits until she stop. “I can’t take any more. If I come again, I’ll pass out.” The way she was panting, I believ her tits alone but kissed her, sucking her tongue into my mouth until she pulled away, this tir She grabbed her nightgown, got her underwear from the kitchen, and headed upstairs.

I watched her cunt drip my load while she moved. God, I wanted her again. I decided to leav though, because my cock actually was starting to wear and I wanted to save up for the next

That night at dinner, I couldn’t take my eyes off my mother in law. I even offered to clear the I could distract myself. My cock was pushing painfully against my jeans as I moved into the k her mother came in with more plates and I made sure the counter blocked my erection. They something, and then Stacy got the dessert out and went back to the dining room. She asked me get the ice cream.

When we were alone, I moved so Gwen could see my cock and she gasped. Standing close wrong with you?”

“You,” I told my mother in law, pulling her to me. I kissed her deeply, pulling her tongue into then diving my own into her mouth repeatedly in a fucking motion. I also grabbed her tit, fond her clothes. Her bra frustrated the hell out of me but not much could be done.

“Mike, stop. Everyone’s right out there.”

“Help me, then,” I told her, thrusting my painful erection towards her.

She glanced at the dining room doorway. We heard them all laughing about a story Dan told law opened my jeans and released my cock. I kept my hand on her tit, finding her nipple and between my thumb and forefinger. She swayed towards me as her hand wrapped around m and down, then, to my shock, she got down and took my cock in her mouth. I had to let go o was a small price to pay as my mother in law gave me an expert blowjob. She was amazing her urgent sucking. She also swallowed every drop that exploding from me, licking me clean

Stacy called for her mother then so she broke away from me but she smiled before she took the dining room.

The next day, I was just getting ready to go downstairs when Gwen came into my room. Nak at the sight of my mother in law.

Moving to the bed, she said, “I’ve been horny ever since I gave you that blowjob. I couldn’t i damn thing last night. He was too busy snoring.” She lay down on her back and looked at m puny little dick wouldn’t have satisfied me anyway. Come fuck me, Michael. I don’t know wh me for but I know that cock of yours is all I want anymore.”

I took my sweatpants off and moved onto the bed. I was already hard from looking at my mo naked on the bed I shared with her daughter. She opended her legs but I pushed them dow waist, my cock already touching her breasts. Gwen grinned at me, knowing I wanted to fuck in law pulled the sagging monsters up and pushed them into my cock. I jerked against them
She squeezed me tighter the faster I went and I told her I was going to cum.

She said, “Cum all over me, Michael. Blow your load all over my tits.”

I did as she told me and she opened her mouth too so I gave her some cum to eat.

“Now move aside,” my mother in law instructed me and I realized I liked being instructed too

I got off and sat beside her.

She shocked the hell out of me when she lifted her tits up to her mouth and licked them clea
It was the most erotic scene I ever witnessed and I had to wrap a hand around my hard coc liked what I saw so my mother in law pulled one of her tits up all the way and began to suck nipple. It was amazing and I almost came again, especially when she moved a hand down t finger-fucking herself while she sucked her own tits.

“I want to see you cum,” I told her so she sped it all up, her eyes locked on mine as I stroke watched my mother in law masturbate.

When she came, she started panting even while she smiled at me. “Come fuck me, Michael law because she loves your huge cock inside her.”

I settled on top of her, but didn’t enter her because I wanted to hear her talk some more.

“Do you do any of this with my daughter?” she asked me. She gripped my ass cheeks and p
My cock rubbed against her dripping pussy. “Does my daughter let you titty fuck her? Does s mouth and suck you dry? Christ,” she moaned. “I want to do it all again. Does she?”

“No,” I told her, starting to go inside her. “She doesn’t even get wet for me and she never tou

“Oh, baby. Let Mommy take care of you then.” She lifted her hips until I was all the way in he both sighed. “That’s it. Put your huge cock in Mommy’s pussy and let her take care of you.”

We moved together slowly and I fondled her huge tits and gripped her wide hips. We kissed other’s tongues and I could taste my own cum in her mouth - the cum she had licked off her We fucked slowly for a long time and she would cum, moaning loudly, only to come down an moans building in volume with each orgasm.

“Cum in Mommy,” she told me, over and over. “Jesus, Michael, come in Mommy.” When I di shook, cumming harder than I maybe ever have. I never thought missionary position could h

Over the next few days, we fucked whenever we could, even in the middle of the night. We w living room with the rest of the house asleep one floor up. It was even more exciting when w caught was a possibility.

I didn’t know what would happen when it was time for my in laws to return to Florida but I kn
I was going to enjoy fucking my mother in law for as long as I could.

|| namo tassa bhagavato arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa ||

suttantapiá¹-aka majjhimanikÄ• ya

mÅ«lapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sapÄ• á¸·i saá¹ƒgÄ• yanassa pucchÄ• vissajjanÄ•

__pucchÄ• --- _ paá¹-hamamahÄ• saá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• le \Be I 1/ Ä• vuso dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• ha mahÄ• theravarÄ• dÄ«ghanikÄ• yaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yitvÄ• tadanantaraá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ nÄ• ma pÄ• __vissajjanÄ• --- _ paá¹-hamamahÄ• saá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• le bhante dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakÄ• m mahÄ• theravarÄ• dÄ«ghanikÄ• yaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yitvÄ• tadanantaraá¹ƒ majjhimaá¹ƒ nÄ• m __pucchÄ• --- _ majjhimanikÄ• yo \Be I 2/ nÄ• ma Ä• vuso mÅ«lapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sako majjhim uparipaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakoti paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakavasena tividho, tattha kataraá¹ƒ paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakaá saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tÄ«su bhante paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakesu mÅ«lapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma pA dhammasaá¹ƒgÄ• hakÄ• mahÄ• theravarÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__pucchÄ• --- _ mÅ«lapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakepi \Be I 3/ Ä• vuso paÃ±cavaggÄ• paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sa vaggaá¹ƒ kataraÃ±ca suttaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ mÅ«lapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sake bhante paÃ±casu vaggesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ mÅ«l paá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sakesu ca suttesu paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ mÅ«lapariyÄ• yasuttaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒgÄ• yiá¹ƒsu.

sÄ• dhu Ä• vuso mayampi dÄ• ni tatoyeva paá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya saá¹ƒgÄ«tipubbaá¹…gamÄ• ni p kÄ• tuá¹ƒ samÄ• rabhÄ• ma.

mÅ«lapariyÄ• yasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tena Ä• vuso bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• sambu kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ukkaá¹-á¹-hÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante paÃ±casate brÄ• hmaá¹‡akulÄ• pabbajite

paÃ±casatÄ• bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡akulÄ• pabbajitÄ• \Be I 4/ bhikkhÅ« pariyattiá¹ƒ nissÄ• y
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso suttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• katihi vÄ• rehi katihi ca antogadha
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ \Be I 5/ pana bhante mÅ«lapariyÄ• yasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• aá¹-á catuvÄ«satiyÄ• ca antogadhapadehi vibhajitvÄ• desitaá¹ƒ.

sabbÄ• savasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dutiyaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso sabbÄ• savasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• n

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sabbÄ• savasuttaá¹ƒ pana bhante bhagavatÄ• sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ sambal
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 6/ bhagavatÄ• Ä• savÄ• katihi pakÄ• rehi vibhajitvÄ• __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sattahi bhante pakÄ• rehi vibhajitvÄ• Ä• savÄ• bhagavatÄ• pakÄ• sit dhammadÄ• yÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dhammadÄ• yÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 7/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, b bhikkhusaá¹…ghassa ca tadÄ• mahÄ• lÄ• bhasakkÄ• ro udapÄ• di, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthu __pucchÄ• --- _ tatthÄ• vuso \Be I 9/ dve anusandhayo, tesu paá¹-hame anusandhimhi kat bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• do dinno.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paá¹-hame bhante anusandhimhi dhammadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• me bhikkhave atthi me tumhesu anukampÄ• , kinti me sÄ• vakÄ• dhammadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• bhaveyyuá¹ƒ no A bhagavatÄ• bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• do dinno.

dhammadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• \Be I 11/ me bhikkhave bhavatha mÄ• Ä• misadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• , atthi m sÄ• vakÄ• dhammadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• bhaveyyuá¹ƒ, no Ä• misadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ dutiye \Be I 12/ panÄ• vuso anusandhimhi Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtatthere kÄ«disÄ« dhammadesanÄ• vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ dutiye pana bhante anusandhimhi Ä• yasmatÄ• sÄ• riputtattherena dh pavivittassa viharato sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ vivekaá¹ƒ ananusikkhataá¹ƒ tÄ«hi á¹-hÄ• nehi gÄ• ra anusikkhantÄ• naÃ±ca tÄ«hi á¹-hÄ• nehi pÄ• saá¹ƒsataá¹ƒ, soá¸·asa ca pÄ• pake dhamme paá¹-ipadÄ• vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

bhayabheravasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bhayabheravasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 13/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante jÄ• á¹‡ussoá¹‡iá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
jÄ• á¹‡ussoá¹‡i bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``ye n bhavantaá¹ƒ gotamaá¹ƒ uddissa saddhÄ• agÄ• rasmÄ• anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabbajitÄ• , bhava pubbaá¹…gamo, bhavaá¹ƒ

tesaá¹ƒ \Be I 14/ gotamo bahukÄ• ro, bhavaá¹ƒ tesaá¹ƒ gotamo samÄ• dapetÄ• , bhoto ca diá¹-á¹-hÄ• nugatiá¹ƒ Ä• pajjatÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

anaá¹…gaá¹‡asutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anaá¹…gaá¹‡asuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 15/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kena

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• s dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• kaá¹…kheyyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ Ä• kaá¹…kheyyasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

vatthasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vatthasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 16/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sallekhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sallekhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 17/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ• cundaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bh mahÄ• cundo bhante bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``yÄ• imÄ• bhante ar uppajjanti, attavÄ• dapaá¹-isaá¹ƒyuttÄ• vÄ• lokavÄ• dapaá¹-isaá¹ƒyuttÄ• vÄ• , Ä• dimeva manasikaroto evametÄ• saá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hÄ«naá¹ƒ pahÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti, evametÄ• saá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattha \Be I 18/ ca Ä• vuso kati pariyÄ• yÄ• kati ca antogadhapadÄ• ni bh pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattha bhante paÃ±ca pariyÄ• yÄ• catucattÄ• lÄ«sa ca antogadhapadÄ vitthÄ• rena bhÄ• sitÄ• ni.

sammÄ• á¹-á¹-hisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sammÄ• diá¹-á¹-hisuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 19/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• s dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kassa Ä• vuso vacanaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bhagavato bhante vacanaá¹ƒ arahato sammÄ• sambuddhassa.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kenÄ• vuso Ä• bhataá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paramparÄ• ya bhante Ä• bhataá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 20/ panÄ• vuso yogÄ• vacarÄ• na dÄ«ghanikÄ• ye ca idha cÄ• ti dvÄ«su nikÄ• yesu porÄ• á¹‡akehi saá¹ƒgÄ«tikÄ• rehi dvikkh

vitthÄ• rena patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• pitaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ amhehi dÄ«ghanikÄ• ye yathÄ• nuppattavasena pu tathÄ• pi yogÄ• vacarÄ• naá¹ƒ bahupakÄ• rattÄ• yeva taá¹ƒ \Be I 21/ idÄ• nipi yathÄ• nupp pucchissÄ• mi, taá¹ƒ panetaá¹ƒ Ä• vuso mahÄ• satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• kat
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kurÅ«su bhante kammÄ• sadhamme nÄ• ma kurÅ«naá¹ƒ nigame samb
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 22/ tattha Ä• nÄ• pÄ• nassati kÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ•
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha bhikkhave bhikkhu araÃ±Ã±agato vÄ• rukkhamÅ«lagato vÄ• suÃ nisÄ«dati pallaá¹…kaá¹ƒ Ä• bhujitvÄ• ujuá¹ƒ kÄ• yaá¹ƒ paá¹‡idhÄ• ya parimukhaá¹ƒ satiá¹ satova assasati, satova passasati, dÄ«ghaá¹ƒ vÄ• assasanto `dÄ«ghaá¹ƒ assasÄ• mÄ«â€™ vÄ• passasanto `dÄ«ghaá¹ƒ passasÄ• mÄ«â€™ ti pajÄ• nÄ• ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tatth kÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ• bhagavatÄ• vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 23/ tattha iriyÄ• pathakÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ• bhaga
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ puna caparaá¹ƒ bhikkhave bhikkhu gacchanto vÄ• gacchÄ• mÄ«ti pajÄ á¹-hitomhÄ«ti pajÄ• nÄ• ti, nisinno vÄ• nisinnomhÄ«ti pajÄ• nÄ• ti, sayÄ• no vÄ• sayÄ• no evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• iriyÄ• pathakÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• vibhajitv __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 24/ tattha sampajaÃ±Ã±akÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ• bha

pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ puna caparaá¹ƒ bhikkhave bhikkhu abhikkante paá¹-ikkante sampajÄ• n vilokite sampajÄ• nakÄ• rÄ« hoti, samiÃ±jite pasÄ• rite sampajÄ• nakÄ• rÄ« hoti, saá¹…ghÄ• á¹-ipattacÄ«varadhÄ• raá¹‡e sampajÄ• nakÄ• rÄ« hoti, asite pÄ«te khÄ• yite sÄ uccÄ• rapassÄ• vakamme sampajÄ• nakÄ• rÄ« hoti, gate á¹-hite nisinne sutte jÄ• garite bhÄ sampajÄ• nakÄ• rÄ« hoti, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• tattha sampajaÃ±Ã±akÄ• yÄ•
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 26/ tattha paá¹-ikÅ«lamanasikÄ• rakÄ• yÄ• nupass
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ puna caparaá¹ƒ bhikkhave bhikkhu imameva kÄ• yaá¹ƒ uddhaá¹ƒ pÄ• d

tacapariyantaá¹ƒ pÅ«raá¹ƒ nÄ• nappakÄ• rassa asucino paccavekkhati atthi imasmiá¹ƒ kÄ• dantÄ• taco evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• paá¹-ikÅ«lamanasikÄ• rakÄ• yÄ• nu
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 27/ tattha dhÄ• tumanasikÄ• rakÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ puna caparaá¹ƒ bhikkhave bhikkhu imameva kÄ• yaá¹ƒ yathÄ• á¹-hitaá dhÄ• tuso paccavekkhati atthi imasmiá¹ƒ kÄ• ye pathavÄ«dhÄ• tu Ä• podhÄ• tu tejodhÄ• tu bhante bhagavatÄ• dhÄ• tumanasikÄ• rakÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ• vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 28/ tattha nava sivathikakÄ• yÄ• nupassanÄ• bha
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ puna caparaá¹ƒ bhikkhave bhikkhu seyyathÄ• pi passeyya sarÄ«raá¹ƒ chaá¸• á¸• itaá¹ƒ ekÄ• hamataá¹ƒ vÄ• dvÄ«hamataá¹ƒ vÄ• tÄ«hamataá¹ƒ vÄ• uddhumÄ• vipubbakajÄ• taá¹ƒ so imameva kÄ• yaá¹ƒ upasaá¹ƒharati ``ayampi kho kÄ• yo evaá¹ƒdhan evaá¹ƒanatÄ«toâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• nava sivathikakÄ• yÄ vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 29/ tattha vedanÄ• nupassanÄ• bhagavatÄ• vibh __vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha bhikkhave bhikkhu sukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• vedanaá¹ƒ vedayamÄ• no ``sukh vedayÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti pajÄ• nÄ• ti, dukkhaá¹ƒ vÄ• vedanaá¹ƒ vedayamÄ• no ``dukkha pajÄ• nÄ• ti, adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒ vÄ• vedanaá¹ƒ vedayamÄ• no ``adukkhamasukhaá¹ƒ ve pajÄ• nÄ• ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• vedanÄ• nupassanÄ• vibhajitvÄ• p __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 30/ tattha cittÄ• nupassanÄ• bhagavatÄ• vibhajitv __vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha bhikkhave bhikkhu sarÄ• gaá¹ƒ vÄ• cittaá¹ƒ ``sarÄ• gaá¹ƒ cittaâ€™ vÄ«tarÄ• gaá¹ƒ vÄ• cittaá¹ƒ ``vÄ«tarÄ• gaá¹ƒ cittaâ€™â€™ nti pajÄ• nÄ• ti, sadosaá¹ƒ vÄ• samohaá¹ƒ vÄ• vÄ«tamohaá¹ƒ vÄ• saá¹ƒkhittaá¹ƒ vÄ• cittaá¹ƒ ``saá¹ƒkhittaá¹ƒ cittaâ€™â vikkhittaá¹ƒ vÄ• cittaá¹ƒ ``vikkhittaá¹ƒ cittaâ€™â€™ nti pajÄ• nÄ• ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• tattha b cittÄ• nupassanÄ• vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 31/ tattha dhammÄ• nupassanÄ• bhagavatÄ• vib saá¹…khepamatteneva vissajjehi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha bhikkhave bhikkhu dhammesu dhammÄ• nupassÄ« viharati, paÃ± evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• paÃ±cahi pabbehi dhammÄ• nupassanÄ• vibhaj

cÅ«á¸·asÄ«hanÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·anasÄ«hanÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 32/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante parihÄ«nalÄ• bhasakkÄ• re nÄ• nÄ• titthiye Ä• nÄ• nÄ• titthiyÄ• bhante parihÄ«nalÄ• bhasakkÄ• rÄ• tesu tesu á¹-hÄ• nesu parideviá¹ƒsu bhagavato ekamatthaá¹ƒ Ä• rocesuá¹ƒ, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• sÄ«hanÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 34/ bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• mahÄ• sÄ«hanÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante sunakkhattaá¹ƒ licchaviputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• s bhante licchaviputto acirapakkanto hoti imasmÄ• dhammavinayÄ• , so vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ parisa bhÄ• sati \Be I 35/ ``natthi samaá¹‡assa gotamassa uttarimanussadhammÄ• alamariyaÃ±Ä takkapariyÄ• hataá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o gotamo dhammaá¹ƒ deseti vÄ«maá¹ƒsÄ• nucaritaá¹ƒ sayaa khvÄ• ssa atthÄ• ya dhammo desito, so niyyÄ• ti takkarassa sammÄ• dukkhakkhayÄ• yÄ• Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputto bhagavato Ä• rocesi, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kati \Be I 36/ panÄ• vuso tattha bhagavatÄ• tathÄ• gatassa tathÄ• gataba pakÄ• sitÄ• ni, yehi balehi samannÄ• gato tathÄ• gato Ä• sabhaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• sÄ«hanÄ• daá¹ƒ nadati, brahmacakkaá¹ƒ pavatteti.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ dasa bhante tathÄ• gatassa tathÄ• gatabalÄ• ni bhagavatÄ• vibhajitvÄ balehi samannÄ• gato tathÄ• gato Ä• sabhaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti, parisÄ• su sÄ brahmacakkaá¹ƒ pavatteti.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 39/ tattha bhagavatÄ• catuverajjaÃ±Ä• á¹‡Ä• ni vi yehi vesÄ• rajjehi samannÄ• gato tathÄ• gato Ä• sabhaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti, pa nadati, brahmacakkaá¹ƒ pavatteti.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ khÄ«á¹‡Ä• savassa te paá¹-ijÄ• nato ime Ä• savÄ• aparikkhÄ«á¹‡Ä• ti vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o vÄ• devo vÄ• mÄ• ro vÄ• brahmÄ• vÄ• koci vÄ• lokasmiá¹ƒ sahadh nimittametaá¹ƒ sÄ• riputta na samanupassÄ• mi, etamahaá¹ƒ sÄ• riputta nimittaá¹ƒ asaman abhayappatto vesÄ• rajjappatto viharÄ• mi. evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha catuvesÄ• rajjaÃ± vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 41/ tattha bhagavatÄ• paÃ±cagatiparicchedaÃ±Ä• pakÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paÃ±ca kho imÄ• sÄ• riputta gatiyo, katamÄ• paÃ±ca, nirayo tiracchÄ manussÄ• devÄ• , evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• tattha paÃ±cagatiparicchedakaÃ±Ä pakÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 43/ tattha tathÄ• gato attano paÃ±Ã±Ä• veyyattiyÄ
pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ santi kho pana sÄ• riputta eke samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• evaá¹ƒvÄ• dir yÄ• vadevÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhavaá¹ƒ puriso daharo hoti, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha tathÄ• gato a aparihÄ• niá¹ƒ pakÄ• sesi.

mahÄ• dukkhakkhandhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• dukkhakkhandhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 45/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±atitthiye Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, sambah aÃ±Ã±atitthiyÄ• bhikkhÅ« etadavocuá¹ƒ ``samaá¹‡o Ä• vuso gotamo kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ pariÃ kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ pariÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apema, samaá¹‡o Ä• vuso gotamo rÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be paÃ±Ã±apeti, mayampi rÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ vedanÄ• naá¹ƒ pariÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apema, idha no adhippayÄ• so, kiá¹ƒ nÄ• nÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ samaá¹‡assa vÄ• gotamassa amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ vÄ• dhammadesanaá¹ƒ anusÄ• saniyÄ• vÄ• anusÄ• saniâ€™â€™ nti, etamatthaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«
bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·adukkhakkhandhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·adukkhakkhandhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 47/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ mahÄ• nÄ• maá¹ƒ sakkaá¹ƒ Ä• rab bhante sakko bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``dÄ«gharattÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mi `lobho cittassa upakkileso, doso cittassa upakkileso, moho cittassa evaÃ±cÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante bhagavatÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mi `lobho cittassa up upakkileso, moho cittassa upakkilesoâ€™ ti. atha ca pana me ekadÄ• lobhadhammÄ• pi ci tiá¹-á¹-hanti, dosadhammÄ• pi cittaá¹ƒ pariyÄ• dÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hanti, mohadhammÄ• pi cittaá tiá¹-á¹-hanti, tassa mayhaá¹ƒ bhante evaá¹ƒ hoti `ko su nÄ• ma me dhammo ajjhattaá¹ƒ app me ekadÄ• lobhadhammÄ• pi cittaá¹ƒ pariyÄ• dÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hanti, dosadhammÄ• pi cittaá¹ tiá¹-á¹-hanti, mohadhammÄ• pi cittaá¹ƒ pariyÄ• dÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-hantÄ«â€™ tiâ€™â€™, tasmi

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

anumÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anumÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 49/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kena bh __vissajjanÄ• --- _ bhaggesu bhante susumÄ• ragire bhesakaá¸·Ä• vane Ä• yasmatÄ• ma sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cetokhilasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cetokhilasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 50/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

vanapatthasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vanapatthasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 53/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rab

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

madhupiá¹‡á¸• ikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ madhupiá¹‡á¸• ikasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabb
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante daá¹‡á¸• apÄ• á¹‡iá¹ƒ sakkaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹
sakko bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``kiá¹ƒ vÄ• dÄ« samaá¹‡o kimakkhÄ•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

dvedhÄ• vitakkasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dvedhÄ• vitakkasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 56/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

vitakkasaá¹‡á¹-hÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vitakkasaá¹‡á¹-hÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 57/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha k
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kakacÅ«pamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 58/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena kakacÅ
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ moá¸·iyaphaggunaá¹ƒ Ä• rabb bhante moá¸·iyaphagguno bhikkhunÄ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ \Be I 59/ ativelaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒsaá¹-á¹-ho viha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 61/ kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmato moá¸·iyaphaggunassa taá¹ƒ bhaga kathaá¹ƒ cittaá¹ƒ uppannaá¹ƒ, kathaÃ±ja bhagavÄ• uttari bhikkhÅ«na ovÄ• damadÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante moá¸·iyaphaggunassa bhagavato imaá¹ƒ ovÄ• daá¹ƒ s bhikkhunisaá¹ƒsaggato oramissÄ• mi viramissÄ• mÄ«tipi cittaá¹ƒ na uppannaá¹ƒ, asaá¹ƒva uppannaá¹ƒ, bhagavÄ• ca bhante Ä• rÄ• dhayiá¹ƒsu vata me bhikkhave bhikkhÅ« ekaá¹ƒ s evamÄ• dinÄ• uttari bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• damadÄ• si.

ubhato \Be I 64/ daá¹‡á¸• akena cepi bhikkhave kakacena corÄ• ocarakÄ• aá¹…gamaá¹…

alagaddÅ«pamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ alagaddÅ«pamasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 65/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante ariá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ gaddhabÄ• dhipubba bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, ariá¹-á¹-hassa bhante bhikkhuno gaddhabÄ• dhipubbassa evarÅ«paá¹ƒ pÄ• p uppannaá¹ƒ ``tathÄ• haá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• dÄ• mi, yathÄ• yeme bhagavatÄ• , te paá¹-isevato nÄ• laá¹ƒ antarÄ• yÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthu __pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 68/ kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmato ariá¹-á¹-hassa gaddhabÄ• dhipubb parivitakko udapÄ• di, kathaÃ±ca bhagavÄ• uttari bhikkhunaá¹ƒ dhammadesanaá¹ƒ pavatte __vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante ariá¹-á¹-hassa bhikkhuno gaddhabÄ• dhipubbassa ``ki moghapurisavÄ• dena vadesi, na kho pana me maggaphalÄ• naá¹ƒ upanissayo na hoti, svÄ ghaá¹-á¹-etvÄ• maggaphalÄ• ni nibbattessÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti, evaá¹ƒ kho bhante cetaso p ca bhante duppaÃ±Ã±assa alagaddÅ«pamaá¹ƒ dassetvÄ• alagaddÅ«pamaá¹ƒ pariyattiÃ±c alagaddÅ«pamÄ• ya ca kullÅ«pamÄ• ya ca paÃ±Ã±avato nissaraá¹‡apariyattiá¹ƒ dassetvÄ diá¹-á¹-hiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• ni, tesaÃ±ca channaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-hiá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ viniveá¹-hanÄ pariyosÄ• ne ca khandhakammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ arahattanikÅ«á¹-ena dassetvÄ• uttari bhik pavattesi.

vammikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dhammikasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 73/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabb
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ kumÄ• rakassapaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh bhante kumÄ• rakassapo bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• vammikapaÃ±haá¹ƒ pucchi, t
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

rathavinÄ«tasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ rathavinÄ«tasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 74/ panÄ• vuso kattha kena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• ca sÄ• riputtattherena dhammase puá¹‡á¹‡ena mantÄ• á¹‡iputtena aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ pucchÄ• vissajjanavasena bhÄ• sita

nivÄ• pasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ nivÄ• pasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• s

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ \Be I 77/ Ä• vuso sutte ko nivÄ• po ko nevÄ• piko kÄ• nevÄ• p kathaÃ±cetissÄ• upamÄ• ya attho daá¹-á¹-habbo.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ bhante sutte nivÄ• poti kho bhante paÃ±cannetaá¹ƒ kÄ• ma adhivacanaá¹ƒ, nevÄ• pikoti kho bhante mÄ• rassetaá¹ƒ pÄ• pimato adhivacanaá¹ƒ, nevÄ• mÄ• raparisÄ• yetaá¹ƒ adhivacanaá¹ƒ, migajÄ• tÄ• ti kho bhante samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• imasmiá¹ƒ bhante sutte etassa attho evaá¹ƒ daá¹-á¹-habbo.

pÄ• sarÄ• sisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kenÄ• vuso \Be I 79/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena pÄ• sa
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, s rammakassa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa assame bhagavantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha dhammiyÄ• kathÄ• ya s
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 81/ kho Ä• vuso tesaá¹ƒ sambahulÄ• naá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ dha sannisinnÄ• naá¹ƒ kÄ«disaá¹ƒ dhammakathaá¹ƒ kathesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• dhu bhikkhave etaá¹ƒ kho bhikkhave tumhÄ• kaá¹ƒ patirÅ«paá¹ƒ k agÄ• rasmÄ• anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabbajitÄ• naá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ tumhe dhammiyÄ• kathÄ• ya sannis vo bhikkhave dvayaá¹ƒ karaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ dhammÄ« vÄ• kathÄ• ariyo vÄ• tuá¹‡hÄ«bhÄ• vo ariyÄ• ca pariyesanÄ• anariyÄ• ca pariyesanÄ• . evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• sannip bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ariyapariyesanaÃ±ca anariyapariyesanaÃ±ca vibhajitvÄ• desesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 83/ bhagavÄ• attanÄ• pi anariyapariyesanaá¹ƒ pa pariyesitabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ahampi sudaá¹ƒ bhikkhave pubbeva sambodhÄ• anabhisambuddho bo jÄ• tidhammo samÄ• no jÄ• tidhammaá¹ƒyeva pariyesÄ• mi, attanÄ• jarÄ• dhammo byÄ• d sokadhammo saá¹ƒkilesadhammo samÄ• no saá¹ƒkilesadhammaá¹ƒyeva pariyesÄ• mi. eva attanÄ• pi anariyapariyesanaá¹ƒ pahÄ• ya ariyapariyesanÄ• ya pariyesitabhÄ• vaá¹ƒ pakÄ•

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be I 85/ paá¹-hamÄ• bhisambuddhassa Ä• vuso bhagavato ajapÄ nisinnassa dhammadesanÄ• ya katasanniá¹-á¹-hÄ• nassa kÄ«diso cetaso \Be I 86/ parivitakko udapÄ• di, kathaÃ±ca dhammadesanÄ• ya cÄ• rikÄ• ahosi, ka dhammadesanÄ• ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``kassa nu kho ahaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ deseyyaá¹ƒ, ko imaá Ä• jÄ• nissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavato paá¹-hamÄ• bhisambuddhassa aj dhammadesanÄ• ya katasanniá¹-á¹-hÄ• nassa parivitakko udapÄ• di, atha bhante bhagavÄ yathÄ• bhirantaá¹ƒ viharitvÄ• yena bÄ• rÄ• á¹‡asÄ«, tena padasÄ• yeva cÄ• rikaá¹ƒ pakkÄ bhikkhave antÄ• pabbajitena na sevitabbÄ• , katame dve, yo cÄ• yaá¹ƒ kÄ• mesu kÄ• mas pothujjaniko anariyo anattasaá¹ƒhito, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavato paá¹-hamÄ• dhamm sabbÄ• bhibhÅ« \Be I 89/ sabbavidÅ«hamasmi, sabbadhammesu anÅ«palitto.

sabbaÃ±jaho taá¹‡hÄ• kkhaye vimutto,

sayaá¹ƒ abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• ya kamuddiseyyaá¹ƒ ||

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 92/ bhagavÄ• pÄ• sarÄ• siupamÄ• ya taá¹ƒ desan __vissajjanÄ• --- _ paÃ±cime bhikkhave kÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• , katame paÃ±ca, cakkhuviÃ±Ã±e kantÄ• manÄ• pÄ• piyarÅ«pÄ• kÄ• mÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitÄ• rajanÄ«yÄ• . sotaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• sa jivhÄ• viÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• rasÄ• . kÄ• yaviÃ±Ã±eyyÄ• phoá¹-á¹-habbÄ• iá¹-á¹-hÄ• kantÄ• man kÄ• mÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitÄ• rajanÄ«yÄ• . ime kho bhikkhave paÃ±ca kÄ• maguá¹‡Ä• . ye hi keci brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• ime kÄ• maguá¹‡e gathitÄ• mucchitÄ• ajjhopannÄ• anÄ• dÄ«navad paribhuÃ±janti, te evamassu veditabbÄ• ``anayamÄ• pannÄ• byÄ• sanamÄ• pannÄ• yath pÄ• pimatoâ€™â€™, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• pÄ• sarÄ• siupamÄ• ya dhammade

cÅ«á¸·ahatthipadopamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 94/ jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena cÅ«á¸·aha
kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante jÄ• á¹‡ussoá¹‡iá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
jÄ• á¹‡ussoá¹‡i bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• yÄ• vatako ahos saddhiá¹ƒ kathÄ• sallÄ• po, taá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ bhagavato Ä• rocesi, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusm

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 98/ bhagavÄ• hatthipadopamaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• rena pa __vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``na kho brÄ• hmaá¹‡a ettÄ• vatÄ• hatthipadopamo vitthÄ• rena paripÅ

brÄ• hmaá¹‡a yathÄ• hatthipadopamo vitthÄ• rena paripÅ«ro hoti, taá¹ƒ suá¹‡Ä• hi sÄ• dh bhÄ• sissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• hatthipadopamaá¹ƒ paripÅ« jÄ• á¹‡ussoá¹‡issa desesi.

mahÄ• hatthipadopamasutta __pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• hatthipadopamasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 102/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• ra

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• s dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• sÄ• ropamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• sÄ• ropamasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 103/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante devadattaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, devadatto bha bhinditvÄ• ruhiruppÄ• dakammaá¹ƒ katvÄ• acirapakkanto hoti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá

cÅ«á¸·asÄ• ropamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·asÄ• ropamasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 105/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ka
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante piá¹…galakocchaá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh piá¹…galakoccho bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• paÃ±haá¹ƒ puc
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·agosiá¹…gasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·agosiá¹…gasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 106/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ken __vissajjanÄ• --- _ nÄ• bhike bhante gosiá¹…gasÄ• lavanadÄ• ye Ä• yasmatÄ• anuruddh

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• gosiá¹…gasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• gosiá¹…gasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kena saddhiá¹

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ gosiá¹…gasÄ• lavanadÄ• ye bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• ca sÄ• riputtatthere Ä• yasmatÄ• ca mahÄ• moggallÄ• nattherena saddhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• gopÄ• lakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• gopÄ• lakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 107/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·agopÄ• lakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·agopÄ• lakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 109/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá __vissajjanÄ• --- _ vajjÄ«su bhante ukkacelÄ• yaá¹ƒ gaá¹…gÄ• ya nadiyÄ• tÄ«re sambah

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·asaccakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 110/ jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena cÅ«á¸·as kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante saccakaá¹ƒ nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto mahatiyÄ• licchaviparisÄ• ya saddhiá¹ƒ yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…ka bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``kathaá¹ƒ pana bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo sÄ• vake vineti, kathaá¹ƒ bhÄ• gotamassa sÄ• vakesu anusÄ• sanÄ« bahulÄ• pavattatÄ«â€™â€™ ti, atha bhante bhagav ca pakÄ• site saccako nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto pathavÄ«upamaá¹ƒ dassetvÄ• attano attavÄ• daá
bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be I 114/ Ä• vuso saccakena nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtena mahÄ• pathavÄ attavÄ• de pakÄ• site kathaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• taá¹ƒ attavÄ• daá¹ƒ puna patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• petvÄ• s samanubhÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``nanu tvaá¹ƒ aggivessana evaá¹ƒ vadesi, rÅ«paá¹ƒ me attÄ• , vedanÄ attÄ• , saá¹…khÄ• rÄ• me attÄ• , viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ me attÄ• â€™â€™ ti, evaá¹ƒ kho bhar nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ attavÄ• daá¹ƒ patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• pesi. patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• petvÄ• ca pana hi aggivessana taÃ±Ã±evettha paá¹-ipucchissÄ• mi, yathÄ• te khameyya, tathÄ• taá¹ƒ byÄ evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• saccakaá¹ƒ nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtaá¹ƒ samanuyuÃ±ji samanu __pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be I 119/ kho Ä• vuso saccake nigaá¹‡á¹-haputte tuá¹‡hÄ«bhÅ«te appaá¹-ibhÄ• ne nisinne dummukho nÄ• ma licchaviputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ vacanaá¹ƒ a __vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ bhante saccake nigaá¹‡á¹-haputte tuá¹‡hÄ«bhÅ«te maá¹…kubh adhomukhe pajjhÄ• yante appaá¹-ibhÄ• ne dummukho licchaviputto \Be I 120/ bhagavantaá bhagavÄ• paá¹-ibhÄ• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 121/ kho Ä• vuso saccako nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ kÄ pucchi, kathaÃ±ca taá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante saccako nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto dummukhaá¹ƒ licchaviá¹ƒ a bhagavantaá¹ƒ sekhaÃ±ca asekhaÃ±ca paÃ±haá¹ƒ pucchi, bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``idha agg kiÃ±ci rÅ«paá¹ƒ atÄ«tÄ• nÄ• gatapaccuppannaá¹ƒ ajjhattaá¹ƒ vÄ• bahiddhÄ• vÄ• oá¸·Ä• hÄ«naá¹ƒ vÄ• paá¹‡Ä«taá¹ƒ vÄ• yaá¹ƒ dÅ«re santike vÄ• â€™â€™ evamÄ• dinÄ• sekha vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

buddho \Be I 122/ so bhagavÄ• bodhÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ deseti.

danto so bhagavÄ• damathÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ deseti.

santo so bhagavÄ• samathÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ deseti.

tiá¹‡á¹‡o so bhagavÄ• taraá¹‡Ä• ya dhammaá¹ƒ deseti.

parinibbuto so bhagavÄ• parinibbÄ• nÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ deseti.

mahÄ• saccakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• saccakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 123/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante saccakaá¹ƒyeva nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhante nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto aparadivase bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• bhagavato sÄ• v bhÄ• vanÄ• dvayapaá¹-isaá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ vÄ• caá¹ƒ bhÄ• sati, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ b __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 124/ bhagavÄ• saccakaá¹ƒ nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtaá¹ƒ bhÄ• vanÄ• dvayaá¹ƒ vibhajja kathesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante bhagavÄ• ``kinti pana te aggivessana kÄ• yabhÄ• var evamÄ• dinÄ• saccakaá¹ƒ nigaá¹‡á¹-haputtaá¹ƒ paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• , kathaÃ±ca aggivessana abhÄ• vitacitto ca evamÄ• dinÄ• bhÄ• vanÄ• dvayaá¹ƒ vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 127/ kho Ä• vuso saccako nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ kiâ kathaÃ±ca bhagavÄ• padhÄ• nakÄ• le attanÄ• anubhÅ«tapubbÄ• paramukkaá¹ƒsagatÄ• yÄ• pi bhagavato cittaá¹ƒ na pariyÄ• dÄ• ya aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsu.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante saccako nigaá¹‡á¹-haputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca gotamassa uppajjati, tathÄ• rÅ«pÄ• sukhÄ• vedanÄ• , yathÄ• rÅ«pÄ• uppannÄ• sukhÄ• tiá¹-á¹-heyya, na hi nÅ«na bhoto gotamassa uppajjati tathÄ• rÅ«pÄ• dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• , ya dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• cittaá¹ƒ pariyÄ• dÄ• ya tiá¹-á¹-heyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti atha kho bhagavÄ• `` idha me \Be I 128/ aggivessena pubbeva sambodhÄ• anabhisambuddhassa bodhisattasse evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• padhÄ• nakÄ• le attanÄ• nubhÅ«tapubbÄ• paramukkaá¹ vitthÄ• rena, yÄ• pi bhagavato cittaá¹ƒ na pariyÄ• dÄ• ya aá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒsu.

cÅ«á¸·ataá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 132/ bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddh cÅ«á¸·ataá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khayasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• s __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sakkaá¹ƒ devÄ• namindaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• si devÄ• namindo bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``kittÄ• vatÄ• nukho bhante taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khayavimutto hoti accantaniá¹-á¹-ho accantayogakkhemi \Be I 133/ accanta accantapariyosÄ• no seá¹-á¹-ho devamanussÄ• naâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmi kittÄ• vatÄ• \Be I 134/ nu kho bhante bhikkhu saá¹ƒkhittena taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khayavimutto accantayogakkhemÄ« accantabrahmacÄ• rÄ« accantapariyÄ• sÄ• no seá¹-á¹-ho devamanu

mahÄ• taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• taá¹‡hÄ• saá¹…khayasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaâ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sÄ• tiá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ kevaá¹-á¹-aputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rab sÄ• tissa bhante bhikkhuno kevaá¹-á¹-aputtassa evarÅ«paá¹ƒ pÄ• pakaá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-higataá¹ƒ ``tathÄ• haá¹ƒ bhagavatÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• mi, yathÄ• tadevidaá¹ƒ viÃ±Ã

135/ saá¹ƒsarati anaÃ±Ã±aâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 136/ kho Ä• vuso bhagavÄ• kathaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ« Ä• mantetvÄ• anattabhÄ• vadÄ«pikaá¹ƒ dhammakathaá¹ƒ kathesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha bhante bhagavÄ• bhikkhÅ« ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±atha bhikkhave, bhikkhu kevaá¹-á¹-aputto usmÄ«katopi ismiá¹ƒ dhammavinayeâ€™â€™ ti Ä• mantetvÄ• , tu dhammaá¹ƒ desitaá¹ƒ Ä• jÄ• nÄ• thatyÄ• dinÄ• bhikkhÅ« paá¹-ipucchitvÄ• ca yaá¹ƒ yadev paá¹-icca uppajjati viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ, tena teneva viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ tveva saá¹…khyaá¹ƒ g paá¹-icca rÅ«pe \Be I 137/ ca uppajjati viÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±Ä• á¹‡aá¹ƒ tveva sa evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante anattatÄ• dÄ«pikaá¹ƒ dhammiá¹ƒ kathaá¹ƒ kathesi.

mahÄ• assapurasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• assapurasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 139/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aá¹…gesu bhante assapure nÄ• ma aá¹…gÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame bahÅ« ma bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. bahÅ« bhante manussÄ• saddhÄ• pasannÄ• bhikkhusaá¹…ghaá¹ƒ sakkacc sabbakÄ• laÃ±ca ratanattayapaá¹-isaá¹ƒyuttaá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡akathaá¹ƒyeva kathayiá¹ƒsu. tasm bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ katame \Be I 140/ Ä• vuso tattha bhagavatÄ• dhammÄ• samaá¹‡akaraá¹ ca uttaruttari paá¹‡Ä«tapaá¹‡Ä«tÄ• desitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ hirottappÄ• \Be I 141/ parisuddhakÄ• yasamÄ• cÄ• ro parisuddhavacÄ parisuddhamanosamÄ• cÄ• ro parisuddhÄ• jÄ«vo indriyesu guttadvÄ• ratÄ• bhojanemattaÅ satisampajaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ nÄ«varaá¹‡appahÄ• naá¹ƒ cattÄ• ri ca jhÄ• nÄ• ni tisso ca vijjÄ• ime bhagavatÄ• samaá¹‡akaraá¹‡Ä• ca brÄ• hmaá¹‡akaraá¹‡Ä• ca uttaruttari paá¹‡Ä«tapaá¹

cÅ«á¸·aassapurasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·aassapurasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 143/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• katta kaá¹ƒ __vissajjanÄ• --- _ tasmiá¹ƒyeva bhante assapure nigame teyeva manusse saddhe pasann tasmiá¹ƒyeva bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 144/ tattha bhagavatÄ• samaá¹‡asÄ• mÄ«cippaá¹ assamaá¹‡asÄ• mÄ«cippaá¹-ipadÄ• ca vibhajitvÄ• desitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``kathaÃ±ca bhikkhave bhikkhu na samaá¹‡asÄ• mÄ«cippaá¹-ipadaá¹ƒ kassaci bhikkhave bhikkhuno abhijjhÄ• lussa abhijjhÄ• appahÄ«nÄ• hoti, byÄ• pannacittas hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• ca. kathaÃ±ca bhikkhave bhikkhu samaá¹‡asÄ• mÄ«cippa yassa kassaci bhikkhave bhikkhuno abhijjhÄ• lussa abhijjhÄ• pahÄ«nÄ• hoti, byÄ• pannac hoti evamÄ• dinÄ• ca bhante bhagavatÄ• tattha samaá¹‡asÄ• mÄ«cippaá¹-ipadÄ• ca ass vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• desitÄ• .

sÄ• leyyakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sÄ• leyyakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 146/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• r
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante sÄ• lÄ• yaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma brÄ• hmaá¹‡agÄ• me sÄ• leyya
Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sÄ• leyyakÄ• bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatikÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ u ``ko nu kho bho gotama hetu ko paccayo, yena midhekacce sattÄ• kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• para duggatiá¹ƒ vinipÄ• taá¹ƒ nirayaá¹ƒ upapajjanti, ko pana bho gotama hetu ko paccayo, yena kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• sugatiá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ upapajjantÄ«â€™â€™
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

veraÃ±jakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ veraÃ±jakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 148/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• ra
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante veraÃ±jake brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatike Ä• rabbha bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatikÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavocuá¹ƒ ``ko n paccayo, yena midhekacce sattÄ• kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• apÄ• yaá¹ƒ dug upapajjanti, ko pana bho gotama hetu ko paccayo, yena midhekacce sattÄ• kÄ• yassa bhe sugatiá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ upapajjantÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• si

mahÄ• vedallasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• vedallasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso kattha kena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmatÄ• mahÄ• koá¹-á¹-hikena puá¹-á¹-he sÄ• riputtattherena dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·avedallasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·avedallasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 149/ panÄ• vuso kattha kena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante visÄ• khena upÄ• sakena puá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya dhammadi

cÅ«á¸·adhammasamÄ• dÄ• nasutta __pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·adhammasamÄ• dÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 150/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ•

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• dhammasamÄ• dÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• dhammasamÄ• dÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ka

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

vÄ«maá¹ƒsakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vÄ«maá¹ƒsakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 151/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kosambiyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kosambiyasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusm

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ bhante kosambike bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. kos bhaá¹‡á¸• anajÄ• tÄ• kalahajÄ• tÄ• vivÄ• dÄ• pannÄ• \Be I 152/ aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ mu tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

brahmanimantanikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ brahmanimantanikasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rab

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mÄ• ratajjaniyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mÄ• ratajjanÄ«yasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 153/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante susumÄ• ragire bhesakaá¸·Ä• vane migadÄ• ye Ä• yas mÄ• raá¹ƒ pÄ• pimantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. mÄ• ro bhante pÄ• pimÄ• Ä• yasmato hoti koá¹-á¹-hamanupaviá¹-á¹-ho. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

majjhimapaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• sapÄ• á¸·i kandarakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 155/ jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena kandarak
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ campÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante gaggarÄ• ya pokkharaá¹‡iyÄ• tÄ«re pessaÃ±ca kandarakaÃ±ca paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, kandarako bhante paribbÄ• jako bhikkhusaá¹…ghassa ca vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ abhÄ• si, pesso ca bhante hatthÄ• rohaputto bhagav vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ abhÄ• si. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be I 156/ kho Ä• vuso kandarakena paribbÄ• jakena bhagavato ca abhippasannena vaá¹‡á¹‡e bhÄ• site kathaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• taá¹ƒ samanujÄ• nitvÄ• dhamma kathaÃ±ca pesso hatthÄ• rohaputto bhagavato ca dhammadesanÄ• ya ca vaá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ abh pessassa hatthÄ• rohaputtassa ajjhÄ• sayÄ• nurÅ«paá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ desesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ kho bhante kandarakena paribbÄ• jakena bhagavato ca bhikkhu abhippasannena vaá¹‡á¹‡e bhÄ• site ``evametaá¹ƒ kandaraka evametaá¹ƒ kandarakaâ€™â samanujÄ• nitvÄ• ``santi hi kandaraka bhikkhÅ« imasmiá¹ƒ bhikkhusaá¹…ghe arahanto kh katakaraá¹‡Ä«yÄ• ohitabhÄ• rÄ• anuppattasadatthÄ• parikkhÄ«á¹‡abhavasaá¹ƒyojanÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• dhammadesanaá¹ƒ samÄ• rabhi. atha kho bhante pesso hatthÄ• rohaputto abbhutaá¹ƒ bhante yÄ• va supaÃ±Ã±attÄ• cime bhante bhagavatÄ• cattÄ• ro satipaá¹-á¹-h visuddhiyÄ• sokaparidevÄ• naá¹ƒ samatikkamÄ• ya dukkhadomanassÄ• naá¹ƒ atthaá¹…ga nibbÄ• nassa sacchikiriyÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavato ca dhammadesanÄ•

bhagavÄ• pi bhante ``gahanaÃ±hetaá¹ƒ pessa yadidaá¹ƒ manussÄ• , uttÄ• nakaÃ±hetaá¹ƒ tiÄ• dinÄ• pessassa hatthÄ• rohaputtassa ajjhÄ• sayÄ• nurÅ«paá¹ƒ dhammakathaá¹ƒ dese

__pucchÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ \Be I 162/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• pessassa hatthÄ• Ä• nisaá¹ƒso adhigato, kathaÃ±ca bhagavÄ• taá¹ƒ puggalacatukkadesanaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒkhitten bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• desesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ kho pana bhante dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• pessassa hatthÄ• rohaputta adhigatÄ• saá¹…ghe ca pasÄ• do satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• napariggahaá¹‡Å«pÄ• yo \Be I 163/ ca a taá¹ƒ puggalacatukkadesanaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«hi yÄ• cito ``katamo ca bhikkhave puggalo attaparitÄ• panÄ• nuyogamanuyuttoâ€™â€™ tiÄ• dinÄ• saá¹ƒkhittena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, vitthÄ vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• desesi.

aá¹-á¹-hakanÄ• garasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ aá¹-á¹-hakanÄ• garasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 166/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh kena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante veá¸·uvagÄ• make gahapatiá¹ƒ aá¹-á¹-hakanÄ• g
Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. dasamo bhante gahapati Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``atthi nu kho bhante Ä• nand passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• sambuddhena ekadhammo akkhÄ• to, yattha bhikkhuno appa viharato avimuttaÃ±ceva cittaá¹ƒ vimuccati, aparikkhiá¹‡Ä• ca Ä• savÄ• parikkhayaá¹ƒ ga anuttaraá¹ƒ yogakkhemaá¹ƒ anupÄ• puá¹‡Ä• tÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ

sekhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sekhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 168/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vat
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ santhÄ• gÄ• re Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• na dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena kÄ• pilavatthave sakye Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. bhagavÄ bahudevarattiá¹ƒ dhammiyÄ• kathÄ• ya sandassetvÄ• samÄ• dapetvÄ• samuttejetvÄ• sa Ä• nandaá¹ƒ Ä• mantesi ``paá¹-ibhÄ• tu taá¹ƒ Ä• nanda kÄ• pilavatthavÄ• naá¹ƒ sakyÄ• na piá¹-á¹-hi me Ä• gilÄ• yati, tamahaá¹ƒ Ä• yamissÄ• mÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthu

potaliyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ potaliyasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 170/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aá¹…guttarÄ• pesu bhante Ä• paá¹‡e nÄ• ma aá¹…guttarÄ• pÄ• naá¹ƒ
gahapatiá¹ƒ paá¹-ikkhittasabbakammantaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. potaliyo bhante gahap paá¹-ikkhittasabbakammanto yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…kami, upasaá¹…kamanto bhaga samudÄ• cariyamÄ• no kupito anattamano bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``tayidaá¹ƒ bho gotam nappatirÅ«paá¹ƒ, yaá¹ƒ maá¹ƒ tvaá¹ƒ gahapativÄ• dena samudÄ• carasÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasm
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 172/ bhagavÄ• kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ«navaá¹ƒ vit vinaye vohÄ• rasamucchedaá¹ƒ dassesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha bhante bhagavÄ• ariyassa vinaye vohÄ• rasamucchedÄ• ya aá¹-a ``seyyathÄ• pi gahapati kukkuro jighacchÄ• dubbalyapareto goghÄ• takasÅ«naá¹ƒ paccupa evamÄ• dinÄ• kÄ• mesu Ä• dÄ«navaá¹ƒ dassetvÄ• pariyosÄ• ne tÄ«hi vijjÄ• hi ariyassa v sabbenasabbaá¹ƒ sabbathÄ• sabbaá¹ƒ vohÄ• rasamucchedaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• d

jÄ«vakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 173/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena jÄ«vak
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe \Be I 174/ bhante jÄ«vakaá¹ƒ komÄ• rabhaccaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhante komÄ• rabhacco bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``sutaá¹ƒ metaá¹ƒ b uddissa pÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabhanti, taá¹ƒ samaá¹‡o gotamo jÄ• naá¹ƒ uddissa kataá¹ƒ maá¹ƒ paá¹-icca kammanti. ye te bhante evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu `samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ gotamaá¹ƒ uddissa pÄ• á samaá¹‡o gotamo jÄ• naá¹ƒ uddissa kataá¹ƒ maá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ paribhuÃ±jati paá¹-icca kammaâ€ bhagavato vuttavÄ• dino na ca bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhÅ«tena abbhÄ• cikkhanti, dhammassa cA ca koci sahadhammiko vÄ• dÄ• nuvÄ• do gÄ• rayhaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• gacchatÄ«â€™â€™
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

upÄ• lisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ upÄ• lisuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 177/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ nÄ• á¸·andÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante upÄ• liá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita

gahapati bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``Ä• gamÄ• nukhvidha bhante dÄ« ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• ca bhante upÄ• li gahapati bhagavato paá¹-isandhÄ• raá¹ƒ katvÄ• attano nigaá¹‡á¹-hassa nÄ• á¹-aputtassa vÄ• daá¹ƒ pakÄ• sesi, vÄ• daá¹ƒ vaá¹‡á¹‡esi. tasmiá¹ƒ b
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 183/ kho Ä• vuso bhagavÄ• upÄ• liá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ tasmiá¹ƒ vÄ
samanuyuÃ±jÄ« samanugÄ• hÄ« samanubhÄ• sÄ«, kathaÃ±cassa upÄ• yaá¹ƒ dassetvÄ•

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante bhagavÄ• upÄ• liá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ ``sace kho tvaá¹ƒ ga patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• ya manteyyÄ• si, siyÄ• no ettha kathÄ• sallÄ• poâ€™â€™ ti upÄ• liá¹ƒ gahap samuá¹-á¹-hÄ• petvÄ• ``taá¹ƒ \Be I 184/ kiá¹ƒmaÃ±Ã±asi gahapati, idhassa nigaá¹‡á¹-ho Ä bÄ• Ã±hagilÄ• no sÄ«todakaparikkhitto uá¹‡hodakapaá¹-isevÄ«, so sÄ«todakaá¹ƒ alabham ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• cattÄ• ro upÄ• ye dassetvÄ• upÄ• liá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ ya __pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be I 190/ kho Ä• vuso upÄ• li gahapati bhagavatÄ• saÃ±Ã±Ä• pit pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• raá¹ƒ akÄ• si, kathaÃ±ca bhagavÄ• taá¹ƒ puna anusÄ• __vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``purimenevÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante opammena bhagavato attamano abhiradd bhagavato vicitrÄ• ni paÃ±hapaá¹-ibhÄ• nÄ• ni sotukÄ• mo, evÄ• haá¹ƒ bhagavantaá¹ƒ pac amaÃ±Ã±issaâ€™â€™ nti, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante upÄ• li gahapati bhagavatÄ• viÃ±Ã±Ä• p pasanno pasannÄ• kÄ• raá¹ƒ akÄ• si. tattha bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``anuviccakÄ• raá¹ƒ kho anuviccakÄ• ro tumhÄ• disÄ• naá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• tamanussÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ• dhu hotÄ«â€™â€™ ti eva yÄ• va dhammacakkhupaá¹-ilÄ• bhÄ• vinesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 194/ nigaá¹‡á¹-hassa nÄ• á¹-aputtassa upÄ• lissa gantvÄ• Ä• vÄ«maá¹ƒsanÄ• ca upÄ• lissa gahapatissa paccuttarÄ• kathÄ• ca ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``ummattosi tvaá¹ƒ gahapati dattosi tvaá¹ƒ gahapatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evam nigaá¹‡á¹-hassa nÄ• á¹-aputtassa upÄ• lissa gahapatissa nivesanaá¹ƒ gantvÄ• vÄ«maá¹ƒs Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ«mÄ• yÄ• kalyÄ• á¹‡Ä« bhante Ä• vaá¹-á¹-anÄ«mÄ• yÄ• tiâ€™â€™ evamÄ paccuttarakathÄ• ca ahosi.

dhÄ«rassa \Be I 198/ vigatamohassa, pabhinnakhÄ«lassa vijitavijayassa.

anÄ«ghassa susamacittassa, vuddhasÄ«lassa sÄ• dhupaÃ±Ã±assa.

vesamantarassa vimalassa,

bhagavato tassa sÄ• vakohamasmiá¹ƒ ||

akathaá¹ƒ kathissa tusitassa, vantalokÄ• misassa muditassa.

katasamaá¹‡assa manujassa,

antimasÄ• rÄ«rassa narassa ||

anopamassa \Be I 199/ virajassa,

bhagavato tassa sÄ• vako hamasmi ---

taá¹‡hacchidassa buddhassa,

vÄ«tadhÅ«massa anupalittassa ||

Ä• huneyyassa yakkhassa, uttamapuggalassa atulassa.

mahato yasaggapattassa,

bhagavato tassa sÄ• vako hamasmi ---

kukkuravatikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kukkuravatikasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 200/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ koliyesu bhante haliddavasane nÄ• ma koliyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame puá¹‡á¹‡a govatikaá¹ƒ acelaÃ±ca seniyaá¹ƒ kukkuravatikaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. puá¹‡á¹‡o bhan bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ayaá¹ƒ bhante acelo seniyo kukkuravatiko dukkarakÄ• rako cha bhojanaá¹ƒ bhuÃ±jati, tassa taá¹ƒ kukkuravataá¹ƒ dÄ«gharattaá¹ƒ samattaá¹ƒ samÄ• dinna abhisamparÄ• yoâ€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

abhayarÄ• jakumÄ• rasutta __pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 201/ jÄ• natÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena abhayar kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe me bhante abhayaá¹ƒ rÄ• jakumÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• si rÄ• jakumÄ• ro bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``bhÄ• seyya nu kho bhante sÄ• vÄ• cÄ• paresaá¹ƒ appiyÄ• amanÄ• pÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ b

bahuvedanÄ«yasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bahuvedanÄ«yasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 206/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca udÄ• yiá¹ƒ paÃ±cakaá¹…gaÃ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, paÃ±cakaá¹…go bhante thapati Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ udÄ• yiá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitv bhante udÄ• yÄ« paÃ±cakaá¹…gaá¹ƒ thapatiá¹ƒ etadavoca ``tisso kho thapati vedanÄ• vut vedanÄ• dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• adukkhamasukhÄ• vedanÄ• â€™â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ vutte bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ udÄ• yiá¹ƒ etadavoca ``na kho bhante udÄ• yi tisso vedanÄ• vuttÄ• bhag bhagavatÄ• sukhÄ• vedanÄ• dukkhÄ• vedanÄ• , yÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante adukkhamasukhÄ• v sukhe vuttÄ• bhagavatÄ• â€™â€™ ti. neva asakkhi kho bhante Ä• yasmÄ• udÄ• yÄ« paÃ saÃ±Ã±Ä• petuá¹ƒ, na pana asakkhi paÃ±cakaá¹…go thapati Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ udÄ• yiá¹ƒ sa Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando Ä• yasmato udÄ• yissa paÃ±cakaá¹…gena thapatinÄ• saddhiá¹ƒ ima bhante Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando yÄ• vatako ahosi \Be I 207/ Ä• yasmato udÄ• yissa paÃ±caka kathÄ• sallÄ• po, taá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ bhagavato Ä• rocesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ•

apaá¹‡á¹‡akasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ apaá¹‡á¹‡akasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha ki
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante sÄ• lÄ• yaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma kosalÄ• naá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡agÄ brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatike Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sambahulÄ• bhante aÃ±Ã±atitthiyÄ• sÄ brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatikÄ• naá¹ƒ attano attano micchÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyo paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• pesuâ

pana bhante sÄ• leyyakÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡agahapatikÄ• ekadiá¹-á¹-hiyampi patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• tuá
bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tatra \Be I 209/ Ä• vuso bhagavatÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ micchÄ• vÄ• do ca sa vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tatra bhante bhagavatÄ• ``santi gahapatayo eke samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹
evaá¹ƒdiá¹-á¹-hino natthi dinnaá¹ƒ natthi yiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ natthi hutaá¹ƒ natthi sukatadukkaá¹-Ä kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ micchÄ• vÄ• do pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattha \Be I 210/ Ä• vuso bhagavatÄ• micchÄ• vÄ• dÄ«naÃ±ca doso sam kathaá¹ƒ vicÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattha bhante bhagavatÄ• ``tatra gahapatayo yete samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá
evaá¹ƒdiá¹-á¹-hino natthi dinnaá¹ƒ natthi yiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ natthi hutaá¹ƒ natthi sukatadukkaá¹-Ä kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒ vipÄ• koâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante micchÄ• vÄ• dÄ«naÃ± bhagavatÄ• vicÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 212/ tattha bhagavatÄ• viÃ±Ã±uno purisapuggalas
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tatra \Be I 213/ gahapatayo viÃ±Ã±Å« puriso iti paá¹-isaÃ±cikkhatÄ«ti e tattha bhagavatÄ• viÃ±Ã±uno purisapuggalassa paá¹-isaÃ±cikkhaá¹‡Ä• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be I 215/ bhagavatÄ• aÃ±Ã±esupi micchÄ• vÄ• dasam apaá¹‡á¹‡akapaá¹-ipadÄ• vicÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• , taá¹ƒ saá¹…khepato kathesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ yatheva bhante paá¹-hame vÄ• de, evameva kho bhante akiriyavÄ• dÄ micchÄ• vÄ• desu dosaá¹ƒ kiriyavÄ• dÄ• dÄ«su ca catÅ«su sammÄ• vÄ• desu guá¹‡aá¹ƒ, paá¹-isaÃ±cikkhaá¹‡Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ dassetvÄ• bhagavatÄ• apaá¹‡á¹‡akapaá¹-ipadÄ• pakÄ ambalaá¹-á¹-hikarÄ• hulovÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ ambalaá¹-á¹-hikarÄ• hulovÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 216/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ rÄ• hulaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ

mahÄ• rÄ• hulovÄ• dasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• rÄ• hulovÄ• dasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 217/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ rÄ• hulaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sit rÄ• hulo bhagavato ceva attano ca attabhÄ• vasampattiá¹ƒ nissÄ• ya gehassitaá¹ƒ chandar
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·amÄ• lukyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·amÄ• lukyasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 218/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mÄ• lukyaputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha b bhante mÄ• lukyaputto attano pavivittassa rahogatassa paá¹-isallÄ«nassa cetaso parivitakk Ä• rocesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• mÄ• lukyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• mÄ• lukyasuttaá¹ƒ \Be I 221/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tasmiá¹ƒyeva bhante sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ mahÄ• mÄ• luky
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

bhaddÄ• lisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be I 222/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena bhadd
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ bhaddÄ• liá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• bhaddÄ• li bhagavatÄ• sikkhÄ• pade paÃ±Ã±Ä• piyamÄ• ne bhikkhusaá¹…ghe sikkhaá¹ƒ s pavedesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

accayo \Be I 223/ maá¹ƒ bhante accagamÄ• yathÄ• bÄ• laá¹ƒ yathÄ• mÅ«á¸·haá¹ƒ yathÄ•
bhagavatÄ• sikkhÄ• pade paÃ±Ã±Ä• piyamÄ• ne bhikkhusaá¹…ghe sikkhaá¹ƒ samÄ• diya tassa me bhante bhagavÄ• accayaá¹ƒ accayato paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• tu Ä• yatiá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvarÄ• __pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be I 225/ kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• bhaddÄ• li bhagavantaá¹ƒ kÄ«dis kathaÃ±cassa bhagavÄ• taá¹ƒ vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante Ä• yasmÄ• bhaddÄ• li ``ko nu kho bhante hetu, ko pa midhekaccaá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ pasayu pasayu kÄ• raá¹‡aá¹ƒ karontÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ apucchi. bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``idha bhaddÄ• li ekacco bhikkhu abhiá¹‡hÄ• pattiko hoti, Ä• evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmato bhaddÄ• lissa vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tadÄ• pi \Be I 228/ kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• bhaddÄ• li punapi bhagavanta pucchi, kathaÃ±cassa bhagavÄ• tampi vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tadÄ• pi bhante Ä• yasmÄ• bhaddÄ• li ``ko nu kho bhante hetu, ko pac appatarÄ• ni ceva sikkhÄ• padÄ• ni ahesuá¹ƒ, bahutarÄ• ca bhikkhÅ« aÃ±Ã±Ä• ya saá¹‡á¸ hetu, ko paccayo yena etarahi bahutarÄ• ni ceva sikkhÄ• padÄ• ni honti appatarÄ• ca bhik saá¹‡á¸• ahantÄ«â€™â€™ ti bhagavantaá¹ƒ punapi paÃ±haá¹ƒ apucchi. bhagavÄ• ca bha hoti, sattesu hÄ• yamÄ• nesu saddhamme antaradhÄ• yamÄ• ne bahutarÄ• ni honti appata saá¹‡á¸• ahantÄ«â€™â€™ ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmato bhaddÄ• lissa vibhajitvÄ• vibhaji

laá¹-ukikopamasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ laá¹-ukikopamasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 1/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aá¹…guttarÄ• pesu bhante Ä• paá¹‡e nÄ• ma aá¹…guttarÄ• pÄ• naá¹ƒ
udÄ• yiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante udÄ• yÄ« bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…
mayhaá¹ƒ bhante rahogatassa paá¹-isallÄ«nassa evaá¹ƒ cetaso parivitakko udapÄ• di ``bah dukkhadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ apahattÄ• , bahÅ«naá¹ƒ vata no bhagavÄ• sukhadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• akusalÄ• naá¹ƒ dhammÄ• naá¹ƒ apahattÄ• , bahÅ«naá¹ƒ vata no bhagavÄ• kus upahattÄ• â€™ tiâ€™â€™. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be II 4/ kho Ä• vuso bhagavÄ• kÄ«disÄ« upamÄ• yo dassetvÄ• bh adÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante bhagavÄ• laá¹-ukikopamaá¹ƒ hatthinÄ• gopamaá¹ƒ da gahapatikopamanti catasso upamÄ• yo dassetvÄ• bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• damadÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 8/ bhagavÄ• catÅ«hi upamÄ• hi bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ uttari dhammadesanaá¹ƒ pavaá¸• á¸• hesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavÄ• catÅ«hi upamÄ• hi bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• udÄ• yi puggalÄ• santo saá¹ƒvijjamÄ• nÄ• lokasmiá¹ƒâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dinÄ• uttari bh pavaá¸• á¸• hesi.

cÄ• tumasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÄ• tumasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 10/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabb
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ cÄ• tumÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantÄ• naá¹ƒ sÄ• riputtamoggalÄ• natt adhunÄ• pabbajite sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sÄ• riputtamoggallÄ• nap paÃ±camattÄ• ni bhikkhusatÄ• ni cÄ• tumaá¹ƒ anuppattÄ• ni honti bhagavantaá¹ƒ dassanÄ bhikkhÅ« nevÄ• sikehi bhikkhÅ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ paá¹-isammodamÄ• nÄ• senÄ• sanÄ• ni paÃ± paá¹-isÄ• mayamÄ• nÄ• uccÄ• saddÄ• mahÄ• saddÄ• ahesuá¹ƒ. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthus __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 13/ tattha bhagavÄ• bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• daá¹ƒ a __vissajjanÄ• --- _ cattÄ• rimÄ• ni bhikkhave bhayÄ• ni udakorohante pÄ• tikaá¹…khitabb bhagavÄ• tattha bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• daá¹ƒ adÄ• si.

naá¸·akapÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ naá¸·akapÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 17/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä __vissajjanÄ• --- _ naá¸·akapÄ• ne bhante anuruddhattherappamukhe sambahule abhiÃ±Ã kulaputte Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

goliyÄ• nisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ goliyÄ• nisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 18/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ goliyÄ• niá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmat dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. Ä• yasmÄ• bhante goliyÄ• ni Ä• raÃ±Ã±iko padasam hoti kenacideva karaá¹‡Ä«yena, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kÄ«á¹-Ä• girisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 19/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena kÄ«á¹-kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kÄ• sÄ«su bhante kÄ«á¹-Ä• girismiá¹ƒ kÄ• sÄ«naá¹ƒ nigame assajipun bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. assajipunabbasukÄ• bhante bhikkhÅ« bhikkhÅ«hi sahadhammikaá¹ƒ vuccam kho Ä• vuso sÄ• yaÃ±ceva bhuÃ±jÄ• ma pÄ• to ca divÄ• ca vikÄ• le, te mayaá¹ƒ sÄ• yaÃ± divÄ• ca vikÄ• le appÄ• bÄ• dhataÃ±ca saÃ±jÄ• nÄ• ma appÄ• taá¹…kataÃ±ca lahuá¹-á¹-h phÄ• suvihÄ• raÃ±ca, te mayaá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ sandiá¹-á¹-hikaá¹ƒ hitvÄ• kÄ• likaá¹ƒ anudhÄ• viss bhuÃ±jissÄ• ma pÄ• to ca divÄ• ca vikÄ• leâ€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ•

tevijjavacchasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tevijjavacchasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 21/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• r
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante vacchagottaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• bhante paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``sutaá¹ƒ me bhante samaá¹‡o gotamo sab aparisesaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanaá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti, carato ca me tiá¹-á¹-hato ca suttassa c satataá¹ƒ samitaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanaá¹ƒ paccupaá¹-á¹-hitaâ€™â€™ nti. ye te bhante eva gotamo sabbaÃ±Ã±Å« sabbadassÄ• vÄ« aparisesaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanaá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• suttassa ca jÄ• garassa ca satataá¹ƒ samitaá¹ƒ Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanaá¹ƒ paccupaá¹-á¹-hitaâ€ bhagavato vuttavÄ• dino, na ca bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhÅ«tena abbhÄ• cikkhanti, dhammassa c na ca koci sahadhammiko vÄ• dÄ• nuvÄ• do gÄ• rayhaá¹ƒ á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• gacchatÄ«â€™
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

aggivacchasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ aggivacchasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 23/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante vacchagottaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.
paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• ``kiá¹ƒ nu kho bho gotama `sassato loko moghamaÃ±Ã±aâ€™ nti evaá¹ƒdiá¹-á¹-hi bhavaá¹ƒ gotamoâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dikaá¹ƒ paÃ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• vacchasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• vacchasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha k
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante vacchagottaá¹ƒyeva paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ bhante paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• \Be II 24/ etadavoca ``dÄ«gharatt sahakathÄ«, sÄ• dhu me bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo saá¹ƒkhittena kusalÄ• kusalaá¹ƒ desetÅ«â€™â€
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 25/ vutte kho Ä• vuso vacchagotto paribbÄ• jako imasmiá¹ƒ hutvÄ• kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• raá¹ƒ akÄ• si, kathaÃ±cassa dhammÄ• bhisamayo ahosi __vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ vutte bhante vacchagotto paribbÄ• jako ``sace hi bho gotama im bhavaá¹ƒyeva gotamo Ä• rÄ• dhako abhavissa, no ca kho bhikkhÅ« Ä• rÄ• dhakÄ• abhavis brahmacariyaá¹ƒ aparipÅ«raá¹ƒ abhavissa tenaá¹…genÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• imasm pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si. yÄ• va arahattaÃ±cassa dhammÄ• bhisamayo ahosi.

dÄ«ghanakhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dÄ«ghanakhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 28/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante dÄ«ghanakhaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• s paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``ahaÃ±hi bho gotama evaá¹ƒ sabbaá¹ƒ me nakkhamatÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ \Be II 31/ ca panÄ• vuso veyyÄ• karaá¹‡asmiá¹ƒ bhaÃ±Ã±amÄ visesÄ• dhigamo ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imasmiÃ±ca pana bhante veyyÄ• karaá¹‡asmiá¹ƒ bhaÃ±Ã±amÄ• ne Ä• anupÄ• dÄ• ya Ä• savehi cittaá¹ƒ vimucci, dÄ«ghanakhassa pana paribbÄ• jakassa tasmiá¹ vÄ«tamalaá¹ƒ dhammacakkhuá¹ƒ udapÄ• di yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci samudayadhammaá¹ƒ, sabbaá¹ƒ t

mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 33/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kurÅ«su bhante kammÄ• sadhamme nÄ• ma kurÅ«naá¹ƒ nigame bhÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa agyÄ• gÄ• re tiá¹‡asanthÄ• rake mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyo bhante paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ ``bhÅ«nahu samaá¹‡o gotamoâ€™â vaá¹-á¹-husmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 36/ bhagavÄ• tattha mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyassa paribbÄ samanuyuÃ±jitvÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ desesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``cakkhuá¹ƒ kho mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iya rÅ«pÄ• rataá¹ƒ rÅ«pasammuditaá¹ƒ dantaá¹ƒ guttaá¹ƒ rakkhitaá¹ƒ saá¹ƒvutaá¹ƒ, tassa ca saá¹ƒvarÄ• ya dhammaá¹ƒ desetÄ«â€ bhante tattha bhagavÄ• mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyassa paribbÄ• jakassa samanuyuÃ±jitvÄ• samanu __pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 39/ kho Ä• vuso mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyena paribbÄ• jakena ``nakiÃ yathÄ• bhÅ«taá¹ƒ paá¹-issute kathaá¹ƒ bhagavÄ• attanopi na kiÃ±ci kenacipi vattabbataá¹ƒ

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ kho bhante mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyena paribbÄ• jakena nakiÃ±ci bhog paá¹-issute ``ahaá¹ƒ kho pana mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iya pubbe agÄ• riyabhÅ«to samÄ• no paÃ±ca samaá¹…gÄ«bhÅ«to paricÄ• resiá¹ƒ cakkhuviÃ±Ã±eyyahi rÅ«pehi iá¹-á¹-hehi manÄ• pehi p kÄ• mÅ«pasaá¹ƒhitehi rajanÄ«yehÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhagavÄ• attanopi na kiÃ±
pakÄ• sesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imasmiá¹ƒ \Be II 42/ sutte pariyosÄ• napucchaá¹ƒ pucchissÄ• mi imaÃ±ca dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• mÄ• gaá¹‡á¸• iyo paribbÄ• jako imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye pasa pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaá¹ƒ \Be II 43/ ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• mÄ• gaá¹ `abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotama abhikkantaá¹ƒ bho gotamÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• imasmi pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

sandakasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sandakasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosambiyaá¹ƒ \Be II 44/ bhante sandakaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sandako bhante paribbÄ• etadavoca ``sÄ• dhuvata bhavantaá¹ƒyeva Ä• nandaá¹ƒ paá¹-ibhÄ• tu sake Ä• cariya ke dh
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 45/ tattha cattÄ• ro abrahmacariyavÄ• sÄ• Ä• yas dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena vicÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha sandaka ekacco satthÄ• evaá¹ƒvÄ• dÄ« hoti evaá¹ƒdiá¹-á¹-hi natt
yiá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ, natthi hutaá¹ƒ, natthi sukatadukkaá¹-Ä• naá¹ƒ kammÄ• naá¹ƒ phalaá¹ƒvipÄ• k natthi paroloko, natthi mÄ• tÄ• , natthi pitÄ• , natthi sattÄ• opapÄ• tikÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• \Be II 46/ bhante tattha Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• abrahmacariyavÄ• sÄ• vicÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 49/ tattha cattÄ• ri anassÄ• sikÄ• ni brahmacariyÄ Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena vicÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha \Be II 50/ sandaka ekacco satthÄ• sabbaÃ±Ã±Å« sabbadassÄ• vÄ
Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanaá¹ƒ paá¹-ijÄ• nÄ• ti ``carato ca me tiá¹-á¹-hato ca suttassa ca jÄ• garassa Ã±Ä• á¹‡adassanaá¹ƒ paccupaá¹-á¹-hitaâ€™â€™ nti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha Ä• yasm dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena cattÄ• ri anassÄ• sikÄ• ni brahmacariyÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• p

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha

á¹• 0.0054 kho Ä• vuso sandako paribbÄ• jako Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandattheraá¹ƒ kathaá¹ tathaÃ±cassÄ• yasmÄ• nandatthero byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante sandako paribbÄ• jako ``so pana bho Ä• nanda satthÄ akkhÄ• yÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandattheraá¹ƒ pucchi, Ä• yasm sandaka tathÄ• gato loke uppajjati arahaá¹ƒ sammÄ• sambuddho vijjÄ• caraá¹‡asampanno sandakassa paribbÄ• jakassa vibhajitvÄ• vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 56/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• sandako parib dhammavinaye pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 57/ bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• sandako paribbÄ Ä• nanda, abbhutaá¹ƒ bho Ä• nanda, na ca nÄ• ma sadhammokkaá¹ƒsanÄ• bhavissati, na ca dhammadesanÄ• , tÄ• va bahukÄ• ca niyyÄ• tÄ• ro paÃ±Ã±Ä• yissantÄ«â€™â€™ ti eva pasanno pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

mahÄ• sakuludÄ• yÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• sakuludÄ• yisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 58/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante sakuludÄ• yiá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• si paribbÄ• jako purimÄ• ni divasÄ• ni purimatarÄ• ni kotÅ«halasÄ• lÄ• yaá¹ƒ nÄ• nÄ• titthiyÄ samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• naá¹ƒ yÄ• vatako ahosi bhagavantaÃ±ca cha ca satthÄ• ro Ä• rab sabbaá¹ƒ bhagavato Ä• rocesi. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

samaá¹‡amuá¹‡á¸• ikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ samaá¹‡amuá¹‡á¸• ikasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 62/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante uggÄ• hamÄ• na paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡amu bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. uggÄ• hamÄ• no bhante paribbÄ• jako samaá¹‡amuá¹‡á¸• ikÄ• putto paÃ±ca ``catÅ«hi kho ahaá¹ƒ gahapati dhammehi samannÄ• gataá¹ƒ purisapuggalaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±ape paramakusalaá¹ƒ uttamapattipattaá¹ƒ samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ ayojjhaâ€™â€™ nti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante va

cÅ«á¸·asakuludÄ• yÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·asakuludÄ• yÄ«suttaá¹ƒ \Be II 63/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe \Be II 64/ bhante sakuludÄ• yiá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh sakuludÄ• yÄ« bhante paribbÄ• jako bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``yadÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante imaá homi, athÄ• yaá¹ƒ parisÄ• anekavihitaá¹ƒ tiracchÄ• nakathaá¹ƒ kathenti nisinnÄ• hoti. yad imaá¹ƒ parisaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamanto homi, athÄ• yaá¹ƒ parisÄ• mamaÃ±Ã±eva mukhaá¹ƒ no samaá¹‡o udÄ• yÄ« dhammaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sissati, taá¹ƒ sossÄ• mÄ• â€™ ti, yadÄ• pana bh upasaá¹…kanto hoti, athÄ• haÃ±ceva ayaÃ±ca parisÄ• bhagavato mukhaá¹ƒ ullokentÄ• ni bhagavÄ• dhammaá¹ƒ bhÄ• sissati, taá¹ƒ sossÄ• mÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthu

vekhanasasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vekhanasasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 65/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rab
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante vekhanasaá¹ƒ paribbÄ• jakaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ•

paribbÄ• jako bhagavato santike udÄ• naá¹ƒ udÄ• nesi ``ayaá¹ƒ paramo vaá¹‡á¹‡o ayaá¹ƒ
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

ghaá¹-ikÄ• rasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ ghaá¹-ikÄ• rasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 66/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante ghaá¹-ikÄ• rassa kumbhakÄ• rassa gharavatthupades Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. bhagavÄ• bhante tasmiá¹ƒ bhÅ«mipadese sitaá¹ƒ pÄ• tvÄ• kÄ• si, bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ko nu kho bhante hetu ko paccayo bhagavato sitassa pÄ• tukar tathÄ• gatÄ• sitaá¹ƒ pÄ• tukarontÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ

raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• lasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• lasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 67/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kis
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kurÅ«su bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ korabyaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• raá¹ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. rÄ• jÄ• bhante korabyo Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• laá¹ƒ etadavoca ``catt raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• la pÄ• rijuÃ±Ã±Ä• ni, yehi pÄ• rijuÃ±Ã±ehi samannÄ• gatÄ• idhekacce kesa kÄ• sÄ• yÄ• ni vatthÄ• ni acchÄ• detvÄ• agÄ• rasmÄ• anÄ• gÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabbajantÄ«â€™ avoca, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be II 72/ kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• latthero raÃ±Ã±o ko paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ dhammuddesaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ atha kho bhante Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• latthero ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã vÄ«sativassuddesikopi paá¹‡á¹‡avÄ«sativassuddesikopi hatthismimpi katÄ• vÄ« assasmim katÄ• vÄ« dhanusmimpi katÄ• vÄ« tharusmimpi katÄ• vÄ« Å«rubalÄ« bÄ• hubalÄ« alamatto evamÄ• dinÄ• paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ dhammuddesaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaá¹ƒ \Be II 74/ panÄ• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• latthero raÃ±Ã±
dhammuddesaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``taá¹ƒ \Be II 75/ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi mahÄ• rÄ• ja, atthi te koci anusÄ• yi evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• lo raÃ±Ã±o korabyassa dutiyaá¹ƒ dhamm pakÄ• sesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaá¹ƒ \Be II 76/ panÄ• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• latthero raÃ±Ã±
dhammuddesaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``taá¹ƒ \Be II 77/ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi mahÄ• rÄ• ja, yathÄ• tvaá¹ƒ etarahi kÄ• maguá¹‡ehi samappito samaá¹…gÄ«bhÅ«to paricÄ• resi, lacchasi tvaá¹ƒ paratthÄ• pi e paÃ±cahi kÄ• maguá¹‡ehi samappito samaá¹…gÄ«bhÅ«to paricÄ• remÄ«â€™â€™ ti evam raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• lo raÃ±Ã±o korabyassa tatiyaá¹ƒ dhammuddesaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• ses __pucchÄ• --- _ catutthampi \Be II 78/ kho Ä• vuso dhammuddesaá¹ƒ Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-korabyassa kathaá¹ƒ vitthÄ• retvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi mahÄ• rÄ• ja, phÄ«taá¹ƒ kuruá¹ƒ ajjhÄ• vasas bhante Ä• yasmÄ• raá¹-á¹-hapÄ• latthero raÃ±Ã±o korabyassa catutthaá¹ƒ dhammuddesaa

maghadevasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ maghadevasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 80/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• ra
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ mithilÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante maghadevaambavane Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nanda bhagavÄ• bhante aÃ±Ã±atarasmiá¹ƒ padese sitaá¹ƒ pÄ• tvÄ• kÄ• si, Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando kho bhante ko paccayo bhagavato sitassa pÄ• tukammÄ• ya, na akÄ• raá¹‡ena tathÄ• gatÄ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

madhurasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ madhurasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 81/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ v
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ madhurÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ mÄ• dhuraá¹ƒ avantiputtaá¹ƒ Ä• mahÄ• kaccÄ• nattherena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, rÄ• jÄ• bhante mÄ• dhuro avantiputto Ä• yasmanta ``brahmaá¹‡Ä• bho kaccÄ• na evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu brÄ• hmaá¹‡ova seá¹-á¹-ho vaá¹‡á¹‡o, hÄ brÄ• hmaá¹‡ova sukko vaá¹‡á¹‡o, kaá¹‡ho aÃ±Ã±o vaá¹‡á¹‡o. brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• va sujjhanti abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• . brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• va brahmuno puttÄ• orasÄ• mukhato jÄ• tÄ• brahmajÄ brahmadÄ• yÄ• dÄ• ti. idha bhavaá¹ƒ kaccÄ• no kimakkhÄ• yÄ«â€™â€™ ti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhan

bodhirÄ• jakumÄ• rasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bodhirÄ• jakumÄ• rasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 83/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ka
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bhaggesu bhante susumÄ• ragire bodhiá¹ƒ rÄ• jakumÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• rabbh rÄ• jakumÄ• ro bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``mayaá¹ƒ kho bhante evaá¹ƒ hoti. na kho sukher adhigantabbaá¹ƒ, dukkhena kho sukhaá¹ƒ adhigantabbaâ€™â€™ nti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatth __pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 84/ vutte kho Ä• vuso bodhi rÄ• jakumÄ• ro bhagavantaá¹ƒ k kathaÃ±cassa bhagavÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ vutte bhante bodhirÄ• jakumÄ• ro bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``k bhante bhikkhu tathÄ• gataá¹ƒ vinÄ• yakaá¹ƒ labhamÄ• no yassatthÄ• ya kulaputtÄ• samm anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabbajanti, tadanuttaraá¹ƒ brahmacariyapariyosÄ• naá¹ƒ diá¹-á¹-heva dham sacchikatvÄ• upasampajja vihareyyÄ• â€™â€™ ti, bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``tena hi rÄ• jakum paá¹-ipucchissÄ• mi, yathÄ• te khameyya, tathÄ• naá¹ƒ byÄ• kareyyÄ• sÄ«â€™â€™ ti, ev byÄ• kÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 88/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• bodhirÄ• jakum dhammadesanÄ• yaá¹ƒ pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• bodhirÄ• jakumÄ• ro dhammassa svÄ• kkhÄ• tatÄ• , yatra hi nÄ• ma sÄ• yamanusiá¹-á¹-ho, pÄ• to visesaá¹ƒ ad pÄ• tamanusiá¹-á¹-ho sÄ• yaá¹ƒ visesaá¹ƒ adhigamissatÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• imiss pasanno pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

aá¹…gulimÄ• lasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ aá¹…gulimÄ• lasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 91/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ aá¹…gulimÄ• lattheraá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhante aá¹…gulimÄ• latthero bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``idhÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante pubbaá¹‡has pattacÄ«varamÄ• dÄ• ya sÄ• vatthiá¹ƒ piá¹‡á¸• Ä• ya pÄ• visiá¹ƒ, addasaá¹ƒ kho ahaá¹ƒ bh sapadÄ• naá¹ƒ piá¹‡á¸• Ä• ya caramÄ• no aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ itthiá¹ƒ mÅ«á¸·hagabbhaá¹ƒ vigh mayhaá¹ƒ etadahosi ``kilissanti vata bho sattÄ• , kilissanti vata bho sattÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasm
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

piyajÄ• tikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ piyajÄ• tikasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 92/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• ra
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ gahapatiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita
bhante aÃ±Ã±atarassa gahapatissa ekaputtako piyo manÄ• po kÄ• laá¹…kato hoti, tassa kÄ kammantÄ• paá¹-ibhanti, na bhattaá¹ƒ paá¹-ibhÄ• ti, so Ä• á¸·Ä• hanaá¹ƒ gantvÄ• kandati kahaá¹ƒ ekaputtakÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

bÄ• hitikasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bÄ• hitika \Be II 93/ suttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante rÄ• jÄ• naá¹ƒ pasenadiá¹ƒ kosalaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. rÄ• jÄ• bhante pasenadi etadavoca ``kiá¹ƒ nu kho bhante Ä• nanda sobhagavÄ• tathÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ kÄ• yasamÄ• cÄ• kÄ• yasamÄ• cÄ• ro opÄ• rambho samaá¹‡ehi brÄ• hmaá¹‡ehÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bha

dhammacetiyasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dhammacetiyasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 94/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kena sa __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante medÄ• á¸·upe nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame raÃ±Ã±Ä saddhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kaá¹‡á¹‡akatthalasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kaá¹‡á¹‡akatthalasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 95/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kena __vissajjanÄ• --- _ uruÃ±Ã±Ä• yaá¹ƒ bhante kaá¹‡á¹‡akatthale migadÄ• ye raÃ±Ã±Ä• pa

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

brahmÄ• yusutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena brahmÄ• yusutta kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ videhesu \Be II 96/ bhante mithilÄ• yaá¹ƒ maghadevaambavane brahm Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. brahmÄ• yu bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamit
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattha \Be II 97/ Ä• vuso uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo kathaá¹ƒ bhagavato dvattiá¹ƒsamahÄ• purisalakkhaá¹‡ehi samannÄ• gatataá¹ƒ attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yu sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattha bhante uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo ``suppatiá¹-á¹-hitapÄ• do kho pana so idampi tassa bhoto gotamassa mahÄ• purisassa mahÄ• purisalakkhaá¹‡aá¹ƒ bhavatÄ«â€™ dvattiá¹ƒsamahÄ• purisalakkhaá¹‡ehi samannÄ• gatataá¹ƒ attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yu
sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ aparampi \Be II 101/ Ä• vuso uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato gamanakÄ• le Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• ca sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aparampi bhante uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato gamanakÄ• le paá¹-har pÄ• duddharaá¹‡Ä• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• ca sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa b sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ aparampi \Be II 103/ Ä• vuso uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato antaragharaá¹ kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• ca sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa
sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aparampi bhante uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato antaragharaá¹ƒ pavisan unnamanÄ• dikaá¹ƒ pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ disvÄ• ca sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa brahm
sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ aparampi \Be II 104/ Ä• vuso uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato bhojanakÄ• le Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• ca sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aparampi bhante uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato bhojanakÄ• le pattodak paá¹-iggahaá¹‡Ä• dikÄ• le na pattassa unnamanÄ• dikaá¹ƒ bhagavato pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• l sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ aparampi \Be II 106/ Ä• vuso uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato bhuttÄ• vikÄ• pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ disvÄ• ca sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yu

sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aparampi bhante uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato bhuttÄ• vikÄ• le pattoda paá¹-iggaá¹‡hÄ• dikÄ• le na pattassa unnamanÄ• dikaá¹ƒ pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• raá¹ƒ dis Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ aparampi \Be II 107/ Ä• vuso uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato cÄ«varadhÄ•
ca dhammadesanÄ• kÄ• le ca sabbairiyÄ• pathesu ca kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pÄ• sÄ• dikaá¹ƒ Ä• kÄ• r attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aparampi \Be II 108/ bhante uttaro mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavato cÄ«varadhÄ Ä• rÄ• magatakÄ• le ca sabbesu ca iriyÄ• pathesu na accukkaá¹-á¹-hÄ• dikaá¹ƒ pÄ• sÄ• di sallakkhetvÄ• ca attano Ä• cariyassa brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa sampaá¹-ivedesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 110/ brahmÄ• yu brahmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ puc byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``kathaá¹ƒ kho brÄ• hmaá¹‡o hoti, kathaá¹ƒ bhavati vedagÅ«. tevijjo bh sottiyo kinti vuccati. arahaá¹ƒ bho kathaá¹ƒ hoti, kathaá¹ƒ bhavati kevalÄ«. muni ca bho kat kinti pavuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- evaá¹ƒ kho bhante brahmÄ• yu brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá bhagavÄ• bhante ---

``pubbenivÄ• saá¹ƒ yo vedi, saggÄ• pÄ• yaÃ±ca passati.

atho jÄ• tikkhayaá¹ƒ patto, abhiÃ±Ã±Ä• vosito muni.

cittaá¹ƒ visuddhaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• ti, muttaá¹ƒ rÄ• gehi sabbaso.

pahÄ«najÄ• timaraá¹‡o, brahmacariyassa kevalÄ«.

pÄ• ragÅ« sabbadhammÄ• naá¹ƒ, buddho tÄ• dÄ« pavuccatÄ«â€™â€™ ti --- evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavÄ• brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa vibhajitvÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 111/ panÄ• vuso bhagavato byÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ sutvÄ• bra bhagavati kÄ«disaá¹ƒ nipaccakÄ• raá¹ƒ akÄ• si, kathaÃ±cassa bhagavÄ• punapi anupubbi __vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 112/ pana bhante bhagavato byÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ sutvÄ•

uá¹-á¹-hÄ• yÄ• sanÄ• ekaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ uttarÄ• saá¹…gaá¹ƒ karitvÄ• bhbhagavato pÄ• desu si pÄ• dÄ• ni mukhena ca paricumbati, pÄ• á¹‡Ä«hi ca parisambÄ• hati, nÄ• maÃ±ca sÄ• veti brÄ• hmaá¹‡o, brahmÄ• yu ahaá¹ƒ bho gotama brÄ• hmaá¹‡oâ€™â€™ ti, evaá¹ƒ paramani ca bhante dÄ• nakathaá¹ƒ sÄ«lakathaá¹ƒ saggakathaá¹ƒ kÄ• mÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• dÄ«navaá¹ƒ ok nekkhamme Ä• nisaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sesi, evaá¹ƒ kho bhante brahmÄ• yussa brÄ• hmaá¹‡a kathaá¹ƒ kathesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 113/ panÄ• vuso dammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• brahmÄ• yuss dhammÄ• bhisamayo ahosi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 114/ pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• brahmÄ• tasmiá¹ƒyeva Ä• sane virajaá¹ƒ vÄ«tamalaá¹ƒ dhammacakkhuá¹ƒ udapÄ• di ``yaá¹ƒkiÃ±ci s taá¹ƒ nirodhadhammaâ€™â€™ nti.

selasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ selasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ va

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ aá¹…guttarÄ• pesu bhante Ä• paá¹‡e nÄ• ma aá¹…guttarÄ• pÄ• naá¹ƒ
Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. selo bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o sapariso bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kami sÄ• ruppÄ• hi gÄ• thÄ• hi abhitthavi, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

paripuá¹‡á¹‡akÄ• yo \Be II 116/ suruci, sujÄ• to cÄ• rudassano.

suvaá¹‡á¹‡avaá¹‡á¹‡osi bhagavÄ• , susukkadÄ• á¹-hosi vÄ«riyavÄ• .

narassa hi sujÄ• tassa, ye bhavanti viyaÃ±canÄ• .

sabbe te tava kÄ• yasmiá¹ƒ, mahÄ• purisalakkhaá¹‡Ä• ||

assalÄ• yanasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ assalÄ• yanasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kis
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante assalÄ• yanaá¹ƒ mÄ• á¹‡avaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ bhante mÄ• á¹‡avo mahatÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡agaá¹‡ena saddhiá¹ƒ bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…
bho gotama evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu `brÄ• hmaá¹‡ova seá¹-á¹-ho vaá¹‡á¹‡o, hÄ«no aÃ±Ã±o vaá¹‡

vaá¹‡á¹‡o, kaá¹‡ho \Be II 117/ aÃ±Ã±o vaá¹‡á¹‡o. brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• va sujjhanti, no abrÄ• hr brahmuno puttÄ• orasÄ• mukhato jÄ• tÄ• brahmajÄ• brahmanimmitÄ• brahmadÄ• yÄ• c kimÄ• hÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

ghoá¹-amukhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ ghoá¹-amukhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 119/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbhbha k
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ bÄ• rÄ• á¹‡asiyaá¹ƒ bhante khemiyambavane ghoá¹-amukhaá¹ƒ brÄ• h Ä• yasmatÄ• udenena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. ghoá¹-amukho bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ anucaá¹…kamamÄ• no evamÄ• ha ``ambho samaá¹‡a natthi dhammiko paribbajo, evaá¹ƒ n bhavantarÅ«pÄ• naá¹ƒ vÄ• adassanÄ• , yo vÄ• panettha dhammÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ

caá¹…kÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 120/ bhagavatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhena caá¹…
Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante opÄ• sÄ• de nÄ• ma kosalÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame kÄ• paá¹-bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, kÄ• paá¹-iko bhante mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``yadidaá¹ƒ bho g porÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ mantapadaá¹ƒ itihitihaparamparÄ• ya piá¹-akasampadÄ• ya, tattha ca brÄ• h niá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ gacchanti `idameva saccaá¹ƒ moghamaÃ±Ã±aâ€™ nti, idha bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

esukÄ• rÄ«sutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ esukÄ• rÄ«suttaá¹ƒ \Be II 122/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• r
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante esukÄ• riá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• bho gotama paÃ±Ã±apenti, brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa pÄ• ricariyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apenti, khattiyassa pÄ• ricariyaá¹ƒ pÄ• ricariyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apenti, suddassa pÄ• ricariyaá¹ƒ paÃ±Ã±apentÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmi
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

dhanaÃ±jÄ• nisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dhanaÃ±jÄ• nisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 125/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kisn
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante dhanaÃ±jÄ• niá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• ya dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, dhanaÃ±jÄ• ni bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o pamÄ• davihÄ•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ atha \Be II 126/ kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhammasenÄ• dhanaÃ±jÄ• niá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ pucchi, kathaÃ±ca so Ä• yasmato sÄ• riputtattherassa

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``kaccÄ• si dhanaÃ±jÄ• ni appamattoâ€™â€™ ti, evaá¹ƒ kho bhante Ä• dhammasenÄ• pati dhanaÃ±jÄ• niá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ pucchi, dhanaÃ±jÄ• ni ca bhante br sÄ• riputta amhÄ• kaá¹ƒ appamÄ• do, yesaá¹ƒ no mÄ• tÄ• pitaro posetabbÄ• â€™â€™ ti, e sÄ• riputtassa dhammasenÄ• patissa Ä• rocesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 128/ vutte kho Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhamm brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa kÄ«disaá¹ƒ dhammakathaá¹ƒ kathesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ vutte bhante Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhammasenÄ• pati `` dhanaÃ±jÄ• ni, idhekacco mÄ• tÄ• pitÅ«naá¹ƒ hetu adhammacÄ• rÄ« visamacÄ• rÄ« assa, visamacariyÄ• hetu nirayaá¹ƒ nirayapÄ• lÄ• upakaá¸• á¸• heyyuâ€™â€™ nti, evamÄ• dinÄ brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa dhammakathaá¹ƒ kathesi.

__pucchÄ• --- _ puna \Be II 130/pi Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhammasenÄ• pa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa aparenapi pariyÄ• yena anusÄ• saniá¹ƒ adÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ punapi bhante Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhammasenÄ• pati ``taá¹ƒ dhanaÃ±jÄ• ni, yo vÄ• mÄ• tÄ• pitÅ«naá¹ƒ hetu adhammacÄ• rÄ« visamacÄ• rÄ« assa, yo dhammacÄ• rÄ« samacÄ• rÄ« assa, katamaá¹ƒ seyyoâ€™â€™ ti, evamÄ• dinÄ• dhanaÃ± pariyÄ• yena ovÄ• damadÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ aparabhÄ• ge \Be II 132/pi Ä• vuso Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhamma dhanaÃ±jÄ• nissa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa maraá¹‡asamaye dhammakathaá¹ƒ kathesi, kathaÃ±ca __vissajjanÄ• --- _ aparabhÄ• ge \Be II 133/pi bhante Ä• yasmÄ• sÄ• riputtatthero dhamm dhanaÃ±jÄ• nissa brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa maraá¹‡asamayepi cattÄ• ro brahmavihÄ• re desesi, d brÄ• hmaá¹‡o kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• brahmalokÅ«pago ahosi.

vÄ• seá¹-á¹-hasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ vÄ• seá¹-á¹-hasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 135/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ icchÄ• naá¹…gale bhante vÄ• seá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ mÄ• á¹‡avaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhante mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavantaá¹ƒ gÄ• thÄ• hi ajjhabhÄ• si ---

``anuÃ±Ã±Ä• tapaá¹-iÃ±Ã±Ä• tÄ• , tevijjÄ• mayamasmubho.

ahaá¹ƒ pokkharasÄ• tissa, tÄ• rukkhassÄ• yaá¹ƒ mÄ• á¹‡avo ||

tevijjÄ• naá¹ƒ yadakkhÄ• taá¹ƒ, tatra kevalinesmase.

padakasmÄ• veyyÄ• karaá¹‡Ä• , jappe Ä• cariyasÄ• disÄ• .

tesaá¹ƒ no jÄ• tivÄ• dasmiá¹ƒ, vivÄ• do atthi gotama ||

jÄ• tiyÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o hoti, bhÄ• radvÄ• jo iti bhÄ• sati.

ahaÃ±ca kammunÄ• brÅ«mi, evaá¹ƒ jÄ• nÄ• hi cakkhuma ||

tena sakkoma Ã±Ä• petuá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒmaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ mayaá¹ƒ ubho.

bhavantaá¹ƒ puá¹-á¹-humÄ• gamÄ• , sambuddhaá¹ƒ iti vissutaá¹ƒ ||

candaá¹ƒ yathÄ• khayÄ• tÄ«taá¹ƒ, pecca paÃ±jalikÄ• janÄ• .

vandanÄ• namassanti, evaá¹ƒ lokasmiá¹ƒ gotamaá¹ƒ ||

cakkhuá¹ƒ \Be II 136/ loke samuppannaá¹ƒ, mayaá¹ƒ pucchÄ• ma gotamaá¹ƒ.

jÄ• tiyÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡o hoti, udÄ• hu bhavati kammunÄ• .

ajÄ• nataá¹ƒ no pabrÅ«hi, yathÄ• jÄ• nemu brÄ• hmaá¹‡anti ||

tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

subhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ subhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 137/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante subhaá¹ƒ mÄ• á¹‡avaá¹ƒ todeyyaputtaá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhbhante mÄ• á¹‡avo todeyyaputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``brÄ• h evamÄ• haá¹ƒsuâ€™ gahaá¹-á¹-ho Ä• rÄ• dhako hoti Ã±Ä• yaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ kusalaá¹ƒ, n Ã±Ä• yaá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ kusalanti, idha bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo kimÄ• hÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ b
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ puna \Be II 138/pi Ä• vuso subho mÄ• á¹‡avo todeyyaputto kathaá¹ƒ bhag kathaÃ±ca bhagavÄ• vibhajja byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• bho gotama evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu `mahaá¹-á¹-hamidaá¹ƒ mahÄ• dhikaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ mahÄ• samÄ• rambhaá¹ƒ, gharÄ• vÄ• sakammaá¹-á¹-hÄ• naá¹ƒ ma appaá¹-á¹-hamidaá¹ƒ appakiccaá¹ƒ appÄ• dhikaraá¹‡aá¹ƒ appasamÄ• rambhaá¹ƒ, pabbajjÄ appaphalaá¹ƒ hotÄ«â€™ ti. idha bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo kimÄ• hÄ• â€™â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ kho bhan todeyyaputto punapi bhagavantaá¹ƒ pucchi. bhagavÄ• ca bhante ``etthÄ• pi kho ahaá¹ƒ mÄ nÄ• hamettha ekaá¹ƒsavÄ• dotiâ€™â€™ evamÄ• dinÄ• vibhajja byÄ• kÄ• si.

saá¹…gÄ• ravasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ saá¹…gÄ• ravasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 141/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kosalesu bhante caÃ±calikappe nÄ• ma gÄ• me saá¹…gÄ• ravaá¹ƒ mÄ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, saá¹…gÄ• ravo bhante mÄ• á¹‡avo bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``santi kho bho samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• diá¹-á¹-hadhammÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±Ä• vosÄ• napÄ• ramippattÄ• Ä• dib bho gotama ye te samaá¹‡abrÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• diá¹-á¹-hadhammÄ• bhiÃ±Ã±Ä• vosÄ• napÄ• r paá¹-ijÄ• nanti, tesaá¹ƒ bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo katamoâ€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ

devadahasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 145/ bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• samm devadahasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante devadahe nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame samma hule b
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

paÃ±cattayasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ paÃ±cattayasuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kintisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kintisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 146/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha b __vissajjanÄ• --- _ pisinÄ• rÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante baliharaá¹‡e nÄ• ma vanasaá¹‡á¸• e sambah

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tattha \Be II 147/ Ä• vuso bhagavÄ• kathaá¹ƒ paá¹-hamaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ« pa ovÄ• damadÄ• si, yo bahujanassa atthÄ• ya hitÄ• ya sukhÄ• ya saá¹ƒvattati.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattha bhante bhagavÄ• ``kinti vo bhikkhave mayi hoti, cÄ«varahetu vÄ dhammaá¹ƒ deseti, piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tahetu vÄ• , senÄ• sanahetu vÄ• , itibhavÄ• bhavahetu vÄ desetÄ«â€™â€™ ti bhikkhÅ« pucchitvÄ• ``tasmÄ• tiha bhikkhave ye vo mayÄ• dhammÄ• seyyathidaá¹ƒ, cattÄ• ro satipaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nÄ• cattÄ• ro sammappadhÄ• nÄ• cattÄ• ro iddhi paÃ±ca balÄ• ni satta bojjhaá¹…gÄ• ariyo aá¹-á¹-haá¹…giko maggo. tattha sabbeheva sam avivadamÄ• nehi sikkhitabbaá¹ƒâ€™â€™ evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• dama __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 150/ bhagavÄ• tattha dutiyampi bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ o bahujanassa atthÄ• ya hitÄ• ya sukhÄ• ya saá¹ƒvattati.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tattha bhante bhagavÄ• ``tesaÃ±ca vo bhikkhave samaggÄ• naá¹ƒ sam avivadamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ sikkhataá¹ƒ siyÄ• aÃ±Ã±atarassa bhikkhuno Ä• patti, siyÄ• vÄ«tikk codanÄ• ya taritabbaá¹ƒ puggalo upaparikkhitabboâ€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhikkhÅ«naá __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 152/ bhagavÄ• tattha tatiyampi bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ov bahujanassa atthÄ• ya hitÄ• ya sukhÄ• ya saá¹ƒvattati.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``tesaÃ±ca vo bhikkhave samaggÄ• naá¹ƒ sammodamÄ• nÄ• naá¹ƒ av

aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±assa vacÄ«saá¹ƒhÄ• ro uppajjeyya diá¹-á¹-hipaá¸·Ä• so cetaso Ä• ghÄ• to ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• tattha tatiyampi bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ ovÄ• damadÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 154/ bhikkhunÄ• evaá¹ƒ satthu ovÄ• dÄ• nusÄ• sanikÄ bhikkhu akusalÄ• vuá¹-á¹-hÄ• petvÄ• kusale patiá¹-á¹-hÄ• petÄ«ti parehi puá¹-á¹-hena kat byÄ• karamÄ• nena byÄ• kÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ ``idhÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• vuso yena bhagavÄ• tenupasaá¹…kamiá¹ƒ, tassa me tÄ• haá¹ƒ dhammaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• tesaá¹ƒ bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ abhÄ• siá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ te bhikkhÅ« dham vuá¹-á¹-hahiá¹ƒsu kusale patiá¹-á¹-hahiá¹ƒsÅ«â€™â€™ ti. evaá¹ƒ kho bhante tena bhikkhu ovÄ• dÄ• nusÄ• sanikÄ• rinÄ• parehi puá¹-á¹-hena sammÄ• byÄ• karamÄ• nena byÄ• kÄ

sÄ• magÄ• masutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sÄ• magÄ• masuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 155/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante sÄ• magÄ• me nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigame Ä• yasm Ä• yasmantaÃ±ca cundaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, Ä• yasmÄ• ca bhante Ä• nando Ä• ya tenupasaá¹…kamisu, upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• bhagavantaá¹ƒ abhivÄ• detvÄ• ekamantaá¹ƒ nis kho Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nando bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``ayaá¹ƒ bhante cundo samaá¹‡uddes nÄ• á¹-aputto pÄ• vÄ• yaá¹ƒ adhunÄ• kÄ• laá¹…kato, tassa kÄ• laá¹…kiriyÄ• ya bhinnÄ• n bhaá¹‡á¸• anajÄ• tÄ• kalahajÄ• tÄ• vivÄ• dÄ• pannÄ• aÃ±Ã±amaÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ mukhasattÄ« \Be II 156/ bhinnathÅ«pe appaá¹-isaraá¹‡eâ€™ ti. tassa mayhaá¹ƒ bhante evaá¹ƒ hoti `mÄ• saá¹…ghe vivÄ• do uppajji, svÄ• ssa vivÄ• do bahujanaahitÄ• ya bahujanaasukhÄ• ya bahu ahitÄ• ya dukkhÄ• ya devamanussÄ• naâ€™ ntiâ€™â€™. tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bh sunakkhattasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sunakkhattasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 158/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä•
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ vesÄ• liyaá¹ƒ bhante sunakkhattaá¹ƒ licchaviputtaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• s bhante licchaviputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``sutaá¹ƒ metaá¹ƒ bhan bhikkhÅ«hi bhagavato santike aÃ±Ã±Ä• byÄ• katÄ• khÄ«á¹‡Ä• jÄ• ti, vusitaá¹ƒ brahmaca karaá¹‡Ä«yaá¹ƒ, nÄ• paraá¹ƒ itthattÄ• yÄ• ti pajÄ• nÄ• mÄ• ti. kacci te bhante bhikkhÅ« sa byÄ• kaá¹ƒsu, udÄ• hu santetthekacce bhikkhÅ« adhimÄ• nena aÃ±Ã±aá¹ƒ byÄ• kaá¹ƒsÅ«
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• neÃ±jasappÄ• yasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ Ä• neÃ±jasappÄ• yasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 161/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha k
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ kurÅ«su bhante kammÄ• sadhamme nÄ• ma kurÅ«naá¹ƒ nigame samb
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

gaá¹‡akammoggallÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ gaá¹‡akamoggallÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 162/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante gaá¹‡akamoggallÄ• naá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• gaá¹‡akamoggallÄ• no bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoc imassa migÄ• ramÄ• tupÄ• sÄ• dassa dissati anupubbasikkhÄ• anupubbakiriyÄ• anupubb pacchimasopÄ• nakaá¸·evarÄ• ... pe ... sakkÄ• nukho bho gotama imasmimpi dhammavin anupubbakiriyÄ• anupubbapaá¹-ipadÄ• paÃ±Ã±apetuâ€™â€™ nti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthu __pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 165/ vutte kho Ä• vuso gaá¹‡akamoggallÄ• no brÄ• hmaá¹‡ avoca, kathaÃ±cassa bhagavÄ• byÄ• kÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ vutte bhante gaá¹‡akamoggallÄ• no brÄ• hmaá¹‡o bhagavanta kho bhoto gotamassa sÄ• vakÄ• bhotÄ• gotamena evaá¹ƒ ovadÄ«yamÄ• nÄ• evaá¹ƒ anu niá¹-á¹-haá¹ƒ nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rodhenti, udÄ• hu ekacce nÄ• rÄ• dhentÄ«â€™â€™ ti, bhaga brÄ• hmaá¹‡a mama sÄ• vakÄ• mayÄ• evaá¹ƒ ovadÄ«yamÄ• nÄ• evaá¹ƒ anusÄ• sÄ«yan nibbÄ• naá¹ƒ Ä• rÄ• dhenti, ekacce nÄ• rÄ• dhentÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• dinÄ• gaá¹‡akam byÄ• kÄ• si.

__pucchÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca \Be II 168/ panÄ• vuso dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• gaá¹‡ako mo
dhammavinaye pasanno kÄ«disaá¹ƒ pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ imaÃ±ca pana bhante dhammadesanaá¹ƒ sutvÄ• gaá¹‡akamoggallÄ• gotama puggalÄ• asaddhÄ• jÄ«vikatthÄ• na saddhÄ• agÄ• rasmÄ• anagÄ• riyaá¹ƒ pabb imasmiá¹ƒ dhammavinaye pasanno pasannÄ• kÄ• ramakÄ• si.

gopakamoggallÄ• nasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ gopakamoggallÄ• nasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 170/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabb kena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante gopakamoggallÄ• naá¹ƒ brÄ• hmaá¹‡aá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, gopakamoggallÄ• no bhante brÄ• hmaá¹‡o etadavoca ``atthi nu kho bho Ä• nanda ekabhikkhupi tehi dhammehi sabbena sabbaá¹ƒ sab samannÄ• gato, yehi dhammehi samannÄ• gato so bhavaá¹ƒ gotamo ahosi arahaá¹ƒ samm
bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 173/ tattha Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena dham bhikkhuno pasÄ• danÄ«yÄ• dhammÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• , ye tena bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passa akkhÄ• tÄ• . yehi ca samannÄ• gataá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ aÃ±Ã±e bhikkhÅ« sakkareyyuá¹ƒ garuá pÅ«jeyyuá¹ƒ sakkatvÄ• garuá¹ƒ katvÄ• upanissÄ• ya vihareyyuá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha brÄ• hmaá¹‡a bhikkhu sÄ«lavÄ• hoti, pÄ• timokkhasaá¹ƒvarasaá Ä• cÄ• ragocarasampanno aá¹‡umattesu vajjesu bhayadassÄ• vÄ«, samÄ• dÄ• ya sikkhati sutadharo sutasannicayo, yeme dhammÄ• Ä• dikalyÄ• á¹‡Ä• majjhekalyÄ• á¹‡Ä• pariyos sabyaÃ±janaá¹ƒ kevalaparipuá¹‡á¹‡aá¹ƒ parisuddhaá¹ƒ brahmacariyaá¹ƒ abhivadanti, tathÄ bahussutÄ• honti dhÄ• tÄ• vacasÄ• paricitÄ• manasÄ• nupekkhitÄ• diá¹-á¹-hiyÄ• suppa bhante tattha Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä• nandattherena dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena dasa pasÄ tena bhagatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• sambuddhena akkhÄ• tÄ• , yehi sa bhikkhÅ« sakkareyyuá¹ƒ garuá¹ƒ kareyyuá¹ƒ mÄ• neyyuá¹ƒ pÅ«jeyyuá¹ƒ sakkatvÄ• garuá vihareyyuá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 178/ vutte kho Ä• vuso vassakÄ• ro brÄ• hmaá¹‡o magadha pasaá¹ƒsÄ• vacanaá¹ƒ kathesi, kathaÃ±cassa Ä• yasmÄ• Ä• nandatthero dhammabhaá¹‡a paá¹-isodhetvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ evaá¹ƒ \Be II 179/ vutte vassakÄ• ro brÄ• hmaá¹‡o magadhamahÄ• ma senÄ• patiá¹ƒ Ä• mantesi ``taá¹ƒ kiá¹ƒ maÃ±Ã±asi bhavaá¹ƒ senÄ• pati, yadi me bhonto sa garuá¹ƒ kÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ garuá¹ƒ karonti, mÄ• netabbaá¹ƒ mÄ• nenti, pÅ«jetabbaá¹ƒ pÅ«jentÄ pasaá¹ƒsÄ• vacanaá¹ƒ kathesi, Ä• yasmÄ• ca bhante Ä• nando ``na ca kho brÄ• hmaá¹‡a vaá¹‡á¹‡esi, napi so bhagavÄ• sabbaá¹ƒ jhÄ• naá¹ƒ na vaá¹‡á¹‡esÄ«â€™â€™ ti evamÄ•
paá¹-isodhetvÄ• pakÄ• sesi.

mahÄ• puá¹‡á¹‡amasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• puá¹‡á¹‡amasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 182/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha k
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante aÃ±Ã±ataraá¹ƒ saá¹-á¹-himattÄ• naá¹ƒ padhÄ• saá¹…ghattheraá¹ƒ bhikkhuá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, aÃ±Ã±ataro bhante saá¹-á¹-himattÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be II 183/ padhÄ• nÄ«yabhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ saá¹…ghatthero bhikkhu u ekaá¹ƒsaá¹ƒ cÄ«varaá¹ƒ katvÄ• yena bhagavÄ• tenaÃ±jaliá¹ƒ paá¹‡Ä• metvÄ• bhagavan ``puccheyyÄ• haá¹ƒ bhante bhagavantaá¹ƒ kiÃ±cideva desaá¹ƒ, sace me bhagavÄ• okÄ• s veyyÄ• karaá¹‡Ä• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

cÅ«á¸·apuá¹‡á¹‡amasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·apuá¹‡á¹‡amasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 184/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha k
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 185/ tattha bhagavatÄ• asappurisaaá¹…gÄ• ni vi __vissajjanÄ• --- _ asappuriso bhikkhave assaddhammasamannÄ• gato hoti, asappurisabh asappurisacintÄ« hoti, asappurisamantÄ« hoti, asappurisavÄ• co hoti, asappurisakammanto asappurisadiá¹-á¹-hi hoti, asappurisadÄ• naá¹ƒ detÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagav asappurisaaá¹…gÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaá¹ƒ \Be II 186/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• tattha sappurisaaá¹…gÄ• ni __vissajjanÄ• --- _ sappuriso bhikkhave saddhammasamannÄ• gato hoti, sappurisabhatti h hoti, sappurisamantÄ« hoti, sappurisavÄ• co hoti, sappurisakammanto hoti, sappurisadiá¹-á sappurisadÄ• naá¹ƒ detÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• tattha aá¹-á¹-havidhÄ• ni sa

pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

anupadasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anupadasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 188/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabh
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, sa Ä• yasmato sÄ• riputtassa dhammasenÄ• patissa sabhÄ• gÄ• tasmiá¹ƒ samaye sannipatiá
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 189/ tattha bhagavatÄ• Ä• yasmato sÄ• riputtass anupadadhammavipassanÄ• vitthÄ• rena vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ paá¹‡á¸• ito bhikkhave sÄ• riputto mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±o bhikkhave sÄ• riput sÄ• riputto hÄ• sapaÃ±Ã±o \Be II 190/ bhikkhave sÄ• riputto tikkhapaÃ±Ã±o bhikkhave sÄ• bhikkhave sÄ• riputto nibbedhikapaÃ±Ã±o bhikkhave sÄ• riputto sÄ• riputto bhikkhave aá¸• anupadadhammavipassanaá¹ƒ vipassatÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• Ä• y dhammasenÄ• patissa anupadadhammavipassanÄ• vitthÄ• rena pakÄ• sitÄ• .

chabbisodhanasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso ... pe ... \Be II 192/ sammÄ• sambuddhena chabbisodhanasutt Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sappurisasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sappurisasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 193/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rab

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

sevitabbÄ• sevitabbasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ sevitabbÄ• sevitabbasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 194/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha k saddhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• s dhammasenÄ• patinÄ• saddhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

bahudhÄ• tukasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bahudhÄ• tukasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 195/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bh

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

isigilisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ isigilisuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá __vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante isigilismiá¹ƒ pabbate sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha

mahÄ• cattÄ• rÄ«sakasutta __pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• cattÄ• rÄ«sakasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 196/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha

bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

Ä• nÄ• pÄ• nassatisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ Ä• nÄ• pÄ• nassatisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 197/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ka
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, th nave bhikkhÅ« ovadanti anusÄ• santi, appekacce therÄ• bhikkhÅ« dasapi bhikkhÅ« ovada therÄ• bhikkhÅ« vÄ«sampi bhikkhÅ« ovadanti anusÄ• santi, appekacce therÄ• bhikkhÅ« ti anusÄ• santi, appekacce therÄ• bhikkhÅ« cattÄ• rÄ«sampi bhikkhÅ« ovadanti anusÄ• sant bhikkhÅ« therehi bhikkhÅ«hi ovadiyamÄ• nÄ• anusÄ• siyamÄ• nÄ• uá¸·Ä• raá¹ƒ pubbenÄ
tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

kÄ• yagatÄ• satisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ kÄ• yagatÄ• satisuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, s bhikkhÅ«naá¹ƒ pacchÄ• bhattaá¹ƒ piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tapaá¹-ikkantÄ• naá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasÄ sannipatitÄ• naá¹ƒ ayamantarakathÄ• udapÄ• di ``acchariyaá¹ƒ Ä• vuso, abbhutaá¹ƒ Ä• vu bhagavatÄ• jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• arahatÄ• sammÄ• sambuddhena kÄ• yagatÄ• sati bhÄ• vuttÄ• mahÄ• nisaá¹ƒsÄ• â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

saá¹…khÄ• rÅ«papattisutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ saá¹…khÄ• rÅ«papattisuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 200/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso tattha bhagavatÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rÅ«papattiyo vibhajitvÄ•

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha bhikkhave bhikkhu saddhÄ• ya samannÄ• gato hoti, sÄ«lena sama samannÄ• gato hoti, cÄ• gena samannÄ• gato hoti, paÃ±Ã±Ä• ya samannÄ• gato hoti, tass kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• khattiyamahÄ• sÄ• lÄ• naá¹ƒ sahabyataá¹ƒ upapaj bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• saá¹…khÄ• rÅ«papattiyo vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

cÅ«á¸·asuÃ±Ã±atasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ cÅ«á¸·asuÃ±Ã±atasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 202/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• s Ä• nando sÄ• yanhasamayaá¹ƒ paá¹-isallÄ• nÄ• vuá¹-á¹-hito bhagavantaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``e bhagavÄ• sakkesu viharati nagarakaá¹ƒ nÄ• ma sakyÄ• naá¹ƒ nigamo, tattha me bhante b sammukhÄ• paá¹-iggahitaá¹ƒ, suÃ±Ã±atÄ• vihÄ• renÄ• haá¹ƒ Ä• nanda etarahi bahulaá¹ƒ bhante sussutaá¹ƒ suggahitaá¹ƒ sumanasikataá¹ƒ sÅ«padhÄ• ritaâ€™â€™ nti, tasmiá¹ƒ bh
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

mahÄ• suÃ±Ã±atasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ mahÄ• suÃ±Ã±atasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 204/ panÄ• vuto bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá
vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sakkesu bhante kapilavatthusmiá¹ƒ Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ Ä• nandaá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhante Ä• nando sambahulehi bhikkhÅ«hi saddhiá¹ƒ ghaá¹-Ä• ya sakkassa vihÄ• re cÄ«var
bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

acchariyaabbhutasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ acchariyaabbhutasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 205/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá vatthusmiá¹ƒ kena saddhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• Ä dhammabhaá¹‡á¸• Ä• gÄ• rikena saddhiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ. sambahulÄ• naá¹ƒ bhante bhikkh piá¹‡á¸• apÄ• tapaá¹-ikkantÄ• naá¹ƒ upaá¹-á¹-hÄ• nasÄ• lÄ• yaá¹ƒ sannisinnÄ• naá¹ƒ sann udapÄ• di ``acchariyaá¹ƒ Ä• vuso, abbhutaá¹ƒ Ä• vuso tathÄ• gatassa mahiddhikatÄ• mah tathÄ• gato atÄ«te buddhe parinibbute chinnapapaÃ±ce chinnavaá¹-ume pariyÄ• dinnavaá¹ jÄ• nissati. evaá¹ƒjaccÄ• te bhagavanto ahesuá¹ƒ itipi, evaá¹ƒnÄ• mÄ• te bhagavanto ahe te bhagavanto ahesuá¹ƒ itipi, evaá¹ƒsÄ«lÄ• te bhagavanto ahesuá¹ƒ itipi, evaá¹ƒdhammÄ• itipi, evaá¹ƒpaÃ±Ã±Ä• \Be II 206/ te bhagavanto ahesuá¹ƒ itipi, evaá¹ƒvihÄ• rÄ« te bhagava evaá¹ƒvimuttÄ• te bhagavanto ahesuá¹ƒ itipÄ«â€™â€™ ti, tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ b

bÄ• kulasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bÄ• kulasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 207/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kena bhÄ __vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante acelaá¹ƒ kassapaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• yasmatÄ• bÄ• k

dantabhÅ«misutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ dantabhÅ«misuttaá¹ƒ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kis
bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante jayasenaá¹ƒ rÄ• jakumÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita rÄ• jakumÄ• ro aciravataá¹ƒ samaá¹‡uddesaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``sutaá¹ƒ m bhikkhu appamatto Ä• tÄ• pÄ« pahitatto viharanto phuseyya \Be II 208/ cittassa ekaggataâ€
bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 210/ tattha bhagavatÄ• aciravatassa samaá¹‡udd dhammadesanÄ• nayo pakÄ• sito.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ taá¹ƒ kutettha aggivessana labbhÄ• , yaá¹ƒ taá¹ƒ nekkhammena Ã±Ä• daá¹-á¹-habbaá¹ƒ nekkhammena pattabbaá¹ƒ nekkhammena sacchikÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ, taá¹ƒ vat kÄ• mamajjhe vasanto kÄ• me paribhuÃ±janto kÄ• mavitakkehi khajjamÄ• no kÄ• mapariá¸ kÄ• mapariyosanÄ• ya ussuko ussati vÄ• dakkhati vÄ• sacchi vÄ• karissatÄ«ti netaá¹ƒ á¹ evaá¹ƒ kho bhante bhagavato aciravatassa samaá¹‡uddesassa samassÄ• setvÄ• , seyyath hatthidammÄ• vÄ• assadammÄ• vÄ• godammÄ• vÄ• sudantÄ• suvinÄ«tÄ• ti evamÄ• d samaá¹‡uddesassa desanÄ• nayo pakÄ• sito.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 214/ tattha bhagavÄ• dve upamÄ• yo dassetvÄ• pavaá¸• á¸• heti.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ seyyathÄ• pi aggivessana rÄ• jÄ• khattiyo muddhÄ• vasitto nÄ• gavani evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavÄ• uttaripi dhammadesanaá¹ƒ pavaá¸• á¸• hesi.

bhÅ«mijasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso ... pe ... \Be II 216/ sammÄ• sambuddhena bhÅ«mijasuttaá¹ƒ k kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ rÄ• jagahe bhante jayasenaá¹ƒ rÄ• jakumÄ• raá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sita rÄ• jakumÄ• ro Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ bhÅ«mijaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``santi bho bhÅ«mija eke samaá¹‡ evaá¹ƒdiá¹-á¹-hino `Ä• saÃ±cepi karitvÄ• brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caranti, abhabbÄ• phalassa ad karitvÄ• brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caranti, abhabbÄ• phalassa adhigamÄ• ya. Ä• saÃ±ca anÄ• saÃ brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caranti, abhabbÄ• phalassa adhigamÄ• ya \Be II 217/. nevÄ• saá¹ƒ nÄ• r brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caranti, Ä• bhabbÄ• phalassa adhigamÄ• yÄ• â€™ ti. idha bhoto bhÅ«mij kimakkhÄ• yÄ«â€™â€™ ti tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 219/ tattha bhagavatÄ• Ä• yasmato bhÅ«mijatthe byÄ• karaá¹‡aá¹ƒ samanujÄ• nitvÄ• tatuttari dhammadesanÄ• nayo paripÅ«retvÄ• pakÄ• __vissajjanÄ• --- _ taggha tvaá¹ƒ bhÅ«mija evaá¹ƒ puá¹-á¹-ho evaá¹ƒ byÄ• karamÄ• no vu na ca maá¹ƒ abhÅ«tena abbhÄ• cikkhasi, evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante bhagavatÄ• Ä• yasmato b samanujÄ• nitvÄ• ``yehi kehici bhÅ«mija samaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• brÄ• hmaá¹‡Ä• vÄ• micchÄ• d micchÄ• vÄ• cÄ• micchÄ• kammantÄ• micchÄ• Ä• jÄ«vÄ• micchÄ• vÄ• yÄ• mÄ• micchÄ karitvÄ• brahmacariyaá¹ƒ caranti, abhabbÄ• phalassa adhigamÄ• yÄ• â€™â€™ ti evamÄ• Ä• yasmato bhÅ«mijassa uttari desanÄ• nayo paripÅ«retvÄ• pakÄ• sito.

anuruddhasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ anuruddhasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 224/ panÄ• vuso kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante paÃ±cakaá¹…gaá¹ƒ thapatiá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha Ä• ya bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, paÃ±cakaá¹…go bhante thapati Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ anuruddhaá¹ƒ etadavoca ``id bhikkhÅ« upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu `appamÄ• á¹‡aá¹ƒ gahapati cetovimuttiá¹ƒ

evamÄ• haá¹ƒsu `mahaggataá¹ƒ gahapati cetovimuttiá¹ƒ bhÄ• vehÄ«â€™â€™ ti, yÄ• cÄ• y cetovimutti yÄ• ca mahaggatÄ• cetovimutti, ime dhammÄ• nÄ• natthÄ• ceva nÄ• nÄ• bya byaÃ±janameva nÄ• nantiâ€™â€™ tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

upakkilesasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ upakkilesasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 225/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• ra __vissajjanÄ• --- _ pÄ• cÄ«navaá¹ƒsadÄ• ye bhante Ä• yasmantaá¹ƒ anuruddhattheraá¹ƒ

bÄ• lapaá¹‡á¸• itasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ bÄ• lapaá¹‡á¸• itasuttaá¹ƒ \Be II 226/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha kaá

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante sambahule bhikkhÅ« Ä• rabbha bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa bÄ• lalakkhaá¹‡Ä• ni ca b dukkhadomanassappaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• ca pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ tÄ«á¹‡imÄ• ni bhikkhave bÄ• lassa bÄ• lalakkhaá¹‡Ä• ni bÄ• lanimittÄ• katamÄ• ni tÄ«á¹‡i. idha bhikkhave bÄ• lo duccintitacintÄ« \Be II 227/ ca hoti dubbhÄ• sitab dukkaá¹-akammakÄ• rÄ« cÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa bÄ• lal diá¹-á¹-heva dhamme dukkhadomanassappaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• ca pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 230/ tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa samparÄ• yo ca dukkhadomanassapaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• ca pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sa kho so bhikkhave bÄ• lo kÄ• yena duccaritaá¹ƒ caritvÄ• vÄ• cÄ• ya manasÄ• duccaritaá¹ƒ caritvÄ• kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• apÄ• yaá¹ƒ duggat upapajjatÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa samparÄ• yo ca tattha ca dukkhadomanassappaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 234/ tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa tiracchÄ• nayon dukkhadomanassapaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ santi bhikkhave tiracchÄ• nagatÄ• pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tiá¹‡abhakkhÄ• te allÄ• sukkhÄ• nipi tiá¹‡Ä• ni dantullehakaá¹ƒ khÄ• dantÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagava tiracchÄ• nayoniyaá¹ƒ dukkhadomanassappaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 235/ tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lena sakiá¹ƒ vinipÄ• t manussattadullabhatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ seyyathÄ• pi bhikkhave puriso ekacchiggalaá¹ƒ yugaá¹ƒ mahÄ• samud puratthimo vÄ• to pacchimena saá¹ƒhareyyÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• b vinipÄ• tagatena puna manussattassa dullabhatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 237/ tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa kadÄ• ci karaha accayena manussattaá¹ƒ Ä• gatassapi dukkhabahulatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sa kho so bhikkhave bÄ• lo sace kadÄ• ci karahaci dÄ«ghassa addhun Ä• gacchatÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• bÄ• lassa kadÄ• ci karahaci dÄ«g manussattaá¹ƒ Ä• gatassapi dukkhabahulatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 238/ tattha bhagavatÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itassa paá¹‡á¸• paá¹‡á¸• itassa diá¹-á¹-heva dhamme sukhasomanassappaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• ca pakÄ• sitÄ __vissajjanÄ• --- _ tÄ«á¹‡imÄ• ni bhikkhave paá¹‡á¸• itassa paá¹‡á¸• italakkhaá¹‡Ä• ni pa paá¹‡á¸• itÄ• padÄ• nÄ• ni. katamÄ• ni tÄ«á¹‡i. idha bhikkhave paá¹‡á¸• ito sucintitacintÄ« subhÄ• sitabhÄ• sÄ« ca sukatakammakÄ• rÄ« cÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagava

paá¹‡á¸• itassa \Be II 239/ paá¹‡á¸• italakkhaá¹‡Ä• ni ca diá¹-á¹-heva dhamme paá¹‡á¸• ita sukhasomanassapaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• ca pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 240/ tattha bhagavatÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itassa samparÄ sukhasomanassappaá¹-isaá¹ƒvedanÄ• ca pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sa kho so bhikkhave paá¹‡á¸• ito kÄ• yena sucaritaá¹ƒ caritvÄ• vÄ• cÄ caritvÄ• kÄ• yassa bhedÄ• paraá¹ƒ maraá¹‡Ä• sugatiá¹ƒ saggaá¹ƒ lokaá¹ƒ upapajjatÄ«ti bhagavatÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itassa samparÄ• yo ca sagge ca paá¹‡á¸• itassa sukhasomanassapp __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 242/ tattha bhagavatÄ• paá¹‡á¸• itassa kadÄ• ci addhuno accayena manussattaá¹ƒ Ä• gatassapi sukhabahulatÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• .

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sa kho so bhikkhave paá¹‡á¸• ito sace kadÄ• ci karahaci dÄ«ghassa ad manussattaá¹ƒ Ä• gacchati, yÄ• ni tÄ• ni uccÄ• kulÄ• ni khattiyamahÄ• sÄ• lakulaá¹ƒ vÄ• b vÄ• gahapatimahÄ• sÄ• lakulaá¹ƒ vÄ• tathÄ• rÅ«pe kule paccÄ• jÄ• yatÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ

paá¹‡á¸• itassa kadÄ• ci karahaci dÄ«ghassa addhuno accayena manussattaá¹ƒ Ä• gatass
pakÄ• sitÄ• .

cÅ«á¸·akammavibhaá¹…gasutta

__pucchÄ• --- _ tenÄ• vuso \Be II 244/ jÄ• natÄ• passatÄ• ... pe ... sammÄ• sambuddhen cÅ«á¸·akammavibhaá¹…gasuttaá¹ƒ kattha kaá¹ƒ Ä• rabbha kismiá¹ƒ vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sita

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ sÄ• vatthiyaá¹ƒ bhante subhaá¹ƒ mÄ• á¹‡avaá¹ƒ todeyyaputtaá¹ƒ Ä• ra bhante mÄ• á¹‡avo todeyyaputto bhagavantaá¹ƒ upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• etadavoca ``ko nu kho yena manussÄ• naá¹ƒyeva sataá¹ƒ manussabhÅ«tÄ• naá¹ƒ dissanti hÄ«nappaá¹‡Ä«tatÄ• .
manussÄ• appÄ• yukÄ• , dissanti dÄ«ghÄ• yukÄ• . dissanti bavhÄ• bÄ• dhÄ• , dissanti app dubbaá¹‡á¹‡Ä• , dissanti vaá¹‡á¹‡avanto. dissanti appesakkhÄ• , dissanti mahesakkhÄ• . d dissanti mahÄ• bhogÄ• . dissanti nÄ«cakulÄ«nÄ• , dissanti uccÄ• kulÄ«nÄ• . dissanti duppa paÃ±Ã±avanto. ko nu kho bho gotama hetu ko paccayo, yena manussÄ• naá¹ƒyeva sataá¹ƒ dissanti hÄ«nappaá¹‡Ä«tatÄ• â€™â€™ ti tasmiá¹ƒ bhante vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 246/ tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ«ghÄ• yukaappÄ• yukasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• pÄ• á¹‡Ä• tipÄ• tÄ« ho hatapahate niviá¹-á¹-ho adayÄ• panno pÄ• á¹‡abhÅ«tesÅ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha b appÄ• yukadÄ«ghÄ• yukasaá¹ƒvattanakÄ• ni kammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 247/ tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ appÄ• bÄ• dhabavhÄ• bÄ• dhasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha \Be II 248/ mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ hoti pÄ• á¹‡inÄ• vÄ• leá¸• á¸• unÄ• vÄ• daá¹‡á¸• enavÄ• satthena vÄ• ti evamÄ• dinÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ appÄ• bÄ• dhabavhÄ• bÄ• dhasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• s

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 249/ tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ suvaá¹‡á¹‡adubbaá¹‡á¹‡asaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• kodhano hoti upÄ• yÄ• samÄ• no abhisajjati kuppati byÄ• pajjati patiá¹-á¹-hiyati, kopaÃ±ca dosaÃ±ca appaccayaÃ± evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ suvaá¹‡á¹‡adubbaá¹‡á¹‡asaá¹ƒvatt pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 251/ tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ mahesakkha appesakkhasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• issÄ• manako hoti, par garukÄ• ra mÄ• nanavandana pÅ«jÄ• su issati upadussati issaá¹ƒ bandhatÄ«ti evamÄ• din sattÄ• naá¹ƒ appesakkhamahesakkhasaá¹ƒvattanakÄ• ni kammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sit __pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 253/ tattha bhagavatÄ• mahÄ• bhogaappabhoga vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• na dÄ• tÄ• hoti, sama brÄ• hmaá¹‡assa vÄ• annaá¹ƒ pÄ• naá¹ƒ vattaá¹ƒ yÄ• naá¹ƒ mÄ• lÄ• gandha vilepanaá¹ƒ evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• mahÄ• bhogaappabhogasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ•

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 255/ tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ uccÄ• kulÄ« nÄ«cakulÄ«nasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• thaddho hoti atimÄ• ni abhivÄ• deti, paccuá¹-á¹-hÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ na paccuá¹-á¹-heti, Ä• sanÄ• rahassa na Ä• sanaá¹ƒ maggaá¹ƒ deti, sakkÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ na sakkaroti, garukÄ• tabbaá¹ƒ na garukaroti, mÄ• netabb pÅ«jetabbaá¹ƒ na pÅ«jetÄ«ti evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ uccÄ• nÄ«cakulÄ«nasaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__pucchÄ• --- _ kathaÃ±cÄ• vuso \Be II 257/ tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±aduppaÃ±Ã±asaá¹ƒvattanakakammÄ• ni vibhajitvÄ• pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ idha mÄ• á¹‡ava ekacco itthÄ« vÄ• puriso vÄ• samaá¹‡aá¹ƒ vÄ• brÄ• upasaá¹…kamitvÄ• na paripucchitÄ• hoti ``kiá¹ƒ bhante kusalaá¹ƒ, kiá¹ƒ akusalaá¹ƒ. kiá¹ƒ anavajjaá¹ƒ. kiá¹ƒ sevitabbaá¹ƒ, kiá¹ƒ na sevitabbaá¹ƒ. kiá¹ƒ me karÄ«yamÄ• naá¹ƒ dÄ«gha dukkhÄ• ya hoti, kiá¹ƒ vÄ• pana me karÄ«yamÄ• naá¹ƒ \Be II 258/ dÄ«gharattaá¹ƒ hitÄ• ya evamÄ• dinÄ• bhante tattha bhagavatÄ• sattÄ• naá¹ƒ mahÄ• paÃ±Ã±aduppaÃ±Ã±asaá¹ƒ pakÄ• sitÄ• ni.

indriyabhÄ• vanÄ• su

__pucchÄ• --- _ indriyabhÄ• vanÄ• suttaá¹ƒ \Be II 260/ panÄ• vuso bhagavatÄ• kattha ka vatthusmiá¹ƒ bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ.

__vissajjanÄ• --- _ gajaá¹…galÄ• yaá¹ƒ bhante uttaraá¹ƒ nÄ• ma mÄ• á¹‡avaá¹ƒ pÄ• rÄ• s bhÄ• sitaá¹ƒ, uttaro bhante mÄ• á¹‡avo pÄ• rÄ• siviyantevÄ• sÄ« bhagavatÄ• puá¹-á¹-ho b ``idha bho gotama cakkhunÄ• rÅ«paá¹ƒ na passati, sotena saddaá¹ƒ na suá¹‡Ä• ti. evaá¹ƒ pÄ• rÄ• siviyo brÄ• hmaá¹‡o sÄ• vakÄ• naá¹ƒ indriyabhÄ• vanaâ€™â€™ nti. tasmiá¹ƒ bhan

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP and/or COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU or ANU Soc.Sci.WWW Se
at http://coombs.anu.edu.au/CoombsHome.html

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[This version: 5 July 1994]

REALIZING OUR TRUE NATURE - Questions and Answers
Taizan Maezumi Roshi

An un-dated lecture, most likely delivered in the mid- or late 1970s, made available to Sydney Zen Center in a xeroxed form.

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Taizan Maezumi Roshi, Zen Center of Los Angeles, 923 South Normandie Ave., Los Angeles, California USA 90006

REALIZING OUR TRUE NATURE

Questions and Answers with Taizan Maezumi Roshi

Q: Roshi, what do we mean by one's "true nature?"

A: Let us think about what one's "true nature" means. In our case, practicing together, we may say it is a synonym of "Buddha nature." And this "Buddha nature" or "true nature" of oneself is explained using such terms as: "original self," "original face" or "Mind;" sometimes as "Muji," "the cypress tree in the garden," "thusness" or "reality;" each according to the context of the doctrine or the teachings.

When we consider this true nature as the Buddha nature, it will clarify our understanding to observe the Buddha nature from three different standpoints: The first one is called 'Shoin Ryoin', the Buddha nature inherent in all beings, whether enlightened or not, The next one is 'Ryoin Bussho', the Buddha nature which is manifested when one begins to practice the Dharma. And the last one is 'Enin Bussho', the Buddha nature of one who has attained enlightenment.

Making a simple analogy, the 'Shoin Ryoin' is like gold which is in the ground. Regardless of whether or not people realize it, there is gold underground. The second one,'Ryoin Bussho', is the Buddha nature by virtue of which we are able to recognize where and how to extract the gold. The third one, 'Enin Bussho', is like whatever tools you use to take the gold out and get it into your hands.

Q: Can everyone realize this "true nature?"

A: In connection with this analogy, we may understand that all of us have the Buddha nature, or rather, we are nothing but the Buddha nature. Yet, if we don't become aware that we already have the gold in our hands, we cannot be satisfied until we do have it. In order to have it, we have to do something to get it. If anyone wants to have gold in his hands without making any effort to get it, he simply can't have it. In order to realize one's Buddha nature, if one doesn't do anything in order to realize it, it will be impossible to have it. On the contrary, if someone really wishes to do it, s/he will get it done sooner or later.

Q: How is it that some people won't realize it?

A: Using the analogy, everybody knows that gold is someplace in the ground; in some places there is gold, and in other places there is not. If we dig in the wrong place, it's in vain, regardless of how hard we try. So in order to realize this Buddha nature, we have to have the right means and the right direction in which to pursue our efforts to find the gold.

Q: What would be the right direction?

A: Let's reflect upon the words of Dogen Zenji: "It is not a matter of being smart or dull, well-learned or foolish, but if one practices wholeheartedly to find out what the Way is, that is nothing but the accomplishment of the Way."

The point is this: straight-forward whole-heartedness in accord with one's practice. These famous words of Dogen Zenji, "Isshiki ino bendo", mean "To practice the Way with whole-heartedness," or "To become one with whatever you do." In other words, 'to become one is the key. When you really become one with whatever you do, that is the realization of the Way.'

So that whether everyone realizes his true nature or not is dependent on the individual. Even being lazy and not doing anything still is nothing but the Buddha nature. That is to say, one has gold and yet he does not think so. So he simply does not realize his own nature.

There is a famous analogy by the Buddha: A very poor man had a friend who was very rich. One time they met together, had a few drinks, and eventually the poor man fell asleep. Looking at this poor man, the rich man felt sorry for him, and, without letting him know, slipped a precious jewel into his garment. After parting from his rich friend, the poor man returned to his life as a beggar without knowing he had that precious jewel. After some time, they met again, and the rich man was surprised and asked him, "I gave you that jewel. Why did you not use it to make your life comfortable. And the poor man said, "No, you never gave me anything!" So the rich friend reached into the garment where he put the jewel, took it out, and showed it to him.

Q: Roshi, how can we strengthen our faith in order to practice better?

A: This is a very fundamental thing. Faith is a very fundamental, very important matter in life. To strengthen our faith is almost always a synonym for bettering our practice.

When we have faith, it is necessary to examine in what we put our faith. We have a proverb, "To believe in the head of a dried, dead sardine has power to chase away evil spirits." As a matter of fact, we believe in all sorts of different things: such as money, fame, ideas, thoughts, ideologies, emotions and feelings. In order to practice better, we must have our faith in the right way. What is the right way? It is to put our faith in whatever the Buddha and the Patriarchs say, to put ourselves wholeheartedly into it and practice diligently. So, regarding the right direction, have strong faith in yourself, in the fact that your life is itself nothing but Buddha nature. To have strong faith in this fact and to practice in accordance with what the Buddha and the Patriarchs say, leads us to better practice and strengthens our faith.

It is also important to renew our vows from time to time and to encourage ourselves to accomplish further. By doing so, we can strengthen our faith, and this faith, again, strengthens our practice.

It is like a circle. First, 'Hosshin', raise the Bodhi-mind or seek for realization; second, 'Shugyo', practice; third, 'Bodhi', attainment of realization; fourth, 'Nehan', Nirvana. In the state of Nirvana lies the Bodhi-mind, then again practice, then attainment, then Nirvana, spiraling ever upward. Dogen Zenji said that our practice is like a spiral comprising these four strands.

So let us practice well together and strengthen our faith.

[end of file].

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP and/or COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU or ANU Soc.Sci.WWW Se
at http://coombs.anu.edu.au/CoombsHome.html

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[This version: 5 July 1994]

KI

Taizan Maezumi Roshi

An un-dated teisho, most likely delivered in the mid- or late 1970s, made available to Sydney Zen Center in a xeroxed form.

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Taizan Maezumi Roshi, Zen Center of Los Angeles, 923 South Normandie Ave., Los Angeles, California USA 90006.

KI

Teisho by Taizan Maezumi Roshi

Generally, when we talk about sitting zazen, we divide it into three parts: disposition of the body, breathing, and controlling the mind.

And, regarding the disposition of the body, most of our postures could be improved. One way to do this is for you to sit in front of a mirror and check how you sit. Then try to sit better.

What I want to emphasize today is the breathing, and also what we call 'ki', a sort of spirit or energy which is very important. I want you to contemplate on this aspect and raise ki.

We say 'kikai', lower abdomen, ocean of 'ki'. Somehow, in the Orient, this ki, this flow of energy, was found a long time ago. Lao Tzu talked about it long before Buddhism went to China. In Taoism they talk about this ki. And they talk about 'Shi', aspiration. Mo Tzu, one of the earliest Taoists said, "Aspiration is the boss of the body. And the 'ki', or energy, is the thing to fill up the body." Your body should be filled with this ki.

Those who are working on the koan Muji can especially utilize this 'ki'. Work on Muji as if Mu itself were 'ki'. First, concentrate in the lower abdomen, then let that 'ki', Muji, permeate all your body gradually. Then let that 'ki' flow nicely throughout your body.

Harada Roshi (Yasutani Roshi's teacher) explained about sitting posture. Sit with this spirit, and even during severe cold in winter, after sitting a while your body will start getting warm. You can do that when you start letting 'ki' flow smoothly throughout your body and especially through the lower abdomen. Very soon you start feeling that warmth. And sit with such energy and strength that if anybody casually touches you, sparks fly. It is that kind of intensity... Yet it's not physical tension... Just let the body really sit well. With 'ki', you can have that strength. And in order to do so, we should have proper breathing. We can almost say breathing is the key.

It fascinates me that the etymological implication of spirit is 'to breathe'. Nowadays we have a different implication about spirit. But the original implication is 'to breathe.' There is an energy, or spirit, which flows along with the breathing. Even in China, over 2000 years ago, this was practiced.

And 'ki' is not only that which flows within ourselves, but also that which flows in the entire universe. Then, we match our 'ki' with that 'ki' of the universe, and we become as strong as the whole world.

Now Chang Tzu says an interesting thing about this 'ki'. He says that when 'ki' is disturbed and upset and scatters, it becomes scarce within the body. Literally he says 'kinan tatsu'. Tatsu means stand up, the opposite of sitting. So, let 'ki' sit, and don't let it scatter outside yourself.

This reminds me of the very primary aspects of sitting. I often talk of the analogy of spinning the top. When the top is really well spun, it stands straight. But even standing in one place, it wobbles if it's not well spun. It's not quite stable even though it's standing. When it spins well, it stands spinning. And when it really spins well, it becomes almost as if the top here just standing still; we can see the shape of the top as if it here motionless. And such a condition is called 'to sit.' It's kind of an interesting analogy.

In our sitting the same thing happens. When we sit, when we make ourselves sit, in a way it's sitting. But in most of our cases, it's almost as if... even though the top is standing... it's wobbling. Even though sitting, it's not really sitting. Mind is running around; sensations; emotions; feelings..... wobbling.

But when we really sit, even the inner organs are well settled down, and yet, very active.

(Nowadays, both in Japan and this country, this effect of sitting is being re-examined by scientists, especially the psychologists and biologists. And they're finding out all kinds of interesting results of sitting. So, just for the purpose of making ourselves healthy, sitting is highly recommended).

Chang Tzu says more about this. He says that when 'ki' is standing and exposed externally, then internally the 'ki' becomes scarce. And when 'ki' rises to the head, you become easily upset. It's an interesting observation. This was said over 2000 years ago by Chang Tzu and it's also true today: When we have tension most of the energy is up in the head. Then we become more sensitive and we're more easily upset. And when the 'ki' is down and stays there you become forgetful. In other words, the ki's not quite well circulated.

Now, when 'ki' gets stuck somewhere in the middle, not up and not down, then you get sick. And that fascinates me: We say sickness. And in Japanese we say 'byoki'. I think that word is derived from the original Chinese: byoki. 'Byo' means illness or sickness. So byoki means sickness of ki'. And I read someplace that over one third of our illness is caused by sickness of ki. Maybe it's more than that. That's very interesting. In this country, for instance, culture is so complex and so high pressure that 'ki' can't flow, and most of the time our 'ki' really stays up in the head. Then we get very easily frustrated and become upset. And being in that condition for a long time, we can easily see what happens: it becomes neurotic. Even further: it becomes psychotic. Then we lose the balance. So let that 'ki' flow.

Then how to let that 'ki' flow? Breathing is a very effective way to do it. There is a Taoist saying, that the true man, the most healthy man, breathes with heels, and that the common people breathe with the throat. In other words, ordinary breathing tends to be very shallow, but the most healthy people breathe with the heels. By breathing in that way, that 'ki', the spirit, the breath, circulates all over the body. As a matter of fact, they have two kinds of breathing. One way is to let the breath circulate from the top of your head to the bottom of your feet. You can do it even while standing, or while lying down. And how to do it is simple: Breathe in from the heels; then let that breath, that inhalation, go up along the back of your legs and spine, and then let it come up to the top of your head. Then when you exhale, let that breath go down along the front part of your body, into the toes. Then breathe into the heels again. Another method is to move the circulation in smaller circles. That is to say, go through the lower abdomen to the head and from the head to the lower abdomen. Actually, this is the kind of breathing that we do in sitting. But since, in sitting, the heels are very close to the lower abdomen, if you want, you can breathe through the heels.

We speak of 'joriki', the power of stability. This kind of energy is raised by 'ki'. So I want you to pay extra attention to how you can raise this 'ki' and make your sitting stronger.

From time to time I hear those who are in charge of the zendo encouraging you to sit strong. But that doesn't necessarily mean physically to tense up. Sitting in a tense way, you can't really let the 'ki' flow in your body. Then it gets stuck someplace because you're straining yourself, even if you're concentrating. It's nice to let the 'ki' flow with the breath. But if you ignore it, the 'ki' tends to get stuck: in the head, in the chest, in the stomach, and so forth. That's not good. Then you physically get sick. I notice a number of people complain of pain around the stomach... definitely from strain...The 'ki' can't flow. Or, like a headache: Definitely if you concentrate just up in the head, blood circulation gets poor and you start getting headaches. So have good disposition of the body and let it balance by itself. Then breathe nicely, to circulate. Short breath is OK. Long breath is OK. Try to let it circulate nicely, and when you concentrate well you can lengthen your breathing. And then let it really settle down. Actually, when you really do that, mind, the conscious mind, is also very well controlled. That's why counting the breath is very highly recommended: It is effective. But it should be practiced properly, otherwise the result is less than it could be.

So, sit well, breathe well, and raise this 'ki'. It will make your sitting stronger, and make your practice better.

[end of file].

MAHA MUDRA AND TANTRA

John Wysocki

The mind and its inner space experiences truth, time, and emotion as an environment. With there is a unified field of appearance and emptiness. Appearance acultures change in exper occupies experience as so many trans-apparent object-subjects. The true nature of the mind realization of emptiness. All subject-objects are both whole and made up of parts, thus trans all object-subjects, hens forth referred to as DHARMA , have the potential of examination an the mind. This is called method. The mind which knows Dharma is wisdom.

Dharma is a Sanskrit word sometimes translated as meaning law. The translation subject-o interpretation of a Tibetan translation of Dharma as meaning things (Lama Migmar Tseten,1 using the word Dharma is its ability to refer to inner and outer space in one single gesture. T important when trying to arrive at an understanding and reconciliation of the true non-duality body.

In Tibet , the union of method and wisdom is depicted as two deity figures (a yogi and yogin union with each other (yab- yum). The power of the passion between method (male) and wis referred to as the union of compassion and emptiness. The best motivation or method is con realization is that of infinity or emptiness. These are high ideals.

With in the human realm of human relative truth these ideals are also reflected, even in eve Compassion when in union with wisdom realizes that all sentient beings want happiness, no Wisdom in union with compassion experiences complete knowledge of and infinite love for a This non dualistic view is known as Maha Mudra or the great gesture.

Conflict in the Real World

Conflict in the real world comes from ignorance greed and hatred as far as the mind is conc disasters that create suffering differ some what from the suffering that the mind creates. This ,the relative level of ÒtruthÓ where humans consider mind and nature (the earth and univers separate entities. This dualistic view is an intellectual formality leading to concepts such as s mine-yours, this-that. Informally each human also is aware of their dependence on Dharma other, such as food , love, and space. The idiosyncrasies that arise ,formally and informally for the common conceptions of the conscious vs. the sub-consciousness mind. Consciously designatable self existent entity, that we mark with various intellectual formalities the way a territory. Sub-consciously we and I exist interdependently, thus we respond to both physical transcendence. The reconciliation; of conscious and sub-consciousness is referred to as res Universal responsibility is thus the best possible motivation one can gesture.

The suffering that the mind creates augments suffering created by nature. The human mind proficient at the task of augmenting natural suffering. Today in 1994 the human population a could , if it wanted to , eradicate almost all suffering humans experience on this planet. This hypothetical of course but most worthy of consideration. This hypothetical realization of univ can then lead to the ability to release other non-human sentient beings from suffering. This v with the Buddhist realization of Bodi Chitta (enlightenment thought).

It is this hypothesis that I predicate as a primary focus for the union of method and wisdom.
what this means (wisdom) requires much meditation and contemplation. Undertaking the tas much diligence and renunciation. All good psychological treaties, religious or otherwise , cor hypothesis to some degree. This is the compassionate gesture of the minds wisdom, called

The Union Of Method and Wisdom

The metaphor of female and male as wisdom and method is a good one. To illustrate my vi of human nature I will present a poem I wrote called A Balled of Sexual Misconduct;

One morning a young Zen monk Arose from his morning meditation
To contemplate simple wisdom
The flowing change of present suchness

As he sat upon a rock
A low gray stone covered with moss
A warm breeze shifted through the trees
A dancing banshee woman appeared

The monk sat firm in contemplation
His mind entertaining hope nor fear
Observed the dance of the banshee woman
As he watched, her dance came near

She said ÒI am a dancing banshee goddessÓ
ÒWhy do you sit in solitudeÓ
ÒWhy young monk is your mind so quietÓ
ÒWhile in the village celebration aboundsÓ

The monk his mind remaining peaceful
Said Òearth and water and sun and skyÓ
ÒThey are the only celebration of lifeÓ
ÒWhy not sit and observe their gestureÓ

And as he sat a thunderbolt struck and shook the earth , sea, and sky
And smote the rock where the young monk sat
The banshee woman dances closer

 Young monk asked "why did you do that"?
 Woman yelled "this will not suit me"!
 "You must not sit alone in peace Ò!
 "There is work to do , you must serve meÓ!

" I am the goddess of all dreams "
" Of all beauty and all great wealth "
" All men love me wish just to touch me "
" All woman live in my sensual shadow "

The young monk shivered at this prospect
The sky turned gray dark with smoke
The banshee woman striped her cloak off
Danced naked and caressed her body

She stroked her body like a skilled musician
Tuning and playing a glorious symphony
Moving her hands across her breasts
Caressing her thighs her vulva and navel

Now the monk shuddered
Fear and hope engulfing his mind
His body turned ridged sweaty and hot Between his legs his genitals swelled

Now the woman with unbridled power
Said to the monk " your spirit is mine "!
From out of the monks genital organ
A painful explosion of pure white nectar

The banshee woman collected the nectar disappeared in a blinding flash of red light
The monk lay there sick exhausted near death

The once peaceful wilderness screamed hateful tyranny

For many days and many nights
The monk wept bitter tears of sorrow
Dreamt violent dreams of pain and suffering
The woman's voice echoed " you must join the hunt"

The monk then fled for a cave in the mountains
But the woman followed in all of his dreams
His genital organ swelled and throbbed painfully
The white element nectar continued to leak

So the monk roamed the country in search of a maiden
A sweet geisha girl to help and console him
But when he looked into each womanÕs heart
The banshee woman he found there dancing her dance

" She has woven net " he thought to himself
" Using every woman as thread , or as junction "'
" And tying their minds with fickle confusion "
" Sealing the blindness with fear and with hope "

So the suffering monk gaining in age
Went into the village to see of the slaughter
 Saw all of the villagers preparing to hunt
      To kill all the sorrowful weak in the land

The monk looked in horror as the men in their lust Took part in the rape and destruction of nature while the women in their fashionable playing of love
Like a card game wrought hate and confusion through out

The monk sick with revulsion Took leave of the city
To sit in the woods
And contemplate pity

Now as the monk crossed from the borders of town

He saw a young nun , robes tattered and crying
And as he approached her he asked with a frown
You know of the slaughter in the prosperous town

She said " alone I was sitting deep deep in the forest "
" Feeding all the small birds and smelling the flowers "
" When a huge demon god atop of a stallion "
" Approached me and told me to bear him his child "

" He took me and tore the cloths from my body "
" Violated my genital organ with his "
" Pushed into me nectar so hot and so white "
' Ripped from me a child and then he did vanish "

Then the monk and the nun turned away from each other
Each one standing alone, wept fierce tears of blood
The crowd then gathered round, in a blind angry circle
Prepared for the slaughter on that cold winters night...

This chilling poem is a reflection of my own inner retinue of personified wisdom. Each chara the banshee, the nun , the demon , and even the general town population, are all parts of m personality.
This vision occurred to me one night when I was feeling lonely and depressed , longing for understanding , my mind filling with thoughts of suicide. This transcendental experience was the union of method and wisdom ,Maha Mudra. The realization this poem brought gave me With in the ballad , the god and goddess are the same being , appearing in different forms.
illusions , and as such took power from each of their victims so that they may become real.
defilementÕs of the human realm appeared to the monk and took his vital essence and use
nun. Then a child was born and taken away from the nun to serve the collective delusions o
These delusions are the ignorance that destroys the realization of the perfect harmony of m gives rise to greed and hatred. It is this destructive process that is one of the greatest myste encountered by human wisdom. The indistinguishable suffering caused by ignorant greed a root of all human cruelty and warfare. It is a reality that cannot be fathomed by mere intellec experienced by the heart.

The union of Men and Women

The following is a commentary on sexual assault. During my adolescence I was sexually ab second wife and her mother. The pain I still feel from that motivated me to write this poem c

The mind is a real place as is the body
One is not more sacred than the other
Just as woman are not more important than men
Just as men are not more important than women
To rape the mind is Equivalent
To raping the body
Mind rape is an act of violence
The affects of which are as painful and destructive as any act of physical violence
That which is sexual is neither physical , spiritual , both , or neither
The drive to possess wealth is a burden
The drive to service sexual desire is torture
In America material is often put above spiritual
This is a mistake
It is the phenomenon of matriarchy
The chauvinistic vanity of women
Women who hate men
And the men who love them
Who have perpetuated this mistake
This oppression by women
Upon the emotions of men
The oppression by men
Of womenÕs bodies
Is argument non-justifiable in any way
The issue of spiritual and material corruption
Are as balanced as yin and yang
Look to the east for the solution
To useless competition comparison
Thoughts and feelings
The earth and its outer space
The mind and its inner wisdom
They are joined at the root
Bloom with the many unfolding Infinite ripening flowers and fruit Andrea Dworkin , a modern academic feminist, posits that all heterosexual intercourse is ra women. Dworkin was quoted as saying Òsex and murder are fused in the male consciousne without the imminent possibility of the other in unthinkable and impossible... the annihilation

the source of meaning and identity for menÓ (Dworkin, 1976).

When a man hates a woman it is labeled misogyny, what is the name for women like Dwork actively try to destroy them. Not all women are like Dworkin , just like not all men are like Ru It is this dilution of a battle of the sexes that gives rise to the most destructive forces in huma consciousness.

In fact it is the mis-taken necessity of any conflict that is the root of ignorance. Ignorance in is the view that war and vanity is necessary for survival and progress. Many feminists blame this ignorance. I have to agree with the added stipulation that matriarchy is equally responsi sexuality , the union of men and women.

Here patriarchy and matriarchy do not have traditional meanings. Patriarchy is the worship of the ivory tower, of the multi national corporation. It is the nihilistic view that all things belo some one and that might makes right. In short , patriarchy is a corruption of skillful means. M the worship of beauty , self importance and the earth cult. It is the chithonian nature of sexua and the obsession of inheritance. Camille Paglia describes matriarchy ÒWe are all born fro Erich Neumann calls the first stage of psychic development ÒmatriarchalÓ. Therefore ,every from nursery to society is an overthrow of matriarchy.Ó(Paglia,1991)

If one examines the inventory of defilementÕs assigned to men vs. women one can find ma closer examination one will find total co-respondence. Thus the battle of the sexes is a battl its own psycho-sexual nature.

S.T.D.ÕS

STD stands for socially transmitted disease. A STD is a virus like neurosis that attacks the thus manipulates knowledge from the sub-conscious or informal (rather than the information creates this emotional turmoil in order to convince the host to support a destructive social (o the collective scale) tendency. An example of a STD symptom is the international military in educational media complex (this is a real nasty one too).

A person is most susceptible to STD during periods of emotional arousal. Two of the greate the transmission of STD are sexual intercourse and war. Hate, competition , doubt (of valid knowledge), and depression are obvious signs of STD.

The obsessive association between genitalia and sex and the pre-occupation with the symb preoccupation comes close to the root of STD. When one contemplates the fear of genitalia culture, one cant help but be amazed. This fear is a direct manifestation of a STD that I will label Base Denial. Base denial is denial of the power of the of the psycho-organic root of em in universal Dharma.

In Buddhist culture, sexuality is considered to be the union of method and wisdom. Even in Òsub-cultureÓ sexuality takes the form of art and music.

It is important here to distinguish between sexuality and what is not sexuality, for there is no white definition that distinguishes one from the other. Sexuality is emotive response leading thought , and manifest as love in its ÒpurestÓexperiential forms. Non-sexuality is meditation

(samadhi) leading to calm abiding (shamutha) and special insight (vipasinah) into the nature Maha Mudra is the non-duality of method and wisdom. Non-duality is enlightenment (Bodi) thought (Bodi-Chitta). Buddhist psychology recognizes a seven fold process for achieving no and wisdom:

1) Taking refuge in the ultimate
2) Un-locking denial
3) Rejoicing while contemplating the ultimate
4) Meditating on the ultimate refuge until enlightenment
5) Producing enlightenment thought
6) Invoking the wisdom of all living beings
7) Attaining enlightenment for the sake of all sentient beings.

SARVAMANGALAM

Refrence

¥ Lama Migmar Tseten - oral teaching , Sakya Institute , 1990 ¥ Andrea Dworkin - WAVPM (women against porn in the media) lecture in New Yo quote taken from ÒCaught LookingÓ by Caught looking inc.- Long River Books - 1992 ¥ Camille Paglia - ÒSexual PersonaeÓ , Vintage Books , 1991

MAHA-MANGALA SUTTA

(Blessings)<1>

This famous text, cherished highly in all Buddhist lands, is a terse but comprehensive summary of Buddhist ethics, individual and social. The thirty-eight blessings enumerated in it, are an unfailing guide on life's journey. Rightly starting with "avoidance of bad company" which is basic to all moral and spiritual progress, the Blessings culminate in the achievement of a passion-free mind, unshakable in its serenity. To follow the ideals set forth in these verses, is the sure way to harmony and progress for the individual as well as for society, nation and mankind.

"The Maha-Mangala Sutta shows that the Buddha's instructions do not always take negative forms, that they are not always a series of classifications and analysis, or concerned exclusively with monastic morality. Here in this sutta we find family morality expressed in most elegant verses. We can imagine the happy blissful state household life attained as a result of following these injunctions." (From //The Ethics of Buddhism// by S. Tachibana, Colombo 1943, Bauddha Sahitya Sabha).

* * *

Thus have I heard. On one occasion the Exalted One was dwelling at Anathapindika's monastery, in Jeta's Grove,<2> near Savatthi.<3> Now when the night was far spent, a certain deity whose surpassing splendour illuminated the entire Jeta Grove, came to the presence of the Exalted One and, drawing near, respectfully saluted him and stood at one side. Standing thus, he addressed the Exalted One in verse:

"Many deities and men, yearning after good, have pondered on blessings.<4> Pray, tell me the greatest blessing!"

"Not to associate with the foolish,<5> but to associate with the wise; and to honour those who are worthy of honour -- this is the greatest blessing.

To reside in a suitable locality,<6> to have done meritorious actions in the past and to set oneself in the right course <7> -- this is the greatest blessing.

To have much learning, to be skillful in handicraft,<8> well-trained in discipline, <9> and to be of good speech <10> -- this is the greatest blessing.

To support mother and father, to cherish wife and children, and to be engaged in peaceful occupation -- this is the greatest blessing.

To be generous in giving, to be righteous in conduct,<11> to help one's relatives, and to be blameless in action -- this is the greatest blessing.

To loathe more evil and abstain from it, to refrain from intoxicants,<12> and to be steadfast in virtue -- this is the greatest blessing.

To be respectful,<13> humble, contented and grateful; and to listen to the Dhamma on due occasions <14> -- this is the greatest blessing.

To be patient and obedient, to associate with monks and to have religious discussions on due occasions -- this is the greatest blessing.

Self-restraint,<15> a holy and chaste life, the perception of the Noble Truths and the realisation of Nibbana -- this is the greatest blessing.

A mind unruffled by the vagaries of fortune,<16> from sorrow freed, from defilements cleansed, from fear liberated <17> -- this is the greatest blessing.

Those who thus abide, ever remain invincible, in happiness established. These are the greatest blessings."<18>

NOTES

(Derived mainly from the Commentaries)

<1> This Sutta appears in the Sutta-Nipata (v.258ff) and in the Khuddakapatha. See Maha-Mangala Jataka (No. 453). For a detailed explanation see //Life's Highest Blessing// by Dr. R.L. Soni, WHEEL No. 254/256.

<2> Anathapindika, lit., 'He who gives alms to the helpless'; his former name was Sudatta. After his conversion to Buddhism, he bought the grove belonging to the Prince Jeta, and established a monastery which was subsequently named Jetavana. It was in this monastery that the Buddha observed most of his //vassana// periods (rainy seasons -- the three months' retreat beginning with the full-moon of July). Many are the discourses delivered and many are the incidents connected with the Buddha's life that happened at Jetavana. It was here that the Buddha ministered to the sick monk neglected by his companions, advising them: "Whoever, monks, would wait upon me, let him wait upon the sick." It was here that the Buddha so poignantly taught the law of impermanence, by asking the bereaved young woman Kisagotami who brought her dead child, to fetch a grain of mustard seed from a home where there has been no bereavement.

<3> Identified with modern Sahet-Mahet, near Balrampur.

<4> According to the Commentary, //mangala// means that which is conducive to happiness and prosperity.

<5> This refers not only to the stupid and uncultured, but also includes the wicked in thought, word and deed.

<6> Any place where monks, nuns and lay devotees continually reside; where pious folk are bent on the performance of the ten meritorious deeds, and where the Dhamma exists as a living principle.

<7> Making the right resolve for abandoning immorality for morality, faithlessness for faith and selfishness for generosity.

<8> The harmless crafts of the householder by which no living being is injured and nothing unrighteous done; and the crafts of the homeless monk, such as stitching the robes, etc.

<9> //Vinaya// means discipline in thought, word and deed. The commentary speaks of two kinds of discipline -- that of the householder, which is abstinence from the ten immoral actions (//akusala-kammapatha//), and that of the monk which is the non-transgression of the offences enumerated in the //Patimokkha// (the code of the monk's rules) or the 'fourfold moral purity' (//catu-parisuddhi-sila//).

<10> Good speech that is opportune, truthful, friendly, profitable and spoken with thoughts of loving-kindness.

<11> //Righteous conduct// is the observance of the ten good actions (//kusala-kammapatha//) in thought, word and deed: freeing the mind of greed, ill-will and wrong views; avoiding speech that is untruthful, slanderous, abusive and frivolous; and the non-committal acts of killing, stealing and sexual misconduct.

<12> Total abstinence from alcohol and intoxicating drugs.

<13> Towards monks (and of course also to the clergy of other religions), teachers, parents, elders, superiors, etc.

<14> For instance, when one is harassed by evil thoughts.

<15> Self-restraint (//tapo//): the suppression of lusts and hates by the control of the senses; and the suppression of indolence by the rousing of energy.

<16> //Loka-dhamma//, i.e. conditions which are necessarily connected with life in this world; there are primarily eight of them: gain and loss, honour and dishonour, praise and blame, pain and joy.

<17> Each of these three expressions refers to the mind of the arahant: //asoka//: sorrowless; //viraja//: stainless, i.e. free from lust, hatred and ignorance; //khema//: security from the bonds of sense desires (//kama//), repeated existence (//bhava//), false views (//ditthi//) and ignorance (//avijja//).

<18> The above-mentioned thirty-eight blessings.

[end of file]

ÉÍÍÍ

No.29-B, Jalan 17/45, 46400 Petaling Jaya
Selangor, West Malaysia

** ** ** **

MALUKYAPUTTA SUTTA

CONTENTS

Introduction
  Appamatto
  Atapi
  Four Right Exertions
  Pahitatto
Buddha's Admonition

Vipassana Question I
  The Story of Anitthigandha Kumara
Malukyaputta's Answer
A Brief Work-Programme
The Stream of Eye-consciousness
The Stream of Ear-consciousness
Seeing Abstract Reality
From Eye-door to Mind-door
The Birth of Conceptual Knowledge
  Potthila Thera
Seize the Right Moment
Answering a Critic
Meditating on Hearing, etc.
Benefits of Insight-Knowledge
Inclination to Nibbana
A Summary of the Sutta
Failure to Meditate on //Rupa// on Seeing Meditating on //Rupa// Brings Nibbana Near

Vipassana Question II

Pannatti and Paramattha
Failure to Meditate on //Sadda// on Hearing
Nanda Thera
Meditating on //Sadda// Brings Nibbana Near

Vipassana Question III
Failure to Meditate on //Gandha// on Smelling
Meditating on //Gandha// Brings Nibbana Near

Vipassana Question IV
Failure to Meditate on //Rasa// on Tasting
Meditating on //Rasa// Brings Nibbana Near Realization of the Dhamma

Vipassana Question V
Why Mindfulness on Respiration is not Suggested
Meditation on Abdominal Movements Conforms to Canonical Instructions
Failure to Meditate on //Phassa// on Touching Meditating on //Phassa// Brings Nibbana Near Negation of Correct Method

Vipassana Question VI
Failure to Meditate on Mind-object on Thinking

Epilogue

** ** ** **

INTRODUCTION

Malukyaputta Sutta supplies us with the fundamental knowledge about the principles and practice of Vipassana, insight-meditation. It has been incorporated in the Pali Canon as Samyutta Nikaya, and the twenty-four stanzas given in it can also be found in Visati Nipata of Thera Gatha. It was preached by Buddha at the request of bhikkhu Malukyaputta, the son of a female devotee by the name of Malukya, or Malunkya, if we go according to the Ceylonese texts. His request is in the following words.

"Sadhu me bhante bhagava samkhittena dhamman detesu. Yamaham bhagavato dhammam sutva e ko vnpakattho appamatto atapi pahitatto vihareyam."

"Reverend Sir! I stand to be benefited by your preaching of the Dhamma in brief. Having heard its essence I will abide in it in solitude, practising it with vigilance, right exertion and singleness of purpose."

In effect Malukyaputta was asking the Blessed One to prescribe for him succinctly any of the subjects of meditation, //kammatthana//, as he was bent on practising it in the right way in a quiet place. Solitude is very essential for meditation, for it rewards one with //samadhi//, power of concentration, which may be disturbed if one lives in the company with others. But when one can hardly hope to get it, one should mind one's own business while others theirs. Under such circumstances it will do well for one if one does not speak to them or even look at what others are doing, fixing the mind on the dhamma.

APPAMATTO

In the Text the word //appamatto// occurs. It means "vigilant". This is also very important. Yogis who meditate in this Yeiktha may be ordinarily held to be vigilant, never forgetting for a moment that they are striving after the realization of the dhamma. When they see an object they note it with vigilance. When they hear, when they smell, when they taste, when they touch or when they think, they are always mindful of hearing, smelling, tasting, touching or thinking. Their slightest behaviour or movement never goes unnoticed or unobserved. They keep their minds alert, never allowing forgetfulness to get the better of them.

ATAPI

The Text also mentions //atapi// the root meaning of which is to heat up. When one is fired with enthusiasm, //atapi// may be said to be at work feverishly. Heat causes the evaporation of water or moisture. Enthusiasm causes the evaporation of all //kilesas//, a collective term for all kinds of defilements. No flies can hover around a piece of hot iron. Defilements may be compared to flies and enthusiasm to red-hot iron. Where enthusiasm is wanting, defilements gain entry into the inner self via the six sense-doors and torment ordinary folks who fail to note the phenomena of arising and passing away of all conditioned things. Defilements have no place for a meditating yogi. In the scriptures wetness is attributed to //kilesa//. When meditational exertions take place with the utmost zeal and enthusiasm, it disappears leaving one's mind absolutely dry and clean.

FOUR RIGHT EXERTIONS

There are four categories of right exertion called //sammappadhana//.

(1) Firstly, there is exertion to prevent unwholesome actions that have not arisen from arising. Its application is for the purpose of preventive action comparable to that taken by medical and health personnel in their campaigns against contagious diseases. As you are wont to encounter evil in your everyday life, you must be wary of contact with it and take especial care to prevent yourself from being contaminated by it.

(2) Secondly, there is exertion to prevent unwholesome actions that have already arisen from arising again. This is to deter evil from recurring. Besides, we must exert ourselves to have nothing to do with //anusayas// or inclinations towards //kilesa//, for, even though you can avoid evil for the moment, if you still have predispositions to it, you may be overpowered by it in the long run. The act of seeing or hearing prompts the arising of inclinations for sense-objects and such inclinations are known as //arammananusayas//, which are the root causes of //kilesa//. With the meditating yogi they are incompatible. When he treads the Path all prototypes of //kilesa// called //santananusaya// that infest the inner self cease altogether.

(3) Thirdly there is exertion for the accomplishment of wholesome actions which have not yet been taken up. If you have not done good as yet do it now. //Kusala dhammas//, good deeds, must be acquired through the practice of charitableness, morality and mental culture. I urge you especially to practise insight-meditation if you have not as yet done it. If you are doing it with a mind to vipassana nana, insight-knowledge, continue doing it till the Path is attained.

(4) Lastly there is exertion for the development of accumulated wholesome actions till the Path is trodden. Usually a yogi is accomplished in all these four kinds of exertions to safeguard himself from committing evil, avoiding the recurrence of it, acquiring merit where he has not yet acquired it and developing it when it has been acquired.

PAHITATTO

Old writers usually render the word, //pahitatto//, as "with a mind despatched to Nibbana." Taking it in its literal sense, some would like to put forward the proposition that there is no need for a yogi to practise the dhamma once he has despatched his mind to the concept of Nibbana. This is contrary to the tenets of Buddhist teaching expounded in the Texts. What the word connotes is exertion in the practice regardless of life and limb in the effort, fixing the mind on the Path, the Fruition and Nibbana. This agrees with the commentaries on Silakkhandha Sutta regarding the subject of mental culture.

BUDDHA'S ADMONITION

Buddha acceded to Malukyaputta's request saying:

"How now, Malukyaputta! What shall I say to other bhikkhus when you are thus making this request? You are old; you have gone far advanced in age; you have reached the last half of the span of human life. Even so you ask for a gist of the dhamma as my admonition!"

Buddha's words can both mean reproach and approbation. The old monk had not striven for the dhamma while young. Only when he was one foot in the grave he spoke of abiding in it. If Buddha's admonition were to be taken in that light, Malukyaputta may be held to have been censored.

But here is Malukyaputta to lead the life of a recluse in search of truth in spite of his senility. What would young Bhikkhus say to it? They would certainly emulate him. In this context it may be interpreted that Buddha was full of praise for him. Today if a young man encounters old men and women striving strenuously for the realization of the dhamma he should follow in their footsteps.

As Malukyaputta repeatedly made the request, the Blessed One preached him the fundamentals of the practice of insight meditation by posing a series of questions which, when answered, could reveal the method relating to vipassana.

VIPASSANA QUESTION 1

"Tam kim mannasi Malukyaputta. Ye te cakkhuvinneyya rupa adittha aditthapubba, na ca passati. Na ca te hoti passeyyant; atthi te tattha chando va rago va pemam va."

"How do you answer this, Malukyaputta? Answer me as best you can. There are certain visible objects which you have never previously seen either in the immediate or remote past, or even at the present moment or in the future. Can such objects arouse desire, lust and affection in you?"

The //rupa//, form, which one can see with one's naked eyes are a reality or //paramattha//. But there may also be others which present a verisimilitude of reality to the mind without being real, for instance, objects that appear in one's imagination or dreams. They are all known as //pannatti//, conceptual image. In the Text reference is made of objects of the past existence which are remembered in the present. In Buddha's days there was a woman by the name of Patipujika, who could recall her past. In her previous existence, her husband was a deva called Malabari. She kept on remembering him in the present existence. It was with reference to persons like her that remote past is mentioned in the text.

That man can develop attachment to things dreamt of or imagined is understandable. But no attachment can arise in relation to objects which cannot be dreamt of or imagined. No love develops in man for a woman he has never thought of or met in his imagination; and the same applies to woman.

To Buddha's question Malukyaputta replied: "Surely, Reverend Sir, no desire, or lust, or affection can be developed in me for objects which I have never seen in the remote or immediate past, or in the present, or for objects which I can never hope to see in the future."

THE STORY OF ANITTHIGANDHA KUMARA

In the Dhammapada Commentary there is mentioned a story about Anitthigandha Kumara in whom love developed for the kind of feminine beauty which he worked up in his mind. This means that if one can visualize an image in one's dreams or thoughts, desire, lust and affection can arise in one's mind. The story goes as follows.

Anitthagandha Kumara was born in Savatthi. He was a Brahma in his previous existence. While in the plane of the Brahmas, he was free from the shackles of sensual desire and lust. Reborn a human being, he had no tendency to have anything to do with the opposite sex. When he came of age, his parents told him to marry. But the misogamist refused saying, "I do not want a wife." As the parents insisted him on his taking a wife, he devised a stratagem by which he hoped to evade marriage. He sought the services of sculptors to make a golden image for him of a beautiful girl and, that having been done, he told his parents that he would marry anyone who looked like his golden image. The parents, being rich and capable, hired the services of brahmins to go about the world and search for a bride whose beauty conformed to what their son had conceptualised in his sculpture done in gold.

When the brahmins got to Sagala City in Madda Kingdom they heard the people talk of the beauty of a sixteen-year-old girl kept in seclusion in a seven-tiered tower. Having traced her, they requested her parents to allow them to assess her beauty; and were amazed by the fact that her beauty far excelled that of the golden image.

The go-betweens then disclosed their true intentions to the parents and asked for the hand of the beauty-queen to be given in marriage to Anitthigandha Kumara. Gaining consent, the emissaries gave the information to the parents of the bridegroom, who, on hearing the news that the bride was more beautiful than the figurine he had caused to be sculptured, was all agog to have her brought to his native town as quickly as possible. This is an instance of the kind of attachment that arises out of one's pure imagination.

Sagala and Savatthi are more than five or six hundred miles apart; and in those days the system of transportation was very much antiquated. Perhaps she was brought in a horse-drawn carriage. She became utterly exhausted during the journey, and when, unfortunately, she fell ill, she died.

When Anitthigandha Kumara heard this news, he became sorely distressed for having missed the opportunity even just to see her renowned beauty. He could not eat or sleep. On knowing this Buddha took pity on him and so came to his house during the rounds for alms. The parents respectfully offered meals to Buddha and produced their son before the Enlightened One.

The root of sorrow and anxiety lies in //raga//, lust and the five constituents of sensual desires. Explaining this, Buddha said:

"Kamato jayate soko;
Kamato jayate bhayam;
Kamato vippamuttassa;
Natthi soko kuto bhayam."

"Because of sensual desires, grief arises and so does fear or anxiety. He who has been released from their dominance know neither grief nor fear."

Having heard this the young man attained to the stage of //sotapatti magga//, the path of a stream-winner. Previously he was against women, and thought that he would be able to hoodwink his parents with the impossible. Now that the impossible had been made possible with the discovery of a beauty who surpassed his own creation, attachment grew in him to torment his innocent mind.

MALUKYAPUTTA'S ANSWER

Malukyaputta answered Buddha's question to the effect that no desire, nor lust, nor affection can arise from sense-objects that one has never experienced before, or from those that one is not experiencing for the moment, or from those that one can never hope to experience in the future even in one's imagination. The meditating yogis here in this Yeiktha understand this; but this may be a puzzlement to those who have not had the experience in insight-meditation. In 1313 B.E. I preached Malukyaputta Sutta in Thaddhamma Thitagu Yeiktha in Bassein, when the Thaddhamma Thitagu

Sayadaw's sister was one among the audience. She confessed that she became confused when mention was made of //rupa// which one had not been seeing or which one had not been able to visualize in the mind. She wondered what sort of //rupa// that might be. She was an intelligent person but her mind was unreceptive before she had practised insight-meditation. After she had, she became convinced of the truth of the dhamma. She was so pleased with the discourse that she disseminated the knowledge she gained from what had been preached to other devotees.

But I thin every thoughtful person can accept the fact that unseen sense-objects cannot incite //raga//. Is it possible for you to conceive affection for an individual whom you have never met before? Not only affection, but also hatred cannot arise in such a case. Neither can delusion or wrong views. I have laid down the following aphorisms relating to this subject to aid your memory.

(1) Where visible objects remain unseen, there //kilesa// ceases by itself.

(2) Where visible objects are seen there //kilesa// lies in wait.

(3) Recollect with mindfulness whatever is seen and dispel //kilesa// that lurks in the mind.

(4) The question posed by the Buddha for Malukyaputta to answer formulates the work-programme for insight-meditation.

It may now be clear that objects which one has never before encountered cannot bring up desire, lust and affection that arouse //kilesa//. From this statement can be adduced the fact that objects previously seen or known excite //kilesa//. Buddha intended to draw Malukyaputta's attention to it by formulating the question. But this is not the end of the matter. He wanted him to know that //kilesa// continues to arise every time the sense-object is recalled. Having seen a picture of someone smiling or scowling, you may recall it to mind, and every time you do it, the smiling or scowling face reappears. At each reappearance your mind reacts to it according to the impression that it creates. In the same way when you recall to mind the objects you have seen, they incite lust, and you become lustful. Anger and delusion may similarly be aroused. Failure to note each phenomenon of seeing tends to produce unmindfulness of impermanency and unsubstantiality of conditioned things, when //kilesa// gets stuck to your inner self. If you diligently note it, you will come to the realization that it arises just to get dissolved; and when the nature of //anicca//, impermanency, becomes known, it can no longer torment you.

So whenever you look at a thing note what you see, mindful of its impermanency, giving no chance for //kilesa// to assert. It does not usually reside in your body, but, characteristically, it lies in wait for the opportunity to possess you. If you are mindful of its nature by noting the phenomenon of seeing, you will realize its transience; and it will subside. And your mind will remain unperturbed as if it has never perceived the object.

And this understanding will enable you to formulate for yourself how best to perform the task of insight-meditation. That is why I say that Buddha's catechism reveals a working plan for vipassana. Anon you shall hear more about Buddha's questions in regard to ear-object and ear-basis. Meanwhile I shall give you a brief account of insight-meditation exercises as instructed by the Buddha.

A Brief Work-Programme

"Ettha ca te Malukyaputta dittha suta muta vinnatesu dhammesu ditthe ditthamattam bhavissati;
sute sutamattam bhavissati.
mute mutamattam bhavissati;
vinnate vinnatamattam bhavissati."

"Malukyaputta! As dhammas are seen, heard, thought or known, just let them be as they are seen, heard, thought or known at the moment. When you see, you just see it; when you hear, you just hear it; when you think, you just think it; and when you know, you just know it."

In the foregoing it has been shown that //kilesa// is denied the opportunity to arise when sense-objects cannot gain entry through the six sense-doors. The question now arises as to how to exert in repelling it when sense-objects do appear at the six sense-doors. Hence Buddha lays down the gist of the task of insight-meditation in relation to four modes of seeing, hearing, thinking and knowing. Here it may be noted that sense-fields of smell, taste and touch are included for brevity's sake in the category of //muta// or thought. Meditation on the Three Marks of impermanence, suffering and unsubstantiality centres on the four modes of seeing, hearing, thinking and knowing. These senses and the sense-objects are not "I", not "Mine", not "My ego-entity". The objects just appear for a moment at the sense-doors and the subject just see or hears them for that moment, and nothing more. This is the gist of the method of insight-meditation.

THE STREAM OF EYE-CONSCIOUSNESS

Seeing is the phenomenon of contact between the eye-object and the eye-basis which brings about //cakkhuvinnana//, visual consciousness or eye-consciousness which is usually rendered into plain Burmese as literally seeing-knowing suggesting perception by the eye. Let me begin with the sequences of a thought-process that operate as a visible object presents itself to the eye-basis through the eye-door. Several thought-moments occur in their psychic order in each thought-process. Firstly, when the eye-basis receives the image of the eye-objects, //bhavanga// consciousness, life continuum, wakes up and starts working the process of seeing in three thought-moments. This excites //cakkhudvaravajjana//, eye-door consciousness, that turns towards the eye-object. The image that is cast on the eye-basis by the eye-object in this manner is cognized by //cakkhuvinnana//, eye-consciousness, which, on its first arising, remains unperturbed by //kilesa//. It is immediately followed by //sampathiccha na// which receives or accepts the image. After the acceptance, //santirana// takes over and investigates it so that //votthapana// can determine who is who and what is what. Till now, //kilesa//, which has been lying in wait for the opportunity to rear its head, is as yet unable to operate. But as soon as the determining consciousness has made the verdict that the object is agreeable or disagreeable to the senses, affinity or repulsion develops accordingly when //javana//, impulsion, is brought into play. Normally it runs its full course of seven thought-moments. At this stage action is judged according to the moral or immoral tendencies; and now //kilesa// makes its debut as greed, anger and ignorance and shows its true colour. Then the two thought-moments of //tadarammana// occur. This thought-process describes the working of the mind on seeing an object. It is called //vithi//, the path or course that consciousness takes in establishing itself.

THE STREAM OF EAR-CONSCIOUSNESS

(All repetitious statements are re-arranged for better understanding and translated, supplemented by Narada Thera's explanations on //vithi// and //bhavanga//).

The stream of consciousness that flows when hearing or tasting or smelling or touching or thinking is the same as that explained so far regarding that of eye consciousness. But I shall here review the whole process at the risk of repetition.

//Bhavanga// is a state of mind that works during sleep. (The closest English equivalent for it is life continuum, for, it is an essential condition for continued subjective existence). It does not turn itself towards sense-objects contacted in the present existence, but towards sense-objects to which the subject was attached at the time of death-consciousness in his previous existence. It is in contiguity with //patisandhi citta//, rebirth-linking consciousness, of the present existence, which is the first and foremost that arises at conception. It is assumed to be arising continuously, but, being passive, it subsides whenever thought-moments of other varieties of consciousness emerge. For instance, when a sense-object enters the stream of consciousness through one of the six sense-doors, //bhavanga// is arrested to make room for //dvaravajjana//, sense-door consciousness, which at once takes up the function of reflection on the nature of the image cast by the sense-object that passes through the sense-doors. Then //cakkhuvinnana// or //sotavinnana// (ear-consciousness), as the case may be, occurs to be followed in its wake by //sampaticchana//, receiving consciousness, which hands over charge of the image to //santirana// that investigates into its nature. On the result of this investigation //votthapana//, determining consciousness, makes the decision as to who is who or what is what. At the end of the process, //javana//, impulsion, vibrates for seven thought-moments in an effort to deliver, as it were, the report of the decision to //tadarammana//, registering consciousness or retentive resultant, which vibrates for two thought-moments (when it is running its full cycle) and subsides into //bhavanga//; and this subsidence is compared to the state of falling asleep.

When //votthapana// determines that an object is worthy of affection and love, immoral actions like anger and greed are aroused at the instance of desire for that object. This is the working of the unwholesome //javanas//. But this may not always be the case. At times the object may be adjudged repugnant when the subject might become inclined to doing wholesome deeds in order to avoid the consequences of unpleasurable experiences. At other times a beautiful object may be viewed by the subject with compassion and benevolence when moral actions are brought into play. In such cases //javanas// lend themselves to morality. It may be noted that there are 14 thought-moments from //avajjana// to //tadarammana//. When sense-objects are weak and not impressionable, the thought-moments of //javana// may end up with only five or six impulsions although normally they run to seven.

When the phenomenon of seeing occurs you just see it; do nothing more. The Text says: "Ditthe ditthamattam bhavissti," (On seeing, let seeing be). The working of the thought-process on hearing or tasting a sense-object is the same as that of seeing. So when the phenomenon of hearing occurs, you just hear it. On hearing, let hearing be; do nothing more. This agrees with the saying: "Sute sutamattam bhavissati". You shall hear more about it later, but now I shall deal with the abstract knowledge to be gained from noting eye-objects.

SEEING ABSTRACT REALITY

When all thought-moments of eye-consciousness, sense-door consciousness, determining consciousness, impulsions and registering consciousness have all done their part in the process of seeing, the abstract reality of the form and shape of the sense-object (or sense impressions) becomes manifest. Here the subject who is looking at the thing has not bent his mind on the concept of masculinity or femininity. At this juncture, //akusala javana//, impulsion towards immoral actions, may, perhaps, take place. But as it is weak it is unable to cause strong reactions. That is to say, the results of immoral actions may not be so prominent. If, therefore, at this initial stage, when action-results have not yet gathered momentum, you will be able to take note of the object just as you see it, or in other words, just as your eye-cognition occurs. You will then experience the abstract reality of both the subject that sees as well as the object that is seen. The subject is, of course, //nama// and the object //rupa//. You have now come face to face with //namarupa// in the //paramattha// (abstract) sense. Thus far you have not yet ruminated in your mind as to the masculinity or femininity of the object you are looking at. It means that you have not yet gone to the length of gaining conceptual knowledge or //pannatti// of what you see. So, at this stage, although it is true that you are seeing a thing, you can leave seeing alone as it is, as you have not started a-thinking. This agrees with the statement: "When you see, just see it".

FROM EYE-DOOR TO MIND-DOOR

It is no easy matter to stop short at seeing just as it happens. A beginner will not be able to catch up the thought-moments that make up the thought-process. Not being able to take in the phenomenon instantaneously as it arises, he has to think over the object that appears in his mind's eye if he really wants to know it. What passes through the mind-door needs normally to be identified, but the novice finds difficulty in adjusting his eye-consciousness to the object he is looking at in his efforts to identify it. So he has to fall back upon his mind-consciousness to do some thinking for him relating to what his eye-consciousness has encountered. This is how //vithi// relating to mind-consciousness arises which may be elaborated as follows. First, //avajjana// sets itself in motion prompting the seven impulsions or //javanas// that report the findings to two //tadarammanas//. Thus there are now altogether ten thought-moments in this part of the process. But if the sense-object is able to create only weak impressions, //javana// vibrates for less than seven moments. Mind-consciousness may be cut off only after five or six vibrations. When eye-consciousness has done its part, mind-consciousness takes over the former's job; but even then the latter is yet unable to distinguish the visible object into male and female. This stage is still in the realm of //paramattha// as before when eye-consciousness was working. But here note this one difference: whereas eye-consciousness cognizes the visible object of the present moment, mind-consciousness cognizes it as it recedes into the past. That is to say that mind-consciousness has to recall the past image as previously seen by eye-consciousness. Even now the image still remains //paramattha//. It is, therefore, extremely difficult for a beginner to be able to note the visible object as it passes through the first //vithi// of mind-consciousness.

THE BIRTH OF CONCEPTUAL KNOWLEDGE

Failure to note with mindfulness the object as it enters the avenue of sense at the first //vithi// of mind-consciousness prompts the arising of the second //vithi//. At this stage, //pannatti//, conceptual knowledge regarding the shape and form of the visible object, begins to emerge, which, at the following third //vithi//, becomes firmly established. The subject is now able to distinguish it into male and female. This clear cognition relates to both form and name. So //rupa pannatti// and //nama pannatti// are conceived. This concept comes naturally in quick succession during the second and third //vithi//; but it is a concept gained through //avijja//, delusion, which covers up the true nature of things. The commentaries say that delusion has the tendency to hide. //Satipatthana//, basic exercise in mindfulness, exhorts a yogi to observe and note every time he sees an object, because such observation and noting enable him to come face to face with //paramattha// reality before delusion works him up with //pannatti// concept. In the beginning, however, he will find it difficult to grasp the reality as he has not mastered enough strength in mindfulness, concentration and understanding. But when these three qualities become firmly rooted in him, he will be quick to realize the true nature of things even at the moment of the lapse of the first //vithi// of eye-consciousness. When he is able to establish himself in //bhanga nana//, knowledge of dissolution, and //sankhaupekkha nana//, knowledge of equanimity towards conditioned things, he will find that it is not imperative for the stream of mind-consciousness to flow up to //javana//, and that after two or three //votthapanas// he can realize insight relating to //chalangupekkha vipassana nana//, six qualities of equanimity towards all the senses of seeing, hearing etc. Thus it has been shown in Mula Pannasa Commentary; for fuller details please refer to my discourse on Vipassana Practice.

POTTHILA THERA

At the time of Buddha there was an elder monk named Potthila who was learned in the Three Baskets of the Law. But as he neglected the practice of mind-culture, Buddha used to chide him calling him Tuccha Potthila -- vain and useless Potthila. Realizing his shortcomings in the field of mind-culture, the monk visited the monastery of 30 Arahats in a forest and requested them to prescribe meditation exercises for him. A senior Arahat knew his pride of learning and refused to give him personally any advice, but directed him to approach other Arahats, who, likewise, told him to go to other juniors. So in the end he had only a seven-year old Arahat to rely on for the //kammatthana// he was seeking.

The young samanera told him that he was young and inexperienced; but Potthila would have none of it. So the former gave him this instruction.

"Reverend Thera! There are six openings in a mound which an iguana makes his home. If you want to catch the animal, close up the five exits of the mound, and wait for it to come out from the last exit. There are six mind-doors through which six sense-objects can enter. If you close five of them and keep the mind-door open, you task will be accomplished."

What the young Arahat suggested was for Potthila not to allow //javana// merely to hang on to the five sense-doors of eye, ear, nose, tongue, and touch, but to shut them up and note only the mind-door so that impulsion could lead him on to insight-meditation. This gave the learned monk a clue to the method of vipassana-practice. When one sees, one must stop at the thought-moment of //votthapana// and note all phenomena with mindfulness. It is the same as saying: When you see, you just see it. Having practised meditation as suggested, Potthila attained Arahatship.

SEIZE THE RIGHT MOMENT

Here one must seize the critical moment when sense-door consciousness first arises. If one fails to do so one stands to be deluded by conceptual knowledge. If you fail to note seeing as it happens, you shall live in the world of //pannatta//. For easy understanding, let me summarize the four stages of the process that I have explained.

1. First //avajjana// reflects as the object enters the avenue of mind-door consciousness.

2. That moment of reflection constitutes the first //vithi// which tries to gain cognition through consciousness.

3. Then concept is formed in the next //vithi//.

4. Finally the nature of the object is known by its name or //pannatti//.

//Nama// and //rupa// in the //paramattha// sense can be known through meditation on the nature of the phenomenon as soon as it arises. As one knows instantly what is actually happening, one gains conviction in the Three Marks of //anicca, dukkha and anatta//. The following four points should also be noted.

1. Seize the first moment in the act of seeing.

2. Arrest the flow of consciousness at the first //vithi// (to conform to the requirement of //ditthe ditthamattam bhavissati//).

3. Differentiate //nama//, mind, from //rupa//, matter. (This is knowing the reality that mind is distinct from matter.)

4. Recognize the Three Marks of //anicca, dukkha and anatta//.

As development of insight-knowledge sets the pace, //rupa paramattha//, form or matter in the abstract, will be rendered distinguishable from //nama paramattha//, name or mind in the abstract. At this stage dissolution becomes clearly manifest. Progressively, as //bhanga nana// gets sharpened, the mind is able to appreciate dissolution arising in a state of flux when both the seeing subject and the seen object pass away together at tremendous pace. A yogi contemplating dissolution may even have the feeling of actually seeing mind-consciousness a-fluttering as it resolves into nothingness. The image of dissolution thus created is so hazy that he might have thought something is wrong with his eyesight. Now that he has gained the experience of seeing how dissolution works, he stands to be benefited by his first-hand knowledge about //anicca//. This knowledge will lead him on to the revelation that what is not permanent is unsatisfactory and unsubstantial as he has virtually no control over his //nama// and //rupa//. It is the nature of //namarupa// just to happen. This, indeed, is reality.

If we are mindful of the phenomena of seeing, hearing etc., according to Buddha's instructions, we may realize that they just occur and nothing more can be said about it. Things just happen. The meditating yogi need not go any further beyond seeing or hearing to examine whether what he has seen or heard is a male or a female. His mind does not dwell on //pannatti// or concepts.

ANSWERING A CRITIC

Among those not used to contemplation or meditation there are doubting Thomases who question the propriety of noting the phenomenon. Some of them even advance the proposition that the whole process of contemplation is wrong. While at Chauk a man approached me with the criticism that //cakkhuvinnana//, eye-consciousness, fails to recognize the genesis, //upada//, and dissolution, //bhanga//, on the arising and passing away of //nama// and //rupa//. It can recognize only the visible object that enters its avenue. It cannot appreciate how that visible object is behaving. His criticism runs on the following lines; "As //cakkhuvinnana// fails to see the visible object actually happening, how can observation and noting it contribute to the knowledge of genesis and dissolution of matter?"

According to the Commentaries and Abhidhamma, //rupa//, form, comes into being four or five instants of //citta// before the event of eye-consciousness, and dissolves twelve, or at least ten or nine, instants after its subsidence. It is, therefore, correct to say that the eye-consciousness fails to notice the genesis and dissolution of the eye-object at the moment of seeing. But here //sati//, mindfulness or recollection, comes in. It has the ability to recall the genesis and dissolution of the actual phenomenon perceived by the eye-consciousness. According to //sutta desana//, if the phenomenon is made known by virtue of //sati//, the genesis and dissolution of the sense-object may be said to have been cognized by the eye-consciousness too.

Jhana Sutta in Anguttara Nikaya mentions the fact that, when a yogi arises from //jhanic// trance, he is able to recall the//jhanic citta//, mind, //cetasika//, its concomitant, and //nama//, aggregate of mind, which he meditated upon during the state of //jhana//. He was aware of them with perspicacity as if he were observing them actually with his own eye-consciousness. However, the genesis and dissolution of //rupa// could not be distinctly perceived for he had not concentrated his mind on it during the trance. But when //jhanic citta//, //cetasika//, and //nama// have been clearly understood, the nature of //rupa// that depends upon //jhana//, or that arises because of //jhana//, can be understood by inference.

So on the authority of the same Sutta it may be shown that, when one is noting the phenomenon of seeing, one is aware of the genesis and dissolution of //rupa// that forms the eye-object and that depends on the eye-consciousness. When a yogi meditates on //rupa//, he sees its arising and disappearance just as he sees lightning. So it has been said:

"Mental formations renew their appearance, and just as they are renewed they perish in much the same way as a flash of lightning appears and disappears."

Now consider that flash of lightning. Who can truly say that he can see its //upada// and //bhanga//, although it is a fact that he sees the whole phenomenon. Certainly he cannot see its beginning nor its end. But actually he sees it happen. To a yogi who possesses //bhanga// and //sankhaupekkha nanas//, the fact is clear that the eye-object makes its appearance to vanish at the next instant in the same way lightning appears and disappears. This is all the more evident when sounds or tactile sensations form the subjects of meditation. When he realizes the Three Marks of //anicca, dukkha and anatta// through first-hand knowledge of the phenomenon of arising and passing away of //nama// and //rupa//, he may be certain that he has acquired vipassana-knowledge.

Furthermore, if he continues to meditate in the way now suggested, //nibbida nana//, knowledge of baneful things as disgusting, will be developed in him. When he gets bored with the aggregates, craving will be expelled; and in the absence of craving, the Noble Path can be reached, when he will become a //sotapanna//.

//Rupa// that is cognized by eye-consciousness arises simultaneously with //atita bhavanga//, passive consciousness inherited from the past. It also dissolves simultaneously with the second thought-moment of //tadarammana// during the formation of the thinking-process. It is not, however, possible for one to be directly aware of these two aspects of consciousness called //upada// and //bhanga//. They can only be understood through applied knowledge or //sutamaya//. Learning things at second hand, however, may not contribute to the awakening of insight-knowledge, and consequently to the realization of //nibbida nana//. Ordinarily no one can actually say precisely how or in what manner //rupa// arises whether along with the first, second, or third aspect of //atita bhavanga//, or dissolves, whether along with the second thought-moment of //tadarammana//, or with the seventh thought-moment of //javana//. If insight-knowledge were to mean strict accuracy in regard to these types of thought-process, a yogi can hardly hope to attain it. But what the Commentaries on Abhidhamma aim at is for the yogi to gain knowledge through applied methods if necessary. Such details do not matter in the practice of insight-meditation. Suffice it to say that it is essential for a meditating yogi to note the phenomenon as it arises in the same way as he notes the phenomenon of lightning. This agrees with the instruction: Note your going as you go.

MEDITATING ON HEARING, ETC.

Malukyaputta undertook to apply mindfulness to the activities of the six senses. If one is constantly mindful, one will just hear what appears on his ear-door, and no more. Now as I am delivering this discourse, you are hearing each sound or syllable of the words that I am uttering. If you concentrate your mind on each syllable that I am pronouncing, you will certainly miss the import and meaning of what I am trying to convey to you. If you just stop short at cognition of the sounds that I make, you will not be able to note them in the //pannatti// way. That is to say you will not be able to form any concept of what you hear. In like manner if you sniff a smell, you just end up with that smell. The stream of consciousness will not flow further than the sense of smell. When you receive tactile sensations and stop short at receiving them, you will just feel that you have touched something or something has touched you, and you will not go beyond that feeling.

In the phenomenon of ideation, too, you will just stop at the point where mind-consciousness arises without proceeding to arrive at formulating concepts. In that case //kilesa// will be denied the opportunity of rearing its head. You shall hear more about it later.

Now let me bring to your mind the passage cited earlier regarding the phenomena of seeing, hearing, etc. "When you see, you just see it; when you hear, you just hear it; when you think, you just think it; and when you know, you just know it." This is insight-meditation put succinctly and it means that when consciousness of sense-objects arises, note the arising so that it just stops there. You may not be able to do so without noting the phenomena with mindfulness. Even when you are trying to note them in this way, it may so happen that your mind deviates from its main objective to investigating whether the object observed is a male or a female, especially when you are just a beginner in meditation. Some would like to assert that, by merely making an introspection into the characteristics of the Three Marks of //anicca, dukkha and anatta//, one can render consciousness remain as it is as it arises. Some go so far as to maintain that the mind should be kept as it is when it will automatically stop itself at cognition of things seen or heard. That amounts to saying that the mind should be allowed to go free without any agency to watch over it. This means that mindfulness will be discarded. To such dissenters let me ask this question: How would your mind react to harsh words that grind your ears, or to trash that inflames you, or to physical and mental pain that undermine your equanimity? Without noting the psyche with mindfulness, how can anyone keep it as it is? Let these people judge for themselves the true worth of their own asseverations.

When a yogi meditates constantly on the phenomena of seeing, hearing, etc., he will realize //bhanga nana// which will reveal to him the moment when dissolution occurs. If he abides in that moment, insight-knowledge will be established showering on him its benefits.

BENEFITS OF INSIGHT-KNOWLEDGE

Such benefits are shown thus:

"Yato kho te Malukyaputta ditthasutamuta vinnatabbesu dhammesu ditthe ditthamattam bhavissati, sute sutamattam bhavissati, mute mutamattam bhavissati, vinnate vinnatamattam bhavissati; tato tvam Malukyaputta na tena."

"Malukyaputta! If, when you see, you just see it, when you hear, you just hear it, when you think, you just think it, and when you know you just know it, then you will arrive at the understanding that the objects of sense that you perceive have nothing to do with you."

This means that you can in no way get involved with the sense-objects whenever you perceive them. You wash your hands of //raga//, lust, //dosa//, anger, and //moha//, delusion, that the sense-objects generate. When you fail to stop short at seeing, hearing, etc., your mind will cling to those passions, and whenever you recall them they will lead you all over again to //raga, dosa and moha//. Those failing to note the phenomena of seeing, hearing, etc., get heavily involved in sights, sounds, etc., with which they come into contact. Those who have developed //bhanga// and //vipassana nana// with the practice of meditation realize the nature of the dissolution of both the objects of sense and the mind that takes note of them, and are able to grasp the mind that takes note of them, and are able to grasp the significance of the Three Marks. As sense-objects fail to generate attachment during meditation, no occasion arises for the meditator to recall them; and consequently //kilesa// becomes discarded. Inclination to //kilesa// caused by sense-object is known as //arrammananusaya//.

The Commentaries enjoin a meditator to give a wide berth to unwholesome //javanas//. In fact abandoning such kind of impulsions comes naturally to him, for he requires no special effort in shunning evil. When insight-knowledge becomes keen and sharp, //javanas// fail to arise as the stream of consciousness flows only up to //votthapana// and no more. In other words, subsidence of the flow of consciousness occurs at the determining stage of //votthapana//, before impulsions can start operating.

Buddha continued:

"Yato tvam Malukyaputta na tena, Tato tvam Malukyaputta na tattha."

"Malukyaputta! When you have nothing to do with the sense-objects that you perceive, you will get no foothold on them."

INCLINATION TO NIBBANA

Commentaries on Udana Katha elaborate on the word, "foothold". When a yogi loses hold of craving and egoistic views, absolving himself from the ideas of "I", or "Mine", or "My ego-entity", he cannot get rooted in sense-objects. About this Buddha has this to say:

"Yato tvam Malukyaputta na tattha, tato tvam Malukyaputta neviaha, na huram, na ubhayamantarena, esevanto dukkhassa."

"Malukyaputta! When you lose your foothold on the objects of sense, your //namarupa// (aggregates of mind and matter) will neither be here in this world, nor there in the other world. And this being not anywhere in both worlds means the end of suffering."

When ego-entity has no standing //namarupa// ceases to exist in all possible worlds either in this or the other world; and this cessation means the end of suffering. It becomes apparent when the yogi's mind gets inclined to Nibbana through the realization of the Noble Path. When an Arahat enters Nibbana no vestiges of //namarupa// remain. As soon as death consciousness occurs at the time of //parinibbana//, he achieves //anupadisesa nibbana//, all strata of existence not remaining. Regarding this the Commentaries say that when a yogi loses his foothold on //rupa//, he is neither here in the six organs of the senses, nor there in the six sense-doors nor anywhere in the six types of consciousness.

This agrees with the actual experience of the meditating yogi who has acquired //bhanga// and //sankhaupekkha nana//. No //kilesa// can arise in him on his realization of the truth of the nature of matter in a state of flux. He takes a highly impersonal and objective view of the sights and sounds that he sees and hears. After that the attainment of //anuloma nana//, knowledge of adaptation, will qualify him for the higher path. Then he enters the stream of //gotrabhu// consciousness that exalts him to a sublime stage, overcoming the Sense Sphere lineage. On the abandonment of the Sphere of the Senses, he actually realizes Nibbana.

Regarding this, Milinda Panha has this to say:

"Tassa tam cittam aparaparam manasikarota pavattam samatikkamitva appavattam okkamati, apavattamanuppatto maharaja sammapatipanna nibbanam sacchikarotiti vuccati."

"A yogi, developing mindfulness step by step reaches the stage of non-occurrence (of //namarupa//) having crossed over the stage of continual occurrence. O King! One who has entered the stage of non-occurrence with correct meditational practice may be said to have come face to face with Nibbana."

A SUMMARY OF THE SUTTA

The following is a summary of what Buddha taught Malukyaputta with regard to meditation.

1. When you note with mindfulness what you see, or hear, or think, or know, you remain just conscious of your seeing, hearing, thinking and knowing, and nothing more.

2. If thus, you just see or hear or think or know what you are seeing, hearing, thinking or knowing you shall not get yourself involved in those phenomena.

3. Since you have nothing whatever to do with them, you shall have no foothold on the sense-objects that you perceive.

4. As you have no foothold on them, you are neither here nor there, nor anywhere, and the very fact that you exist nowhere means that you have realized Nibbana where all sufferings end.

When Malukyaputta had had the benefit of Buddha's advice, he expressed his satisfaction in 24 stanzas. Saying "Well done, Malukyaputta!" Buddha elaborated on them himself stanza by stanza, and I shall now make an exposition on them part by part.

FAILURE TO MEDITATE ON RUPA WHILE SEEING

1. Rupam disva sati muttha,
Piyam nimittam manasi karoto.
Sarattacitto vedeti,
tanca ajjhosa titthati.

1. Having seen rupa, form, one loses mindfulness, and getting absorbed in the charms created by it, one feels the onset of desire that tries to imbibe it.

It is human nature to get attracted to objects that appeal to the senses. You look at a thing because you derive pleasure out of it. At the moment of looking at it you forget the practice of the dhamma. Even a meditating yogi may be moved by visible objects that give pleasurable sensations; and his attention may be diverted from his noble purpose. Those not used to meditational practice would easily give themselves away to alluring //rupa//. As soon as the concept of beauty and loveliness overpowers them, they will be forgetful of the dhamma. //Rupa//, therefore, makes one forgetful or unmindful.

A pleasing smile usually gets ingrained in the heart of the subject who sees it. It is always a pleasure to recall it. He, therefore, keeps remembering it for days, months and years. His mind is now taking in //rupa// as if trying to ingest or imbibe it.

I am speaking about this reaction to //rupa// in general terms. Of course there are occasions when a man feels repugnant towards the object that he sees. At times he may be indifferent to it. Whatever be the case, the crux of the matter is that //rupa// generates various kinds of feelings such as pain, pleasure, greed, anger and the like which bring about kamma-actions, action-results and eventually rounds of suffering.

Suffering brought about by //rupa// is shown hereunder:

2. Tassa vaddhunti vedana, aneka rupasambhava;
Abhijjha ca vihesa ca,
cittamassupahannati.
Evam acinato dukkham,
ara nibbana vuccati.

2. A multitude of passions such as covetousness and rage, springing from //rupa//, torments him who takes a firm hold of it, with the consequence that his mind becomes burdened with vexation. Nibbana, therefore, remains far away from him who would carry the load of suffering rather than meditate.

All //rupas// give rise to //vedana//, feeling or passion. When an agreeable object is presented to an individual, he delights in it; but it is after all //sukha vedana//. When a repugnant object is presented to him, he feels miserable, and that is //dukkha vedana//. Such //vedanas// are the cause of vexation that torments him. If he sees a beautiful object, desire to possess it arises in him. He will get annoyed if he thinks that someone is thwarting his wishes to acquire it. Such dispositions of the mind are the results of the working of greed and anger. They worry him, and so he is forever busily engaged in malevolent activities against people whom he thinks are opposing him in the fulfilment of his desires. Prompted by greed and anger, he becomes almost worn out in his efforts to counter the opposition of his adversaries, real or imaginary.

Most people are not used to mindfulness throughout their lives. For them a change over from an unmindful to a mindful state will be difficult of achievement. One who cannot accept mindfulness will be accepting defilements which bring about the round of suffering. In that case Nibbana remains far removed from him.

Failure to meditate will deprive one of the knowledge about the Three Marks of //anicca//, etc., inviting //kilesa// to add miseries to suffering, in the same way as adding fuel to the fire.

I give below a summary of these points relating to //rupa//.

(A) //Rupa// engenders tender passions that send mindfulness into oblivion.

(B) The impassioned mind imbibes //rupa//.

(C) //Rupa// gives rise to feelings of pain and pleasure.

(D) Conditioned by greed, anger arises causing anxiety and worry.

(E) He who thus accepts conditions that create suffering will always have suffering as his companion.

(F) The round of suffering keeps Nibbana away.

MEDITATING ON RUPA BRINGS NIBBANA NEAR

The foregoing stanzas paint a darker side of the issue; but I shall also give you the brighter side of it.

3. Na so rajjati rupesu, rupam disva patissato;
Virattacitto vedeti,
tanca najjhosa titthati.

3. Passion remains undeveloped in him who recollects with mindfulness the //rupa// that he has seen. Thus freed from lust, he refuses to imbibe it.

This stanza reveals the essence of the practice of insight-meditation. It enjoins the yogi to recollect with mindfulness the object he has seen and to meditate on it. From this it is clear that insight-meditation means noting the object that he has actually seen, and not the object that he has not. It can be accomplished only through practical wisdom and not through //sutamaya// or knowledge acquired from hearing what others say.

The Commentaries on Thera Gatha say that a meditator must try to recollect the eye-object that he perceives as it presents itself through his eye-door to his eye-consciousness being mindful of the four factors of enlightenment or //sampajannas//, namely, knowing what is beneficial, what is proper, what is objective and what is free from delusion.

Earlier I have told you about the //vithi// relating to eye-consciousness. What I am speaking about now is the same thing. If you miss noting the process of seeing just as it occurs, try to catch up with the thought-moment of the mind-consciousness. One who can seize that moment and recollect the absolute reality of form or //rupa paramattha//, may notice the dissolution of both the sense-object and the eye-consciousness at the moment of seeing. When one concentrates only on the act of seeing without thinking over what one has seen, visual perception will last only for an instant. This agrees with the saying: Ditthe ditthamattam bhavissati. In that case defilements will have no time to assert themselves. In the absence of defilements lust or craving subsides.

Desire works up //vedana//, sensations, or passions in this case, which begets craving, //tanha//, by means of which the individual embraces //rupa//. A non-meditator, although fully aware of seeing the object, fails to note it with mindfulness, and he permits craving to arise. But a meditator does not actually see what he sees; and so he gives no chance for desire or craving to arise, for he has always been mindful of the dissolution. In that state, delusion is eliminated and wisdom arises. In the absence of defilements such as craving, kamma-actions, action-results and new becoming cannot be formed. He will be emancipated from suffering. This fact is emphasised in the next stanza.

4. Yathassa passato rupam,
sevato capi vedanam;
Khiyati nopaciyati,
evam so caratissato.

Evam apacinato dukkham,
santike nibbana vuccati.

4. Looking at an eye-object, a yogi just sees it and just feels that he sees it, without assimilating //rupa//, form cast by it. With him suffering ceases. He should practise meditation in this way; and if he so practises it, he is said to be within sight of Nibbana.

As the yogi has not been assimilating //rupa// which he notes with mindfulness, he is not inviting //kilesa// which brings about kamma-actions and action-results.

Commentaries on Thera Gatha emphasise the fact that "seeing the form (//rupa//)" means seeing it with the strength of conviction that what one sees is //anicca//, impermanence. Eye-consciousness brings about sensations of seeing which mind-consciousness takes to heart. The mind collects them and stores them up in the same way as a greedy person amasses wealth. The result is the upsurgence of abhijjha, covetousness, one of the manifestations of //kilesa// on which kamma-actions and action-results depend. A meditating yogi refuses to accept eye-consciousness and its consequences in this way. In other words, he abstains from assimilating defilements that lead him to rounds of suffering. Each time he meditates on the phenomenon of seeing, insight-knowledge is developed. Each time insight-knowledge is developed, defilements are discarded. So he is said to be enjoying //tadanga nibbana// -- peaceful bliss attained at the instant when pollution of the mind is eliminated.

A meditator, who is living in the world of realities or //paramattha//, will gradually realize insight-knowledge stage by stage. He will proceed from //namarupa pariccheda nana//, knowledge of distinction between mind and matter, to //gotrabhu nana//, knowledge of higher lineage, through //anuloma nana//, knowledge of adaptation. According to the sayings of Patthana, this will ultimately lead one to the knowledge of the Path and its Fruition. It must be noted that //anuloma nana// is the highest of the ten stages of insight-knowledge. Aspirants to Nibbana must therefore engage themselves in the practice of vipassana.

The following is a summary of the points discussed so far.

i. On recollecting //rupa// with mindfulness, //raga//, lust, is eliminated.

ii. In the absence of lust or desire, the mind refuses to imbibe //rupa//.

iii. Note as soon as one sees and be conscious of seeing.

iv. If one meditates in that way, the round of suffering will cease.

v. This is the way for a yogi to practise.

vi. On the cessation of suffering, Nibbana will come into view.

VIPASSANA QUESTION II

Now I shall deal with the second question posed by Buddha for Malukyaputta to answer.

"Ye te sotavinnaeyya sadda assuta assutapubba, na ca sunasi, na ca te hoti suneyyanti, atthi te tattha chando va rago va pemam va."

"How do you answer this, Malukyaputta? Answer me as best you can. There are certain audible objects which you have never heard previously, either in the immediate or remote past, or at the present moment. Neither can you hope to hear them in the future. Can such objects arouse desire, lust and affection in you?"

Malukyaputta replied that no desire or lust or affection could possibly arise out of sounds or voices that one had never heard before in the recent or remote past, or that one had not been hearing at present, or that one could not hope to hear in the future. This answer is appropriate. On hearing a pleasant voice and cognizing the individual who makes it, the hearer develops affection or attachment for the owner of the voice. As attachment is developed //kilesa// is brought into play and the consequences mentioned before follow. If one meditates on hearing, //kilesa// will be kept away. Reference is invited to what I have previously spoken about the phenomenon of seeing.

PANNATTI AND PARAMATTHA

What has been discussed earlier about the //vithi// relating to eye-consciousness applies //mutatis mutandis// to the stream of consciousness that I am now talking about; and so I give below the gist of the //vithi// relating to ear-consciousness.

In the phenomenon of hearing an audible object enters the avenue of the ear-door; and we say that the sound is heard. This is the first //vithi// relating to ear-consciousness.

Then the ear-consciousness makes due investigation as to the nature of the sound it receives. This is the first //vithi// relating to mind-consciousness.

In the second //vithi// of mind-consciousness, //nama//, name, suggested by the sound is cognized.

In the last //vithi// of mind-consciousness, //pannatti//, concept conveyed by the name given to the sound, is apperceived.

As an object makes the sound, the ear just hears it. If you note this with mindfulness not going beyond it, you call a halt to the process of hearing. The stream of ear-consciousness stops flowing then and there. But if you are unmindful, your mental formations and activities will be brought into play when you may recall the sound you hear and think over it. That means the stream of mind-consciousness has taken over. Even then, this //vithi// of mind-consciousness is only aware of the sound. //Pannatti//, concept, has not yet formed. If you can note this with mindfulness, your apperception ends here, stopping at the stage of the abstract (//paramattha//) idea of sound. If you fail to call a halt to further mental activities, the second //vithi// would apperceive the concept of the individual making the sound, and furthermore, the third //vithi// will proceed to distinguish the sex of the individual, and this will be followed by the development of affinity or repulsion that he instils in your mind. In this way //vithi// conjures up //kilesa//. It is, therefore, imperative that you meditate on hearing just as you hear. I have summarised these statements as follows:

If you fail to note the phenomenon with mindfulness, you end up with //pannatti// knowledge.

To obtain //paramattha// knowledge the following should be borne in mind.

Note with mindfulness the instant you hear. (Note as soon as the //vithi// of ear-consciousness occurs. Or, failing that, note as soon as the //vithi// of mind-consciousness occurs).

Stop the flow of the process of thought at hearing. (If you can do this, the second //vithi// of mind-consciousness cannot arise.

This is in accordance with the saying: Sute Sutamattam bhavissati.

Then you can distinguish //nama//, mind, from //rupa//, matter. (What you hear is matter at work. When you are noting, mind is at work. Mind and matter are thus distinguished. Both the hearing and the noting appear to dissolve at the next instant.)

In the end you will recognize the Three Marks of //anicca, dukkha and anatta//.

FAILURE TO MEDITATE ON SADDA ON HEARING

5. Saddam sutva sati muttha,
piyam nimittam manasi karoto.
Sarattacitto vedeti,
tanca ajjhosa titthati.

5. Having heard Sadda, sound, one loses mindfulness, and, getting absorbed in the charms created by it, one feels the onset of desire that tries to imbibe it.

When an audible object presents itself at the ear-door, the hearer tries to appreciate it, generally expecting it to be sweet and agreeable. But it usually tends to induce unwholesome thoughts, speech and actions. While he is paying attention to what he is hearing, he loses mindfulness. Desire arises in him if it is a pleasant sound. He takes in what he hears as if he is ingesting or imbibing it. Whenever he recalls it, desire re-appears and torments him again. The story of Prince Nanda illustrates this point.

NANDA THERA

Prince Siddhattha and Prince Nanda were half-brothers, the former being born of Maha Maya, and the latter of Maha Pajapati Gotami, both being sisters wedded to King Suddhodana. Prince Nanda is four or five days younger. When Maha Maya died seven days after the birth of her son, Maha Pajapati Gotami left her own son in the care of royal wet-nurses and brought up Siddhattha breast-feeding him herself.

Prince Siddhattha became Buddha after enlightenment, and came to Rajagaha to spend the first Retreat there. Three days after his arrival King Suddhodana arranged a wedding feast for his second son, Prince Nanda, betrothed to Princess Janapada Kalyani. As Buddha was invited, he came to the palace where he had his meals offered to him. When he was about to return to the monastery, he told Prince Nanda to take his (Buddha's) bowl and come with him.

The Prince, out of fear and awe for his elder brother, did as he was told, expecting that Buddha would take back his bowl and discharge him at any time. As he was about to leave the palace, Princess //Janapada Kalyani// called out to him requesting, "My Lord Prince, come back quickly!"

But, once at the monastery, Buddha asked his younger brother if he would become a monk. The Prince had no mind to don the yellow robe, but overwhelmed by awe he said, "Yes." So he was ordained. But he was never happy. So, one day, he complained, "I am not happy in the practice of this noble conduct. I can no longer abide in it. I shall revert to laymanship."

Now it came to the knowledge of Buddha that Nanda Thera was not happy in his monkhood. The Enlightened One, therefore, asked him why. The newly-ordained monk told him that Janapada Kalyani's words calling him to come back soon were ringing in his ears.

Buddha took his younger brother by the hand and led him to a desolate field, recently burnt out by forest fire, and showed him a maimed old hag of a monkey sitting by the side of a smouldering log. From there he went to Tavatimsa, the abode of the first Plane of Devas, and introduced the love-lorn Prince to a bevy of five hundred beauties, all deities. Then Buddha asked for Nanda Thera's opinion as to who was beautiful, Princess Janapada or any one of the deities. "Reverend Sir!" he replied, "Janapada Kalyani, when compared to the deities, is very much like that old monkey I saw previously."

"Nanda", said Buddha, "Remain happy as a bhikkhu! I promise you that you shall win one of the beauties you are seeing now." When the two came back from the abode of the Devas, Nanda Thera became diligent in the practice of priestly conduct in the fond hope that one day he would have his desire for a deity fulfilled.

Now words went round the monastery that Nanda Thera was practising the dhamma with an eye to getting a beautiful deity for a wife. He was likened by his associates to a daily wage earner, or even a bonded slave, who worked for material benefits. He became greatly mortified. He secluded himself, bent his mind on the object of //kammatthana// and with the utmost effort and determination practised meditation till all //kilesas// dried up in his inner self. Ultimately he won the Path and its Fruition and became an Arahat.

The lesson to be gained from this story is that, before being able to note with mindfulness the sound that one hears, one tends to hear it again and again as one recalls it. Then it gets stuck to the mind. The mind takes in all //vedana//, sensations, conjured up by //tanha//, craving.

6. Tassa vaddhunti vedana, aneka saddasambhava.
Abhijjha ca vihesa ca,
citta massupahannati.
Evam acinato dukkham,
Ara Nibbana vuccati.

6. A multitude of passions such as covetousness and rage, springing from //sadda//, sound, torments him who takes a firm hold of it, with the consequence that his mind becomes burdened with vexation. Nibbana, therefore, remains far away from him who would carry the load of suffering rather than meditate.

This needs no further elucidation as enough has been said about the attitude of mind on seeing, which, in the present context, may be substituted by hearing.

MEDITATING ON SADDA BRINGS NIBBANA NEAR

7. Na so rajjati saddesu, sadda sutva patissato.
Virattacitto vedeti,
tanca najjhosa titthati.

7. Passion remains undeveloped in him who recollects with mindfulness the //sadda// that he has heard. Thus freed from lust, he refuses to imbibe it.

8. Yathassa sunato saddam,
sevato capivedanam.
Khiyati nopaciyati,
evam so caratissato.
Evam apacinato dukkham,
santike nibbana vuccati.

8. Listening to an ear-object, a yogi just hears it and just feels that he hears it, without assimilating //sadda//, created by it. With him suffering ceases. He should practise meditation in that way; and if he so practises it, he is said to be within sight of Nibbana.

All these stanzas need no further elucidation, What has been said about seeing applies //mulatis mutandis// to hearing, and this also applies to summaries given in the form of aphorisms.

VIPASSANA QUESTION III

Buddha posed the following third question for Malukyaputta to answer.

"Ye te ghanavinneyya gandha aghayita aghayitapubba, na ca ghayasi, na ca te hoti ghayeyyanti, atthi te tattha chando va rago va pemam va."

"How do you answer this, Malukyaputta? Answer me as best you can. There are certain odorous objects, //gandha//, which you have never smelled previously, either in the immediate or remote past, or even at the present moment. Neither can you hope to smell them in the future. Can such objects arouse desire, lust and affection in you?"

Malukyaputta replied that it was impossible for desire, or lust, or affection to arise out of //gandha// which had never been smelled or which one could never hope to smell in the future. As desire cannot be developed out of an unknown quality, it is not necessary for a yogi to meditate on it. But those failing to meditate on nose-object and nose-consciousness will remain removed from Nibbana.

FAILURE TO MEDITATE ON GANDHA ON SMELLING

Buddha, satisfied with Malukyaputta's answer, said, "Sadhu!" and uttered the four stanzas in the same manner as before.

9. Gandhim ghatva sati muttha,
Piyam nimittam manasi karoto.
Sarattacitto vedeti,
tanca ajjhosa titthati.

9. Having smelled //gandha//, odour, one loses mindfulness, and getting absorbed in the charms created by it, one feels the onset of desire that tries to imbibe it.

Meditating yogis can rarely enjoy fragrant smell. They are mainly concerned with disagreeable odour which they receive with repugnance. Therefore it is quite usual for them to have a longing for fragrance. This is attachment which makes one forgetful of the dhamma.

10. Tassa vaddhunti vedana, aneka gandhasambhava;
Abhijjha ca vihesa ca,
cittamassupahannati.
Evam acinato dukkham,
ara nibbana vuccati.

10. A multitude of passions such as covetousness and rage, springing from //gandha//, odour, torments him who takes a firm hold of it, with the consequence that his mind becomes burdened with vexation. Nibbana, therefore, remains far away from him who would carry the load of suffering rather than meditate.

Here, as previously, the emphasis is on the fact that failure to meditate keeps Nibbana away.

MEDITATING ON GANDHA BRINGS NIBBANA NEAR

11. Na so rajjati gandhesu, gandham ghatva patissato;
Virattacitto vedeti,
tanca najjhosa titthati.

11. Passion remains undeveloped in him who recollects with mindfulness the //gandha// that he has smelled. Thus freed from lust, he refuses to imbibe it.

12. Yathassa ghayato gandham,
sevato capi vedanam;
Khiyati nopaciyati,
evam so caratissato.
Evam apacinato dukkham,
santike nibbana vuccati.

12. Smelling a nose-object, a yogi just gets the smell and just feels that he gets it, without assimilating //gandha// created by it. With him suffering ceases. He should practise meditation in this way; and if he so practises it, he is said to be within sight of Nibbana.

To wash your hands of //dukkha//, suffering, note with mindfulness everytime the sense of smell presents itself to your mind. Now I shall go onto the next subject relating to the sense of taste. It will show you how to practise Vipassana.

VIPASSANA QUESTION IV

Buddha posed the next question for Malukyaputta to answer.

"Ye te jivhavinneyya rasa asayita, asayitapubba, na ca sayasi, na ca te hoti sayeyyanti, atthi te tattha chando va rago va pemam va."

"How do you answer this, Malukyaputta? Answer me as best you can. There are certain gustatory objects which you have never tasted previously, either in the immediate or remote past, or even at the present moment. Neither can you hope to taste them in the future. Can such objects arouse desire, lust and affection in you?"

Here let me make a passing reference to human weakness for pleasures derived from the sense of taste. Those who have never tasted fruits and cakes imported from other countries have no desire to eat them since they do not have the experience of enjoying them. But people who know how tasteful they are develop a craving for them. In the scriptures there are many instances of people giving up their lives just to satisfy their palate. Defilements can be dispelled if one meditates on eating or tasting, noting the instant when taste just occurs.

FAILURE TO MEDITATE ON RASA ON TASTING

13. Rasam bhotva sati muttha,
Piyam nimittam manasi karoto.
Sarattacitto vedeti,
tanca ajjhosa titthati.

13. Having tasted rasa, flavour, one loses mindfulness, and getting absorbed in the charms created by it, one feels the onset of desire that tries to imbibe it.

Few ever meditate on eating and taste. Ordinary laymen are not aware of this practice of meditation. Even learned persons do not pay heed to it with the assumption that as one gets the taste of food as it is taken, there is no need to note it with mindfulness. This amounts to being irreverential to the teachings of insight-meditation. Others go so far as to say that meditating on taste is a sheer waste of time. Eating, they say, should be done quickly so that more time can be devoted to meditation.

A majority of the meditating yogis also are guilty of this unmindfulness. Once they fail to note the sense of taste as they take food, they lose mindfulness and become attached to it. And that means they cherish the desire to enjoy pleasure out of eating.

All eatables, therefore, are prepared and cooked so that they are delicious to the taste. When laymen offer food to the monks they take especial care to make it appealing to the palate. This shows how much we give importance to the development of gustatory consciousness. I remember the observation made by the Sayadaw of Taungwaing Galay Taik Kyaung of Moulmein. Once he preached one of his devotees who offered food to him that it was usual for monks to partake of food offered to them with a sense of mindfulness which negates taste, as if what is delectable is repugnant. This drew a protest from the devotee who said, "Reverend Sir! It is most improper that you should view tasteful objects that I have prepared for your enjoyment as repugnant." It is quite logical for him to say so, because food for the monks is usually prepared by donors so that recipients could eat them with relish. Here the preparation of food to appeal to the sense of taste of those who are going to eat it is the responsibility of the //dayaka//, the donor. For us monks we abide by the principle to regard what is tasteful as repugnant so that defilements cannot take their hold on us.

Priestly conduct, therefore, requires that when monks eat they eat with introspection in accordance with the principles of //paccavekkhana//, self-examination. Unlike laymen monks take food not for enjoyment, not for indulgence, not for physical development, and not for opulence, but for maintenance of the body, for supporting life, for quenching hunger and thirst and for pursuance of the practice of purity of mind. If one can practise //kammatthana// which prescribes concentration on the perception of the impurity of material food, //ahare patikulasanna//, it is all the more to be commended. Regarding this please see Visuddhi Magga. But for our purpose the best would be to go according to Satipatthana Sutta.

14. Tassa vaddhunti vedana, aneka rasasambhava;
Abhijjha ca vihesa ca,
cittamassupahannati.
Evam acinato dukkham,
ara Nibbana vuccati.

14. A multitude of passions such as covetousness and rage, springing from //rasa//, taste, torments him who takes a firm hold of it, with the consequence that his mind becomes burdened with vexation. Nibbana, therefore, remains far away from him who would carry the load of suffering rather than meditate.

No elaboration is needed beyond the fact that smell here is substituted by taste.

There are three basic necessities in life - food, clothing and shelter. The whole world is teemed with hungry millions. The search for food is a great burden for them. People go hell for leather to get it. In the struggle for a living one tries to grab what one wants by all manner of means, fair or foul and one's anger is aroused when one encounters competitions or opposition from one's rivals. The result is a troubled mind for everyone. All these stem from the development of desire and attachment on the occasion of failure to meditate, in this case, on taste. When one is overpowered by defilements, one becomes tormented by kamma-actions and action-results that bring about the round of sufferings.

Most people do not care to meditate on food or on eating. It is almost a habit with them to keep food out of his meditating mind. This habit usually hardens. In that case they would be accumulating suffering which burns continually like fire for times to come.

MEDITATING ON RASA BRINGS NIBBANA NEAR

15. Na so rajjati rasesu, rasam bhotva patissato;
Virattacitto vedeti,
tanca najjhosa titthati.

15. Passion remains undeveloped in him who recollects with mindfulness the //rasa//, taste, that he has savoured. Thus freed from lust, he refuses to imbibe it.

This is a clear instruction to the yogi to apply insight-meditation to the phenomenon of tongue-consciousness as soon as food has been tasted. It does not say that taste that one has never experienced should be noted with mindfulness. I shall give you an example as to how to meditate on it.

When a monk sits before the table and sees the eatables laid on it, he notes the phenomenon of seeing. As he raises his hand to pick up food, he notes his raising of the hand. As he takes a morsel of food in his hand, he notes that he is taking it. As it is brought towards his mouth, he notes that he is bringing it. As it touches his mouth, he notes the touching. As he opens his mouth, puts the food in it, closes it, brings his hand down, touches the plate with his hands, and in the meanwhile, masticates the food, he notes each of all these proceedings. As his hands move and as he masticates food, he is conscious of the fact that //vayo//, element of motion, is operating. As his hands touch the hot food, he is aware of the working of //tejo//, element of heat. When he feels sweet or sour on the tongue, he notes the qualities of taste. As he is thus noting all the phenomena connected with eating or tasting, he dispels desire, and eventually, lust or //raga//.

When his concentration gets strengthened, he knows taste only as taste and nothing more. It does not occur to him that a particular dish of chicken curry is delicious. It means that he has abandoned the pleasurable tongue-object; and in this manner he does away with defilements.

The experience of the yogis in this Thathana Yeiktha can bear it out. When a meditator eats, he becomes conscious of the fragrant smell and sweet taste that the food generates. But as soon as he feels that he has come to know of this phenomena, the smell, the taste, the nose and tongue-consciousness and the //citta//, mind that notes the consciousness, dissolve away. Under such circumstances //raga// has no opportunity to assert itself, for the yogi has cognized taste just as taste and nothing more. Some of the yogis used to say that as they had been noting the phenomena of tasting, they even failed to recognize the kind of flavour that the food gave. This is quite possible. For, in the absence of such defilements as desire and attachment, no pleasure can be derived out of the food that is taken. Where there is no attachment, one does not take a firm hold of //vedana//, feeling, as if one is going to devour it.

16. Yathassa sayato rasam,
sevato capi vedanam;
Khiyati nopaciyati,
evam so caratissato.
Evam apacinato dukkham,
santike nibbana vuccati.

16. Tasting a tongue-object, a yogi just gets the taste, and just feels that he gets it without assimilating it. With him suffering ceases. He should practise meditation in this way; and if he so practises it, he is said to be within sight of Nibbana.

A meditating yogi eats and feels the taste of food like any other individual; but as he denies himself the wherewithal to enjoy that taste, he does not commit either wholesome or unwholesome deeds in relation to taste. It means that taste here cannot bring about formation of Kamma-actions and action-results. Without them no new becoming can arise. And that will be the end of the round of sufferings.

Paticcasamuppada says: //Vedana paccaya tanha// (Feeling begets craving). But as no craving arises when feeling has subsided, //upadana//, clinging, remains unformed. Hence defilements, kamma-actions and action-results become inoperative.

As such causes of suffering are eliminated, a yogi, steadfast in the practice of insight meditation, attains to the stage of //tadanga Nibbana// when peace is established for the duration of that elimination. This can eventually lead to the fulfilment of the Noble Path and its Fruition.

REALIZATION OF THE DHAMMA

Many examples are cited in the Commentaries regarding the attainment of Nibbana as one meditates on the phenomenon of eating. In Sri Lanka of the olden days, there were built many rest houses where monks on their daily rounds for alms could stop awhile to eat. It was usual for them to have their early morning gruel there, and set out for alms-food in the day, coming back again to the same place to have their full meal. Most of them practised insight-meditation while eating and became Arahats. In those days this was the general rule rather than the exception.

In the Commentaries on Puggalapannatti, the following occurs:

"Making strenuous efforts in insight-meditation with the strength of implicit faith in it, an individual can realize the knowledge of the Path and its Fruition while walking, standing, sitting, lying down, or taking light food or heavy meals. No instances exist where he fails to attain wisdom when he so practises it."

I would like to urge you to note in detail the entire process of eating while you eat. If you are having your meals alone, this can be easily done. For each mouthful of food that you take, you may have about sixty incidents worth noting, and if you go on noting them, it may take you about an hour to finish your meals. But when you happen to eat along with others, this may not be possible; but I urge you to try.

VIPASSANA QUESTION V

The fifth question put to Malukyaputta is as follows.

"Ye te kayavinneyya photthabba asamphuttha asamphutthapubba, na ca phusasi, na ca te hoti phuseyyanti, atthi te tattha chando va rago va pemam va."

"How do you answer this, Malukyaputta? Answer me as best you can. There are certain tangible objects which you have never touched previously, either in the immediate or remote past, or at the present moment. Neither can you hope to touch them in the future. Can such objects arouse desire, lust and affection in you?"

Malukyaputta replied this in the negative. This is as it should be. Here it may again be emphasised that no //kilesa// can arise for sense-objects with which one is not familiar. Indigenous peoples develop no taste for foreign-made dresses which they have never seen before. The same analogy applies to friendship -- one never makes friends with people whom one has never met or seen before.

For most of us seeing or hearing is generally infrequent. We are not seeing or hearing things all the time. Since we are not occupied with eating all the time, tasting is also less frequent. Tactile sensations however, occur every now and then. They are far more prominent than other sensations. They may be felt even when one is sitting or standing still, or when eating or drinking. So we are always involved with contact, day in and day out. When yogis meditate, they usually meditate more on contact than on any other sense-objects.

The Text says: //Gacchanto va gacchamiti pajanati// -- Know that you are going when you go. When you note the act of walking -- extending legs, raising them up and putting them down, you are conscious of the entire movement connected with the process of walking. That means to say that the knowledge of walking has arisen, in which case let that knowledge remain as it is according to the instruction: //Mute mutamattam bhavissati// -- When you know, let that knowing be. Do not go any further than that. This meditation is on the activities of //vayo//, element of motion, although at times //tejo//, element of heat and //pathavi//, element of hardness, may get automatically involved. But what is to be concentrated upon is //vayo//.

The Text further goes on to say: //Thito va thitomhiti pajanati; nisinno va nisinnomhiti pajanati -- Know that you are standing when you stand. Know that you are sitting when you sit. Here, too, you are being instructed to note the nature of //vayo//.

If you are not satisfied with this method, note the activity of //vayo// by watching the rise and fall of the belly as you are standing, sitting or lying down.

WHY MINDFULNESS ON RESPIRATION IS NOT SUGGESTED

In the ten //anussatis// or recollections, //anapanasati//, concentration on respiration, is included. It is concentration on breathing in and breathing out. Breathing is an act of //vayo//.
It may now be asked why I do not make any suggestion to take up the exercise of breathing in and out. In my own opinion, I agree that //anapana// method could lead to the establishment of //vipassana nana//. But it must be noted that Visuddhi Magga puts it in the category of //samatha//, concentration, as distinct from //vipassana//, insight-meditation, when it enumerates the 14 //kayanupassanas//, mindfulness of the physical body as follows:

"The three chapters relating to the four postures, the four factors of knowledge and the four methods of fixing the mind on //dhatu//, primary elements, are said to fall under the category of //vipassana//, insight-meditation....Whereas the two chapters dealing with mindfulness on respiration and fixing the mind on loathsomeness of the physical body are said to fall under the category of //samatha//, concentration."

Thus it has been clearly and unequivocally stated that //anapana// belongs to //samadhi bhavana//, development of concentration, //samadhi kammatthana//, exercises in concentration. Therefore, if we advocate breathing exercises we would certainly be open to criticism that we are teaching not //vipassana// but //samatha kammatthana//, in which case we will be unable to make a rebuttal of the charge made without going against the teaching of Visuddhi Magga. But we allow those who would like to take up mindfulness on respiration to have their wish. We impose no restrictions on them.

Patisambhida Magga and Visuddhi Magga are explicit on the point that, when doing breathing exercises, one must concentrate his mind on the nose without letting the mind follow the course of the stream of air breathed in. The object is to enable the meditator to develop //upacara samadhi//, approximate concentration, and //appana samadhi//, ecstatic concentration, to become enrapt in //jhana//. In the practice of insight-meditation, there is no restriction that directs the meditator to note only one phenomenon at a stretch. But if we instruct the meditator to note all the phenomena of contact that take place in various parts of the body while breathing in and out, we will again be open to the criticism that we are going against the two authorities that I have cited. These are the reasons why we refrain from encouraging meditators to indulge in //anapana// for insight-meditation.

MEDITATION ON ABDOMINAL MOVEMENTS CONFORMS TO CANONICAL INSTRUCTIONS

It has been questioned if instructions to meditate on the rising and falling of the abdomen really conform to the requirements of the Pali Canon. It may be answered in the affirmative on the authority of Sallayatana Vagga Samyutta where it is stated that failure to note the arising and passing away of //nama// and //rupa// that come up at the six sense-doors results in the upsurgence of //kilesa//, while meditating on them brings Nibbana closer through the realization of the Path and its Fruition with the suppression of //kilesa//. The present Malukyaputta which I am discussing is also very clear on this point. I shall give reasons in support of the conformity.

When Satipatthana teaching prescribes observing the four //dhatus//, it is advocating the observance of the apparent phenomena created by the four primary elements. Abdominal movements indicate the working of //vayo// to note which one fixes one's mind on one of the //dhatus// conforming to the requirement of //dhatu manasikara//. I prefer using ordinary language to highly technical Pali terms; and so, instead of saying //vayo dhatu//, I say the rising and falling movements of the abdomen. My employment of the ordinary conversational language agrees with Buddha's preference to simple speech when he gave the advice: //Gacchamiti pajanati//. As the yogi's concentration gets strong with the continued practice of insight-meditation, he will come to realize the nature of the element of motion represented by movements of the abdomen.

On the authority of Satipatthana Sutta and other Suttas in Samyutta Nikaya, we also take it that a meditator should concentrate not only on the four postures usually mentioned in the scriptures but also on other postures or physical behaviour that can be met with in the ordinary course of nature.

If a yogi does not feel satisfied with noting the rising and falling of the abdomen, he can try with meditating on sitting as he sits, or on standing as he stands, or no lying down as he lies down. But we do not insist a yogi to practise //anapana// as we hold that it goes against statements in Visuddhi Magga and Commentaries on Satipatthana Sutta, which speak of insight-meditation after the attainment to the state of //jhana// through noting breathing in and breathing out. But we do not deter anybody from practising //anapana//. Now I shall revert to my original theme.

FAILURE TO MEDITATE ON PHASSA ON TOUCHING

17. Phassam phussa sati muttha,
Piyam nimittam manasi karoto.
Sarattacitto vedeti,
tanca ajjhosa titthati.

17. Having touched //phassa//, tangible object, one loses mindfulness, and getting absorbed in the charms created by it, one feels the onset of desire that tries to imbibe it.

Tactile sensations arise everywhere in the physical body. When a living body touches an inanimate object, such sensations arise. When limbs of the body touch one another, the same thing happens. Those are external sensations of touch. Likewise there are internal sensations which usually pass our notice. For instance, we are unaware of the fact that blood comes into contact with muscular tissues imbedded in the body. Those not used to the practice of //satipatthana// cannot take full note of the external senses of touch, let alone the internal. So when you practise meditation loosely, you are liable to be forgetful of the dhamma although you will be remembering the beautiful when you see beauty. It is human nature to hanker after pleasurable sense-objects; and when they are discovered you forget to note the arising and passing away of the aggregates. At times you may feel repugnant to disagreeable sights you see or disturbing sounds you hear. This also makes you to be forgetful of the dhamma.

The five constituents of pleasure invite //kilesa// for all unmindful persons. Our way of living is one of enjoyment of pleasure. When we sleep on soft beds we are pleased with the comfort it gives. Latest fashions in dress give us a feeling of luxury. Even when we are doing the daily constitutional for health we are prone to get delighted with the thought that it is contributing to our body beautiful. All these delights and pleasures are a product of our surroundings which almost worship the five constituents of the senses. They generate //kilesa//. Nibbana remains far removed from those with a mind of defilements. Hence the following stanza.

18. Tassa vaddhunti vedana, aneka phassasambhava;
Abhijjha ca vihesa ca,
cittamassupahannati.
Evam acinato dukkham,
ara nibbana vuccati.

18. A multitude of passions such as covetousness and rage, springing from //phassa//, contact, torments him who takes a firm hold of it, with the consequence that his mind becomes burdened with vexation. Nibbana, therefore, remains far away from him who would carry the load of suffering rather than meditate.

All that have been said about seeing, hearing, etc. apply to touching. What may be emphasised as usual is the fact that bowing to the wishes of //kilesa// one accumulates the mass of suffering which keeps one away from the path to Nibbana.

MEDITATION ON PHASSA BRINGS NIBBANA NEAR

19. Na so rajjati phassesu, phassam phussa patissato;
Virattacitto vedeti,
tanca najjhosa titthati.

19. Passion remains undeveloped in him who recollects with mindfulness //phassa//, contact, that he has experienced. Thus freed from lust, he refuses to imbibe it.

In the course of meditating on the phenomenon of standing a yogi may feel tired or stuffy or painful or itchy. These are unpleasant sensations called //dukkha vedanas//. When they appear you must concentrate on the source of uncomfortableness and note in your mind the nature of tiredness or pain etc. As this constitutes meditating on //dukkha vedana//, this method is called //vedananupassana//. When you note heat that is generated, you meditate on //tejo//; and when you feel that you are touching a hard and rough surface, you meditate on //pathavi//. At times you may feel that the element of motion gets merged with the element of heat. You note this also and meditate on it. You may note every physical behaviour that occurs. You may bend or stretch your arms and legs. You may throw your head backwards and forwards. You may shut or open your eyes. You may wink. You may indulge in various kinds of movements as you dress, or as you wash your face, or as you take a bath. Even when you are urinating or evacuating your bowels, you must not forget to note the manifestation of //vayo//. With practice you may be able to note even speaking as you speak.

Our injunction to note the rise and fall of the belly is for the benefit of beginners in meditation. If he likes he can take up noting the respiration. But in our experience we have come to know that some who began the practice of breathing in and out endedup with meditating on the rise and fall of the belly, and that they did realize the dhamma. We used to instruct the yogi whose powers of concentration have strengthened to extend his method of meditation to noting all that happens at his six sense-doors.

When //raga// is abandoned through the practice of mindfulness, you will have no desire to grab //photthapha//, tactile sensation, and swallow it up.

20. Yathassa phusato phassam,
sevato capi vedanam;
Khiyati nopaciyati,
evam so caratissato.
Evam apacinato dukkham,

santike nibbana vuccati.

20. On contact with a tangible object, a yogi just touches it and just gets the feeling of touch without assimilating //phassa//, created by the touch. With him suffering ceases. He should practise meditation in this way; and if he so practises it, he is said to be within sight of Nibbana.

What has been discussed in the foregoing relating to other senses applies in the present case.

NEGATION OF CORRECT METHOD

Among us there are some dissidents who neither practise the dhamma nor accommodate others practising it. They reject the methods relating to meditation saying that as everybody has been aware of his own physical behaviour, it is unnecessary for him to note with mindfulness.

The purpose of meditation is to prevent //kilesa// from arising from the time consciousness occurs in relation to sense-objects that actually come into contact with the sense-base. Meditation on things which have never been seen or heard is excluded. Dissidents, in their attempts to pass strictures on our method of teaching, maintain that noting the rise and fall of the belly is superfluous. This goes against what is prescribed in Malukyaputta Sutta or Maha Satipatthana Sutta. Everybody is aware that he breathes. It would be preposterous to say that he should be made to be unaware of his own breathing.

Those who put forward the proposition that one should not meditate on this physical body or parts of it such as head, limbs, abdomen are going dead against Buddha's teaching. Perhaps they do so because they have never experienced insight knowledge. When you see and note //rupa// reflected by your own body, it perfectly accords with the instruction: //Rupam disva patissato// -- Note //rupa// when you see it. In the same way you must meditate on contact in accordance with the instruction: //Phassam phussa patissato// -- Note contact when you touch. There is nothing in the Pali Canon and their Commentaries to suggest that anyone is to be deterred from noting his physical behaviour. All sense-bases, sense-objects and sense-consciousness originate in the body, and if we are to be prevented from noting them, it will go against the teaching. Those who advocate such ideas are preaching adhamma.

I give below the method of insight-meditation in brief:

Note every time //rupa// and //nama// arise. This will lead you to gaining knowledge about their causes and effects. In the end you will recognize the Three Marks of //anicca//, impermanence, //dukkha//, suffering or unsatisfactoriness, and //anatta//, unsubstantiality. He who practises in this manner can enter Nibbana.

Now I shall give you the task laid down by Buddha regarding meditation on mind-objects that cause mind-consciousness to arise.

VIPASSANA QUESTION VI

"Ye te Manovinneyya dhamma avinnata avinnatapubba, na ca vijanasi, na ca ta hoti vijeneyyanti, atthi te tanha chando va rago va pemam va."

"How do you understand this, Malukyaputta? Answer me as best you can. There are certain mind-objects, //dhamma//, which you have never apperceived previously, either in the immediate or remote past, or even at the present moment. Neither can you hope to apperceive them in the future. Can such objects arouse desire, lust and affection in you?"

As before Malukyaputta answered this in the negative, and Buddha laid down the task for him to practise insight-meditation. For a summary of what Buddha taught him, please refer to the earlier section entitled "A Brief Work-Programme".

FAILURE TO MEDITATE ON MIND-OBJECT ON THINKING

21. Dhammam natva sati muttha,
Piyam nimittam manasi karoto.
Sarattacitto vedeti,
tanca ajjhosa titthati.

21. Having thought of //dhamma//, mind-object, one loses mindfulness, and getting absorbed in the charms created by it, one feels the onset of desire that tries to imbibe it.

Here the term //dhamma// meaning mind-object, is not used in the //paramattha// or abstract sense. It relates to the six bases of eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and heart. It creates the idea of male or female. It embraces the material qualities of life and nutrition. It includes all concepts of humanity or divinity and of animals like cattle, etc. and of things like pots and pans, and of places like houses. All sense-objects, whether real or imaginary, are //dhammas//. When ordinary individuals see things that exist in nature, they recognize them by concepts as trees, forests and mountains. Those accomplished in //sammasana nana//, investigating knowledge, and //udayabbaya nana//, knowledge of arising and dissolution of conditioned things, often see in their mind's eye visions of deities, Arahats and Buddhas, besides seeing real objects in flesh and blood. In whatever way they are seen, the individual who sees them develops attachment or repugnance in accordance with his feelings of agreeableness or disagreeableness. Once these //vedanas// arise, he becomes forgetful of the practice of meditation, virtually assimilating, or ingesting, or imbibing what he sees. Then //kilesa// arises. This is explained in the following stanza.

22. Tassa vaddhunti vedana, aneka dhamma sambhava;
Abhijjha ca vihesa ca,
cittamassupahannati.

Evam acinato dukkham,
ara nibbana vuccati.

22. A multitude of passions such as covetousness and rage, springing from //dhamma//, mind-object, torments him who takes a firm hold of it, with the consequence that his mind becomes burdened with vexation. Nibbana, therefore, remains far away from him who would carry the load of suffering rather than meditate.

This shows the darker side of the life of a non-meditator. There is a brighter side for the meditating yogis, and this is given in the following stanza.

23. Na so rajjati dhammesu, dhammam natva patissato;
Virattacitto vedeti,
tanca najjhosa titthati.

23. Passion remains undeveloped in him who recollects with mindfulness the //dhamma//, mind-object, that he has apperceived. Thus freed from lust, he refuses to imbibe it.

Here //dhammas//, or, in other words, //dhammarammanas//, mind-objects, are not //paramatthas// but //pannattis//. But mind-consciousness is //paramattha//. It comprises thoughts and ideas created by the mind-object. It appears, and disappears the next moment after its appearance. It is //anicca//, impermanence. When a yogi sees an object in his mind and notes it mindfully, it disappears as soon as it has been noted. What actually happens is the disappearance of mind-consciousness that constitutes //nama//. As the observer is intent upon the object, he loses sight of //citta// or //nama// created by it. As he notes it in this manner, no attachment arises in his mind. In other words, mindfulness dispels //raga//, lust or passion. In such circumstances consciousness just takes place. It does not go beyond that. This is in accordance with the statement: //Vinnatam vinnanamatta bhavissati// -- When you know, let knowing be. If one fails to meditate on the mind-object, //vedana//, feeling, arises to incite //kilesa//.

24. Yathassa janato dhammam,
sevato capi vedanam;
Khiyati nopaciyatam,
evam so caratissato.
Evam apacinato dukkham,
santiko nibbana vuccati.

24. Thinking of a mind-object, a yogi just knows it and just feels that he knows it, without assimilating //dhamma// created by it. With him suffering ceases. He should practise meditation in this way; and if he so practises it, he is said to be within sight of Nibbana.

An idea must be noted as it is formed so that inclination to //kilesa// can have no opportunity to arise. When the round of //kilesa// ceases, other rounds of kamma-actions and action-results also cease; and that particular moment of cessation of all kinds of defilements rewards the meditator with peaceful bliss; and that moment is the moment of //tadanga nibbana//.

Be it noted that Nibbana is within easy reach of everyone who practises insight-meditation. Conversely, it remains aloof from a non-meditator.

EPILOGUE

Having uttered the 24 stanzas, Buddha concluded saying;

"Imassa kho Malukyaputta maya samkhittena bhasitassa evam vittharena attho datthabbo."

"I have, Malukyaputta, given you a very succinct account of the method of noting the sense-objects, and you must try to understand the wider meaning of it according to the 24 gathas that have now been explained."

Rejoicing in what Buddha taught, Malukyaputta expressed his satisfaction, paid his homage to the Blessed One and departed. Then he retired to a place of solitude, applied himself with mindfulness, zeal and singleness of purpose to the practice of meditation, and, not long after, enjoyed the fruits of the sanctity of //Brahmacariya// (noble conduct), having gained insight on the spot. Now he had come face to face with Truth. For him no new becoming could arise. He had abided in the holiness of the Eightfold Noble Path, having done all there was to be done, leaving nothing undone. And all this he knew. Now our Malukyaputta had become an Arahat.

Once when Buddha was in Savatthi for his daily round for alms, he was approached by a monk by the name of Bahiya Daruciriya who insisted that the Enlightened One prescribe for him a brief religious instruction. Buddha, therefore, advised him to note seeing just as he saw, hearing just as he heard, knowing just as he knew, and thinking just as he thought in relation to sense-objects he encountered. These are his words:

"Ditthe ditthamattam bhavissati; sute sutamattam bhavissati; mute mutamattam bhavissati, vinnate vinnanamattam bhavissati."

In this Malukyaputta Sutta, the instructions are the same. And so this method of vipassana to note with mindfulness every time the phenomena of sight, sound, odour, taste, touch and consciousness occur is far-reaching although very brief. For nearly forty years since 1300 B.E. (c. 1938 A.D.) I have been preaching this sermon for the enlightenment of thousands of devotees relating to the subjects of the Noble Path and its Fruition and of //paccavekkhana nana//, knowledge on self-examination. I believe many among them have by now come to realize knowledge that can lead them to the Path and its Fruition.

Now I shall wind up this discourse with a wish and a prayer, sharing merits we have performed in relation to charity, morality and mental development to our parents, relatives and well-wishers present here, to all humanity, to all devas and to all sentient beings in the whole universe. May they rejoice in these //kusala// wholesome actions, and gain happiness both in mind and in body!

Sadhu! Sadhu! Sadhu!

ÉÍÍÍ

(Prepared at BuddhaNet for free distribution)

** ** **

CONTENTS

1. Importance Of The Doctrine
2. Reflection Of The Bodhisatta
3. Anuloma Reasoning
4. Beyond Reasoning And Speculation
5. Dhamma Is Only For The Wise
6. Difficulty Of Understanding
7. What Is Avijja (Ignorance)?
8. Ignorance Of The Origin Of Dukkha
9. Ignorance Of The Third And Fourth Noble Truths
10. Right View, Etc.
11. Avijja Leads To Sankhara
12. Unwholesome Kammas
13. Rejection Of Good Kamma Means Bad Kamma
14. Ignorance And Illusion
15. Sankhara Causes Vinnana
16. How Sankhara Leads To New Vinnana
17. Sassata And Uccheda
18. Death-Bed Visions
19. The Story Of Mahadhammika Upasaka
20. Vinnana and Nama-Rupa
21. Upapata Rebirth
22. Sansedaja Beings
23. Vithi-Cittas
24. Manodvara Vithi
25. Follow-Up Vithi
26. From Vinnana Arises Nama-Rupa
21. The Story Of Cakkhupala Thera
28. The Thera's Verdict
29. Pure Thought And Happiness

30. Nama-Rupa And Salayatana
31. Rupa And Ayatana
32. Summary
33. The Buddha's Emphasis On Practice
34. The Abstruseness Of The Doctrine
35. Relation Between Manodvara And Vinnana, Etc.
36. Recapitulation
37. Vedana Leads To Tanha
38. Six Kinds Of Tanha
39. Tanha And Samsara
40. Extinction Of Craving
41. The Story Of Mahatissa Thera
42. Story Of A Parrot
43. Contemplation And Extinction
44. Cutting Off At The Foundation
45. Kilesa And Unmindfulness
46. Thoughts And Tactile Impressions
47. Three Kinds Of Craving (Tanha)
48. Tanha Causes Upadana
49. Bases Of Sensual Pleasure
50. Ditthupadana (Bigotry)
51. Right Views
52. Seeing The World Beyond
53. Parami And Kamma
54. Silabbatupadana (Clinging To False Practices)
55. The Story Of Korakhatiya
56. Other Silabbata Practices
57. Attavadupadana (Clinging To Belief In Soul)
58. Clinging Leads To Becoming
59. Kammabhava
60. Upapattibhava
61. Story Of Mendaka
62. Upadana And Kammabhava
63. Puppharatta Jataka
64. Right And Wrong Good Kamma
65. Kamma And Rebirth
66. Four Kinds Of Kamma
67. Story Of Ajatasattu

68. Habitual And Death-Bed Kammas
69. Birth And Suffering
70. Grief And Lamentation
71. Story Of Subrahma Deva
72. Kamupadana Means All Kinds Of Excessive Craving
73. Attachment To Belief As The Cause Of Rebirth
74. Superstition And Evil Rebirth
75. Fanaticism Or Religious Upadana
76. Silabbatupadana - Attachment To Wrong Practices
77. Attavadupadana - Attachment to Ego-Belief
78. Story of Ugga
79. Vipassana Practice and Upadana
80. Life-Cycle and Three Time Dimensions
81. Five Causes in the Past
82. Distinction between Sankhara and Kammabhava
83. Present Effect Due to Past Cause
84. Knowledge for Vipassana Practice
85. Removing the Present Causes
86. Arahat's Outlook On Life
87. Not Annihilation But Extinction Of Suffering
88. Story Of Yamaka
89. Bhikkhuni Vajira On The Nature Of Khandhas
90. Four Layers, Three Links And Twenty Factors
91. Three Cycles
92. Four Aspects Of Paticcasamuppada
93. The False View Of Sati
94. Distinctive Character Of Each Phenomenon
95. Absence Of Effort (Avyapara)
96. Relevancy Of Cause To Effect
97. Conclusion
98. Cutting Off The Cycle Of Defilements
99. Arahan And The Attributes Of The Buddha
100. Story Of Baka Brahma
101. Sammasambuddha
102. The Fame Of The Buddha
103. The Four Noble Truths In Brief
104. Sammasambuddha And Buddhahood
105. Summary

** ** **

Importance Of The Doctrine

The doctrine of Paticcasamuppada or Dependent Origination is very important in Buddhism. The bodhisatta began with dependent origination when he reflected deeply on the nature of existence and attained Enlightenment. He first pondered old age and death as did every other bodhisatta when he was about to become the Buddha in his last existence. For it was only after seeing the old, the sick and the dead that the bodhisatta saw the ascetic (//samana//) and renounced the world in search of the ageless and the deathless Dhamma. He had seen the evils of life in old age, sickness and death.

Every living being wants to avoid these evils of life but there is no end to these evils which follow him in one existence after another. In view of this endless process of life, all living beings appear to be in bondage and subject to suffering. Life is in fact an infinite process of births and deaths. The fate of fowls and ducks is terrible indeed. Some are eaten up while still in the eggs. If they emerge from the eggs they do not live long but are killed when they grow up a little. They are born only to be killed for human consumption. If the fate of a living being is thus to be repeatedly killed it is gloomy and frightful indeed.

But the fowls and ducks appear to be well content with their lot in life. They apparently enjoy life, quacking, crowing, eating and fighting with one another. They may think that they have a lot of time to live although in fact they have little time to be happy, their life being a matter of days or months, with each of them coming into existence and then dying after a short time.

The span of human life, too, is not very long for the man in his fifties or sixties the past seems in retrospect as recent as yesterday. Sixty or seventy years on earth is a day in the life of a deva which is, however, very short in the eyes of a Brahma who may live as long as the duration of the worlds (//kappa//). But even the Brahma who outlives hundreds of worlds is insignificant and his life is short in the context of samsaric eternity. Devas and Brahmas, too, have to age and die eventually. Although they are not subject to sickness and marked dotage, age tells on them invisibly in due course of time. So every living being has to face old age and death and nobody can escape from these evils of life.

Reflection Of The Bodhisatta

Reflecting on the origin of old age, the bodhisatta traced back the chain of dependent origination from the end to the beginning. Old age and death have their origin in rebirth which in turn is due to //kammabhava// (condition or kamma for renewed existence). Kammabhava stems from grasping or attachment (upadana) which is caused by craving (tanha). Craving arises from feeling (vedana) which is produced by sense-bases (ayatana) such as eye, visual form, etc. Sense-bases are the product of nama-rupa (consciousness and corporeality) which results from //vinnana// (consciousness) which is again caused by //nama-rupa//.

The full Pali texts about Paticcasamuppada attribute vinnana to sankhara (kamma-formations) and sankhara to avijja (ignorance). But the bodhisatta's reflection is confined to the interdependence of //nama-rupa// and vinnana in the present life. In other words, he reflected on the correlation between vinnana and nama-rupa, leaving out of account the former's relation to past existence. We may assume, therefore, that for the yogis, reflection on the present life will suffice to ensure the successful practice of vipassana.

Anuloma Reasoning

The bodhisatta reasoned about the correlation between vinnana and nama-rupa thus: This vinnana has no cause other than nama-rupa. From nama-rupa there results vinnana; from vinnana there arises nama-rupa. Hence, from the correlation between vinnana and nama-rupa there arises birth, old age and death; there may be successive births or successive deaths.

Moreover vinnana causes nama-rupa; nama-rupa causes sense-bases (ayatana). From sense-bases there arises contact; contact leads to feeling; feeling gives rise to craving; craving to grasping; and grasping results in rebirth which in turn leads to old age, death, anxiety, grief and other kinds of mental and physical sufferings.

Then the bodhisatta reflected on dependent origination negatively. If there were no vinnana there could be no nama-rupa; if no nama-rupa, then no ayatana and so on. The negation of the first link in the chain of causation leads to the extinction of suffering that has beset us ceaselessly in the infinite series of samsaric existences. After this reflection on dependent origination in its positive and negative aspects, the bodhisatta contemplated the nature of the aggregates of grasping. Then he attained the successive insights and fruitions (magga-phala) on the Ariyan holy path and finally became the all-Enlightened Buddha. Every bodhisatta attained supreme Enlightenment after such contemplation. They did not learn what and how to contemplate from others but owing to cumulative potential (parami) that they had acquired through innumerable lifetimes, they contemplated as mentioned before and attained Enlightenment.

Beyond Reasoning And Speculation

Then when it was time to preach, the Buddha thought thus: This dhamma which I know is very profound. It is hard to understand; it is so sublime and so conducive to inner peace. It is not accessible to intellect and logic (atakkavacaro). It is subtle and it is to be realized only by the wise.

All over the world, philosophers have racked their brains about freedom from old age, sickness and death. But freedom from these evils means Nibbana and Nibbana is beyond the reach of reason and intellect. It is to be realized only through the practice of the middle way and vipassana. Most philosophers rely on intellect and logic, and there are various doctrines which they have conceived for the welfare of all living beings. But these doctrines are based on speculations that do not help anyone to attain vipassana insight, let alone the supreme goal of Nibbana. Even the lowest stage of vipassana insight, viz., insight into the distinction between nama and rupa does not admit any intellectual approach. The insight dawns on the yogi only when, with the development of concentration, and in accordance with Satipatthana method he watches the nama-rupa process and distinguishes between consciousness and corporeality, e.g. the desire to bend the hand and bent hand, the ear and the sound on the one hand and the consciousness of hearing on the other and so forth. Such knowledge is not vague and speculative; it is vivid and empirical.

It is said on the authority of scriptures that nama-rupas are in a constant flux and that we should watch their arising and passing away. But for the beginner this is easier said than done. The beginner has to exert strenuous effort to overcome hindrances (nivarana). Even freedom from nivarana helps him only to distinguish between nama and rupa. It does not ensure insight into their arising and passing away. This insight is attained only after concentration has been developed and perception has become keen with the practice of mindfulness. Constant mindfulness of arising and vanishing leads to insight into anicca, dukkha and anatta of all phenomena. But as merely the beginning of lower vipassana, this insight is a far cry from the path and its fruition. Hence the description of the dhamma as something beyond logic and speculation.

Dhamma Is Only For The Wise

The dhamma is subtle (nipuno); it is to be realized only by the wise (panditavedaniyo). Here the wise means only those who have wisdom (panna) relating to vipassana and the path and its goal. The dhamma has nothing to do with the secular knowledge //per se// possessed by world philosophers, religious founders, writers or great scientists who can split atoms. But it can be realized by any one irrespective of sex, age or education; anyone who contemplates nama-rupa at the moment of their arising, passes through vipassana insights progressively and attains the Ariyan path and its goal.

Taking stock of the nature of all living beings, the Buddha found that most of them were mired in sensual pleasure. There were of course a few exceptions like the five companions of Siddhattha in the forest retreat or the two brahmins who were later to become the two chief disciples of the Buddha. But the majority of mankind regard the enjoyment of pleasure as the summum bonum of life. They are like children who delight in playing with their toys the whole day. The child's toys and games make no sense to adults but grown-up people too derive pleasure from the toys of the sensual world, that is, from the company of their children and grand-children. Such sensual pleasure has no appeal for Buddhas and Arahats. It is highly esteemed by ordinary men and devas because they have no sense of higher values such as jhana, vipassana and Nibbana.

A person who is thus fond of sensual pleasure may be likened to a peasant living in out-of-the-way rural areas. To the urbanites those places are wholly devoid of the amenities of life, what with poor food, poor clothes, dirty dwellings, muddy footpaths and so forth. But the villagers are happy and they never think of leaving their native place. Likewise, common people and devas delight in their sensual objects. Whatever the teaching of the Buddha and the Arahats, they love pleasure and spend all their time indulging in it. They feel ill at ease in the absence of sensual objects. They are so much pleased with their families, attendants and possessions that they cannot think of anything higher than sensual pleasure. Because of their deep rooted love of pleasure, it is hard for them to understand or appreciate the subtle, profound Paticcasamuppada and Nibbana.

Difficulty Of Understanding

The Buddha-dhamma makes little appeal to the masses since it is diametrically opposed to their sensual desire. People do not like even an ordinary sermon, let alone a discourse on Nibbana, if it has no sensual touch. They do not seem interested in our teaching and no wonder, since it is devoid of melodious recitation, sentimental stories, hilarious jokes and other attractions. It is acceptable only to those who have practised //vipassana// or who seek the dhamma on which they can rely for methods of meditation and extinction of defilements.

But it is a mistake to deprecate, as some do, the sermons containing stories, jokes, etc., as sutta sermons. Suttas differ basically from popular sermons in that they are profound, as witness Anattalakkhana sutta, Satipatthana sutta and so forth. The doctrine of Dependent Origination too belongs to Sutta Pitaka. It is to be labelled Abhidhamma only because it is preached in the fashion of Abhidhamma Pitaka.

Since our teaching is unadulterated dhamma, some people confuse it with Abhidhamma and cannot follow it, much less grasp the Path and Nibbana which it emphasizes. Paticcasamuppada is hard to understand because it concerns the correlations between causes and effects. There is no ego entity that exists independently of the law of causation. It was hard to accept this fact before the Buddha proclaimed the dhamma.

The commentaries also point out the abstruse character of the doctrine. According to them there are four dhammas which defy understanding, viz., the four noble truths, the nature of a living being, the nature of rebirth and dependent origination.

It is hard to understand and accept the truth of suffering, the truth about its cause, the truth about its cessation and the truth about the way to its extinction. It is hard to appreciate these truths, still harder to teach them to other people.

Secondly, it is hard to understand that a living being is a nama-rupa process without any separate self, that the nama-rupa complex is subject to the law of kamma that determines a man's future life according to his good or bad deeds.

In the third place, it is hard to see how rebirth takes place as a result of defilement and kamma without the transfer of nama-rupa from a previous life.

Lastly, it is equally hard to understand Paticcasamuppada. It involves the above three abstruse dhammas. Its negative aspect concerns the first two noble truths as well as the nature of a living being and rebirth while its positive aspect involves the other two truths. Hence, it is most difficult to grasp or teach the doctrine. It may be easy to explain it to one who has attained the path and Nibbana or one who has studied the Pitaka but it will mean little to one who has neither the illumination nor scriptural knowledge.

The writer of the commentary on the doctrine was qualified to explain it because he might have attained the lower stages of the path or he might have a thorough knowledge of the Pitaka. He refers to its difficulty probably in order that its exposition might be seriously studied by posterity. He likens the difficulty to the plight of a man who has jumped into the sea and cannot get to the bottom. He admits that he has written the exegesis on the basis of the Pitaka and the old commentaries handed down by oral tradition. The same may be said of our teaching. Since it is hard to explain the doctrine, the yogi should pay special attention to it. If he follows the teaching superficially, he will understand nothing and without a fair knowledge of the doctrine, he is bound to suffer in the wilderness of samsaric existence.

The substance of the Paticcasamuppada teaching is as follows.

From ignorance there arises sankhara (effort or kamma-formation). From kamma-formation there arises consciousness of the new existence. Consciousness gives rise to psycho-physical phenomena or nama-rupa. Nama-rupa leads to ayatana (six bases). From ayatana arises the phassa (impression). Phassa causes feeling; feeling leads to craving. From craving there results clinging (upadana). Because of clinging there is the process of becoming (kamma-bhava), from the process of becoming there arises rebirth (jati) and rebirth leads to old age, death, sorrow, grief and lamentation. Thus arises the whole mass of suffering.

What is Avijja (Ignorance)?

According to the Buddha, avijja is ignorance of the four Noble Truths, viz., the truths about suffering, its cause, its cessation and the way to its cessation. In a positive sense avijja implies misconception or illusion. It makes us mistake what is false and illusory for truth and reality. It leads us astray and so it is labelled //miccha-patipatti-avijja//.

Avijja, therefore, differs from ordinary ignorance. Ignorance of the name of a man or a village does not necessarily mean misinformation whereas the avijja of Paticcasamuppada means something more than ignorance. It is misleading like the ignorance of a man who has lost all sense of direction and who, therefore, thinks that the east is west or that the north is south. The man who does not know the truth of suffering has an optimistic view of life that is full of dukkha (pain and evil).

It is a mistake to seek the truth of dukkha in the book for it is to be found in one's own body. Seeing, hearing, in short, all nama-rupa arising from the six senses are dukkha. For this phenomenal existence is impermanent, undesirable and unpleasant. It may end at any time and so all is pain and suffering. But this dukkha is not realized by living beings who look upon their existence as blissful and good.

So they seek pleasant sense-objects, good sights, good sounds, good food, etc. Their effort to secure what they believe to be the good things of life is due to their illusion (avijja) about their existence. Avijja is here like the green eye-glass that makes a horse eat the dry grass which it mistakes for green grass. Living beings are mired in sensual pleasure because they see every thing through rose-coloured glasses. They harbour illusions about the nature of sense-objects and nama-rupa.

A blind man may be easily deceived by another man who offers him a worthless longyi, saying that it is an expensive, high quality longyi. The blind man will believe him and he will like the longyi very much. He will be disillusioned only when he recovers his sight and then he will throw it away at once. Likewise, as a victim of avijja, a man enjoys life, being blind to its anicca, dukkha and anatta. He becomes disenchanted when introspection of nama-rupa makes him aware of the unwholesome nature of his existence.

Introspection of nama-rupa or vipassana contemplation has nothing to do with bookish knowledge. It means thorough watching and ceaseless contemplation of all psycho-physical phenomena that comprise both the sense-objects and the corresponding consciousness. The practice leads to full awareness of their nature. As concentration develops, the yogi realizes their arising and instant vanishing, thereby gaining an insight into their anicca, dukkha and anatta.

Avijja makes us blind to reality because we are unmindful. Unmindfulness give rise to the illusion of man, woman, hand, leg, etc., in the conventional sense of the terms. We do not know that seeing, for instance, is merely the nama-rupa or psycho-physical process, that the phenomenon arises and vanishes, that it is impermanent, unsatisfactory and unsubstantial.

Some people who never contemplate die without knowing anything about nama-rupa. The real nature of nama-rupa process is realized by the mindful person. But the insight does not occur in the beginning when concentration is not yet developed. Illusion or the natural way of consciousness precedes contemplation and so the beginner does not gain a clear insight into the nature of nama-rupa. It is only through steadfast practice that concentration and perception develop and lead to insight-knowledge.

If, for example, while practising mindfulness, the yogi feels itchy, he is barely aware of being itchy. He does not think of the hand, the leg, or any other part of the body that is itchy nor does the idea of self as the subject of itchiness, "I feel itchy" occur to him. There arises only the continuous sensation of itchiness. The sensation does not remain permanent but passes away as he notes it. The watching consciousness promptly notes every psycho-physical phenomenon, leaving no room for the illusion of hand, leg and so on.

Illusion dominates the unmindful person and makes him blind to the unsatisfactory nature (dukkha) of all sense-objects. It replaces dukkha with sukha. Indeed avijja means both ignorance of what is real and mis-conception that distorts reality.

Because he does not know the truth of dukkha, man seeks pleasant sense-objects. Thus ignorance leads to effort and activity (sankhara). According to the scriptures, because of avijja there arises sankhara but, there are two links, viz., tanha and upadana between them. Ignorance gives rise to craving (tanha) which later on develops into attachment (upadana). Craving and attachment stem from the desire for pleasure and are explicitly mentioned in the middle part of the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada. When the past is fully described, reference is made to avijja, tanha, upadana, kamma and sankhara.

Ignorance Of The Origin Of Dukkha

People do not know that craving is the origin (samudaya) of suffering. On the contrary they believe that it is attachment that makes them happy, that without attachment life would be dreary. So they ceaselessly seek pleasant sense-objects, food, clothing, companions and so forth. In the absence of these objects of attachment they usually feel ill at ease and find life monotonous.

For common people life without attachment would be indeed wholly devoid of pleasure. It is tanha that hides the unpleasantness of life and makes it pleasant. But for the Arahat who has done away with tanha, it is impossible to enjoy life. He is always bent on Nibbana, the cessation of conditioned suffering.

Tanha cannot exert much pressure even on the yogis (meditators) when they become absorbed in the practice of vipassana. So some yogis do not enjoy life as much as they did before. On their return from meditation retreat they get bored at home and feel ill at ease in the company of their families. To other people the yogi may appear to be conceited but in fact his behaviour is a sign of loss of interest in the workaday world. But if he cannot as yet overcome the sensual desire, his boredom is temporary and he usually gets re-adjusted to his home life in due course. His family need not worry over his mood or behaviour for it is not easy for a man to become thoroughly sick of his home life. So the yogi should examine himself and see how much he is really disenchanted with life. If his desire for pleasure lingers, he must consider himself still in the grip of tanha.

Without tanha we would feel discomfited. In conjunction with avijja, tanha makes us blind to dukkha and creates the illusion of sukha. So we frantically seek sources of pleasure. Consider, for example, men's fondness for movies and dramatic performances. These entertainments cost time and money but tanha makes them irresistible although to the person who has no craving for them they are sources of suffering.

A more obvious example is smoking. The smoker delights in inhaling the tobacco smoke but to the non-smoker it is a kind of self-inflicted suffering. The non-smoker is free from all the troubles that beset the smoker. He leads a relatively care-free and happy life because he has no craving for tobacco. Tanha as the source of dukkha is also evident in the habit of betel-chewing. Many people enjoy it although in fact it is a troublesome habit.

Like the smoker and the betel-chewer, people seek to gratify their craving and this tanha-inspired effort is the mainspring of rebirth that leads to old age, sickness and death.

Suffering and desire as its cause are evident in everyday life but it is hard to see these truths for they are profound and one can realize them not through reflection but only through the practice of vipassana.

Ignorance Of The Third And Fourth Noble Truths

Avijja also means ignorance of the cessation of dukkha and the way to it. These two truths are also profound and hard to understand for the truth about cessation of dukkha concerns Nibbana which is to be realized only on the Ariyan holy path, and the truth about the way is certainly known only to the yogi who has attained the path. No wonder that many people are ignorant of these truths.

Ignorance of the end of suffering is widespread and so world religions describe the supreme goal in many ways. Some say that suffering will come to an end automatically in due course of time. Some regard sensual pleasure as the highest good and reject the idea of a future life. This variety of beliefs is due to ignorance of the real Nibbana. Even among Buddhists some hold that Nibbana is an abode or a sort of paradise and there are many arguments about it. All these show how hard it is to understand Nibbana.

In reality Nibbana is the total extinction of the nama-rupa process that occurs ceaselessly on the basis of causal relationship. Thus according to the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada, avijja, sankhara etc., give rise to nama-rupa, etc., and this causal process involves old age, death and the other evils of life. If avijja, etc., becomes extinct on the Ariyan path, so do their effects and all kinds of dukkha and this complete end to dukkha is Nibbana.

For example, a lamp that is refuelled will keep on burning, but if it is not refuelled there will be a complete extinction of flame. Likewise for the yogi on the Ariyan path who has attained Nibbana, all the causes such as avijja, etc., have become extinct and so do all the effects such as rebirth, etc. This means total extinction of suffering, that is, Nibbana which the yogi must understand and appreciate before he actually realizes it.

This concept of Nibbana does not appeal to those who have a strong craving for life. To them the cessation of nama-rupa process would mean nothing more than eternal death. Nevertheless, intellectual acceptance of Nibbana is necessary because on it depends the yogi's whole-hearted and persistent effort to attain the supreme goal.

Knowledge of the fourth truth, viz., truth about the way to the end of dukkha is also of vital importance. Only the Buddhas can proclaim the right path; it is impossible for anyone else, be he a deva, a Brahma or a human being, to do so. But there are various speculations and teachings about the path. Some advocate ordinary morality such as love, altruism, patience, alms-giving, etc., while others stress the practice of mundane jhana. All these practices are commendable. According to the Buddhist teaching, they lead to relative welfare in the deva-Brahma worlds but do not ensure freedom from samsaric dukkha such as old age, etc. So they do not form the right path to Nibbana although they are helpful in the effort to attain it.

Some resort to self-mortification such as fasting, living in a state of nature and so forth. Some worship devas or animals. Some live like animals. From the Buddhist point of view all these represent what is termed //silabbataparamasa// which means any practice that has nothing to do with the Eightfold Path.

The Noble Eightfold Path comprises right view, right intention, right speech, right action, right livelihood, right effort, right mindfulness and right contemplation. The path is of three kinds, viz., the basic path, the preliminary path and the Ariyan path. Of these the most vital is the Ariyan path but this path should not be the primary objective of the yogi nor does it require him to spend much time and energy on it. For, as the vipassana practice on the preliminary path develops, the insight on the Ariyan level occurs for a thought-moment. For example, it requires much time and effort to produce fire by friction but ignition is a matter of a moment's duration. Similarly, the insight on the Ariyan path is instantaneous but it pre-supposes much practice of vipassana on the preliminary path.

Right View, Etc.

Vipassana insight is the insight that occurs at every moment of contemplation. The yogi who notes every psycho-physical phenomenon becomes aware of its real nature. Thus he focuses his attention on the bending of his arms or legs and he realizes the elements of rigidity and motion. This means right view in connection with //vayodhatu//. Without mindfulness there will arise illusion of "It is the hand", "It is a man", and so forth. Only the mindful yogi sees things as they really are.

The same may be said of right view in regard to sensation in the body, e.g. imagination, intention. When the mind becomes fixed and calm, the yogi finds the nama-rupa phenomena arising and vanishing and so he gains insight into their anicca, dukkha and anatta.

Right belief implies right intention and other associative dhamma on the path. Insight on the path occurs at every moment of contemplation. With the attainment of perfect insight into the three characteristics of existence, the yogi sees Nibbana. Hence, if Nibbana is to be realized here and now, the practice of vipassana is essential. The yogi who cannot as yet practise vipassana should focus on the path that is the basis of vipassana practice. This basic path means doing good deeds motivated by the belief in Kamma. In other words, it is the practice of dana, sila etc., in the hope of attaining Nibbana.

All the paths (magga) - the basic, the preliminary and the Ariyan, form the three-fold path leading to Nibbana. In particular, the yogi must recognize the Ariyan path as the dhamma that is to be desired, cherished and adored. Such a recognition is essential to strenuous effort in the practice of vipassana. The yogi must also accept the vipassana magga as a noble dhamma and know how to practise it.

Some people are ignorant of the way to Nibbana. On top of that they belittle the Nibbana-oriented good deeds of other people. Some deprecate the teaching and practice of other people although they have never practised vipassana effectively. Some criticize the right method because they are attached to their wrong method. All these people have avijja which means ignorance of and misconception about the right path. It is avijja not to know that dana, sila and bhavana lead to Nibbana and it is avijja too to regard dana, etc. as harmful to one's interest. The more destructive avijja is ignorance of and illusion about the right method of contemplation.

Ignorance of the right path is the most terrible form of avijja. For it makes its victims blind to good deeds and creates illusions, thereby preventing them from attaining human happiness or divine bliss, let alone the Ariyan path and Nibbana. Yet most people remain steeped in ignorance, unmindful of the need to devote themselves to dana, sila and bhavana.

Avijja Leads To Sankhara

To them sensual pleasure is the source of happiness, Nibbana as the extinction of nama-rupa is undesirable and the way to it is arduous and painful. So they seek to gratify their desire through three kinds of action (kamma) viz., bodily action, verbal action and mental action. Some of these actions may be ethically good and some may be ethically bad. Some people will practise dana, etc. for their welfare hereafter, while some will resort to deceit or robbery to become rich.

A Pali synonym for kamma (action) is sankhara. Sankhara is also of three kinds, viz., sankhara by thought, sankhara by speech and sankhara by body. Sankhara pre-supposes cetana (volition). The function of cetana is to conceive, to urge or to incite and as such it is the mainspring of all actions. It is involved in killing, alms-giving, etc. The yogi knows its nature empirically through contemplation.

In another sense there are three kinds of sankharas, viz., punnabhi (wholesome) sankhara, with its good kammic result, apunnabhi (unwholesome) sankhara, with its bad kammic result and anenjabhi-sankhara that leads to wholesome arupajhana which literally means immobile jhana. Rupajhana and all the good actions having the kammic results in the sensual world are to be classified as punnabhi-sankhara. Punna literally means something that cleanses or purifies. Just as a man washes the dirt off his body with soap, so also we have to rid ourselves of kammic impurities through dana, sila and bhavana. These good deeds are conducive to welfare and prosperity in the present life and hereafter.

Another meaning of punna is the tendency to fulfil the desire of the doer of the good deed. Good deeds help to fulfil various human desires, e.g. the desire for health, longevity, wealth and so forth. If a good deed is motivated by the hope for Nibbana, it leads to a life that makes it possible to attain his goal or it may ensure his happiness and welfare till the end of his last existence. Abhisankhara is the effort to do something for one's own welfare. It tends to have good or evil kammic results. So punnabhi-sankhara is good deed with good kammic result. There are eight types of good deed in sensual sphere (kamavacarakusala) and five types in fine-material sphere (rupavacara). All these may be summed up as of three kinds, viz., dana, sila and bhavana.

Giving dana gladly means wholesome consciousness which is kammically very fruitful. So the donor should rejoice before, during and after the act of alms-giving. In the scriptures, this kind of dana is credited with great kammic productivity. The attitude of the donor may also be one of indifference (upekkha) but, if the mind is clear, his act of dana too has high kammic potential Any act of alms-giving that is based on the belief in kamma is rational and it may bear fruit in the form of rebirth with no predisposition to greed, ill-will and ignorance. An act of dana that has nothing to do with a sense of its moral value or the belief in kammic result is good but unintelligent and it will lead to rebirth with no great intelligence. It may bear such kammic fruit in everyday life but it does not make the donor intelligent enough to attain the path in his next life.

Again one may do a good deed spontaneously without being urged by others (asankharika-kusala); some do good deeds at the instigation of others (sasankharika-kusala). Of these two kinds of good deeds, the former is kammically more fruitful than the latter. When we consider the four kinds of good deeds mentioned earlier in terms of these last two attributes, we have a total of eight types of wholesome consciousness in the sensual sphere. Whenever we do a good deed, we are prompted to do so by one of these kusala dhammas; when we practise concentration and meditation, we have to begin with these eight types of wholesome dhammas.

If it is bhavana that can lead to jhana, the yogi attains rupavacara jhana when his samadhi is well-developed. Jhana means total concentration of mind on an object of mental training. Samatha jhana is concentration for bare tranquillity. Jhana samadhi is like the flame burning in still air. According to the Suttas, the rupavacara jhana has four levels; in Abhidhamma it has five levels.

Unwholesome Kammas

Opposed to punnabhisankhara is apunnabhisankhara or unwholesome kamma formations. These immoral deeds lead to lower worlds and evils in human life such as ugliness, infirmities and so forth. They number twelve in terms of consciousness, viz., eight rooted in greed (lobha), two rooted in ill-will (dosa) and two rooted in ignorance (moha).

The lobha-based dhammas comprise four with wrong belief and four without it. Of the four dhammas with wrong belief, two are joyful, spontaneous (asankharika) dhamma and joyful but unspontaneous (sasankharika) dhamma. The neutral (upekkha) unwholesome dhammas may be classified in the same way. Likewise there are two joyful lobha-based dhammas without wrong belief and two lobha-based dhammas without joy or wrong belief. Every kamma is characterized by one of these eight lobha-based dhammas. The dosa-based dhammas are of two kinds, viz., spontaneous kamma and unspontaneous kamma. This dosa-based consciousness is the mainspring of anger, dejection, fear and revulsion.

The two kinds of moha-based consciousness are doubt (vicikiccha) and restlessness (uddhacca). The former concerns doubts about the Buddha, Dhamma, Sangha, sila, samadhi, the idea of a future life and so forth. The latter refers to the person who is distracted and absent-minded. The mind is seldom calm and it usually goes wandering when it is not restrained through the practice of bhavana. It is said, however, that uddhacca does not lead to the lower worlds. The other eleven unwholesome dhammas do so under certain circumstances and even in case of a good rebirth, they usually have bad kammic effects such as sickliness. These twelve kinds of unwholesome volition (cetana) are called apunnabhisankhara.

All over the world people wish to be happy and so they strive for their material welfare in the present life and hereafter. But it is greed and ill-will that largely characterize their activities. Wholesome consciousness is confined to those who have good friends, who have heard their dhamma and who think rationally.

Some go morally astray, being misled by their selfish teacher. In the lifetime of the Buddha, a lay Buddhist abused good monks and so on his death he became a peta in the latrine of the monastery he had donated to the Sangha. He told the elder thera Moggallana about his misdeed when the latter saw him with his divine eye. What a terrible fate for a man who had materially supported the Sangha for his welfare in after-life, but was misguided to the lower world by his teacher. This shows that the person whose company we seek should possess not only deep knowledge but also good character.

The mark of a good man is abstinence from any act, speech or thought that is harmful to other people. Those who keep company with good men or good bhikkhus have the opportunity to hear the good dhamma and if he thinks wisely, his thoughts will lead to wholesome kammas. On the other hand evil teachers or friends, false teachings and improper thoughts may lead to moral disaster. Some who bore unblemished character in the beginning were ruined by corrupt thoughts. They were convicted of theft, robbery or misappropriation and their long-standing reputation was damaged once and forever. All their suffering had its origin in the illusion of happiness. Contrary to their expectations, they found themselves in trouble when it was too late. Some misdeeds do not produce immediate kammic results but they come to light in due course and lead to suffering. If retribution does not follow the evil-doer here and now, it overtakes him in afterlife as in the case of the donor of the monastery who became a peta for his evil words.

His teacher who had misguided him fared worse after his death. For he occupied a place below his former pupil and had to live on his excreta. The kammic result of his misdeed was indeed frightful. He had committed it for his own end but it backfired and he had to suffer terribly for it.

Some jungle tribes make animal sacrifices to gods for good harvest, security, etc. These primitive beliefs still prevail among some urban people. Some worship the chief nat'as if he were the Buddha. Some kill animals to feed guests on the occasion of religious alms-giving. Even some ignorant Buddhists have misgivings about this practice. Whatever the object of the donor, killing has bad kammic result and it is not a good deed despite the belief of the killer to the contrary.

A good deed bears the mark of moral purity. Killing or hurting a living being cannot be morally pure in any sense if you identify yourself with the victim. He faces death or endures ill-treatment only because he cannot avoid it. He will surely retaliate if he is in a position to do so. Some people pray for vengeance and so the killer is killed in his next existence or he has suffer in hell for his misdeed. The Pitaka abounds in many instances of the kammic consequences of killing.

Some long for human or deva life and devote themselves to dana, sila and bhavana. Their good deeds serve to fulfil their wishes and lead to welfare in afterlife, but every life is subject to old age and death, and human life is inextricably bound up with ill-health, and mental suffering. Some crave for the Brahma-world and practise jhana. They may live happily for many kappas (world-systems) as Brahmas. But when life has run its course, they will be reborn as human beings or devas and any evil deed that they do may bring them to the lower worlds. After all, the glorification of the Brahma-life is an illusion.

The illusion of happiness is not confined to common people. The illusion (vipallasa and avijja) that makes us regard dukkha as sukha lingers at the first two stages of the holy path, and even at the anagami stage the yogi still mistakes material life (rupa-bhava) and immaterial life (arupa-bhava) for a life of bliss. So the object of the Ariyas at the first three stages is to do good. As for the common people, they are mired in all the four illusions that make them regard the impermanent as permanent, the dukkha of nama-rupa as sukha, the impersonal as personality (atta) and the unpleasant as pleasant. Associated with these illusions are the four avijjas. Because of these misconceptions and ignorance, every bodily, verbal or mental action gives rise to good or bad kamma. A good kamma arises only from volitional effort coupled with faith, mindfulness and so forth. If the mind is left to itself, it is likely to produce bad kamma.

Rejection Of Good Kamma Means Bad Kamma

Some people misinterpret the lack of good or bad kamma on the part of the Arahat and say that we should avoid doing good deeds. For an ordinary person the rejection of good kamma will mean the upsurge of bad kamma, just as the exodus of good people from a city leaves only fools and rogues, or the removal of useful trees is followed by the growth of useless grass and weeds. The man who rejects good deeds is bound to do bad deeds that will land him in the lower worlds. It will be hard for him to return to the human world.

In point of fact, the Arahat's dissociation from good kamma means only that because of the extinction of avijja, his action is kammically unproductive. Indeed the Arahats do good deeds such as revering the elder theras, preaching, giving alms, helping living beings who are in trouble and so forth. But, with their total realization of the four noble truths and the elimination of avijja, their good actions do not have any kammic effect. So it is said that the Arahat does not have good kamma, not that he avoids doing good deeds.

An ordinary person who does not care for good deeds because of his avijja and mistaken view, will build up only bad kamma that are bound to lead to the lower worlds. In fact the lack of the desire to do good is a sign of abysmal ignorance that makes the holy path. and Nibbana remote. The mind becomes inclined to good deeds in so far as avijja loses its hold on it. A sotapanna yoga is more interested in doing good than when he was an ordinary man. The same may be said of those at the higher stages of the Ariyan path. The only difference is the increasing desire to give up doing things irrelevant to the path and devote more time to contemplation. So, good deeds should not be lumped together with bad deeds and purposely avoided. Every action that is bound up with avijja means either good kamma or bad kamma. In the absence of good kamma all will be bad kamma.

Ignorance and Illusion

Truth and falsehood are mutually exclusive. If you do not know the truth, you accept falsehood and vice versa. Those who do not know the Four Noble Truths have misconceptions about dukkha which, posing as sukha, deceive and oppress them.

Apart from tanha which, when gratified affords pleasure, everything in the sensual world is real dukkha. All sense-objects are subject to ceaseless flux and unreliable. Yet to the ignorant person they appear to be good and pleasant. They make him nostalgic about what they regard as their happy days in the past and optimistic about their future. Because of their misconception, they long for what they consider to be the good things in life. This is the cause of their dukkha but they do not realize it. On the contrary they think that their happiness depends on the fulfilment of their desires. So they see nothing wrong with their desire for sensual pleasure. In fact, the truths about the end of dukkha and the way to it are foreign to most people. Some who learn these truths from others or accept them intellectually do not appreciate them. They do not care for Nibbana or the way to it. They think that the way is beset with hardships and privations.

The hope for happiness is the mainspring of human action. Actions in deed, speech or thought are called kamma or sankhara. We have referred to three kinds of sankhara, the two kinds of good kamma comprising the first sankhara, viz., the eight good kammas in the sensual world and the good kammas in the material world; we have also mentioned two kinds of good kamma or consciousness, viz., one associated with intelligence and the other divorced from intelligence. In the practice of vipassana the yogi's mind is intelligent if it becomes aware of the real nature of nama-rupa (anicca, dukkha, anatta), through contemplation. It is not intelligent if it means little more than the recitation of Pali words and superficial observation. In ordinary morality a sense of moral values is intelligent if it is associated with the belief in the law of kamma.

Some people say that an intelligent act of dana must involve the contemplation of the anicca, dukkha and anatta of the donor, the recipient and the offering. This view is based on Atthasalini (a commentary on Abhidhammapitaka) which mentions the contemplation on the impermanence of everything after giving alms. But the reference is to contemplation after the act of dana, not before or while doing it. Moreover, the object is not to make the act intelligent but to create wholesome kamma in vipassana practice. If by intelligent dana is meant only the dana that pre-supposes such contemplation, all the other dana of non-Buddhists would have to be dubbed unintelligent acts and it is of course absurd to do so.

The accounts of alms-giving by bodhisattas make no mention of contemplation nor did the Buddha insist on it as a pre-requisite to an act of dana. The scriptures say only that the kammic potential of dana depends on the spiritual level of the recipient and this is the only teaching that we should consider in alms-giving. If the donor and the recipient were to be regarded as mere nama-rupa subject to anicca, etc., they would be on equal footing. The act of dana would then lack inspiration and much kammic potential.

In fact the object of alms-giving is not vipassana contemplation but the benefits accruing to the donor. So the Buddha points out the would-be recipients who can make dana immensely beneficial and the importance of right reflection (belief in kamma).

On one occasion Visakha, the lay woman asked the Buddha for lifelong permission to make eight kinds of offering to the Sangha; these were (1) bathing garments for the bhikkhus, (2) food for guest-monks, (3) food for travelling monks, (4) food for sick monks, (5) food for the monk who attended on a sick monk, (6) medicine for the sick monk, (7) rice-gruel for the Sangha and (8) bathing garments for the bhikkhunis. The Buddha asked Visakha what benefits she hoped to have in offering such things and the substance of Visakha's reply is as follows.

"At the end of the lent, the bhikkhus from all parts of the country will come to see the Buddha. They will tell the Lord about the death of certain monks and ask him about their rebirth and stages on the holy path that they (the deceased monks) had attained. The Lord will reveal their spiritual attainments. I will then approach the visiting monks and ask them whether their late fellow-monks had ever visited Savatthi city. If they say yes, I will conclude that the Noble one who is now at the sotapanna or any other stage on the holy path must have certainly used one of my offerings. This remembrance of my good kamma will fill me with joy. It will be conducive to peace, tranquillity and self-development."

Here it is worthy of note that the reference is not to the contemplation on the impermanence of the namarupa of the deceased monks but to the spiritual attainments that distinguished them in afterlife. Importance is attached to the contemplation that leads to ecstasy and training in self-development. Hence, the most appropriate object of contemplation in doing dana is the noble attributes of the recipient such as the noble character of the Buddha when laying flowers at the shrine, the holy life of the bhikkhu when offering food and so forth.

Preaching or hearing the dhamma is a wholesome kamma and it is an intelligent act if the dhamma is understood. Every good deed based on the belief in kamma is an intelligent kamma. Without the belief, a good act is wholesome but unintelligent as are the good acts of some children who imitate the elders and worship the Buddha image and the good acts of some people who reject the belief in kamma but are helpful, polite and charitable.

The five material wholesome dhammas (rupakusala-dhamma) are those associated with five jhanas. They are accessible only through the practice of samatha that leads to jhana. The eight wholesome dhammas and the five material wholesome dhammas form the punnabhisankhara. Apunnabhisankhara or unwholesome kammas number twelve in terms of consciousness. Here sankhara means volition (cetana). Of the twelve unwholesome sankharas eight are based on greed, two on anger and two on ignorance.

The greed-based (lobha-mula) consciousness is of eight kinds viz., four with joy and attachment and four without joy, but with attachment (upekkha sahagutta). Of the first four kinds two are bound up with belief and, of the two with the belief or without the belief, one is non-spontaneous (sasankharika) and the other is spontaneous (asankharika). Belief is of three kinds, viz., belief in ego-entity, belief in immortality of ego, and belief in annihilation of the ego without there being any kammic effect of good or bad deeds.

Few people are free from the belief in ego-entity. The belief dominates those who do not know that life is a nama-rupa process without a soul or a being. The belief is weak among those who have some knowledge of Buddhist scriptures but their bookish knowledge does not help them to overcome it completely. The yogis who have had a clear insight into the nature of nama-rupa through contemplation are usually free from the belief. Yet they may hark back to the belief if they stop contemplating before they attain the path. As for the common people, the ego-belief is deep-rooted, making them think that it is the self or the ego which is the agent of whatever they do or feel or think. Again those who believe in total extinction after death and reject the idea of future life and kamma have unwholesome consciousness that is bound up with nihilistic beliefs.

Hatred-based (dosa-mula) consciousness comprises doubt and restlessness. Doubts about the Buddha, Nibbana, anatta and so forth are labelled vicikiccha.

Hatred-based consciousness is of two kinds, viz., voluntary consciousness and involuntary consciousness. But there are many kinds of hatred such as anger, envy, anxiety, grief, fear and so forth. Ignorance-based (moha-mula) consciousness comprises doubt and restlessness. Doubts about the Buddha, Nibbana, anatta and so forth are labelled vicikiccha. The mind is subject to doubt (uddhacca) when it wanders here and there restlessly.

Thus apunnabhisankhara means the eight greed-based mental factors, two hatred-based mental factors and two ignorance-based mental factors. It is opposed to punnabhisankhara. It serves to purify nama-rupa, leads to good rebirth with good kammic results whereas the other defiles the nama-rupa process and leads to bad rebirth with bad kammic results.

People do evil deeds for their welfare. They kill, steal, rob or give false evidence at court for their wellbeing. Even those who kill their parents do so to achieve their own ends. For example, prince Ajatasattu killed his father to become king. Misguided by his teacher Devadatta, he had concluded that he would be able to enjoy life as a king for a longer period if he could do away with his father and take his place. For his great evil of patricide and the murder of a sotapanna at that, he was seized with remorse and anxiety that caused him physical suffering as well. Later on, he was killed by his son and reborn in hell where he is now suffering terribly for his misdeed.

In the time of Kakusandha Buddha the Mara called Susi did his utmost to harm the Buddha and the Sangha. Failing to achieve his object, he possessed a man and stoned to death the chief disciple Arahat behind the Buddha. For this horrible crime he instantly landed in Avici hell, the lowest of the thirty-one worlds of living beings. As a Mara he had lorded it over others but in Avici he lay prostrate under the heels of the guardians of hell. He had hoped to rejoice over the fulfilment of his evil desire, but now he had to suffer for his evil kamma. This is true of evil-doers all over the world.

It is the hope for happiness also that forms the mainspring of other two types of action, viz., punnabhisankhara and anenjabhisankhara. Anenjabhisankhara means the four arupajhana-kusaladhammas. Anenja means equanimity or self-possession. A loud noise nearby may upset the equanimity (samapatti) of a yogi who is absorbed in rupa jhana. But arupa jhana is invulnerable to such distractions. Arupa jhana is of four kinds according as it relates to (1) sphere of unbounded space (akasanancayatana jhana), sphere of nothingness (akincannayatana jhana) and (4) sphere of neither perception-nor-non-perception (nevasannanasannayatana jhana). These four jhanas are the sankharas that lead to the four arupa worlds. Apunnabhisankhara leads to the four lower worlds and punnabhisankhara leads to human, deva and rupa-Brahma worlds.

People do these three kinds of kammas or sankharas for their welfare and as a result there arises vinnana or consciousness. With vinnana there also come into being nama-rupa, salayatana, phassa, etc., of the new existence.

Sankhara Causes Vinnana

Because of avijja there is sankhara which in turn causes vinnana. As a result of good or bad kammas in the previous life there arises the stream of consciousness beginning with rebirth consciousness in the new life. Evil deeds may, for example, lead to the four lower worlds. After that there arises the stream of vinnana called bhavanga-citta which functions ceaselessly when the six kinds of vithi consciousness do not occur at the moment of seeing, hearing, smelling, eating, touching and thinking. In other words, bhavanga is the kind of subconsciousness that we have when we are asleep. We die with this subconsciousness and it is then called cuticitta. So the rebirth-consciousness, the subconsciousness and the cuti or death-consciousness represent the mind which results from the kamma of previous life.

The five kinds of consciousness associated with the five unpleasant sense-objects such as unpleasant eye-consciousness, ear-consciousness, etc., are due to unwholesome kamma as are (1) the consciousness that is focused on these five sense-objects and (2) the inquiring (santirana) consciousness. There are altogether seven types of consciousness that stem from bad kamma (apunnabhisankhara). As for anenjabhisankhara, because of the four arupakusala-dhammas there arises the resulting arupa-consciousness in the four immaterial worlds in the form of rebirth-consciousness in the beginning, the bhavanga citta in the middle, and the cuticitta as the end of existence.

Similarly, because of the five rupakusala-dhamma there arise five rupa vipakacittas in rupa-brahma worlds. Then there are eight mahavipakacittas corresponding to eight good kammas in the sensual sphere. They form the rebirth, bhavanga and cuticittas in the human world and six deva-worlds. They also register pleasant sense-objects (tadarammana) after seven impulse-moments (javana) that occur on seeing, hearing, etc. Also due to good consciousness associated with five pleasant sense-objects, the registering consciousness, the joyful, inquiring consciousness and the nonchalant, inquiring consciousness. Hence, the resulting (vipaka) consciousness is of thirty-two kinds, viz., four arupavipaka, five rupavipaka, seven akusala vipaka and sixteen kusala vipaka in sensual sphere. All these thirty-two vipaka are resultants of sankhara.

How Sankhara Leads To New Vinnana

It is very important, but hard to understand how sankhara gives rise to rebirth-consciousness. Ledi Sayadaw points out that this part of the teaching on paticcasamuppada leaves much room for misunderstanding. It is necessary to understand the extinction of the last consciousness (cuticitta) together with all nama-rupa as well as the immediate arising of the rebirth-consciousness together with the new nama-rupa as a result of good or bad kammas in the case of living beings who are not yet free from defilements. Lack of this understanding usually leads to the belief in transmigration of souls (sassataditthi) or the belief in annihilation after death (ucchedaditthi) which is held by modern materialists.

The belief in annihilation is due to ignorance of the relation between cause and effect after death. It is easy to see how avijja leads to sankhara and how the sense-bases (ayatana), contact, sensation, craving, etc., form links in the chain of causation for these are evident in the facts of life. But the emergence of new existence following death is not apparent and, hence, the belief that there is nothing after death.

Learned people who think on the basis of faith usually accept the teaching that sankhara gives rise to rebirth consciousness. But it does not lend itself to purely rational and empirical approach and today it is being challenged by the materialistic view of life. The way rebirth takes place is crystal clear to the yogi who has practised vipassana. He finds that the units of consciousness arise and pass away ceaselessly, that they appear and disappear one after another rapidly. This is what he discovers by experience, not what he learns from his teachers. Of course he does not know so much in the beginning. He discovers the fact only when he attains sammasana and udayabbaya insights. The general idea of death and rebirth mental units dawns on him with the development of paccayapariggaha insights but, it is sammasana and udayabbaya insights that leave no doubt about rebirth. On the basis of his insight, he realizes that death means the disappearance of the last unit of consciousness and that rebirth means the arising of the first unit of consciousness in the manner of the vanishing and arising of consciousness-units that he notes in the practice of vipassana.

Those who do not have vipassana insight miss the point. They believe in a permanent ego and identify it with the mind. It is rejected by those who have a good knowledge of Abhidhamma but, it lingers in some people because of attachment to it in their previous lives. Even the contemplating yogi who is not yet intellectually mature sometimes feels tempted to accept it.

Sassata And Uccheda

To the ordinary people who are wedded to the ego-belief, death means the extinction of individual entity or its displacement to another abode or existence. This is a misconception called ucchedaditthi if it is the belief in annihilation, or sassataditthi if it is belief in the transfer of the soul to another body or abode. Some believe that consciousness develops spontaneously with the growth and maturation of the body (ahetukaditthi).

Some have misconceptions about samsara or nama-rupa process. They regard the body as the temporary abode of the life principle that passes on from one abode to another. The disintegration of the physical body is undeniable, but some people pin their faith to the resurrection of the body in due course of time and so they treat the dead body with respect. These views confirm the Ledi Sayadaw's statement that the causal links between sankhara and vinnana lends itself to misinterpretation.

Ordinary Buddhists are not wholly free from these misconceptions but, because of their belief in the Buddhist doctrine of anatta, they do not harbour the illusions so blindly as to harm their vipassana practice. So even without a thorough knowledge about the nature of death, rebirth and nama-rupa, they can enlighten themselves through contemplation.

For example, shortly after the parinibbana of the Buddha, the thera Channa practised vipassana but made little progress because of his ego-belief. Then as he followed Ananda's discourse on Paticcasamuppada, he contemplated, overcame his illusion and attained Arahatship. Again, in the time of the Buddha, bhikkhu Yamaka believed that the Arahat was annihilated after his parinibbana. Sariputta summoned and preached to him. While following the sermon, Yamaka contemplated, and achieved liberation. So those who have faith in the Buddha need not be disheartened. If they practised vipassana zealously and whole-heartedly, they will become enlightened.

Because of their ignorance and doubts about the nature of death and conception or leaning to uccheda belief, some people ask whether there is a future life after death. The question by itself presupposes atta or soul or life-force in a living being. Materialism rejects the idea of soul but the ego-illusion is implicit in its differentiation of the living from the dead. The question of those who accept the ego explicitly or by implication are hard to answer from the Buddhist point of view. If we say that there is future life, they will conclude that we support the ego-belief. But Buddhism does not categorically deny the future life. Hence, the Buddha's refusal to answer this question. Moreover, it is hard to produce evidence for ordinary people. Psychic persons may be able to point out the hell or the deva-worlds but sceptics will dismiss such exhibition as black magic or chicanery. So the Buddha did not answer the question directly, but said that there is continuum of nama-rupa process in the wake of death without the extinction of defilements.

The problem of future life does not admit any intellectual approach. It is to be settled only through certain Buddhist practices. These practices enable the yogi to acquire psychic powers by virtue of which he can see the dead, the good men who have attained the deva-worlds, as well as the evil persons who are suffering in the nether worlds. What he sees is as clear as what an observer who occupies a position directly opposite two houses sees - persons passing from one house to the other. Among the many devas, animals, etc., of the higher and lower realms, he (the yogi) can easily find the person whom he wants to see.

It is possible for the yogis to attain jhana and psychic powers. There is no teaching which rules out this possibility. Some practising yogis have in fact had paranormal contact with the other world (paraloka). But paranormal gifts are hard to come by. Their emergence depends on intense concentration and so the easier way is to practise vipassana. The problem of life becomes fairly clear when the development of paccaya-pariggaha insight makes the yogi well aware of the nature of death and conception. It becomes clearer when he attains sammasana, udayabbaya and bhanga insights for then he sees clearly how the consciousness units arise and pass away ceaselessly one after another and how death means the passing away of the last unit to be followed by conception or the arising of the first consciousness-unit in a new existence. But this insight is still vulnerable and it is only when the yogi attains at least the sotapatti stage that he becomes wholly free of all doubts about future life. The trouble is that people wish to inquire about it instead of practising vipassana. Some seek the verdict of Western scientists and philosophers while others accept the teaching of those who are reputed to be Arahats with psychic powers.

But, the best thing is to seek the answer through vipassana practice instead of relying on other people.

At the stage of udayabbaya insight the yogi can clearly see how in the wake of the consciousness-unit that has passed away, there follows a new unit attached to a sense-object. On the basis of this experience he realizes how the new existence begins with consciousness-unit that arises, conditioned by attachment to an object at the moment of dying in a previous life.

Before death the stream of consciousness depends on the physical body and is continuous with one unit following the other uninterruptedly. After death, the body disintegrates and the stream of consciousness shifts to the physical process in another abode. This may be likened to the continuous appearance of light in an electric bulb through the ceaseless generation of electricity. When the bulb is burnt up, the light goes out but the potential electric energy keeps on coming. Light reappears when the old bulb is replaced with a new one. Here, the bulb, energy and light are all changing physical processes and we should be mindful of their impermanent character.

The commentary cites the analogies of echo, flame, impression of a seal and reflection in the mirror. Echo is reflection or repetition of a sound produced by the impact of sound waves on walls, woods, etc. But it does not mean the transfer of the original sound to a distant place although we cannot deny the causal relation between the sound and the echo either. When you look at a mirror your face is reflected on it, but you must not confuse the reflection with your face although it is causally related to the latter. A lamp, which is burning, may be used to light up another lamp. The flame of the new lamp is obviously not the flame of. the old lamp since the latter is still burning but, neither is it causally unrelated to the flame of the old lamp. Lastly, the seal leaves an impression that is like its face, but it is not the face and it cannot occur in the absence of the seal either.

These analogies help to throw some light on the nature of rebirth process. When a person is dying, his kamma, the signs and visions related to it and visions of the future life appear. After his death, there arises the rebirth consciousness conditioned by one of these visions at the last moment of the previous existence. So rebirth does not mean the passage of the last unit of consciousness to another life but, since it is conditioned by the visions on death-bed, it is rooted in avijja, sankhara, etc., that form the links in the chain of causation leading to the visions of the dying person.

Thus, rebirth consciousness is not the consciousness of the dying person but it is causally related to the previous life. Two consecutive units of consciousness are separate but, given the stream of consciousness, we speak of the same individual for the whole day, the whole year or the whole lifetime. Likewise, we speak of the last consciousness on death-bed together with rebirth consciousness as representing a single person. A man's attainment of deva or any other world is to be understood in the same sense. It does not mean the transfer of nama-rupa as a whole. We speak of a man or a person only because the rebirth concerns the stream of causally related mental units.

So it is ucchedaditthi to believe that a person has nothing to do with a previous life since every person is annihilated on death. Most Buddhists are free from this belief. As the two consecutive lives are causally related, we speak of one person in conventional terms.

But we must guard ourselves against the sassata view that rebirth means the transfer of the ego to a new abode.

The yogi who has mature vipassana insight does not harbour the two beliefs because he is fully aware of the rising and passing away of mental units in the present life and their causal relations. This awareness leaves no room for the illusions of personal immortality or annihilation. The nature of consciousness is evident even to those who think objectively. Joy may be followed by dejection and vice versa or, a serene mind may give way to irritation and vice versa. These changing states of consciousness clearly shows its heterogeneous nature. Moreover, mental states may be associated through similarity, as for example, the intention to do a certain thing at night may occur again in the morning. The mental states do not differ, but are causally related to one another. Those who understand this relation between two consecutive states of consciousness can see that the same relation holds between the two mental elements that are separated only by death.

Death-Bed Visions

Consciousness in the new existence is of two kinds, viz., rebirth consciousness and the consciousness that occurs during the whole life. There are altogether l9 kinds of rebirth consciousness, one in the lower worlds, nine in the sensual worlds of human beings and devas, five in rupa-brahma world and four in arupa-brahma worlds. As for the others that occur during the rest of life, they number thirty-two as resultant mental states (vipaka-vinnana). These enumerations will be intelligible only to those who have studied Abhidhamma.

To a dying person, there appears the flashbacks of what he has done in life (kamma), the surrounding conditions associated with his kammic acts (kammanimitta) and the visions of his future life (gatinimitta). Kamma may assume the form of a flashback about the past or the hallucination about the present. A fisherman on his death-bed may talk as if he were catching fish or a man who has given much alms may think in his last hours that he is doing dana. Many years ago, I led a group of pilgrims from Shwebo to visit pagodas in Mandalay and Rangoon. An old man in the group died shortly after our return to Shwebo. He died muttering the words that were reminiscent of his experience during the pilgrimage.

The dying man also has visions of the environment in which kammic deeds were done such as robes, monasteries, bhikkhus, Buddha images, etc., in connection with his acts of dana or weapons, places, victims in case of the murder he has committed.

Then he sees visions of what he will find in his afterlife. For example, he will see hell-fire, hell-guards, etc., if he is bound to land in hell; devas, mansions, etc., if he is to pass on to deva-worlds and so forth. Once a dying brahmin was told by his friends that the vision of the flames which he saw indicated the brahma-world. He believed them and died only to find himself in hell. False beliefs are indeed dangerous. It is said that some people tell their dying friends to visualize their acts of killing a cow for dana, believing that such acts are beneficial.

The Story Of Mahadhammika Upasaka

In the time of the Buddha, there were in Savatthi city five hundred upasakas each with 500 followers. They all practised the dhamma. The eldest of them, Mahadhammika, the head of all upasakas had seven sons and seven daughters who also lived up to the teaching of the Buddha. As he grew old, he became sick and weak. He invited the bhikkhus to his house and while attending their recitation of the dhamma, he saw the celestial chariot arriving to take him to the deva-world. He said to the devas, "Please wait."

The bhikkhus stopped reciting as they thought that the dying man had told them to do so. His sons and daughters cried, believing that he was babbling for fear of death. After the bhikkhus' departure, he came round, told the people around him to throw a garland of flowers up into the air. They did as they were told and lo! the garland remained hanging in the air. The upasaka said that the garland indicated the position of the chariot from Susita heaven, and after advising his daughters and sons to do good deeds like him for rebirth in the deva-world, he died and landed in Susita. This is how the vision of deva-world appears to the good man on his death-bed. A layman in Moulmein said that just before he died he saw a very good pucca building. This, too, may be a vision of the deva-world. Some dying persons who are to be reborn as human beings have visions of their would-be parents, residence and so forth. A Sayadaw in Moulmein was killed by robbers. Three years later a child from Mergui came to Moulmein and identified by name the Sayadaws with whom he said he had lived together in his previous life. He said that the robbers stabbed him when they did not get the money, that he ran away to the jetty where he got into a boat, reached Mergui and dwelt in the home of his parents. The flight, journey by boat, etc., were perhaps visions of the Sayadaw's afterlife.

Flashbacks of kammic acts and visions of a future life occur even in cases of instant death. According to the commentary, they occur even when a fly on a bar of iron is crushed to pieces with a hammer. Today, there arc nuclear weapons that can reduce a big city to ashes in a moment. From the Buddhist point of view, these weapons have appeared because of the evil kamma of their potential victims. Those who are killed by these bombs also see the flashbacks and visions. This may sound incredible to those who do not know the mechanism of the mind thoroughly but, it presents no difficulty to the yogi who contemplates the nama-rupa in action. For it is said in the scriptures that units of consciousness arise and pass away by the billions in the twinkling of an eye. The yogi who has attained udayabbaya insight knows empirically that hundreds of mental units arise and dissolve in a moment. So he has no doubt about the possibility of consciousness centering or flashbacks and visions in those who meet violent and instant death.

Consciousness is always focused on objects. We often recall what we have done and think of the deva-world or the human society. If a man who has done good deeds dies with these thoughts, he will be reborn as a deva or a human being. The objects of these thoughts on death-bed are called gatinimitta, visions of objects associated with kamma are called kammanimitta.

References to these death-bed phenomena are to be found not only in the commentaries, but also in the Pali pitaka. In the Balapandita and other suttas, the Buddha speaks of the death-bed memories of good or bad deeds and likens them to the shadows of a mountain dominating the plains in the evening. It is impossible to remove them. Once I saw a dying woman who showed great fear as if she were face to face with an enemy who was out to treat her cruelly. She was speechless and her relatives tried to comfort her but, it was in vain. Perhaps she was having a foretaste of her unhappy future as a result of evil kamma.

So it is necessary to do good kamma that will produce mental images of objects and persons associated with it and visions of a good afterlife at the moment of dying. If the good deed is rational, strongly motivated and one of the eight kinds of good deeds in sensual sphere, the resultant consciousness is one of the four kinds of rational vinnana. Rebirth is then associated with amoha (non-ignorance) and as such it takes place with three root-conditions (hetu) viz., amoha, adosa (non-aggressiveness) and alobha (non-craving). A person reborn with these innate tendencies can attain jhana and psychic powers if he practises samatha and can attain the holy path and Nibbana if he devotes himself to vipassana. Good acts that are motivated by the desire for Nibbana lead to such good rebirth and finally to the path, and Nibbana through contemplation or hearing a sermon.

If the motivation is weak or if it is a good, but unenlightened deed, that is, a good deed divorced from the belief in kamma, the result is one of the four kinds of unenlightened (moha-vipaka) consciousness. The rebirth is then devoid of amoha (non-ignorance), there being only the other root-conditions, viz., alobha and adosa. It is termed //dvehetupatisandhika//. A man reborn in this way cannot attain jhanas or the Path as he lacks the innate intelligence for it. If the good deed is unenlightened and half-hearted, the result will be good rebirth consciousness without any good predispositions. The person concerned is likely to have defective eyes, ears, etc.

So when you do a good deed you should do it with zeal and with Nibbana as your objective. If you set your heart on Nibbana, the good deed will lead you to it and the zeal with which you do it will ensure rebirth with good predispositions. It is not necessary to pray for such noble rebirth because you are assured of it if you do good deeds intelligently and zealously. But, if you lack zeal in doing good, yours will be a rebirth with only alobha and adosa.

Some people say that dana and sila mean good kamma-formations (punnabhisankhara) which, being rooted in ignorance, lead to rebirth and samsaric suffering. This is a mistaken view that stems from ignorance. If the practice of dana and sila is motivated by the desire for Nibbana, it will ensure the noblest rebirth and lead to the supreme goal. It was due to dana and sila that Sariputta and other disciples of the Buddha finally attained Nibbana. The same may be said of paccekabuddhas.

The bodhisatta, too, attained supreme enlightenment in the same way by praying that his good deeds contribute to the attainment of omniscience (sabbannutanana). Here rebirth with three good predispositions, viz., amoha, adosa and alobha involved in the genesis of Buddhahood is of two kinds, viz., consciousness associated with joy (somanassa) and consciousness associated with equanimity (upekkha). Again each of these two vinnanas is of two kinds, viz., asankharika (spontaneous) and sasankharika (non-spontaneous). The bodhisatta's rebirth consciousness was powerful, zealous asankharika.

According to ancient commentaries, it was somanassa consciousness. For the bodhisatta wanted very much to promote the welfare of all living beings, he had infinite metta (good-will or loving-kindness) for them. A strong-willed metta is usually coupled with somanassa and, hence, the bodhisatta's rebirth consciousness was tinged with joy.

But, Mahasiva thera suggested upekkha as its (bodhisatta's rebirth) concomitant. In his view, the bodhisatta's mind was firm and profound, thereby making equanimity rather than joy the characteristic of his rebirth consciousness. In any event, this rebirth-vinnana had its origin in his good deed that was motivated by the desire for supreme enlightenment. Thus, although the enlightened good kamma-formations (sankhara) lead to rebirth, it does not prolong samsaric existence; on the contrary it contributes to liberation from the life-cycle.

Consciousness of any kind, whether it be rebirth consciousness or otherwise, is a matter of very short duration. It has only three points of time, viz., arising (//upada//), being (//thi//) and passing away (//bhanga//). According to the commentaries, these mental units arise and pass away by the millions in the twinkling of an eye. The moment of each unit is so short that it does not last even the millionth part of a second.

After the cessation of rebirth-consciousness there follows the stream of subconsciousness (bhavanga) which flows ceaselessly unless it is interrupted by a different kind of consciousness called vithi, that is the kind of mental activity involved in seeing, hearing, and so forth. The stream of bhavanga lasts as long as there is life, its mainspring being sankhara as in the case of rebirth consciousness. Its duration, too, depends mainly on sankhara or kamma. It may be like a stone thrown into the air. The stone will travel a long way if the hand which throws it is strong, but it will not go very far if the hand is weak. The force of kamma may also be compared to the initial velocity of the bullet, rocket, and so forth. Death means the dissolution of the consciousness that is born of the same kammic force. Hence the initial rebirth consciousness, the stream of subconsciousness and the last dying (cuti) consciousness of an existence comprise the mental life that is wholly rooted in past kamma.

Also due the kamma or sankhara are the five kinds of vithi consciousness, viz., those involved in seeing, hearing, smelling, eating and touching as well as the mental unit that focuses on the sense-objects, the consciousness that reflects (santirana-citta) and the consciousness that registers (tadarammana-citta) the objects of impulse-moments (javana). These have their roots in original kamma that leads to rebirth or other kinds of kamma.

The Abhidhamma pitaka attributes all kinds of consciousness, including wholesome, unwholesome and non-kammic or kiriya-citta to sankhara. This view is reasonable since the kiriya-cittas, too, evolve from the bhavanga-citta that is rooted in sankhara. But the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada specifically describes the three rounds (vatta) of defilements, kamma, kammic results and their cause-and-effect relationships. So it ascribes to sankhara only the 32 types of mundane resultant cittas that stem from kamma vatta. Of these 32 cittas we have described 19 cittas that comprise rebirth, subconscious state and death of the other cittas. Of the other cittas some are wholesome according to the sankhara.

In the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada, the first two factors i.e., avijja and sankhara are described as the causes in the past life, vinnana, nama-rupa, phassa and vedana as the consequences in the present life; tanha, upadana and bhava as the causes in the present life and jati and jaramarana (old age and death) as the consequences that will occur in the future life.

Vinnana And Nama-Rupa

The doctrine says that vinnana gives rise to nama-rupa. This means that with the arising of rebirth consciousness there also arise mind and body. Rebirth consciousness is invariably coupled with feeling (vedana), perception (sanna), contact (phassa), volition (cetana), mental advertance (manasikara) and other elements of mind relating to the objects of death-bed visions of a person. Every citta is bound up with these mental elements. The high (tihetu) rebirth of some Brahmas, devas and human beings also, involve the three noble predispositions of alobha, adosa and amoha; some devas and human beings have only alobha and adosa while the earth-bound devas and human beings with defective organs are totally devoid of noble predispositions. Their rebirth is a good ahetu-birth as distinct from the evil ahetu-rebirth of the denizens of the lower worlds who are also devoid of good inborn tendencies.

Rebirth may assume one of the three forms: rebirth in the mother's womb, rebirth generated in putridity (samsedaja) and rebirth as sudden and spontaneous emergence of the full-fledged physical body (opapatika). Rebirth in the mother's womb is of two kinds, viz., viviparous as in the case of human beings and quadrupeds emerging from the wombs with umbilical cords and oviparous as in the case of birds coming out of eggs. These living beings may differ in origin as they do in size and gestation or incubation period. We will leave it at that and now go on with the human rebirth as described in the commentaries.

With the arising of rebirth consciousness there occur simultaneously three kammaja-rupakalapa or thirty rupas. These are rupas that have their origin in kamma, viz., ten kaya-rupas, ten bhava-rupas and ten vatthu-rupas. The nine rupas, to wit, the solid, fluid, heat, motion, colour, smell, taste, nutriment and life together with the kayapasada (body-essence), rupa form the ten kaya-rupas; bhava-rupa and the solid, etc., form the group of ten bhava-rupas. Bhava-rupa means two germinal rupas, one of manhood and the other for womanhood. With the maturation of these rupas the mental and physical characteristics of man and woman become differentiated, as is evident in the case of those who have undergone sex changes.

In the time of the Buddha Soreyya, the son of a merchant, instantly turned into a woman for having wronged Mahakaccayana thera. All masculine features disappeared and gave way to those of the fair sex. He even gave birth to two children. It was only when he begged for forgiveness that he again became a man. Later on, he joined the holy order and died as an Arahat. It is somewhat like the case of a man who develops canine mentality after having been bitten by a rabid dog. The sex freak who is neither a male nor a female has no bhava-rupa. He has only ten kaya-rupas and ten vatthu-rupas. Vatthu-rupas are the physical bases of rebirth, subconscious, death and other cittas. So at the moment of conception there is already the physical basis for rebirth consciousness. The three kalapas or thirty rupas form the kalala which, according to ancient Buddhist books, mark the beginning of life.

This embryonic rupa has the size of a little drop of butter-oil scum on a fine woollen thread. It is so small that it is invisible to the naked eye. It does not exist by itself. We should assume that it arises from the fusion of the semen (sukka) and blood (sanita) of the parents. If we reject this view, it will be hard to explain the child's resemblance to his parents in physical appearance. It is also said in the suttas that the physical body is the product of the four primary elements and the parent's semen. Moreover, the pitaka specifies three conditions necessary for conception, viz., the parents' intercourse, the menstrual discharge of the mother and the presence of something qualified to become an embryo. Thus, it is clear that according to the scriptures, the embryonic kalala has its origin in the fusion of parents' semen and blood.

The semen and blood dissociated from the parents are utuja (temperature-based) rupa but it is quite possible for utuja-rupa to assimilate kammaja (kamma-based) rupa. Modern doctors excise a lump of unhealthy tissue from the human body and replace it with healthy tissue. The graft is utuja-rupa when cut out from the body but, as it becomes one whole with the natural tissues there appears kayapasada or kammaja-rupa. There are also cases of transplanting a goat's intestine or a human eye in place of diseased organs. No doubt these transplants develop kammaja-rupas in the form of kayapasada and cakkhupasada. Likewise, we should assume that the three kammajakalapas are fused with utuja-rupas of semen and blood detached from parents.

According to Western biologists, it is the fusion of the mother's ovum and the father's spermatoza that gradually develops and becomes a child. The original embryo is so small that it cannot be seen with the naked eye. The findings of these scientists fairly agree with what the Buddhist books say about conception. Without the help of microscope or other instruments, but purely by means of his intellect, the Buddha knew how life begins with three kalapas or thirty rupas as kalala on the basis of parents' semen and blood. This was the Buddha's teaching 2500 years ago and it was only during the last 300 years that Western scientists discovered the facts about conception after long investigation with microscopes. Their discoveries bear testimony to the Buddha's infinite intelligence. However, they are as yet unable to reveal the genesis of thirty rupas probably because the extremely subtle kammaja-rupas defy microscopic investigation.

Thus, the cetasika and kammaja-rupa are the nama-rupas born of rebirth consciousness. The kammaja-rupas are renewed at every thought-moment as are the utuja-rupas due to heat. From the arising of the first bhavanga-citta there also occur cittaja-rupa (consciousness-based) rupas at the moment of the arising of citta. But, cittas which make us barely aware of seeing, etc., cannot cause rupa. So cittaja-rupas do not arise at the moment of the arising of the bare cittas. Thus, with the arising of the rebirth citta, there develop in due course all other kinds of citta, that is, cetasikas, e.g., feeling, etc., as well as all kinds of rupa, to wit, kammaja, utuja and cittaja-rupas. After a week, the kalala becomes turbid froth (abbuda) which turns into a lump of flesh after a week. This hardens into //ghana// in another week and in the fifth week there develops //pasakha// with four knobs for hands and legs and one big knob for head.

The Buddhist books do not describe in detail the development after the fifth week, but say that after 77 days the four pasada-rupas for seeing, hearing, smelling, and tasting appear as do the ahara-rupas, the product of the nutriment in the mother's body. It is also said that the embryo has toe-nails, finger-nails, etc. The books do not go into further details as it is not necessary for the yogis to know them. Such knowledge is beneficial only to doctors.

//Upapata// Rebirth

For heavenly beings like catumaharaja and others, as soon as the rebirth-citta arises, there also arise 70 rupas or seven different kalapas, viz., cakkhu, sota, ghana, jiva, kayabhava and vatthudasaka. Kalapas of the same kind are innumerable according to the size of the deva's eyes, ears, etc. There are no dasaka-kalapas, that is, ghana, jiva, kaya and bhava in the three first jhanic abodes, the three second jhanic abodes, the three third jhanic abodes, the vehapphala and suddhavasa abodes. The three dasakarupa-kalapas (cakkhu, sota and vatthu-dasaka) and one navaka-kalapa or a total of four different kalapas or 39 rupas arise simultaneously with rebirth-citta. Of these four kalapas, jivitanavaka-kalapa takes on the nature of kayadasaka. The body of the Brahma is pervaded by jivita and nine rupas as is the deva's body by kayadasaka-kalapa. Asannasatta Brahmas have no citta from the moment of rebirth. They have only jivitanavaka-kalapa which assume Brahmanic form. Being devoid of citta and cittaja-rupa, such a Brahma knows nothing and makes no movement. He is like a wooden statue. More wonderful than these Brahmas are arupa Brahmas who having no rupa live in arupa (immaterial) worlds for thousands of world-systems through the successive renewal of mind and its elements. These accounts do not admit of scientific investigation and they concern only the Buddha and holy men with psychic powers.

The denizens of hell and the petas who are forever burning and starving cannot be conceived in wombs nor can they arise from putrid matter. Because of their evil kamma they come into being by materialization. Like the aforementioned devas they develop seven kalapas or 70 rupas simultaneously. They usually do not have defective vision, hearing, etc., since they are doomed to suffering through sense-contact with evil objects.

Sansedaja Beings

As the sansedaja beings are said to have their origin in putrid matter, they are likely to develop gradually. But, the Buddhist books refer to their full-fledged materialization if they do not have defective visions, etc. We cannot say which is true, development or materialization, as the kammaja-rupas cannot be subjected to scientific inquiry and so for the time being it is better to accept the view as stated in the scriptures. The development of kammaja and other rupas in sansedaja and upapata rebirths are generally like that in gabbhaseyyaka (womb) rebirth. The only difference is that in the case of the former beings, aharaja-rupas arise from the time they eat food or swallow their saliva.

Vithi-Cittas

Vithi-cittas differ in kind from bhavanga-cittas. Bhavanga-citta resembles rebirth-citta in respect of objects and process. It is the stream of consciousness that follows rebirth-citta, having its root in kamma. It is focused on one of the three objects viz., kamma, kammanimitta or gatinimitta of the previous existence. It is not concerned with the objects in present life. It is the kind of mental state that we have when sound asleep. But there occur certain changes when we see, hear, smell, eat, have bodily contact or think and these changes in mental phenomena are called six vithi-cittas.

Suppose the visual form is reflected on the sensitive rupa of the eye (cakkhupasada), these rupas, each lasting only 17 thought-moments, are renewed ceaselessly together with the visual objects and their mental images. A group of eye-rupas and a group of visual objects occur simultaneously. But, a rupa is not powerful at the moment of arising and so there is no contact between the eye and its object during the moment of bhavanga-citta. In other words, there is no reflection of the visual object on the eye. The bhavanga that passes away before such reflection is called atitabhavanga. Then another bhavanga-citta arises and reflection occurs. As a result, the bhavanga-citta is disrupted. Its attentiveness to its accustomed object wanes and it begins to consider the visual object. This is termed bhavangacalana or bhavanga in motion. Then another bhavanga takes its place but, it is so weak that with its cessation, the bhavanga stream is cut off. The mind becomes curious about the visual form that the eye sees. This inquiring mind is called avajjana-citta and there are five kinds of such cittas corresponding to five sense-organs. There follows the eye consciousness, and after its cessation, there arises the citta which receives and attends to the visual object.

Bhavanga is the resultant citta that stems from sankhara, as are eye-citta and the receiving citta. They are called vipaka (resultant) cittas. There are two kinds of vipaka-cittas, viz., good and bad according to good and bad sankhara. On the other hand avajjana-citta (mental advertance) is ethically neither good nor bad; it is not a vipaka-citta either. It is termed kiriya-citta which means mere action without any kammic effect, the kind of citta that is usually attributed to Arahats.

After the mind has received the visual object, it inquires about its quality, whether it is good, bad, etc., (santirana-citta). Then, there follows decision (vutthocitta), that it is good, etc. This leads to javana which means seven impulse moments flashing seven times in succession. Javana occurs very quickly. It has speed and impetus that are absent in other factors of the consciousness process. It is associated with powerful mental factors which may be good or bad such as lobha or alobha. No wonder that evil minds rush towards their objects speedily. Thus, greed makes us inclined to scramble for the desired object and seize it by force, and anger arouses in us the desire to rush and destroy its object blindly. Doubt, restlessness and ignorance, too, speedily associate themselves with their respective objects. The same may be said of good mental factors. Because of their frantic and impulsive nature, the sensual desires are also called kamajavana. After the seven impulse moments, there follow two tadarammana-citta moments. This citta is concerned with the object of javana and thus its function is to fulfil the lingering desire of its predecessor.

In the consciousness process the eye-vinnana is dependent on eye organ (cakkhu-pasada) that arises together with atitabhavanga. Other vinnanas are dependent on the heart (hadaya-vatthu) rupa that arises along with other cittas. The 14 cittas from avajjana to the second tadarammana are focused only on present objects. So these 14 cittas are vithi-cittas that differ in kind from bhavanga-cittas. In other words, they are active cittas. After the cessation of second tadarammana-citta that marks the end of the consciousness process, the mental life reverts to the subconsciousness (bhavanga) state that is something like sleep.

An analogy may throw some light on the process (vithi) of consciousness. A man is sleeping under a mango tree. A mango falls and he wakes up. Picking up the fruit, the man examines it. He smells it and knowing that it is ripe, he eats it. Then he thinks over its taste and falls asleep again. Here the bhavanga state with kamma, kamma-nimitta and gatinimitta as its objects is like the state of being asleep. Waking up with a start due to the fall of the mango may be like the rising and passing away of bhavanga-citta. Reflection after awaking is avajjana. Seeing the visual object is seeing the fruit. Santirana-citta is involved when the man examines the fruit. To conclude that it is ripe is vuttho-citta.
Javana is like eating the fruit and tadarammana is like thinking over its taste. Reverting to bhavanga state is like falling asleep again.

If the visible object is not very clear, it appears on the eye-organ after the arising of atitabhavanga twice or thrice. In case of such objects the vithi process does not last till the emergence of tadarammana but ends in javana and sinks into bhavanga state.

If the visible object is still weaker, it is reflected only after the arising of atitabhavanga from five to nine times. The vithi process does not reach javana, but ends after vuttho arises twice or thrice. The vithi that thus ends in vuttho is of great importance in the practice of vipassana. For the yogi who practises constant mindfulness does not seek or attend to defiling sense-objects. So reflection is slow, avajjana is weak, eye-consciousness is not clear, reception is not proper, inquiry is not effective and decision is indefinite. So after reflecting twice or thrice the mind relapses into bhavanga state. The object is not clear enough to defile the mind and the yogi becomes aware of anicca, dukkha and anatta of the phenomena. There is only bare awareness of seeing and the vithi process is wholly free from defilements.

The vithi process that we have outlined above for the eye equally applies to the ear, nose, tongue and body.

Manodvara Vithi

The mind vithi is of three kinds according to the javana involved, viz., kammajavana, jhanajavana and maggaphalajavana. Here, what matters is vithi with kammajavana. While the bhavanga stream is flowing, there appear mental images of the sense-objects that one has experienced or, sometimes, those which one has not experienced. Then bhavanga is disturbed and next time it is cut off. This is followed by reflection which is somewhat like vuttho (decision) in the five sense-organs. Like vuttho, reflection (avajjana) leads to javana, giving rise to agreeable or disagreeable emotions such as fear, anger, confusion, devotion, awe, pity and so forth. The impulses arising at the five sense-organs are weak and they neither lead to good or bad rebirth nor produce much other effects. But the impulses in the mind are potent enough to determine the quality of rebirth and all other kammic results. So it is necessary to guard and control these impulses. After seven impulse-moments followed by two tadarammana-moments the mind sinks into bhavanga state.

Thus, the vithi process at manodvara involves one avajjana-moment, seven javana-moments and two tadarammana-moments. In the case of dim and indistinct objects, the mind skips tadarammana, passes through javana and reverts to bhavanga. If the object is very weak, the mind does not attain even javana but has two or three avajjana-moments. This is natural if we bear in mind the way we have to focus on mind-objects in vipassana practice. The only resultant citta in this mano-vithi is tadarammana, the other two being kiriya-citta, the citta that does not stem from sankhara.

Follow-Up Vithi

The mind vithi may involve the review of the sense-objects after rising from bhavanga state in the wake of the vithi rooted in the respective sense-organs. Up to this vithi the mind has, as its object, only rupa in its ultimate sense (paramattharupa). It is not concerned with the conventional modes of usage, e.g. man, woman, etc. So at this moment the yogi is not misled by appearances for he is aware of ultimate reality. He should try to contemplate immediately after seeing, etc. We, therefore, stress the importance of immediate and present moment as the yogi's focus of attention.

If after this kind of manovithi the yogi is unmindful, there arises another manovithi in connection with the visual object, etc. Then the sense-object becomes a specific object of attention in terms of conventional shape and form. This vithi is open to strong but unwholesome impulses. It gives way to another manovithi where the attention is focused on conventional designations such as man, woman, etc., thereby making it more susceptible to stronger evil impulses.

In the face of a strange, unfamiliar object, the vithi-process involves three stages, viz., seeing, reflection and cognizance of the form and substance in conventional terms. The vithi stops short of cognizing the conventional names. In the case of vithi that arises in connection with a conventional term, it involves hearing, reflection and cognizance of the conventional term, and awareness of the relevant form and substance.

From Vinnana Arises Nama-Rupa

Because of rebirth consciousness there arise mental phenomena associated with it such as feeling, remembering, perception, reflection, etc., together with the three kalapas or thirty rupas. After the cessation of rebirth consciousness, cetasikas (mental factors) arise in the wake of every activity of vinnana and so do rupas conditioned by citta, kamma, utu (heat) and ahara (nutriment).

There is no doubt, about the close connection between citta and cetasika. When citta is active we feel, we remember, we think, there arise greed, anger, faith and so forth. Equally obvious are the physical phenomena that stem from cittas. We stand, sit, go or do anything that we wish to do. According to the commentary, this obvious fact gives ground for our knowledge that the rebirth consciousness at the moment of conception leads to three kalapas or thirty rupas. In fact, the arising of rebirth consciousness and rupa at the moment of conception takes place in a split second and as such it is invisible even to the divine eye. The divine eye may see what happens shortly before death and after rebirth, but it is only the Buddha's omniscience that sees death-citta and rebirth-citta directly. But, from what we know about the cause of physical phenomena, we can infer the arising of rupa from the rebirth-citta at the moment of conception.

Some physical phenomena have their origin not in citta but in kamma, utu (heat) and material food, but without citta they will have no life. A corpse is lifeless although it is composed of utuja-rupas. It is because of the contribution of citta that the rupas based on kamma, utu and nutriment exist and form a continuous stream of life. Once death supervenes, cutting off the stream of consciousness, the cetasikas and living rupas cease to exist. Hence, the teaching that nama-rupa is conditioned of vinnana.

Because of sankhara (good or bad kamma) there is an uninterrupted flow of vinnana in the new existence. Coupled with every citta is nama-rupa which arises ceaselessly. The duration of nama-rupa depends on citta. If citta lasts an hour, so does nama-rupa. If the stream of citta, flows for 100 years, we say that the life of nama-rupa is 100 years. In short, we should understand that life is only the continuum of ceaseless causal relationships between nama-rupa and vinnana.

To sum up what we have said so far. Avijja causes sankhara. Because of the ignorance of the four noble truths people exert effort (sankhara) to be happy. They think that they will be happy if they get what they want. But, the objects of their desire are impermanent and so they lead to suffering. Not knowing the truth about dukkha, they think, speak and do things for their welfare in the present life and hereafter. These kammic actions lead to rebirth consciousness in the lower or the higher worlds. Beginning with this rebirth consciousness, there is a stream of citta that flows continuously until death, and the nature of this mental life is determined by kamma. The physical body too is conditioned by kamma as well as by citta, utu (heat) and nutriment.

The physical phenomena as conditioned by citta are obvious for all our bodily and verbal actions such as moving, speaking, etc., are rooted in citta. The yogi has to practise mindfulness on the basis of these cittajarupas and it is important to know them empirically for himself. Hence, the Buddha's teaching in Mahasatipatthana sutta: "The bhikkhu knows that he walks when he walks and that he stands when he stands." According to the commentary, if we know experientially the dependence of cittajarupa on citta, we can know by inference the contribution of vinnana to kammajarupa, cittajarupa, utujarupa and aharajarupa. Hence, the teaching of Paticcasamuppada: Conditioned by vinnana, there arises nama-rupa.

The yogi cannot know empirically the rebirth-citta or for that matter any other citta in the past in its ultimate sense. All that he can know is the reality about consciousness as it is functioning at present and he can know this only if he is always mindful. If he focuses on present vinnana, he comes to know nama-rupa fairly well. For, if he notes "seeing, seeing" and knows the eye-consciousness, he also knows the nama-rupa that is bound up with it. Here, by eye-consciousness we mean not only the eye-vinnana but the whole mental process of seeing (cakkhudvara-vithi). The yogi notes it as a whole and not by piecemeal. Moreover, the vithi appears to the yogi as a single unit of consciousness. This way of introspection is in accord with Patisambhidamagga which says: "The citta that focuses on rupa arises and passes away. The yogi then contemplates the dissolution of the citta that has watched the dissolution of the rupa."

In other words, when the rupa is manifest, the citta watches it; but since the citta has attained bhanga insight, it too sees impermanence in the rupa and dissolves away. The dissolving vipassana citta itself becomes the object of contemplation. This vipassana citta is not a simple citta; it is composed of at least avajjana and seven impulse moments. But, these eight cittas cannot be watched one by one; the whole vithi is to be the object of attention.

Here, the eye-consciousness means the whole mental process (vithi) of seeing and it includes good or bad kamma and impulses. So attentiveness to it leads to awareness of vedana (feeling), sanna (perception), phassa (contact), manasikara (reflection), cetana (volition) and so forth. But, cetana is more apparent in connection with thinking. Thus, it comes into full play when at night we think of what we have to do the next day. It urges and agitates us and its function is unmistakable. The yogi who constantly watches his nama-rupa is aware of cetana in action whenever he speaks or moves any part of his body. For example, if while practising mindfulness, you feel an itch you wish to get rid of, you note the desire and you feel as if you are being urged to remove the itch. It is cetana which urges you to do and so it is manifest in your everyday action, speech and thinking.

In short, if you know the eye-consciousness through contemplation, you know the nama (mental) khandhas that are born of it as well as the rupas of the whole body that form its basis. This is in accordance with the teaching: "From vinnana there arises nama-rupa."

The same may be said of the consciousness in connection with hearing, etc., awareness of vinnana means awareness of all the nama-rupa that are bound up with it. The awareness of contact is based on pleasant and unpleasant sensations when these sensations are manifest; it is based on contact when motion and rigidity are manifest; when you note the desire to bend the arm, you know the volition (cetana) behind it.

When you contemplate the vinnana which thinks, you know the nama-rupa that is coupled with it. When you find yourself committing something to memory, you know sanna; when you note your intention to do or speak something, you become aware of cetana; when you note your desire for something, you know that it is your lobha. When you note your irritation, you know that it is dosa; you know moha when you note your view of a being in terms of a permanent and happy individual. You know alobha when you know the lack of desire in you. Moreover, your intention to do or say something is followed by bodily behaviour or verbal expression and so through contemplation, you become aware of vinnana-citta as the cause of rupas in the body.

Vinnana and nama-rupa are interdependent. Just as vinnana gives rise to nama-rupa, so also nama-rupa leads to vinnana. Nama-rupa contributes to vinnana by way of simultaneous arising (sahajatapaccaya) foundation (nissayapaccaya) and so forth. It is only through the contribution of all cetasikas collectively or the body (rupa) as the physical basis, etc., that vinnana comes into being.

Mahapadana sutta tells us how the bodhisatta reflected on dependent origination just before he attained enlightenment. He found nama-rupa, six bases of mental activity, impression, feeling, craving, clinging and becoming (bhava) to be the links in the chain of causation leading to old age and death. Then it occurs to him that nama-rupa is conditioned by vinnana and vice-versa. The sutta ascribes this statement about the correlation between vinnana and nama-rupa to Vipassi bodhisatta, but we should understand that it is a fact discovered by all bodhisattas before they attained supreme enlightenment.

Although vinnana and nama-rupa are interdependent, the former is the determining factor and, hence, it is described as the cause of nama-rupa. In fact, when vinnana arises because of sankhara, its concomitant cetasikas as well as the rupas resulting from sankhara come into being at the same time. So vinnanas and nama-rupas arise together from the moment of rebirth. Moreover, vinnana and nama-rupa include the six ayatana (the six bases or sense-organs) as well as phassa (sense-contact) and vedana (feeling). But since vinnana is the cause of nama-rupa and nama-rupa the cause of salayatana and so forth, the Buddha says: Vinnana paccaya nama-rupa, etc., to distinguish between cause and effect. Likewise a verse in the Dhammapada describes the mind (mano or vinnana) as leading the cetasikas: manopubbangama dhamma; if a person acts or speaks with an evil mind, suffering follows him as a result, just as the wheels of a cart follow the ox which draws it.

In point of fact citta and cetasikas arise together but, because of its predominant role, citta is described as leading the latter. If a man's mind is evil, he does evil deeds, utters evil words and harbours evil thoughts. These three kinds of kammas are sankharas born of ignorance. They become potential for evil kammic effect. Every deed, speech or thought is accompanied by seven impulse-moments that flash forth several times. If the first impulse-moments are favourable, the kamma is productive in the present life; otherwise it becomes sterile. If one of the seven impulse-moments is favourable, it gives rise to kammic images or visions of afterlife on death-bed and produces kammic effect in the next life. Otherwise, it is sterile. As for the other five impulse-moments, they produce kammic effect from the third existence till the last existence (the existence when Nibbana is to be attained) under favourable circumstances. It becomes sterile only after the attainment of Nibbana.

Before the attainment of Nibbana its potential remains intact for innumerable lifetimes, ready to bear fruit when circumstances permit. It bears fruit in terms of suffering, both mental and physical, in the lower worlds. If by virtue of good kamma the person is reborn in the human world, he will be dogged by evil kamma and suffer regardless of his station in life.

The Story Of Cakkhupala Thera

The Dhammapada verse that we have referred to was uttered by the Buddha in connection with the story of Cakkhupala thera. The thera was a physician in one of his previous lives. He cured a blind woman and restored her sight. The woman had promised to serve him as his slave should she recover her sight. But, she did not keep her promise and lied that she was worse off than before. Seeing her trick, the physician gave her an eye-lotion that destroyed her eyes completely. For his evil kamma the man suffered in many lives and in his last existence he became Cakkhupala thera. He practised meditation as instructed by the Buddha with 60 other monks at a forest retreat. He never lay down while meditating and soon he had an eye-infection. He refused to lie down to apply the eye-lotion and so the doctor gave up the attempt to cure him. Reminding himself of certain death, the thera redoubled his effort and at midnight he became blind and attained Arahatship.

To an ordinary observer, the thera's blindness may appear to be the price that he had to pay for the over-exertion of his energy. But the main cause was the evil deed he had committed in his previous life as a doctor. Even if he had not practised meditation, he might have become blind somehow or other. But the attainment of Arahatship was an immense benefit that accrued to him from his overzealous and strenuous exertion.

There are two lessons that we can learn from the story of Cakkhupala thera. As an energetic monk, he continued to practise vipassana after he became an Arahat. As he paced on the ground while meditating, the insects that lay in his path were trampled to death. When the matter was brought to the notice of the Buddha, the Lord said that since the thera had no intention to kill the insects, he was free from any moral responsibility for their destruction.

So we should note that causing death without cetana or volition is not a kammic act and that the body of an Arahat has weight if he has no psychic power or, if despite his iddhi he walks without exercising it to control his weight. Some Buddhists have doubt about their moral purity when they cook vegetables or drink water that harbours microbes. They should, of course, remove living beings that they can see. But, they need not have qualms about the destruction of creatures that may be accidentally connected with their actions. Some Jains are said to feel guilty over the death of insects that rush against a burning lamp. Theirs is an extreme view and cetana (volition) as the keystone of moral problems in the context of kammic law is borne out by Moggaliputtatissa thera's verdict in his reply to king Asoka.

The Thera's Verdict

When king Asoka supported the Buddhadhamma lavishly, some heretics joined the Buddhist sangha for material benefits. The true bhikkhus refused to have anything to do with the bogus monks and for seven years the uposatha service fell into abeyance at the Asokarama monastery in Pataliputta city. So king Asoka sent a minister to see to it that the bhikkhus perform the uposatha service. But the bhikkhus refused to comply with the king's wish. They said that the uposatha service was to be performed only by the assembly of true bhikkhus. If there happened to be a morally impure monk in the assembly, he had to be admonished and penalized for any infraction of Vinaya rules. The Sangha held the service only when there was reason to believe in the purity of every member; and they did not meet for the service together with non-bhikkhus. If they did so, they would be guilty of a serious offence.

The minister regarded this reply as defiance of the king's order and put the good monks to the sword. The king's younger brother, Tissa thera, escaped death because the minister recognized him just in time. On hearing the news the king was greatly shocked and he asked Moggaliputtatissa thera whether he was kammically responsible for the death of the bhikkhus. The thera asked him whether he had intended to have the monks killed. When the king replied that he had no such intention, the thera said that he was free from kammic responsibility. The thera gave this verdict on the basis of the Buddha's saying, "Cetana (volitional act) is that which I call kamma." He also cited Titthira jataka in which the bodhisatta, who was then a rishi, emphasized the primacy of cetana in the operation of the kammic law.

The story of Cakkhupala thera also shows that an Arahat who has no psychic power has body-weight like ordinary people. This is evident in the death of insects that were trampled by the thera. During the last 15 years Burma has produced some holy men who are reputed to be Arahats. Some women have reportedly tested their holiness by having flowers on their hands trodden by the holy men's feet. It is said that the flowers were not crushed and the hands not hurt. But an Arahat who has no psychic power or who does not use it cannot avoid crushing a thing if he treads directly on it.

The reliable test of arahatship is to see whether or not a person who claims or is credited with it has craving, love of pleasure, attachment, anger, depression, fear, anxiety, restlessness, the tendency to speak ill of others, the habit of laughing loudly, irreverence to the memory of the Buddha and so forth. If he has these moral weaknesses, he is certainly not free from greed, anger and ignorance. If a thorough inquiry does not reveal any sign of these weaknesses, we may assume that he possesses the admirable attributes of an Arahat or at least the qualities of a holy man who is close to arahatship.

Pure Thought And Happiness

Just as an evil thought is followed by suffering, so also pure thought is followed by happiness. Those who think, speak and act with pure thought build up good kamma sankhara. Good kammas invariably lead to happiness in the present life and hereafter. This was emphasized by the Buddha in the story of Matthakundali.

Matthakundali was the son of a brahmin who never gave alms. When he became severely ill, his father left him to his fate as he did not want to spend any money for his cure. He removed his dying son outside the house to prevent those who came to inquire after the patient from seeing his possessions.

On that very day at dawn the Buddha saw the dying boy with his divine eye. He knew how it would benefit many people spiritually if the boy saw him before his death. So, while going round for the collection of food with other bhikkhus, the Lord passed by the brahmin's house. At the sight of the Lord, the boy was filled with deep devotion and shortly after the Lord's departure he died and landed in Tavatimsa heaven.

Reviewing his past, he saw how devotion to the Buddha had led him to the deva-world and he saw too, his father mourning at the cemetery. As he wished to teach his father a lesson, he came to the cemetery and posing as a boy who resembled Matthakundali, he started crying. Questioned by the old brahmin, he said that he needed a pair of wheels for his golden chariot and that he wanted the wheels to be made of the sun and the moon. The brahmin pointed out the futility of his desire but the boy said that the objects of his desire were visible whereas the brahmin was mourning for his dead son who could be seen no longer. He asked who was more foolish, he or the brahmin. This brought the brahmin to his senses. The deva revealed his identity and told him how adoration of the Buddha on his death-bed had benefited him. He urged his father to seek refuge in the Buddha, the Dhamma and the Sangha and observe the five precepts.

The brahmin invited the Buddha and the bhikkhus to morning meal at his house. There were present believers and non-believers alike at the feast. After the feast, the brahmin asked the Lord whether there was anybody who had never heard the Dhamma, never offered food to the bhikkhus and never kept sabbath and yet attained the deva-world through his devotion to the Buddha. The Lord replied that there were many such people. At that moment Matthakundali deva arrived with his mansion. He told the Lord how his devotion on his death-bed had landed him in heaven. All the people were much impressed by the power of faith in the Buddha that had so immensely benefited the young man who did not care much for deeds before his death. Then the Buddha uttered the verse: "Manopubbangama dhamma..." that we have explained before.

According to the Dhammapada commentary, the brahmin and the deva attained the first stage on the holy path after hearing the verse. It is worthy of note that it was just the mere thought about the Buddha that led to the young man's rebirth in the deva-world. He did not seem to have any hope or desire for Nibbana. His rebirth as a deva was indeed devoid of intelligence but hearing a verse made him a sotapanna. These two verses from Dhammapada echo the Paticcasamuppada teaching that vinnana is conditioned by sankhara. For the verses say that happiness or misery arises from kamma sankhara, and in fact sukha or dukkha occurs together with vinnana. Again, vinnana implies the associated mental factors and its physical basis viz., rupa. Hence, the teaching that vinnana conditions nama-rupa.

Nama-Rupa and Salayatana

Nama-rupa conditions salayatana. This is very profound and hard to understand. Here nama-rupa means the three cetasika khandhas while rupa refers to the four primary elements, the six physical rupas, jivita (life), rupa and nutriment (ahara-rupa).

Nama-rupa leads to salayatana or five physical sense-organs, viz., eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and consciousness. These ayatanas are the doors (avara) that lead to vithi process. In the immaterial world every citta-unit throughout the whole life is born of associated cetasika, but for ordinary persons this will remain bookish knowledge as it is to be understood only by Ariyas in the immaterial world.

Further, in any existence like human life that has both nama and rupa, every vipaka-citta that arises from the time of conception is also due to associated cetasika. Vipaka-citta means the kind of citta that barely sees, barely hears, etc., the pleasant or unpleasant objects. Here, the seeing citta cannot arise by itself for it pre-supposes manasikara that considers the visual object, phassa that contacts the object and cetana that strives to see it. The seeing citta can arise only when these concomitant cetasikas arise, collectively at the same time. This is conascence condition called sahajata accaya in Pali. Thus, a load that can be raised only by four men working together will not move up if the team leader tries to move it alone. Likewise, although vinnana is the mainspring of mental life it counts for little by itself. It can function only together with other mental factors.

Moreover, these associate cetasikas contribute to the five physical ayatanas, viz., eye, ear, etc., by conascence at the moment of rebirth. Of course at the time of conception there is only kaya or rupa. But in other kinds of rebirth that do not involve the mother's womb, there may be all the five ayatanas at the beginning. The conditioning of the ayatanas by vinnana and cetasikas at the moment of conception is hard to understand but we have to accept on the authority of the Buddha. At other times, vipaka as well as the non-vipaka cittas help to maintain the ayatanas. This is understandable since it is impossible for matter to exist without mind.

Rupa And Ayatana

The rebirth consciousness arises on the basis of the heart (hadaya-vatthu). The mind ayatana has its basis in the eye, ear, etc. Thought and consciousness too have heart as their physical basis. All the secondary physical phenomena such as the eye, visual object, etc., depend on the four primary elements, viz., pathavi, apo (solidity, motion), etc. The five pasada-rupa, i.e. eye, ear, etc., are rooted in the primary elements and their kamma-based rupas in jivita (life-force) rupa. The five ayatana-rupas too depend on nutriment (ahara-rupa).

To sum up, citta-vinnana is conditioned by at least three mental factors, viz., manasikara, phassa and cetana. Sometimes there arise repeatedly greed, craving, anger, illusion, pride, doubt, restlessness, worry, envy, ill-will, anxiety, fear and so forth. All these mental states arise because of unwholesome cetasikas. Similarly, there often occur faith, piety, moral sense, non-attachment, compassion, sympathetic joy (mudita), appreciation of the law of kamma, reflection on anicca, dukkha, anatta, and so forth. These mental states arise from wholesome cetasikas. Thus, the yogi realizes the dependence of vinnana on wholesome or unwholesome cetasikas, the eye-consciousness on the eye. So it is clear that the manayatana is dependent on nama-rupa.

The mind is also vital to the existence of living matter. So the five ayatanas that produce sense-organs are dependent on the mind. The sensitive sense-organs (pasada) cannot exist without their gross physical bases just as the reflecting mirror cannot exist without the gross matter of glass. So the eye presupposes the gross matter of solidity (pathavi), cohesion (apo), heat (tejo) and tenseness (vayo); in short, the ability to see depends on the gross physical body of the eye. The same may be said of the ability to hear, the ability to smell, etc. Further, we can maintain life uninterrupted only because of life-force (jivita-rupa) and nutriment. All these facts show how the five ayatana-rupas originate with nama-rupa.

The sixth ayatana viz., manayatana comprising thought, reflection, intention, etc., depends on wholesome or unwholesome mental states such as greed, faith and mental factors such as phassa (contact) as well as on its physical bases. It arises from its root viz., bhavanga which in turn forms the basis for the mind-process (manodvara-vithi).

SUMMARY

To recapitulate: Seeing involves sensitive eye-organ and consciousness. The eye-organ depends on consciousness, life-force, nutriment and physical base. The eye-consciousness depends on the eye-organ and the three mental factors of reflection, striving and contact. In short, the eye as well as the eye-consciousness depend on nama-rupa and the same may be said of other five ayatanas.

A thorough knowledge of the origin of the six ayatanas on the basis of nama-rupa is possible only for bodhisattas. Among the Buddha's disciples, even Sariputta and Moggallana did not seem to understand it comprehensively before they attained sotapanna. For, it is said that the ascetic Upatissa who was later to become Sariputta thera attained the first stage on the holy path on hearing the verse uttered by Assaji thera.

The verse, ascribed to the Buddha, says that all phenomena (dhammas) are the effects of certain other phenomena which are the causes. The Buddha points out these causes and there is the cessation of the effects together with the causes. Upatissa and his friend Kolita are said to have attained sotapanna after hearing this verse, but they could not have reflected deeply on the dependent origination in such a short space of time. One may fairly understand the Buddha's teaching on the doctrine according to one's intellectual capacity but, it is impossible to grasp all of it fully.

The commentary explains the verse in the context of the four noble truths, "All the dhammas is the effect" refers to the truth of suffering as having its origin in craving. The cause in the gatha means craving as the cause of dukkha. So the gatha epitomises the truth about suffering and its cause.

In those days there were many views about the soul (atta) viz., that the soul was immortal and passed onto another abode after death, that it was annihilated after the final dissolution of the body, that it was created by God, that it was infinite and so forth. The gatha recognizes only the existence of the cause and effect and denied the immortality or annihilation of the soul and this teaching afforded the two ascetics a special insight into the nature of life.

Visuddhimagga Mahatika identifies this gatha with the teaching on Paticcasamuppada. It refers to a sutta in Samyuttanikaya which says, "If this cause arises, then that effect follows. If this cause ceases, then that effect is also ended. So avijja causes sankhara, etc., so there is suffering. With the cessation of avijja there follows the cessation of sankhara and so on until suffering becomes extinct." According to the Mahatika, the substance of this teaching is implicit in the aforementioned gatha, in regard to both the arising (anuloma) and cessation (patiloma) of dukkha.

Mahayana pitaka describes this gatha as a sutta that sums up the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada. Any writing of the gatha is said to be beneficial if it is enshrined in a cetiya (pagoda). No wonder that many of these writings are found in very ancient pagodas.

Both views in the commentary and Mahatika are plausible. For the first two noble truths imply Paticcasamuppada in respect of the arising of dukkha and its cause while the other two noble truths imply the doctrine in respect of the cessation of dukkha.

To sum up the causes and effects in the chain of causation: In the past life of a person, ignorance leads to acts, speech and thoughts and these sankharas give rise to vinnana. Then there are five effects in the present life, viz., vinnana, nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana These effects in turn become causes or in other words, they sow the seeds for future life, viz., craving, clinging and becoming (tanha, upadana and jati). As a result there are old age, death, grief and suffering in store for the future life.

Paticcasamuppada is profound and this is borne out by the Buddha's saying to Ananda. Ananda reflected on the doctrine from the beginning to the end and vice versa. To him it was very clear and it presented no difficulty. He approached the Buddha and said, "Lord, this Paticcasamuppada is indeed very profound. But, for me it seems so easy to understand." The Buddha chided him, saying, "You should not say like that, Ananda."

According to the commentary, the Buddha's words imply a compliment as well as a reproach to Ananda. The Buddha meant to say in effect, "Ananda, you are highly intelligent and so it is easy for you to understand the doctrine, but do not think that it may be equally easy for other people to understand it."

Ananda's ability to understand the doctrine was due to four factors, viz., the parami (perfections) which he had acquired in his previous lives, the instructions of his teachers, his wide knowledge and his attainment of the first stage on the holy path.

Long, long ago, Ananda was prince Sumana, the brother of Padumuttara Buddha. As a provincial governor, he subdued an uprising successfully. The king was much pleased and told him to ask for any boon he desired. The prince asked for permission to serve the Buddha for three months during the lent. The king did not wish to grant this boon and so he said evasively that it was indeed hard to know the Buddha's mind, that he could do nothing if the Lord was reluctant to go to the prince's abode.

On the advice of the bhikkhus, the prince requested a thera named Sumana to arrange for an interview with the Buddha. When he met the Buddha, he told the Lord how Sumana thera had done a thing that was beyond the power of other bhikkhus. He asked what kind of good deeds a man should do to be so intimate with the Lord. The Buddha said that he could become like Sumana by practising dana and sila. The prince requested the Lord to spend the lent in his city as he wished to do good deeds so that he might become a specially privileged thera like Sumana in the holy order of a future Buddha. Seeing that his visit there might benefit all and sundry, the Buddha said, "Sumana, the Buddha loves solitude," a saying that meant tacit acceptance of the invitation.

The prince then ordered over one hundred monasteries to be built along the route where the Buddha and the Sangha might rest comfortably at night. He bought a park and turned it into a magnificent monastery as well as other dwellings for the Buddha and numerous monks.

Then when all was ready, he sent word to his father and invited the Buddha to come to his city. The prince and his people welcomed the Buddha and his followers, and honouring them with flowers and scents, led them to the monastery. There the prince formally donated the monastery and the park to the Buddha.

After performing this act of dana the prince summoned his wives and ministers and said, "The Buddha has come here out of compassion for us. The Buddhas do not care for material welfare. They care only for the practice of the Dhamma. I wish to honour the Buddha with practice so that he may be well pleased. I will observe the ten precepts and stay at the residence of the Buddha. You must feed and serve all the Arahats every day during the rains-retreat as I have done today."

The Buddha's Emphasis On Practice

Incidentally there is a story illustrative of the importance the Buddha attached to the practice of the Dhamma. One day, the Buddha came out of the Jetavana monastery with the bhikkhus to go on tour. King Kosala, the merchant Anathapindika and other lay disciples requested the Buddha not to go on tour, but it was in vain. The merchant was unhappy because he would not be able to hear the Buddha's teaching or to make offerings to the Lord and the bhikkhus. His slave girl, Punna by name, said that she would ask the Buddha to come back. The merchant promised to free her from bondage if she could make the Buddha return to the monastery.

Then Punna followed the Buddha quickly and implored the Lord to come back. The Buddha asked her what she could do for him. She replied that she had nothing to offer, but that she would take refuge in the Buddha, the Dhamma and the Sangha and observe the five precepts if the Lord spent the lent in Savatthi city. Saying, "Sadhu - well said", the Buddha blessed her and returned to Jetavana monastery.

The news spread and the merchant set Punna free and adopted her as his daughter. She was now free to do what she liked, free to shape her own destiny. For this reason and by virtue of her parami (kammic potential) in her previous lives, she joined the holy order. She practised vipassana and when she developed insight into the impermanence of nama-rupa, the Buddha exhorted her thus: "My daughter, just as the moon is full and complete on the fifteenth day, so also you should practise vipassana to the end. When your vipassana insight is complete, you will attain the end of suffering."

After hearing this exhortation, Punna theri attained the last stage on the holy path and became an Arahat. The Buddha had of course foreseen Punna's destiny and it was his concern for her spiritual welfare that prompted him to cancel the projected tour and turn back in response to her appeal. This is an example of the high regard for the practice of dhamma that Gotama Buddha had in common with other Buddhas.

So the prince observed the ten precepts and dwelt at the residence of the Buddha. He spent his time near Sumana thera, the special attendant and watched him serve the needs of the Buddha in a very intimate manner. Shortly before the end of the lent, he returned home, donated lavishly to the Sangha and, in his prayer to the Buddha, he affirmed his desire to become an intimate attendant of a future Buddha. The Buddha blessed him and the prince developed paramis tor innumerable lifetimes. The jatakas refer to many lives which he devoted to perfecting himself in collaboration with bodhisatta Gotama. Sometimes the bodhisatta was king and he was the king's minister or the bodhisatta was a human being and he happened to be a deva or Sakka. But their positions were often reversed. In some jatakas they were brothers.

Thus they developed paramis close together through their long samsaric journey and in his last existence Ananda was the nephew of king Suddhodana. After spending the first lent near Benares, the Buddha went to Rajagaha and from there he proceeded to Kapilavatthu at the invitation of his father. When he left his native place, Ananda and some Sakyan princes followed the Buddha and joined the holy order.

The parami (perfections) which Ananda had acquired through many lifetimes made it possible for him to understand easily Paticcasamuppada that has baffled so many people. Moreover, Ananda had received instructions from teachers. He had not only lived with his teachers but also learned and inquired about the meanings of the doctrine and memorized them. This kind of learning helped him to understand Paticcasamuppada. In fact, he attained the first stage of the holy path after having heard the sermon of the noted preacher, Punna thera. Ananda paid a high tribute to Punna for his illuminating discourse. The substance of the discourse is as follows.

"Self-conceit arises from attachment to the body, feeling, memory, kamma-formations (sankhara) and consciousness. It cannot arise without the five khandhas any more than the reflection of a man's face can appear in the absence of a mirror. The body, feeling, etc., are not permanent. Since they are not permanent, you should contemplate and realize that none of the five khandhas, whether in the past, present or future, internal or external, gross or subtle, good or bad, distant or near is yours, is you or is your ego."

"The well-informed disciple of the Buddha who thus contemplates and realizes truth is disillusioned with the five khandhas. He becomes detached and free. He knows that his mind is free, that he has done what is to be done, that he has nothing else to do for his freedom."

This was what Punna preached to Ananda. As sotapanna, Ananda realized the cause-and-effect relationships of Paticcasamuppada. He had this insight when he practised vipassana. He knew that illusion, attachment, obsession, effort, rebirth, consciousness, etc., form the links in the chain of causation. Here, illusion or ignorance is avijja, attachment is tanha, obsession is upadana, effort is kamma. So when it is said that kamma leads to rebirth, we should understand that rebirth is also conditioned by upadana, etc. So the past involves avijja, tanha, upadana and kamma as causes. The yogi who realizes this through contemplation of nama-rupa is free from all doubts which we cannot remove merely through learning and reflection.

As the best-informed disciple of the Buddha, Ananda also gained recognition of the Teacher in matters of knowledge. He usually accompanied the Buddha on preaching tour and memorized all the discourses. He could repeat a discourse verbatim after he had once heard it. As for the Buddha's talks given in his absence, he learnt from others and memorized them. The dhammas which he had thus learnt by heart are said to number eighty four thousand.

Ananda was well-known for his retentive memory and the commentary on Mahavedalla sutta says that he could memorize hundreds of gathas in a short space of time. What with his wide knowledge of the teachings of the Buddha and his chief disciples, it is no wonder that the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada did not present much difficulty to him. Even today, given a thorough knowledge of the Pitaka, a man may understand the cause-and-effect relationship in the doctrine.

The Abstruseness Of The Doctrine

Nevertheless, the doctrine is abstruse in terms of effects, causes, teaching, and empirical knowledge (pativedha).

In the first place it is very hard to understand sankhara, etc., as the results of avijja and other causes for most people mistake the suffering of nama-rupa for happiness. This is avijja and they do not know it as an illusion. They believe that it is their ego-entities that think, they do not know sankhara (effort) as an effect of avijja, but they think it is they themselves who make the effort. So it is hard to see good or bad deeds (kamma) as the effects of ignorance. More difficult to understand is the causal relation between this sankhara of the previous life and the rebirth consciousness of the present existence. Likewise, it is hard to understand that nama-rupa, salayatana, etc., are conditioned by vinnana, etc.

Equally incomprehensible are the causes involved in dependent origination for people believe that they shape their own destiny. Some say that they are created by God or Brahma while some insist that everything happens by chance. Most of them do not see avijja, etc., as the mainspring of their existence.

Again, some teachings of the Buddha on the doctrine begin with avijja and end with death. Some are set forth in reverse order. Some begin with the middle links in the chain and proceed to the beginning or to the end. These various versions of the doctrine add to the difficulty of understanding it.

In order to gain an insight into the doctrine, one has to practise vipassana and realize the facts of causal relationship empirically. This vipassana approach to the study of Paticcasamuppada is by no means easy for the method must be right and one will have to practise it steadily and thoroughly.

In spite of these difficulties, the doctrine seemed clear to Ananda because of his unusual qualifications, So the Buddha's words "Do not say like this, Ananda" may be an implicit compliment to him, but according to the commentary, the Buddha's saying may be an indirect reproach to him. It may mean in effect, "Ananda, you say that Paticcasamuppada is easy to understand. Then why did you become a sotapanna only after hearing my teaching? Why have you not attained any stage higher than the first stage on the path? You should think of your shortcomings. You are my disciple with average, limited intelligence and what you say does not agree with my words. It is a saying that should not have been uttered by a close disciple like you. I have had to develop intelligence for aeons to know this doctrine and so you should not speak lightly of it."

Thus, after chiding Ananda implicity by a few words, the Buddha stressed the profundity of Paticcasamuppada. "Profound, Ananda, is this dependent origination and profound does it appear. It is through not understanding and not penetrating this law that this world of living beings resemble a tangled ball of thread, a bird's thicket of sedge or reed, and that man does not escape from the lower states of existence, from the course of suffering, from the round of rebirths."

In other words, this law concerning the conditioning of vinnana, nama-rupa, etc., by avijja, sankhara, etc., is very profound. So people do not know that there are only cause-and-effect relationships and that there is no permanent being. They believe that a living being exists in a permanent form from the time of inception; that there is a permanent entity behind the being that develops and grows up. Some hold that this core or soul of the being has many previous lives. All these illusions are due to ignorance of the reality underlying the dependent origination.

A living being's acts, words and thoughts are clearly due to ignorance of the four noble truths and dependent origination. Undeniably, good acts bear good fruits, bad acts bear bad fruits and everyone fares according to his deeds. So ignorance leads to kammas or sankharas which in turn give rise to rebirth, consciousness, etc. This fact is clear to an intelligent person.

Because of their inability to understand dependent origination, living beings remain mired in the round of rebirths, wandering ceaselessly from one existence to another. By and large, they land in the lower worlds and pass on to the deva-realms only occasionally by virtue of their good kamma. When the good kammic effects run out, they revert to the lower worlds.

It is hard for the denizens of the lower worlds to pass on to the human or deva worlds for attainment of the higher planes of existence is possible only when a dying person has memories or visions of his good deeds and a good act is simply unthinkable among the lower forms of life. Animals kill one another and the law of the jungle prevails in their world, leaving no room for love, pity and other spiritual values. They usually die stricken with pain and fear. So a lower being is very likely to be reborn in the lower worlds.

Because of the ignorance of dependent origination a living being is unable to free himself from the round of rebirth. He is like an ox yoked to the mortar. No matter how long it goes round and round, the animal cannot leave the strictly limited area of its mobility.
Likewise, the ignorant person is mired in the life-cycle (samsara) which largely means confinement in the nether worlds and for aeons he remains subject to rebirth.

Understanding of Paticcasamuppada is as vital to spiritual liberation as the understanding of the four noble truths. In fact, the four noble truths are synonymous with the dependent origination. The object of vipassana practice is to gain insight both intellectually and empirically into these teachings, but these teachings are deep and hard to understand. Even in vipassana practice it is not easy to have clear ideas about avijja, sankhara, etc.

The Buddha reflected on Paticcasamuppada before and shortly after his attainment of supreme enlightenment. For seven days the Buddha was absorbed in the peace of liberation (vimuttisukha) and on the seventh day at night, he contemplated Paticcasamuppada in terms of conditioning (paccaya) or cause-and-effect relationship.

Having dealt with the first links in the chain of causal sequence, we will now proceed to phassa that is conditioned by salayatana. Salayatana means the six sense-organs and the six sense-objects, viz., visual form, sound, smell, taste, tactile object and mind-object. The contact between a sense organ and the corresponding sense-object is called phassa. It is an intangible phenomenon of mental life but it shows itself clearly when the object has an unmistakable impact on the mind. For example, we are shocked when we see someone being ill-treated. It makes us tremble when we see a man whose life is hanging by a thread on the top of a tree. Seeing a ghost will send the shivers, down the spine. Hearing or reading an interesting story often leaves some impressions that may remain indelible for a long time. All these show what it means when there is phassa or the impact of a sense-object on the mind of a person.

The impact is occasionally very violent and gives rise to violent emotions and outbursts of passion, anger, etc. According to the commentary on Anguttara Nikaya, in the time of the ancient Sinhalese King Dutthagamani, a young monk happened to see a girl. The girl looked at him too and both of them were so much consumed with a burning desire that they died. Again an elderly monk became insane after looking unmindfully at the queen of King Mahanaga.

In Mudulakkhana jataka, the bodhisatta was a rishi (recluse) who went to the king's palace to have his meal. He went there by air as he had psychic powers. When the rishi appeared suddenly, the queen rose to her feet in a hurry and her garment slipped. The queen's seductive pose instantly aroused the long-dormant sexual desire of the rishi. He could not eat any food. His psychic powers having vanished, he walked back to his abode and there he lay, afflicted with the fires of lust and passion.

On learning what had happened, the king offered the queen to the rishi as he was confident of the holy man's ability to recover his higher self eventually. He secretly instructed the queen to do her best for the welfare of the rishi.

Taking the queen, the rishi left the king's palace. Once outside the gate the queen told him to go back and ask the king for a house. He was offered an old house but there he had to fetch a hatchet and a basket for the disposal of excreta and filth. Again and again, he had to go and ask the king for other things that he needed. Going to and fro and doing all household chores at the bidding of the queen, the rishi was dead tired but he did not come to his senses as he was still dominated by lust and passion.

After having done everything that he was told to do, he sat down near the queen to take a rest. Then she pulled his moustache with a jerk and said, "Are you not aware of your being a samana (ascetic) whose object is to do away with passions and desires? Are you so much out of your senses?" This awakened the rishi to a sense of his blind folly and ignorance. After handing back the queen to the king, he went to the Himalayan forest, practised vipassana and recovered his psychic power. On his death he attained the Brahma world.

The moral is that even a person of spiritual calibre like a bodhisatta could not escape the fires of defilements. The rishi might have casually seen the queen before but the impact was not violent enough to jolt his emotional life. It was the clear, vivid impressions of the queen's physical appearance that harassed and engulfed him with the fires of lust and passion for many days.

In Ummadanti jataka, King Sivi became almost crazy after seeing Ummadanti, the wife of his commander-in-chief. The woman was so famous for her beauty that the king sent his brahmin advisers to see whether she had the qualities of a noble lady. But at the sight of the woman they were so much bewitched by her beauty that they lost self-control and made a mess of the feast given by their host. Disgusted by their disorderly behaviour, Ummadanti had them hustled out of the house. Thereupon, the disgruntled brahmins reported to the king that she was not qualified to be a queen. The king lost interest in her and she became the wife of the supreme commander. She was, however, determined to make things even with the king and so when he went round the city during a festival she showed her beauty and charms to the best of her ability.

The king was half beside himself with infatuation for the woman. Unable to sleep, he raved about her and gave vent to his blind passion in a gatha which says that if he were granted a boon by the king of devas, he would ask for an opportunity to sleep one or two nights with Ummadanti. The impact of a sense-object depends largely on the nature of the impression conveyed by the object. If the impression is vague and dim, it produces only mild feeling and craving, but much vedana, tanha, etc., follow in the wake of clear and vivid impressions.

The impact may also lead to outburst of temper. We show anger at the sight of an offensive object, and we fear a frightful object. Unpleasant words are irritating to us. Pride wells up in us when we think of something that boosts our ego. We hold wrong views when we toy with the idea of soul or with a teaching that makes a farce of kamma and its fruit. Objects of envy make us envious, and objects which we wish to possess exclusively make us miserly. These are instances of phassa that fuel unwholesome kammas.

Wholesome kammas too arise from phassa. Objects of devotion arouse faith, those whom we should forgive or tolerate help to foster forbearance, and contemplation of the Buddha and the Arahats make us mindful, kindly and so forth. So Patisambhidamagga says: "Conditioned by phassa, there arise fifty cetasikas (mental factors)."

It attributes feeling, perception and kamma-formations to phassa.

We see because of phassa and this phassa occurs because of the eye, the visual object and the visual consciousness. The Buddha's teaching makes a distinction between the visual consciousness and the visual object. Ordinary people tend to confuse the former with the latter, but the Buddha stated clearly that visual consciousness arises from the eye and the visual object, and that phassa means the conjunction of the eye, the visual object and the visual consciousness.

This is the impact of seeing for which the three ayatanas, viz., the eye, etc., form the three necessary and sufficient conditions. The nature of impact is realized empirically by the yogi who practises mindfulness. The yogi notes, "seeing, seeing" at every moment of seeing and as concentration develops, he comes to realize that seeing is not uncaused, that it is not made or created by a person; that it is a psycho-physical phenomenon, having the eye and the visual object as its cause and the visual consciousness as its effect.

The impact on the sense-organ leads to feelings that may be pleasant, unpleasant or indifferent according to the nature of the sense-object. If the object is beautiful, there arises pleasant feeling; if it is ugly, we have unpleasant feeling. If the object is neither ugly nor lovely, the feeling is indifferent. This feeling (upekkha vedana) does not give rise to any comment, whether favourable or unfavourable; indeed it is not even recognized as a feeling but it is accepted by the ego. In fact, these three kinds of feelings have nothing to do with the ego or self but are aspects of the mental process stemming from sense-contact.

To understand Paticcasamuppada means to be free from scepticism and illusion. Since this freedom is the essential attribute of the yogi at the first stage on the holy path, it is important to understand the doctrine. Ignorance of it tends to cause doubts about the Buddha, the Dhamma and so forth. There are eight kinds of doubts.

(1) Doubt about the Buddha. This leads the sceptic to raise questions such as "Was the Buddha really a being who was free from all defilements? Or was he an ordinary man who commanded the blind faith of his followers?"

(2) Doubt about the Teaching. "Are there the Path and Nibbana that really ensure the extinction of craving, hatred and ignorance?"

(3) Doubt about the Sangha. "Are there Ariyas, the Noble ones who are really free from defilements? Sotapannas who, having overcome illusion and doubt, will never be reborn in the lower worlds? Sakadagamis, who do not have much sensual desire and anger? Anagamis, who are wholly free from sensual desire and anger? Or the Arahats who have freed themselves from all defilements?"

(4) Doubt about the practice. "Is the practice of morality or contemplation beneficial and helpful to the higher spiritual progress?"

(5) Doubt about the past. "Did I exist in the past? Why and how did I exist in the past? What kind of person was I in my previous life? Did I originate with the moss or did I come into being spontaneously?"

(6) Doubt about the future. "Will I exist after my death? What kind of person will I become in my next life?"

(7) Doubt about both the past and the future. According to the sub-commentaries, this doubt refers to the present life that is between the past and the future of a man's life-cycle. This interpretation agrees with the Pali text of Sutta pitaka which says: "Now there arises doubt as regards one's self in the present." Such doubt may raise questions such as, "Am I really myself? Does the ego exist or does it not exist? If the ego exists, what kind of being is it? Is it big or small? Why or how does the ego exist? Was it created or did it come into being spontaneously? From where did the ego come and where will it go after the final dissolution of the body?"

These questions show that there are five doubts about the past, five doubts about the future and six doubts about the present. The yogi overcomes all these doubts when he is free from all illusions about the self or ego (kankhavitarana-visuddhi).

(8) The last subject that raises much doubt is the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada that emphasizes the primacy of cause-and-effect relationship in the world of living beings. Is effort really due to ignorance of the true dhamma? Is rebirth really conditioned by kamma? Is it a fact that bad kamma is harmful and good kamma beneficial to a future life? Is there really a cause for every phenomenon? Is everything the outcome of the combination of atoms and electrons by chance? These doubts centre on causal links, e.g. avijja, sankhara, etc., and resultant links, e.g. vinnana, rebirth, etc., in the chain of causal sequence as enunciated in the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada.

These doubts give rise to wrong views in the long run. The false beliefs that conflict with the dependent origination are rooted in these doubts. Speculations on the nature of life that are above one's intellectual level produce doubts in the beginning but eventually turn the sceptic into one who clings to illusions. Such scepticism and false views are due to ignorance of Paticcasamuppada. One who understands the teaching clearly harbours no doubt, let alone illusions.

In the final analysis, a living being is a compound of causes and effects as are non-living things like the earth, the sun, tree, etc. The law of causation governs the universe leaving no room for creation or spontaneous occurrence. Modern science provides overwhelming evidence for the absolute dependence of the non-living material world on the interplay of cause and effect. It tends to bear out the truth of the Buddha's teaching about the conditionality of everything in the world, whether it be life, mind or matter.

The Buddha laid emphasis on the conditioned nature of man's internal life. The teaching leaves out of account the external world of inanimate matter because the material world has no life-cycle and is not subject to rebirth and suffering. What matters most from the Buddhist point of view is the living being. If left to itself, the nama-rupa comprising the living being passes through innumerable lives and, for the most part, the individual suffers on the lower planes of existence, but if we understand the nama-rupa process and act wisely, we can make progress gradually on the way to liberation. Even if we are not yet liberated, we can achieve a better life and fare fairly well in the round of rebirths. A clear understanding of Paticcasamuppada is vital for it ensures complete extinction of defilements.

We have described ignorance as the cause of effort (sankhara) and kammic effort as the cause of rebirth. It is necessary to say something more about the origin of rebirth consciousness. In a sutta of Anguttara Nikaya, the Buddha likens the wholesome or unwholesome volitional (cetana) action (kamma) to a thriving field, consciousness (vinnana) to seeds, and craving (tanha) to water for irrigating the field. The planting of trees requires fields and nurseries. Likewise, rebirth consciousness presupposes arable land in the form of kamma, kamma gives rise to the potential for rebirth and although the former states of consciousness disappear, the rebirth potential remains bound up with the psyche. Like a budding plant, it does not materialize as yet but it is bound to become actual under favourable circumstances, just as a man who has committed a crime is a potential prisoner or a worker who has distinguished himself in a state factory is a potential winner of government reward for good service.

Furthermore, rebirth depends on wholesome or unwholesome consciousness no less than does a plant depend on seeds for its germination. The good or bad vinnanas arise and pass away, but they touch off a ceaseless flow of similar states of consciousness.

These states are the outcome of former kammic vinnanas just like the transformation of a snake's skin. The most vital of them is the death-bed consciousness centering on one's kamma or objects associated with it (kammanimitta) or visions of future life (gatinimitta). This encounter of a dying person with signs and visions is called upatthanasamangita which means the foreshadowing of the future life as conditioned by sankhara-kamma. In a sense, it marks the transition from dying consciousness to rebirth consciousness somewhat similar to the development of a plant from a seed to a sprout.

A seed needs water to turn into a plant. Without water or at least moisture from the air, it will remain sterile. In the same way, although kamma forms the basis for a future life, there is no rebirth in the absence of craving (tanha). So in the case of Arahats, although there are conditions for rebirth in terms of vinnana and the kamma that they have done as ordinary persons, the rebirth consciousness cannot arise because of the extinction of craving.

Tanha is inherent in non-Arahats and it is most powerful in common people. It makes the sense-objects pleasant, attractive and desirable. It creates the illusion of pleasure, happiness and hope. It likes what is good and makes happiness and prosperity the main object of life for mankind. Tanha motivates the kammic consciousness which leads to other mental states. On the approach of death, these mental states give rise to signs and visions. The dying person delights in pleasant visions and he becomes lively and cheerful. This shows that his kammic seeds are beginning to sprout. He does not welcome unpleasant visions, but still these visions have something to do with himself and this self-attachment, too, leads to the germination of the kammic seed.

Therefore in the case of common people rebirth is conditioned by three factors, viz., kamma (action), cittavinnana that is linked to kammic consciousness and tanha. Kamma as the fertile soil for rebirth is evident in death-bed visions and signs, the germination of the seed is shown by the dying person's interest in these signs and visions and one's self. So after death there arises rebirth consciousness as conditioned by the mental state at the last moment of the previous life.

Rebirth consciousness brings into play nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa, vedana and their interrelations that concern the whole life. So in a sense, we may regard it as the seed of present existence. It is inextricably bound up with nama-rupa. All nama-rupa, whether in or out of the body, is suffering as they are subject to constant arising and passing away, but ignorance makes us blind to dukkha, creates illusion and attachment and keeps us engaged in the pursuit of sense-objects. This preoccupation leads to the renewal of existence.

With rebirth consciousness as the basis of a new existence, there arise the physical body as its basis and the concomitant mental factors such as phassa, vedana, etc. When rebirth consciousness ceases, there follow other mental states in succession which may touch off good or bad kammas such as greed, anger, contentment, forbearance, etc. These mental states in turn lead to physical actions such as sitting, standing, and so forth.

Hence the Buddha's teaching: "Cittena niyate loko..." a Pali verse which may be freely translated as: "The mind (thought, will, etc.) leads the world. It draws the world wherever it pleases. The whole world follows the mind." Here the world (//loka//) refers to the world of living beings. The mind leads the living beings rightfully or wrongfully. The mind of a good man who develops faith, morality, etc., will lead him to do good deeds. It will make him hear the dhamma and practise vipassana. It will land him on the higher planes of existence or bring him to the goal of Nibbana. On the other hand, the mind of an evil man will lead him to seek sensual objects and do evil deeds. After death, it takes him to the lower worlds and makes him subject to much suffering.

This verse shows that all nama-rupas are dominated by the mind. It accords with the teaching of Paticcasamuppada that because of vinnana there arise psycho-physical phenomena such as phassa, etc. We have already given an account of phassa arising from the eye and now a few words about the phassa of hearing. As in the case of seeing, hearing also involves three factors, viz., the ear, the sound and the ear-consciousness.

Hearing is impossible without the ear-organ and the sound. Scientists say that sound-waves travel at the rate of 1,100 feet per second. This is the natural speed of sound; the radio broadcast can carry it all over the world in a moment. When it comes into contact with the ear it is like the reflection in the mirror and the hearing occurs.

But, it is a mistake to believe that it is the original owner of the ear who hears. The sensitive organs of the ear are in a ceaseless flux, the rupas involved are forever arising and passing away. They are like the ever-changing waters of a flowing stream. It is the contact of sound-waves with the stream of rupas that sparks the ear-consciousness. The consciousness occurs only for an instant and vanishes. This is followed by the citta that continues to focus on the sound, inquire it and decide. Each of these cittas occurs for a moment and vanishes. Then, there flash forth successively with much speed seven impulse-moments, after which there occur two thought-moments that focus on the sound.

Such is then the consciousness-process involved in hearing. Whenever we hear a sound, the ear-vinnana is renewed on the basis of the ear and the sound. So the yogi who practises mindfulness realizes that hearing is conditioned by the ear and the sound, that there is no person or being who hears. In fact the yogi is more aware of the causal relation in hearing than in seeing.

Thus, hearing means the conjunction of the ear, the sound and the ear-consciousness. The impact of the sound is phassa and it is quite clear to the meditating yogi. Some are so sensitive that when they hear a harsh sound, they feel like being attacked by a tremendous onrush of it towards the ear. Some may even be startled by the dropping of a leaf. The impact is evident when out of a variety of sounds that reach our ears we select and attend to the sound that we wish to hear. As for loud, harsh and piercing sounds, we cannot avoid hearing them. We may not look at an unpleasant object, but the sound cannot be so ignored.

We have pleasant or unpleasant feelings according to the pleasant or unpleasant sounds that we hear. Songs and sweet voices are welcome to the ear while harsh sounds and abusive words are odious to us. When we hear ordinary sounds, we have feelings that are neither pleasant nor unpleasant. In such cases we may not even be aware of our feeling, the upekkhavedana that is so subtle that it escapes our notice.

True, the Abhidhamma books deny that we have pleasant or unpleasant feeling when we have consciousness in connection with the eye, the ear, the nose or the tongue and describe it only as upekkhavedana. But for the contemplating yogi, it is not advisable to focus on eye-consciousness, etc. He should contemplate the whole process of consciousness (vithi) which involves pleasant feeling along with some thought-moments, e.g. santirana, javana and tadarammana and unpleasant feelings along with javana or impulse-moments.

Moreover, even though the eye-consciousness, etc., may be upekkhavedana at the moment of their arising, they will be accompanied by unpleasant feeling if they happen to be the effects of unwholesome kamma as is evident in our contact with unpleasant sense-objects that cause painful emotions such as fear. Loud noise may make us deaf, evil smells may cause headache while unwholesome food may do harm to our health. Likewise, the upekkhavedana that is conditioned by the four kinds of pleasant sense-objects implies pleasant feelings. We enjoy seeing beautiful objects, hearing pleasant sounds, etc. This shows the pleasant character of upekkhavedana because of its being the product of wholesome kammas. In this connection the sub-commentary on Visuddhimagga says:

"'The upekkhavedana which, being the full-blown product of low kamma, is painful and as such, it is of low character." In other words, the upekkhavedana that is based on unwholesome kamma may be indifferent and neutral but, since it stems from evil kamma, it is low just like the flower that blooms in a heap of excreta. Moreover, although it is not as worse as dukkhavedana, it is unbearable and so it is low. In fact, the kammic effect of a bad deed is never good or free from pain and suffering.

Then, elaborating the function of vedana in the chain of causation, the sub-commentary says: "The upekkhavedana that results from unwholesome kamma should be described as dukkha since it is undesirable. The upekkhavedana that has its origin in wholesome kamma should be described as sukha since it is desirable." It is evident in the pleasant feeling that we have when we hear a pleasant sound. Sweet words are welcome to the ear while harsh words jar on it. The nature of some feelings caused by ordinary sounds is not obvious and such feelings are termed upekkhavedana.

The three kinds of vedana due to hearing is distinctly familiar to the ever-mindful yogi. He knows that the dukkha or sukhavedana arises from contact between the sound and the ear; that there is no soul or atta to be affected by it; that the vedana arises and vanishes instantly, and that everything is impermanent. As his concentration develops, he becomes aware of the ceaseless arising and vanishing of all the three kinds of vedana.

Like hearing, smelling is also conditioned. The smelling consciousness arises from the contact between the nose and the odour. It is impossible to smell without the odour or the sensitive part of the nose (ghanapasada). People without sensitive nose are rare. Once I met a monk who said that he had practically no scent even when he smelled a handkerchief moistened with perfume. Even when the nose is sensitive you cannot have any scent if you plug it or if there is nothing to be scented. The scent is detected only when it is wafted in the air and comes into contact with the sensitive part of the nose. Ordinary people labour under the delusion that it is the person or the living being who smells. In fact it is the contact between the airborne scent and the rupas of the nose in continual flux that causes smelling consciousness. As in the case of seeing and hearing this ghana-vinnana is a process that involves advertence (avajjana), impulsion (javana), investigation and other stages. The crux of the matter is of course the smelling consciousness which ceaselessly arises and vanishes, depending on the nose and the smell.

We are all familiar with the offensive smell of something rotten or the fragrance of a flower. Common people believe that it is they who smell whereas the yogi knows that it is only a phenomenon arising from the conjunction of the nose, the odour and consciousness and he comes to realize the ceaseless influx and impermanence of everything. That is the difference between the yogi and the common people.

Vedana (feeling) may be agreeable or disagreeable according to the nature of impact (phassa). Scents of flowers and perfumes cause pleasant feelings whereas the stench of the decomposing matter is offensive to the nose. The ordinary smells cause neither pleasant nor unpleasant feelings and this is upekkhavedana; a feeling that is so subtle that we do not notice it. The yogi notes the smelling consciousness and becomes aware of the three kinds of feelings, and their arising and dissolution

Consciousness in eating (jivha-vinnana) arises from contact between the tongue and the food. Without the tongue or the flavour of food, there can be no consciousness of taste but, if the tongue is so unhealthy as to lack sensitivity, the food will be tasteless. Common people believe that it is a living being who eats and enjoys the flavour. In fact, the rupas forming the sensitive part of the tongue are forever in a flux and it is from the contact of these rupas and the flavour of food that there arises consciousness which involves the thought-moments that we have mentioned before. The events at this stage are so rapid that they seem to form a single thought moment. This consciousness (jivha-vinnana) changes at every moment, depending on the tongue and the flavour. It is this citta that knows sweetness, sourness, bitterness and so forth.

The conjunction of the tongue, the flavour and consciousness means what in Pali is called phassa. This is familiar to everybody, but common people think that it is they as living beings who experience the flavour. Only the yogi who notes all the psycho-physical events that occur while he is eating knows it as a phenomenon dependent on the tongue, the flavour and consciousness. Later on, he gains a clear insight into its ceaseless flux and impermanence.

Contact with flavour is followed by sensations (vedana) that may be good or bad according to the flavour. Eating good food gives us pleasure, we like it, whereas we complain of bad food or the bitter taste of some medicine. The feeling that we have when we eat some food is indifferent. Although this is upekkhavedana, the opportunity to eat is the outcome of good kamma. Hence, eating such food also has a pleasant aspect and leads to attachment, but as for the yogi with developed samadhi who notes the nama-rupa at every moment, he becomes empirically aware of the arising of all sensations (pleasant, unpleasant or indifferent) and their passing away.

Another source of contact, feeling, etc., is the sensitive part of the body (kayadvara). It is said: "Body consciousness arises from the body or tactile organ and the tactile object. Body-impression (phassa) arises from the conjunction of the body, the tactile object and tactile consciousness, and the tactile impression conditions the (tactile) sensations (vedana)."

This needs some elaboration. Seeing, hearing, smelling and eating - each of these physical events concerns only its respective organ, viz., the eyes, etc. Consciousness in connection with them also arises only in a certain part of the head. These psycho-physical events are restricted in terms of locality and duration. You are conscious of eating only when you are eating, conscious of hearing only when there is something to be heard. As for the body-consciousness, it is present in regard to every part of the body. You have tactile impression somewhere on your body at any time whenever you think of it. So its sphere is extensive and its duration is long. For the beginner in vipassana practice, contemplation of tactile impression is most important and so the yogi should know something about it.

The fine, sensitive matter (rupa) that can receive the tactile impression pervades the whole body. It exists in every healthy part of the body and so it can give rise to tactile consciousness everywhere through contact with an external or internal rupa in the body. These rupas are impermanent and are in a flux from moment to moment. They are like the electric energy that passes into the bulb and gives light.

In this state of ceaseless flux the sensitive body rupa that has not yet passed away collides with an external or internal rupa, thereby giving rise to body-consciousness. As in the case of seeing, etc., this consciousness involves a series of thought-moments, viz., citta that inquires the tactile object, citta that knows, citta that registers etc., but these cittas arise and vanish so rapidly that the tactile consciousness appears to involve only a single thought-moment.

Body-consciousness is always present. It is not apparent when the mind is absorbed in any object other than the body but, if the attention is directed to the body, there is no doubt about the tactile impression somewhere as, for example, the contact between the body and the floor, the body and the clothes, and so forth.

So the yogi who practises mindfulness in regard to physical contact of his body is aware of its conditionality. He knows that it is neither uncaused nor created, that it in fact depends on the conjunction of tactile object and the sensitive rupa in healthy condition. The object of contact is called photthappha in Pali and it is of three kinds, viz., pathavi, tejo and vayo.

Pathavi element has the attribute of hardness and coarseness and this attribute is to be found if one examines or focuses on a part of the body that gives a clear impression of contact. Softness too is to be regarded as pathavi for softness and coarseness do not differ essentially. We call velvet a smooth object in comparison with many things that are coarser than it but it appears to be rough when it hits the soft part of the human eye. So softness and roughness are relative terms that differ only in degree, not in kind. Softness and smoothness represent solidity that is a mark of pathavi element.

According to commentaries, solidity as the essence of pathavi element serves as the abode of other elements that have to depend on it just as all objects have to depend on earth. For example, rice-powder when mixed with water turns into a lump in which it may be termed pathavi because of its solidity or its predominantly solid character. The particles of powder are combined and held together by the water (apo) element. The lump also contains tejo element that is concerned with heat or cold, as well as the wind (vayo) element that supports stiffness and expansion. So this lump of rice powder contains all the four elements, and of these the element of solidity (pathavi) is the basis of other elements. All the other three elements are also inherent in the rice powder. Thus, just as rice powder is the support of water element, etc., so also the earth element is the support of its associated rupas. This is the function of the earth element.

Thus, to the yogi, the earth-element appears to be the basis for its co-elements. This is its paccupatthana and so is of heaviness and lightness. In Dhammasangani, one of the books of Abhidhamma pitaka and its commentary, the pathavi element is described as heavy and light. So when you move a thing and feel that it is heavy or light, that feeling or idea is to be included in the paccupatthana of the pathavi element. The yogi is aware of the characteristics of pathavi element through its roughness, softness or smoothness. He is aware of its function when he realizes that it serves as the basis of other rupas. He is aware of its paccupatthana when he knows that other rupas lie in the pathavi element, that it bears other rupas, that it is heavy or light. Such awareness of pathavi element in terms of characteristics (lakkhana), function (rasa) and paccupatthana means realization of truth and discriminative insight into the nature of nama-rupa.

As for the common people, contact with pathavi element is usually understood in terms of hands, legs, clothes, man and so forth. This way of thinking is wrong, but the yogi knows the truth through the practice of mindfulness.

Tejo element means heat. It is evident when we change the position of the body, because we feel heated and pressed in some part of the body. Coldness too is a kind of weak tejo element. A thing is hot or cold relative to other things. The shade of a tree may be cool in comparison with the heat of the sun, but it is hot relative to the interior of a cave or house. The water in the pot is cool relative to that in the open air but hot when compared to iced water. Hot, warm and cool are relative terms that mean essentially tejo dhatu (element).

Tejo or heat is essential to maturation and development. The function of heat is to make organisms mature and ripe. Old age and decay of trees, buildings, the earth, rocks, etc., are due to heat of the sun and it is the heat of the physical body that gives rise to grey hair, decaying teeth, wrinkled skin and other signs of senility. The greater the heat, the more rapid is the process of maturation. Tejo element makes the rupas soft and pliant. So as the yogi notes, "hot", "hot", he realizes its function, viz., to soften and loosen.

When heat or cold is manifest in the body, the mindful yogi is aware of tejo element in terms of its characteristics. He knows its function (rasa) when he knows that it makes things soft and pliant. Thus, the yogi has discriminative insight into the nature of nama-rupa. He is free from the illusion that common people have when they think of tejo element in terms of substance and entity such as hand, man, woman and so forth.

Vayo element has the characteristics of stiffness and rigidity. If you sit erect and stretch your back and introspect yourself, you will find rigidity. Again, stretch your arm and fix your mind inside the hand. You will find stiffness there. So if you sit and note mentally, "sitting", you become aware of vayo element in terms of its characteristics. You know it not as ego, as atman, etc., but as stiffness and this insight into the real nature of vayo is important.

But initially the yogi's insight will not be necessarily confined to the reality of stiffness. Ideas of substance, self, and so forth, continue to obtrude upon his mind. For in the beginning, the average person's concentration is weak and he tends to let his mind wander freely. His mind is usually dominated by sensual desire and other hindrances (nivarana) that conflict with tranquillity and insight-knowledge and impede their progress. As a result, the mind is not confined to the reality of elements. Some teachers would have us believe that all conventional notions go by the board at the outset, but this is impossible. It is indeed hard for any beginner to be free from hindrances and pure in mind and belief. Exceptions may be made in the case of those who heard the Dhamma right from the Buddha and attained the holy path, but such kind of attainment is unthinkable for other people.

Vipassana practice does not help to develop insight in the beginning. While contemplating nama-rupa, the yogi develops concentration strongly, thereby leaving almost no room for stray thoughts and keeps himself constantly mindful. It is only at this stage of mental purity that there arises the insight into the real nature of nama-rupa. Even so, conventional notions linger before the attainment of insight into the dissolution of all forms of existence (bhanganana). So it is said in Visuddhimagga that at the earlier stage of insight (udayabbayanana), the yogi tends to see "the lights, flowers on the pagoda platform or fishes and turtles in the sea." But later on, both the nama-rupa objects of contemplation and the contemplating mind are found to pass away one after another. Conventional ideas of shape, figure, etc., do not arise any longer. As Visuddhimagga says, "attention is fixed on cessation, disappearance and dissolution."

Therefore, initially the yogi knows only the object that he contemplates in the right way. Rigidity (vayo) is evident at the moment of lifting the foot, etc. To make us aware of this, the Buddha says, "When he (the yogi) walks, he knows that he is walking." Here, the yogi is instructed to be aware only of the fact that he is walking; he is not told to reflect on the vayo or rigidity. This means that names are not relevant, that what matters most is to see things as they really are, that the yogi can note them in terms of popular usage. Again, vayo element is manifest in the movement of any part of the body. Awareness of rigidity in such movement or in the abdominal rising and falling means awareness of the real marks of vayo element. Looseness too is a mark of vayo for we speak comparatively when we refer to tightness or looseness of anything.

It is also the function of vayo element to move, incline, tilt or displace. The yogi notes the motion of his hands when he bends them and becomes aware of the true nature of vayo element. He knows it also when he focuses on walking, etc. At such moments, he does not think of the object as man, woman, body and so forth. He is aware only of the gradual movement which means the real nature of vayo element. He is also aware of something pushing or leading another from one place to the other. Thus, he knows vayo by means of the phenomenon that appears on his mental horizon. This is awareness by paccupatthana which the scriptures describe as "Abhinihara paccupatthana" - the phenomena which appears as leading.

All the three primary elements - pathavi, tejo and vayo are to be known only by experience. You cannot know them by hearing, etc. You can hear the sound of something, but you cannot say whether it is coarse or soft, hot or cold, rigid, stable or moving. Neither will its smell, taste or visual form tell you anything about its primary quality. Yet, it is a popular belief that we can identify the primary elements by seeing.

No doubt a rock or a block of iron apparently gives us the impression of hardness, but this is not due to seeing. It is merely an inductive generalization based on past experience. What we know by seeing is only the visual form which sometimes gives a false impression as is evident when we tread on what we believe to be solid ground and stumble into a quagmire, or when we get burnt by handling a heated iron bar unknowingly.

Nor can we know vayo element by seeing for it is an element that we can know only empirically. We see that an object is moving because we see it here and there, and the idea of its motion is only an inference from our observation of its displacements. Yet, when one of the two trains at rest starts moving, the other train appears to be in motion and to a traveller in a fast moving train, the trees appear to be running in the opposite direction. These optical illusions bear out the fact that we cannot rely on our eyes for the truth about motion.

Once, an elderly layman who was interested in meditation told us about his dialogue with a monk-teacher. Taking a pillow and shaking it, he asked the monk, "Now, Sir, what dhammas do you see passing away?"

"Well, I see the vayo element passing away."

"Sir, you are wrong. What you see with your eyes is only the visual form. If you are mindful at the moment of seeing, you know only what happens to the visual form. You cannot know empirically anything about vayo element at the moment of seeing. Vipassana is a practice that gives priority to what is to be known actually by introspection. It is only afterwards that other facts are to be noted and realized by reasoning. It is natural to contemplate each sense-object only through its respective sense-organ. Vayo is an object that is known only through body-contact. We can know the motion of vayo if we introspect while walking, bending, etc. Now without being in contact with vayo, you say that you know its dissolution. What you say is unnatural and wrong."

There is much truth in my informant's criticism. Instead of relying on Satipatthana and other suttas for information, some teachers give purely speculative instructions on the basis of Abhidhamma books that deal with natural phenomena exclusively. There are yogis who practise according to these instructions. The practice may benefit them spiritually but they cannot rely on it for the attainment of real insight and stages on the holy path. The only exceptions are a few gifted yogis who gain insights through speculative introspection.

The best thing to do is to follow the Buddha's instruction in Satipatthana sutta and contemplate the psycho-physical phenomena that arise from the six senses. This is, as the Buddha says, //eka yano maggo//: "the only way". In the case of body-sense corresponding to body-consciousness we should note and recognize the body-impression when we are aware of any body-contact internally or externally. Otherwise the impression tends to dominate us in conjunction with avijja and other defilements. We tend to harbour illusions of permanence, happiness and ego-belief. Thus, through contact, we become attached to certain parts of the body, we consider them permanent and make distinctions according to our preferences. If we note every contact and realize their sensory, impermanent, unsatisfactory and insubstantial nature, there is no attachment and we are on the right path of vipassana that will certainly lead to enlightenment and Nibbana.

Body-sensitivity (kayapasada) is a quality that pervades the whole body when it is in a healthy condition. There are many things such as clothes, air and others that can give the body tactile impressions. The body, too, possesses many things, e.g. hair, skin, that lend themselves to contact. Thus, there are always both external and internal objects of contact for the body-sensitivity. Reflection will point clearly to the possibility of contact in every part of the body and there is no place, however small, that does not admit of contact, and this contact gives rise to body-consciousness.

From the conjunction of the body-sensitivity, object of contact and body-consciousness, there arises impression (phassa) that is very obvious. Pleasant impression of contact gives rise to pleasant feeling while unpleasant impression results in painful feeling. The deeper the impression the more intense is the feeling.

Relation between Manodvara And Vinnana, Etc.

Manovinnana that thinks, conceives and cognizes has its origin in the mind and mind-objects. The mind which forms its basis is the bhavanga-citta that we have from the moment of conception. It occurs ceaselessly according to kamma. It is the basis for perception and cognition. When we sleep or when the mind is otherwise occupied, our mental life is all bhavanga-citta. It becomes active in the face of mind-objects and there arise intention and cognition. So we can think and know only on the basis of bhavanga. True, this citta is always present in the absence of intention and cognition but bhavanga can lead to mental events only when it is strong.

At times we cannot think because we are drowsy or our thinking may be futile, in spite of our effort, and this is due to weakness of bhavanga. Thus, bhavanga by itself serves little purpose. It becomes active only when it is in contact with a new sense-object. Hence, it is called bhavangacalana, active bhavanga or bhavanga-paccheda, bhavanga with its stream cut off. This last bhavanga gives rise to intention and cognition. According to the commentaries, avajjana (advertence of the mind towards the object) is also to be considered the basis for mental activity. Avajjana forms the first stage in the consciousness-process. It arises as the inquiring state of mind in regard to the object. If it is alert and sharp, it is mindful of all the essential facts and objects.

The good writer considers the important facts for his book and the good speaker chooses appropriate words for his speech, thereby making their writings and speeches perfect. Further, this avajjana leads to good or bad kammic consciousness accordingly as it is bent on good or bad objectives. It is open to introspection and cognition since we can know actually that intention and awareness arise from avajjana. So the words: "mananja - mind as the basis" should be understood as reference also to avajjana.

Equally vital to mental activity is the mind-object. The object always arises when we reflect. In the absence of mind-objects mental activity is impossible. Thus, sometimes we wish to think but have to give up thinking because we cannot recall the essential facts or objects.

Hence, mental activity depends on the conjunction of the mind (bhavanga), inquiring mind (avajjana) and the mind-objects.

According to the commentaries, the heart forms the physical basis of all mental events. But today Western doctors have removed the diseased heart of a patient and replaced it with a good substitute. The experiment was not a complete success but the press reports say that the transplanted heart functioned for a few days. This news may raise doubts about the role of the heart in the mental life of mankind.

This question admits of two explanations. Although the heart is removed, its potency may not become extinct and bhavanga-citta may still linger in its place just like the tail of a house-lizard that moves after it has been cut off. Moreover, the bhavanga-citta may become active again when the transplant gets a new lease of life from the blood of the body, just as the new tissue or new eye ball that is engrafted has new sensitivity. Or, we can dispose of the question on the basis of Abhidhamma pitaka, for Patthana, one of the Abhidhamma books, describes the physical basis of manovinnana (mind) simply as "that physical organ which conditions the mind as its basis." It does not specifically mention any organ or part of the body. Thus, according to this canonical book, we may assume that a certain part of the body is the seat of the mind, perhaps it is a certain part of the heart or the head. Those who do not wish to locate the mind in the heart may regard the head as its physical basis.

Here, we must mention the analogy of the spider and the evolution of mind as set forth in the commentary on Abhidhamma pitaka. The spider builds a web which is a kind of net for catching flies. It can do so instinctively in a matter of days after its birth whereas by contrast even a year-old child can do nothing for himself. The spider waits in the center of its web, eats up any creature that gets entangled there and returns to its abode. In the same way, the bhavanga or mano-vinnana has the heart as its abode and like the threads of the spider's web connecting its abode and its surroundings, the blood pumped by the heart flows through the blood-vessels and spreads all over the body. So the visual image in the eye stirs the bhavanga-citta in the heart and turns it into eye-consciousness and so on through its process (vithi). It (bhavanga) then turns back to its original seat. The same may be said of sound, smell, etc., with their respective sense-organs.

It is now clear that bhavanga, together with its original activity, that is, thinking and knowing, forms the mainspring of our mental life. When there is a visual object, the eye-consciousness arises with the eye as its basis and then the manovinnana reflects on it. The same is true of the ear-consciousness, etc., with the ear, the nose and the tongue as their bases. As for the body-consciousness, its sphere is extensive as it depends on the size of the body.

When the sense-objects are not apparent, the mano-vinnana or the mind that comprises thinking and knowing holds sway over the mental life. Sometimes we are so much absorbed in thought that we remain unmindful of all sense-objects. Preoccupation with an important matter may even make us sleepless. We are then dominated by thoughts that arise ceaselessly one after another on the basis of mental activity as conditioned by bhavanga, avajjana and mind-objects. To the yogi who notes every thought as it arises, these thoughts will appear to arise and vanish separately in fragments.

Every mental event depends on the conjunction of mind, mind-object and cognition. This is followed by contact with mental images. These images, which may be real or unreal, existent or non-existent, are present in imagination whenever we think or intend to do something. This is familiar to those who have read, for example, the jataka stories. Reading these stories give rise to mental images of cities and kings that are coloured by Burmese beliefs and traditions. They are far from historical truth for since the stories have their origin in India, people and places described in the jatakas must have conformed to the Indian culture and way of life.

Modern novels evoke images of towns, villages, men, women, criminals and so forth. The reader knows that all these are purely fictitious and imaginary and yet while he is reading, they appear as real and, hence, the delight, sorrow and other emotions that a good story arouses in him. All this is due to contact with mental images.

As the Buddha says in Brahmajala sutta, "these teachings and beliefs stem from vivid imagination that makes them clear and real." In short, vivid imagination is necessary when we speak, write, hold a belief or think or just let the mind wander freely.

Imagination leads to feeling. Pleasant images cause pleasant feeling as do, for example, images related to our past affluence or the prospect of becoming affluent in future. On the other hand, unpleasant images make us unhappy. To think of the past suffering is to revive unpleasant memories and equally unpleasant is the anticipation of the troubles and arisings that might beset us in future. The cause of such unpleasantness may be purely imaginary as in the case of the people who grieved over the reported death of a relative only to learn later that he was still alive.

The image that is neither pleasant nor unpleasant will give rise to neutral (upekkha) feeling. We are then neither happy nor unhappy. Indeed we have the impression of having no feeling at all, but this indicates simply the subtle nature of upekkhavedana which, according to the commentaries., is to be known by the analogy of the tracks of the deer.

When a deer runs across a large rock, the track is lost since the animal leaves no footprints on it, but if the footprints are to be found on both sides of the rock, we conclude that the deer has run across the rock. Likewise, the yogi is well aware of the pleasant or unpleasant feelings. When he has upekkhavedana he does not notice it and is mindful only of seeing, hearing and so forth. But after that, he has again pleasant or unpleasant feeling and so he concludes that he has had neutral (upekkha) feeling while being mindful of ordinary mental events.

So the Buddha says: "Conditioned by the mind and mind-object manovinnana arises; the conjunction of mind, mind-object and manovinnana leads to sense-contact and, because of sense-contact, there is feeling."

This is purely a process of cause-and-effect relationship that has nothing to do with a being, ego, creator or any happening by chance. By the Pali word "dhamma", the teaching refers to the five sense-objects as well as the imagined objects. The five sense-objects again become the focus of mental activity. So manovinnana involves all the six sense-objects, that is, what one has seen, heard, etc., and what one has not seen, not heard, etc. Every sense-object leads to sense-contact which in turn gives rise to feeling.

For common people, these mental events are bound up with the idea of ego, self or atta. Such an idea is an illusion irrelevant to the chain of causation. This is empirically realized by the mindful yogi. He notes every mental event, traces its cause and becomes aware of the bhavanga and avajjana as well as the mind-object. So he knows empirically that every mental event means only the interrelation of cause and effect, leaving no room for ego, creator or chance.

He knows too that mental activity leads to sense-contact which in turn gives rise to feeling. His knowledge is not bookish but empirical. He follows and notes every mental event. If his mind wanders to his home while he is meditating at a retreat, he directs his attention to it and there is the contact between his mind and its object, viz., the image of the house. In the same way, contacts with Shwedagon pagoda or a foreign country occur when he notes and follows the corresponding thoughts that distract his mind. This contact with mind-objects is phassa.

Equally clear to the yogi is the feeling that results from sense-contact. While practising meditation, he feels delighted when he happens to think of something that pleases him; sorry when the thought about a sad event occurs to him; inclined to laugh when he thinks of something ludicrous. So he knows that feeling is merely the outcome of sense-contact. But the insight of the yogi who notes nama-rupa at every moment of their arising is deeper than this knowledge of the origin of feeling. For as he develops concentration and tranquillity (samadhi), he finds that every object of his introspection as well as its subject, that is, consciousness, passes away. So he gains a clear insight into the impermanence of all mental events, viz., thinking, feeling, etc., their unsatisfactoriness and unreliability and their impersonal and insubstantial character. Such insight means the empirical realization and appreciation of the Paticcasamuppada or dependent origination.

Recapitulation

In the first part of the discourse we have explained the links in the chain of causation up to the vedana (feeling) which arises from phassa (sense-contact). To sum up what we have said so far.

Avijja is ignorance of the four noble truths. It makes ordinary people blind to the impermanence and insubstantiality of sense-objects. So they think, speak and act in the hope of securing happiness in the present life or hereafter. These deeds in thought, word or bodily actions are either wholesome or unwholesome and they are also called sankharas (kamma-formation).

The sankharas give rise to new existence. The dying person has flashbacks of his kammic deeds and visions of future life that impress him and condition his new consciousness in a new life. In the absence of any special object that concerns the new consciousness, the latter occurs repeatedly with the death-bed impression of his previous life as its object.

This bhavanga-citta becomes active at the moment of seeing, etc. Then, there arises eye-consciousness that is dependent on the eye and visual form. It is part of the state of consciousness, that is, the whole mental life as conditioned by sankhara. What we see, hear, etc., may be pleasant or unpleasant and the corresponding nature of eye-consciousness, ear-consciousness, etc., is due to the ethical character of our past deeds, that is the wholesomeness or unwholesomeness of the kammas in the past existence.

This applies to all of the six types of consciousness that arise from six sense-objects. The last type of consciousness, implicit in mental activity comprising thinking, imagining, willing, etc., is dependent on bhavanga-citta, avajjana-citta (mental advertence), the physical basis and the mental image. This mental activity (manovinnana) involves seven thought-moments (javana) and two other thought-moments (tadarammana). Here tadarammana is the product of good or bad kamma. Javana is not such a product, but in Abhidhamma it is labelled sankhara-based vinnana in that it arises from bhavanga, the product of sankhara.

Together with the arising of vinnana, there also arises other concomitant psycho-physical phenomena (cetasika and rupas). Thus vinnana leads to nama-rupa, but vinnana is followed also by the six ayatana (sense-organs) and six phassa (sense-impressions). Phassa means the conjunction of the mind, the mind-object and the sense-organ. It gives rise to vedana (feeling) which may be pleasant or unpleasant or neither pleasant nor unpleasant. The last kind of feeling which is called upekkhavedana, gives us the impression of the absence of any feeling, but according to Abhidhamma, it is in fact a kind of subtle pleasure that implies only the absence of unbearable pain.

Vedana Leads To Tanha

Because of pleasant or unpleasant feeling, there arises tanha. Tanha means perpetual craving or hunger. It craves for sensual objects that it does not have or it craves for more of the objects that it already has. It knows no satiety or satisfaction. For all the sensual objects to gratify it, its hunger is insatiable.

So a deva said that devas are like petas in that just as the petas are very hungry because of lack of anything to eat or drink in their realm, so also devas are always hungry although they indulge in all kinds of sensual pleasure. This sounds quite plausible. For the life-span of a Tavatimsa deva means millions of years on earth and the life is still longer in other higher deva-worlds such as Yama, Nimmanarati. Yet, in spite of their ceaseless and fabulously lifelong enjoyment of pleasure, the devas are never satisfied because their tanha is insatiable.

The same is true of human beings. Poor people seek sensual pleasure to the best of their ability. Of course, because of their poverty, they can never fulfil all their desires but equally insatiable is the craving of the rich, the high officials and the upper crust of society. This is due to the nature of tanha. The more it is fed, the more hungry it becomes and so it is worse among the rich than among the poor, more oppressive in wealthy countries than in poor countries.

Six Kinds Of Tanha

Tanha is never tired of seeing pleasant objects, man or woman whom it likes. It seeks sweet sounds. It hungers for good scent, good food and good drinks. It craves for tactile sensation and this is surely the worst craving for people who love sensual pleasure. Tanha also means liking for mind-objects that are impervious to the eye, the ear and other physical organs. It is the object that we can know only mentally. According to the scriptures it means the five sensitive (pasada) rupas, the four subtle elements such as apo, etc., the mental elements (cetasikas) concepts of forms, qualities, names, etc.

People crave for good pasada-rupas because they want to see clearly, to hear distinctly, or to have keen sense of touch. They seek apo elements as they wish to keep their mouth, throat and skin moist. They delight in the consciousness of their own sex and the opposite and hence their craving for manhood and womanhood. They want to live long and to move lightly, and this desire shows their hunger for the fine rupas of jivita and kayalahuta, etc. Their desire for happiness, good memory and good intelligence points to their craving for certain mental faculties. Love of one's own physical appearance and that of the opposite sex as well as the desire for praise and fame again shows the hunger for concepts.

For six sense-objects there are six kinds of craving. These six cravings may mean merely the love of sensual pleasure (kamatanha). This love may be combined with the illusion of permanence (bhavatanha), tanha that implies the eternity-belief. Craving is also bound up with the belief in annihilation which makes some people overly attached to sensual pleasure (vibhavatanha). So there are six cravings (corresponding to six sense-objects) for each of the three tanhas (kamatanha, bhavatanha and vibhavatanha) or 18 cravings. Each of these cravings may have internal objects or external objects and this leads to 36 kinds of craving. Since each craving may relate to the present, past or future, there are thus a total of 108 kinds of tanha. But all kinds of craving boil down to three kinds of tanha viz., kama-, bhava- and vibhava-tanhas.

People who are in contact with unpleasant sense-objects long for pleasant objects. Those who suffer pain seek freedom from it. In short, according to the commentary, the suffering person longs for happiness. People seek freedom from pain, poverty and unpleasant objects and feelings. Absence of suffering means happiness (sukha). We seek freedom from preoccupation with unpleasant thoughts, from worry about food, clothing and shelter. But, once a man is well provided with the necessities of life, he tends to develop other cravings. Says the commentary, "The wealthy man wants to increase his wealth." For it is in the nature of tanha to be insatiable. We wish to enjoy the good things of life repeatedly; we wish to increase our possessions. The more we have, the more we want, and the higher the quality of life is, the greater is the desire to enhance it. Tanha never comes to an end for it is fuelled and perpetuated by vedana or feeling.

As regards the tanha associated with upekkha (neutral) feeling, the commentary describes the concomitant feeling as pleasant (sukha) because of its poise and subtlety. In the case of our contact with ordinary sense-objects, neither the pleasant feeling nor unpleasant feeling is apparent; but since this upekkha feeling is fine and subtle, it is tinged with (sukha) pleasantness and hence it makes us crave for more definite pleasure. It leads to discontentment with the ordinary sense-objects and kindles the desire for better food, better clothes, better sense-contact and better living conditions.

In short, pleasant sense-objects create attachment and craving for better objects. Unpleasant objects create the desire to be rid of them. When the sense-objects produce neither pleasant nor unpleasant feelings, we are still discontented with our lot and crave for better things. All these show how vedana gives rise to tanha.

Tanha And Samsara

Simultaneously with the arising of consciousness at the moment of seeing, etc., there arise nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana. For every ordinary person who is not yet free from defilements, vedana (feeling) leads to tanha. Tanha in turn causes upadana (clinging) that makes him do a good or a bad deed (kammabhava). Under certain conditions, kammabhava gives rise to rebirth that makes living beings subject to old age, sickness, death, grief and all other mental and physical sufferings. This is how feelings lead to samsaric dukkha.

Nobody can prevent the arising of nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana as concomitants of vinnana. The Buddha and the Arahats, too, have pleasant, unpleasant or neutral (upekkha) feelings as a result of contact with sense-objects. They feel pain that arises from physical affliction but they do not suffer mentally; nor do they take delight in pleasant sensations. So they are free from craving and attachment. They do not strive for pleasure and happiness and because of their non-kammic way of life, they do away with rebirth, nama-rupa and other causes of suffering. This is the extinction of dukkha for the Arahat who is completely free from defilements.

So it is said, "Due to the complete extinction of tanha that is rooted in pleasant or unpleasant feeling on the Ariyan path, there arises the extinction of upadana (clinging)."

Experience of the pleasant or unpleasant feelings make the non-Arahats crave for the good things of life but it has no effect on the person who has attained Arahatship after passing through the successive stages on the holy path. This may sound incredible to the common people but in fact the most alluring sense-object has no appeal for the Arahat and he takes no interest in his welfare. He is, therefore, wholly free from craving and attachment and this means complete extinction of kammic effort, rebirth and its attendant suffering.

So it is said, "The extinction of upadana leads to the extinction of the cause of rebirth (kammic effort). The extinction of kammic effort leads to extinction of rebirth. Extinction of rebirth leads to extinction of old age, death, grief, etc."

Extinction Of Craving

In short, with the complete extinction of tanha due to Arahatship, there is the complete extinction of all its consequences and this means the extinction of suffering. It does not imply the disappearance of happiness or a living being. It is simply the cessation of the nama-rupa process that is the source of dukkha.

Just as Arahatship means complete extinction of craving, the attainment of anagami stage on the path means extinction of sensuous craving together with rebirth in the sensual world, old age, death, etc. At the sotapatti stage, the yogi is assured of extinction of all craving that may lead to the lower worlds or more than seven existences. So he is free from all suffering of the lower worlds and the suffering for more than seven lifetimes in the sensual world. Thus implicit in the Paticcasamuppada is the lessening of dukkha with the weakening of tanha.

Likewise, the vipassana insight ensures the momentary extinction of tanha. The arising of six sense-objects leads to pleasant or unpleasant feeling and in the absence of vipassana insight, it finally ends in tanha and its attendant suffering.

But as for the yogi who practises constant mindfulness and has developed vipassana insight, he finds only the arising and passing away of all phenomena, their impermanence, suffering and impersonality. He also finds that the pleasant or unpleasant feeling arises and passes away instantly. So he does not delight in the feeling that arises, he does not crave for another feeling; he is free from all craving.

Extinction of craving on the Ariyan holy path differs from extinction by vipassana in that in the former case, the extinction is permanent and it concerns every sense-object whereas in the latter case extinction is neither permanent nor universal. Tanha is extinct only at the moment of contemplation and only in respect of the object contemplated. Hence, it is called "tadanga nibbuti", momentary or partial extinction of defilements.

The yogi who practises meditation is barely aware of seeing, hearing, etc. This state of bare awareness leaves no room for tanha and as a result upadana (clinging), kamma, rebirth, etc., cease to occur. In other words, with the cessation of tanha, the samsaric cycle is partly cut off and this is called tadanga nibbuti.

The Story Of Mahatissa Thera

There is the story of Mahatissa thera in Sri Lanka who overcame tanha through the practice of both samatha and vipassana. One day he left his forest retreat early in the morning and on the way to Anuradha city for his begging round, he met a woman who had left her home after quarrelling with her husband. At the sight of the thera, there arose in her a lustful desire and she laughed aloud seductively. On looking at her the thera noticed her teeth. Since he had been contemplating the skeleton, the whole body of the woman appeared as a heap of bones. He concentrated on this mental image and attained jhana. Then, after contemplating the image of the skeleton in his jhanic state of mind, he attained Arahatship.

The thera continued his journey and on the way met the woman's husband. The man asked him whether he had seen a woman. The thera replied that he did see something but that he did not know whether it was a man or a woman. All that he noticed was a skeleton that passed him on the way.

What he actually saw was the woman's teeth, but his practice of contemplation had turned his impression of her body into the image of a skeleton. Hence, in his mind there was no room for lust or any other defilement arising from his sense-contact with the woman. Then practising vipassana on the basis of his jhanic consciousness, he became free from defilements and attained Arahatship.

This story might raise doubts among non-meditating people as regards the arising of the image of a skeleton at the sight of a person's teeth, but without practice one cannot have any clear idea of what mind training (bhavana) can accomplish. The mere exercise of concentration without any training cannot help to create mental images for these depend on steadfast and prolonged practice of contemplation. Imagination is the power of perception. Repeated contemplation strengthens perception which then helps create any kind of image of oneself or other people. This faculty of mind is possible even for a parrot as is borne out by a story in the commentary on Satipatthana sutta.

Story Of A Parrot

A dancer put up for the night at the residence of bhikkhunis and when she went away, she left an intelligent parrot. The bird was cared for by the novitiates and it was called Buddha-rakkhita. The abbess of the nunnery thought that it would be good if there was something to contemplate for the bird living among the spiritual aspirants. So she taught her to contemplate "atthi: skeleton".

One morning the parrot was swooped up by an eagle. In the wake of the hue and cry raised by the young nuns, the eagle became frightened and dropped the parrot. The Abbess asked it what it contemplated when it was seized by the eagle. The bird replied, "I thought of a skeleton being carried off and I wondered where it would be scattered." The Abbess said "Well done! This contemplation will contribute to your liberation from samsaric existence."

A thing that is repeatedly contemplated will become fixed in the long run. Since even a parrot can imagine a skeleton, there is no reason why a human being cannot do likewise. The parrot imagined itself as well as others to be skeletons. Because of this contemplation, it had no fear, anger or worry when it was taken away by the eagle.

So Satipatthana bhavana is extolled as a practice that helps to overcome grief and anxiety and to bring about the extinction of mental and physical suffering. But there may be many people who are not as wise as the parrot in the story since they never take interest in the dhamma and contemplate it. The yogi should resolve to surpass the parrot in the practice of vipassana.

If Mahatissa thera had failed to regard the laughing woman as a skeleton, he might have become lustful and fallen a victim to temptation in the solitude of the forest. Even if he had no sexual desire at that time, any impression of the woman would have laid him open to temptation at other times. But thanks to his contemplation of the skeleton in the practice of vipassana, he overcame defilements and achieved final liberation from samsaric existence. Here, the extinction of tanha through vipassana practice is called tadanga nibbuti, partial extinction, while extinction through arahatship is called "total extinction".

Contemplation And Extinction

So with the total extinction of tanha that results from vedana, there is the extinction of upadana which means the extinction of all the consequences of craving. Contemplation of anicca, dukkha and anatta ensures the partial extinction of tanha, upadana, kamma, rebirth, etc. The object of vipassana practice is to put an end to defilements and samsaric suffering. So it is a matter of paramount importance that deserves the attention of everyone who seeks total liberation. Without this practice, pleasant or unpleasant feeling at every moment of seeing, etc., is bound to lead to craving, kamma and rebirth.

The consciousness involved in every moment of seeing is due to avijja and sankhara in the previous existence. Seeing occurs together with vinnana, nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana. The scriptures treat each of these dhammas separately in terms of their causal relations, but in fact they do not arise separately one after another. If vinnana arises from sankhara, it arises together with its respective nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana. All of these dhammas are the results of the past kamma sankhara. They are termed vipaka-vatta which means round or cycle of resultants. The round of defilements viz., ignorance, craving and clinging produce round of kamma viz., kamma and sankhara which leads to round of resultants viz., consciousness, nama-rupa, sense-organs, contact, feeling which again give rise to the round of defilements.

The arising of these five resultants at the moment of seeing means to most people simply just seeing. In fact, seeing is the product of vinnana, nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana as are other psycho-physical events such as hearing, smelling and so forth.

Seeing involves consciousness together with mental advertence (manasikara), volition (cetana), etc., plus the eye-organ which comprises the nama-rupa. It also involves four ayatanas viz., eye sensitivity, visual object, eye consciousness and mental advertence (dhammayatana). Contact with the visual object is phassa and the pleasantness or unpleasantness that the object causes is vedana. Hence all the five resultants are bound up with every moment of seeing. The same may be said of other phenomena that arise from hearing, smelling and so forth.

Cutting Off At The Foundation

These five psycho-physical resultants or phenomena occur ceaselessly one after another and comprise what we call man, deva or living being. These are conventional terms that refer in fact to the collection of the five nama-rupa elements. There is no solid, monolithic and permanent being. The only reality is the arising and passing away of nama-rupa and for the mindful yogi, this insight means the extinction of craving, clinging, kamma, rebirth, suffering - a chain of consequences that might result from feeling in the case of common people.

This is the way to the cessation of the wheel of life (Paticcasamuppada) through the elimination of its key link viz., tanha as conditioned by feeling. In order to prevent tanha from arising as the result of vedana, at every moment of seeing the yogi should focus on every phenomenon that arises from six senses. Here, the most obvious of these sense contacts is the tactile sensation that concerns gross primary elements (Mahabhuta) and it is necessary for the beginner to start contemplation with it.

This way is in accord with the Buddha's teaching in Satipatthana sutta, "Gacchanto va gacchamiti pajanati: (the yogi) knows that he is walking when he walks." How does he know it? He knows it as he notes mentally "walking, walking". He practises mindfulness, too, when he stands, lies, bends his arms, or does anything else. When there is no bodily action or movement to be noted, he should direct his attention to the abdominal rising and falling. He should also note any thought, or mental activity and any feeling that may arise in him. In short, he must be mindful of all the psycho-physical phenomena that arise from the six senses. As concentration develops, such mindfulness leads to insight into anicca, dukkha and anatta, an insight that leaves no room for craving. With the extinction of craving, there is also an end to clinging, and rebirth with all its attendant suffering. This is the way to the cessation of samsaric existence or life-cycle through the elimination of its root cause, namely, craving.

Today, science and technology have created machines which we cannot run or stop running without a knowledge of their modus operandi. Those who know the secret can operate them by manipulating their key plugs. In the same way, the keynote of the life-cycle as described by the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada is that tanha is caused by vedana, but this is true only if vedana is coupled with two kinds of latent tendencies (anusaya) viz., Santananusaya and arammananusaya. The Arahats are free from these tendencies and so, although they have feelings, their craving is extinct. This extinction of craving leaves no room for new kamma, neutralizes old kamma, and there is no more rebirth after their parinibbana.

But ordinary people have potential defilements which means not the existence of evil desires lying latent somewhere but only the possibility of their arising under certain circumstances. Hence, the Pali term santananusaya kilesa for this tendency. This potential kilesa may become greed, hatred, ignorance and other evils in the case of those who fail to contemplate the nama-rupas and so become subject to the illusions of permanency, happiness and ego-entity. This kilesa which may arise from sense-objects in the absence of vipassana insight is called arammananusaya kilesa.

Kilesa And Unmindfulness

Greed and anger that arise in connection with what one has seen or heard are the manifestations of the second kind of latent tendency. The impressions that we retain are those of permanent, lovely or repulsive beings or things. So recall of those images gives rise to attachment (lobha), anger (dosa) or illusion of permanency (moha).

Lobha is another synonym for tanha. It is due to pleasant feeling but it may also arise when unpleasant feeling makes us crave for pleasant sensations. Ignorance, too, leads to complacency, attachment and craving. Thus lobha, dosa and moha give rise to feeling which in turn causes craving with its attendant sufferings of samsaric existence. It is only the practice in bare awareness of seeing, hearing, etc., that rules out the possibility of craving and nostalgia for the pleasant sensations from the senses. Without this practice, craving dominates us and leads to suffering in afterlife as well as here and now.

In the Mora jataka, the bodhisatta who was then a peacock used to utter a gatha when he arose in the morning and when he went to sleep in the evening. So for 700 years he escaped the trap set by a hunter. Then the hunter employed a peahen as a decoy and enticed by her, the peacock forgot to recite the gatha and fell into the trap. In Benares, there was a harpist called Guttila. He made love to a girl but he was ridiculed and rejected. So at night he sang a very sweet song and played his harp in front of the girl's house. Fascinated by the music, the girl rushed out blindly, stumbled and fell to her death. In the Mora jataka it was the female voice, and here it was the male voice that brought about suffering and death.

No one can deny that what we hear is impermanent. Everything that we hear vanishes instantly, yet we enjoy songs and music because of their apparent continuity. If we note every sound, "hearing, hearing" mentally, our realization of their impermanence makes it impossible for our pleasant feelings to become cravings. This means non-arising of upadana and all its resultant suffering.

Smell is seldom experienced by the yogi. He must, of course, note it and see that it does not give rise to craving.

Mindfulness is especially important in eating. The unmindful person delights in eating good food. He is fond of such pleasure; he craves for it in future and hereafter. This craving for good food and drinks is powerful. It may lead to an existence that makes a person subsist on bad food. Thus, according to the Balapandita sutta, those who do misdeeds for the pleasure of good food are reborn as animals that eat grass, leaves or human excreta.

Eating bad food also tends to create the desire for good food. Therefore, it is necessary for the yogi to note everything, every movement of his hand and mouth and every sensation when he is eating. Through this practice of mindfulness he becomes aware of the vanishing of his actions, sensations and feeling. In this way he gains an insight into impermanence of everything, an insight that leads to the extinction of craving and its attendant suffering.

Thoughts And Tactile Impressions

Tactile impression is always present all over the physical body. Thinking, too, is also present all the time except when the yogi goes to sleep. So thoughts and tactile impressions form the objects of vipassana practice for most of the time. The yogi contemplates the tactile impressions when he has nothing else to engage his attention.

He notes his thoughts even though they happen to be unpleasant and undesirable. The beginner in meditation is often subject to such distractions, but they usually disappear as he gains practice and develops concentration. Thoughts about the Dhamma occur to some yogis from time to time and these should be noted. Introspection of these thoughts also ensures insight into impermanence and the extinction of suffering.

Here, some may wonder what this description of vipassana practice has to do with the discourse on Paticcasamuppada. The doctrine points out the chain of consequences as conditioned by their respective causes and our object is to show the way to the end of samsaric suffering that finally results from the interplay of their causes and consequences. So we have to describe the practice wherever it is relevant. Thus, when it is said that "avijja leads to sankhara and sankhara to rebirth", we have to show the way to remove avijja. So also in connection with vinnana, etc., that finally bring about dukkha, it is necessary to stress the need for removing the link between vedana and tanha, that is the main cause of dukkha.

Three Kinds Of Craving (Tanha)

If feeling (vedana) that arises from contact with sense-objects is not rightly contemplated, it leads to one of the three kinds of craving viz., craving for sensual pleasure, craving for existence and craving for non-existence.

The first kind of craving (kamatanha) is focused on sensual objects and it is most prevalent among the living beings of the sensual world.

The craving for existence (bhavatanha) is bound up with the eternity-belief (sassata-ditthi). It presupposes the permanence of a living being and the indestructibility of the ego despite the dissolution of the physical body. The belief is not deep-rooted among the Buddhists, but non-Buddhists hold it so firmly that it is a major impediment to their spiritual liberation. Their craving for existence is evident in their illusion of permanent self and their love of sensual pleasure.

The craving for non-existence (vibhavatanha) is born of the annihilation belief (uccheda-ditthi). The belief is not found among Buddhists and no one is a true Buddhist if he or she holds the belief. The craving for non-existence means the desire for the automatic cessation of the life-stream after death as well as the love of pleasure rooted in the materialistic view of life.

Each of these three cravings stems from the failure to realize anicca, dukkha and anatta through the introspection of feelings. So in order to forestall craving and its consequences, namely, rebirth and suffering, the yogi should contemplate every phenomenon, and try to see everything as it really is.

Tanha Causes Upadana

From craving there arises clinging (upadana). The Pali term upadana is a compound of //upa// - intense, extreme, and //adana// - grasp, take, and so it means to grasp firmly, or intense, obsessive craving. Clinging is of four kinds: (1) clinging to sensuous objects, (2) clinging to false views, (3) clinging to irrelevant, non-Ariyan practices as the way to salvation, and (4) clinging to atta or ego-belief.

(1) Clinging to sensual objects:

Sensual objects excite the desire of all living beings who are not free from the craving for sensual pleasure. These objects are five in number viz., visual form, sound, odour, taste and contact.

Visual form is the object that is pleasant and attractive to the eye. It may possess natural beauty or it may appear to be beautiful in the eyes of the viewer. Pleasant visual form, whether real or apparent, is to be found in men, women and consumer goods. It is the physical appearance of females that attracts the males and vice-versa. The things that both men and women desire are clothes, jewellery, cars, etc. It is not merely the form or colour that excites desire. Man and woman are drawn towards each other not only by the complexion but by the whole body of the opposite sex, and the same may be said of consumer goods that make people greedy. Form or colour only serves to introduce or identify the object of desire just as the cry of an animal helps the hunter to track and find it out.

Sound as the object of sensual pleasure is represented by the voices of men and women, songs or music. Some sounds and voices are really sweet while some only appear to be sweet in our ears. Again, it is not the mere sound that attracts us for when we delight in hearing a sound or a voice, the whole thing or the being that produces it forms the focus of our attachment.

Odour as the source of sensual pleasure comprises all kinds of scents: scent of flavours, powder, fragrant essence. Men and women apply these odoriferous substances to their bodies and delight in these scents, and it is not the scents alone but the whole physical body giving out the scent that attracts people.

The sensual pleasure that we have by eating or drinking is rooted in food and drinks. The good or pleasant taste may be real or apparent. For pigs, dogs and other animals, garbage, refuse and filth may be a source of sensual pleasure. Some people are very fond of bitter or spicy food. Some like intoxicants. Their pleasure is more apparent than real since normal ordinary people do not share their tastes. The pleasure of eating is not confined to food; it centres also on the preparation of food and the man or woman who prepares it. This is evident in the pleasure of a man who enjoys eating the food prepared by his wife although her culinary skill may not impress other people.

Another source of sensual pleasure is the body or tactile impression. Soft and smooth beds, comfortable clothing, something warm in cold season and something cold in hot season, the body of the opposite sex - all these form the objects of contact that create not only the craving for the tactile impression but also the craving for the whole body of the living or non-living object. The tactile impression only serves to pave the way for attachment to the whole body.

Bases Of Sensual Pleasure

Then there are living and non-living objects that form the sources of sensual pleasure. There are gold, silver, jewellery, rice, cattle, poultry, vehicles, houses, land, attendants. Men work daily to secure these sources of pleasure. They seek these things to have good food, good clothes and good houses, to see movies and so forth.

Sensual desire (tanha) usually leads to intense craving for sensual objects (kamapadana). When a man starts smoking, he delights in his new habit but as the habit grows upon him he becomes addicted to it. Thus, we become excessively fond of certain objects and we feel restless and discomfited if we do not get them. In this way tanha develops into upadana (clinging, grasping or infatuation).

Upadana cannot come into being without tanha. The music and songs of foreigners do not appeal to Burmese ears and so there is no craze for them among the people. Burmese people do not eat dogs. Dog's flesh is abhorrent to them and so there can be no upadana in regard to it.

(2) Ditthupadana (Bigotry)

Another kind of upadana is ditthupadana which means clinging to false views. It covers all the false views, exclusive of those in the categories of the third and fourth upadana. So every false belief is to be regarded as upadana. Here we will describe at length ten false views that have a firm grip on the people.

The first view is that alms-giving is not a good kammic act, that it means only a waste of money. This view rejects the sense of values and the fruits of a good act. It has, however, no basis in fact. The act of dana makes the donor joyful. It benefits the recipient physically and mentally and it may even help to save the life of a starving man. The donor is popular and highly esteemed. After his death, he attains the deva-world. It is hard to convince the sceptic of this post-mortem reward, but these other-worldly results of kamma come within the purview of Arahats and other holy men with psychic powers. One of these powers is the ability to see with the divine eye (dibbacakkhu). This psychic power enables one to see donors prospering in deva-worlds or evil-doing non-donors suffering in the lower worlds. Such vision can be had even by some yogis who have not acquired psychic powers but developed much samadhi. Again some may dismiss these visions as figments of imagination but the agreement of these accounts about the other worlds lends weight to their credibility.

The second false view is also a negation of the kammic benefits for alms-giving on a grand scale.

The third false view rejects the kammic benefits of feeding guests, giving gifts on new year day and so forth. This view is essentially the same as the third view. It refers to small acts of dana that were in vogue in ancient India but were dismissed as futile by heretics.

The fourth view denies the kammic result of any morally good or evil act. There is a lot of evidence for the kammic effects of a man's acts in this life, and, as for the other-worldly result of an act, those with psychic power can testify to it. But people who are excessively fond of sensual pleasure like to give free rein to their desires. They frown on moral values and ideas which they regard as a hindrance to their material progress. So they put forward many arguments to justify their rejection of the kammic law. In the final analysis all this is due to their excessive love of sensual pleasure.

The fifth and sixth view deny any respect, honour or support that we owe to our parents for all their loving care in our childhood. It is said that a man and his wife get children through sexual intercourse by accident, that they bring up the children from a sense of responsibility, and so there is no reason why children should be grateful to their parents. So it is not a good deed on the part of a man to look after his parents nor is it an evil to wrong them. It is a terrible view; those who hold it will not be respected by their children.

The seventh view denies the existence of any world other than the human and the animal worlds. It also rejects the belief that an animal may be reborn as a human being.

The eighth view denies rebirth of a human being in deva or animal worlds or in hell. It preaches annihilation of life after death.

The ninth view denies rebirth by //opapatika// or spontaneous generation. In other words, it denies the existence of devas, brahmas, petas, asuras, etc., who appear with their full-fledged bodies without being conceived in the womb. This view is untenable since encounters with good or evil spirits are reported from all over the world; there are mediums and witch-doctors who can invoke spirits; and devas, Brahmas, etc., are sometimes visible to the yogis who practise vipassana.

The last view is that there is no ascetic or Brahman who speaks of this world and the other invisible world and who conforms to his teaching. The view implies that there is no person who can speak independently of this world and the other world on the basis of his actual extraordinary experience, that all their teaching is guesswork and speculation, and so false and evil.

Today this view is echoed by those who scoff at religion. They reject the existence of Buddhas and Arahats who know the world as it really is through their own effort. But the logic underlying this view is self-defeating for by the same kind of reasoning, one can reject the view since those who hold it also do not know anything about this or the other world really.

As for the Buddha-dhamma, it rests on extraordinary insight (Sayain abhinna desita). As such it leads itself to empirical investigation and there is much scientific evidence for it.

The man who preached the Indian brand of agnosticism in the time of the Buddha was Ajita. He attacked all religious teaching without qualification and so it is to be assumed that the arahats and the Buddha, too, were the targets of his denunciation.

Right Views

All these ten wrong views boil down to the denial of the law of kamma for the rejection of kamma means rejection of any benefit accruing from the acts of dana and reference to parents, and other good deeds, as well as the kammic potential for arahatship or Buddhahood. Likewise, the ten right views mentioned below are based on the belief in kamma, or moral retribution.

(1) The first view is that dana is beneficial. One who gives alms is admired at least by the recipients. They will respect him, praise him and help him when he is in trouble. He dies calmly with good death-bed visions and after his death he attains good rebirth in deva-worlds or in human society. His good rebirth may finally lead to the Ariyan path and Nibbana. It was usually with an act of dana that the bodhisatta, and others embarked on their long spiritual journey leading to the goal of Buddhahood, paccekabuddhahood or arahatship.

The kammic effect of alms-giving is also evident in the material prosperity of some people. Some people do the same job such as business, farming, etc., but differ in their accomplishments. Some become prosperous while others make no progress materially. Some meet with success without working hard while others fail to prosper despite their hard work. Other things being equal, this disparity in the fortunes of some persons is no doubt due to dana or lack of dana in a previous life.

(2) and (3) The man who believes in the law of kamma will have no doubt about the kammic potency of giving alms lavishly or the small acts of dana such as feeding the guests, giving presents and so forth.

(4) These three right views are implicit in the law of kamma or moral retribution. That a man fares according to his good or bad deeds is an undeniable fact of life. A man who leads a good life in accordance with the instruction of his parents and teachers is popular, gets help from others and achieves success, and when he grows up he becomes a prosperous gentleman. Similarly, because of good kamma in a previous life a man may be born of a good family and blessed with health, wealth, physical beauty and sincere friends. The bad effect of evil kamma such as ill-health, poverty, ugliness, etc., are equally well-known to everybody.

(5) and (6) The belief in kamma also implies a recognition of our deep gratitude to parents. Parents take care of their children from the time of their conception. The mother is especially careful about her health, her food, and movements for the sake of the child in her womb. If she is a good Buddhist, she keeps sabbath and contemplates the Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha in the hope of influencing her child spiritually. After the birth of the child, the parents have to attend to his physical needs and educate him, and when he comes of age they have to give him financial support for a start in life. For these reasons, it is our bounden duty to revere and care for our parents; and this is a kammic act that benefits us immensely. At the very least, a man who respects his parents will be respected by his children while a man who wrongs his parents is very likely to be disdained by his children.

Seeing The World Beyond

(7), (8) and (9) The right views about the existence of this world, the invisible world and the living beings such as the devas who come into existence by spontaneous materialization. These right views are also implicit in the belief in the law of kamma for the law of kamma makes it possible for a living being from the animal or deva world to pass on to human world or vice-versa according to his kamma after death. This can be demonstrated to a certain extent but the observer will have to possess psychic powers, vipassana insight or the ability to think rationally.

Through the practice of samathajhana, a yogi can acquire the power of recalling the past lives; he can have the divine-eye (dibbacakkhu) that affords him a glimpse into the physical appearance, etc., of a person who has passed on to a new existence. This psychic power is also accessible to those who practise vipassana.

Those who cannot practise samatha or vipassana will have to depend on their power of reasoning. There are certain persons here and there who can recall their previous lives, people who are credited with jatissaranana in Buddhist literature. They describe their past lives as human beings, animals, spirits or ghosts. To the rational mind, these accounts clearly point to the post-mortem transition from this world to the other world and vice-versa as well as to the instant materialization of certain beings.

Here we wish to mention the way of thinking on the issue of a future life suggested by wise men. Suppose a man accepts the belief in kamma and life after death while another man rejects the belief. The second man will not do good deeds such as dana, sila and he will not avoid doing evil. He will give free rein to his desires. Therefore, he has no virtue that is worthy of respect and admiration by other people. If contrary to his belief, the law of kamma and a future life are real, he is bound to land in the lower worlds immediately after his death and suffer for many lifetimes throughout his samsaric existence.

On the other hand, the man who believes in kamma and after-life will avoid evil, do good and so, even if there is no kamma or a future life, he will be extolled and well-known for his good character. He will rejoice at the contemplation of his good deeds. As a good citizen, he will lead a peaceful life. These are the benefits that will certainly accrue to him from his belief in kamma in the present life. And if life after death is indeed a fact, he is assured of happiness hereafter. So it is reasonable to accept the belief in after-life since it serves our interests now or in future in any event. This is the infallible way of thinking that the Buddha recommends in Apannaka sutta of Majjhima nikaya.

Parami And Kamma

(10) Faith in the Buddha, the Arahats or holy men who can claim transcendent knowledge about this and the other worlds and who possess a noble character that lends credence to their teachings - such faith also presupposes the belief in kamma, for the spiritual attainment of Arahats and the Buddha rests in part on their parami (perfection) which does not differ essentially from kamma. Development of parami is a kind of learning. Just as a child has to learn many things in order to become well-educated, so also a bodhisatta has to seek knowledge and train himself for the attainment of his goal.

Some parents and elders take their children to movies and theatres while others take theirs to pagodas and monasteries. In this way the children acquire good or bad habits and develop a craving for sensual pleasure or a taste for the higher things of life. Good habits and good training may be called a kind of parami. Some children are spontaneously inclined to religious life, some men and women have immense zeal and energy for the practice of vipassana. Such a child's unusual interest in religion or a man's unusual love of spiritual life is born of the parami in a previous life.

Prince Siddhattha became the Buddha through the gradual development and perfection of parami such as dana, sila, nekkhama (renunciation) and so forth over aeons spanning innumerable lifetimes. It was not a matter of easy accomplishment in a single existence. It was this cumulative kammic potential or parami that helped to strengthen his will when he left his family and the luxuries of his royal palace in search of enlightenment. Today, some people speak of their disillusionment with life but it is hard for a man to renounce all his wealth and become a monk, let alone to think of the kind of renunciation that distinguished the bodhisatta.

The bodhisatta cultivated other paramis, too, for the sake of wisdom, at energy fortitude and so forth in way of his previous lives. As a result in his last existence he reflected and realized independently the nature of life, its dependent origination, etc. It was his kammic potential (parami) that finally led to his supreme enlightenment and likewise it was the parami that contributed to the spiritual attainments of Paccekabuddhas and Arahats. Hence, the belief in kamma makes it possible for the spiritual aspirant to become the arahat, Paccekabuddha or the Buddha and one who accepts the belief has no doubt about the transcendent knowledge of the Buddha and other holy men.

In short, ditthupadana is generally synonymous with rejection of the law of kamma. It was not widespread in the time of the Buddha or even about a hundred years ago but now it is gaining ground, thanks to the books that have criticized the doctrine of kamma in the name of scientific knowledge. As the scriptures say, false beliefs are usually rooted in craving and with man's increasing hunger for material goods, scepticism about kamma is likely to become dominant and it is up to good people to guard themselves against it.

Apart from the rejection of kamma, ditthupadana also means strong attachment to all false beliefs e.g. ego-belief, annihilation-belief, etc. The exceptions are the two false beliefs covered by silabbatupadana and attavadupadana.

(3) Silabbatupadana (Clinging To False Practices)

Silabbatupadana is clinging to wrong practices that do not lead to cessation of suffering. It is the view which identifies the habits of cows, dogs and other animals with the way to the end of dukkha. It found expression among some ascetics in the time of the Buddha. Like animals, they lived naked, ate, defecated and went about on all fours, and slept on the ground. They believed that such a way of life served to purge them of all evil kamma and forestall new kammic action, thereby assuring them of an end to suffering and eternal bliss after death.

To a Buddhist, this kind of belief may sound incredible but some people's preferences are very odd and they differ in their views and inclinations. So there came to the Buddha two ascetics, one Punna who lived like an ox and another Seniya who lived like a dog. They asked the Lord about the benefits of their practice. The Lord was reluctant to answer but when pressed for his view, he replied that an ascetic who committed himself wholly to the habits of an ox or a dog would be reborn as an ox or a dog after death; that it was wrong to believe that such practices led to the deva-world; and that one who held a wrong belief was likely to land in hell or in the animal world. Then the Buddha went on to describe (1) the evil practices that bear evil fruits, (2) the good practices that bear good fruits, (3) the evil practices mixed with good practices and (4) the practice of the Ariyan path that leads to the total extinction of good and bad kammas.

On hearing this sermon Punna became the disciple of the Buddha. Seniya joined the order and attained Arahatship through the practice of the Dhamma.

The Story Of Korakhattiya

In the time of the Buddha there was a man named Korakhattiya who lived like a dog. One day the Buddha passed by him, accompanied by a Licchavi bhikkhu, Sunakkhatta by name.

Sunakkhatta saw the ascetic moving on all fours and eating the food on the ground without the help of his hands. The ascetic's way of life gave the monk the impression of a holy man, nay, an Arahat who had few desires. In point of fact, the ascetic's mode of life was a kind of silabbatupadana that would lead him to one of the four lower worlds. It was abhorrent to those who had high ideals and aspirations. It had appeal for Sunakkhatta only because of his low tastes and desires. The Licchavi monk was exceptional in this respect. There were then not as now many people who preferred false views and false practices that did not accord with the Buddha's teaching. This was probably a hangover from wrong attachments in their previous lives.

The Buddha divined Sunakkhatta's thoughts and said, "So you regard that ascetic as an Arahat! I wonder why you do not feel ashamed of being called the disciple of the Buddha." The monk then accused the Lord of envying the ascetic's Arahatship. This is of course the kind of retort that is to be expected from an ignorant man when someone speaks the truth about his false teacher. The Buddha explained that his object was to remove the monk's illusions that would do him no good. Then he went on to predict that after seven days the ascetic would die of indigestion and land in the lowest Asura world; that his body would be dumped in a certain cemetery; that if the monk went there and asked about his present abode, the dead body would reveal it.

The Buddha made this prophecy in order to restore Sunakkhatta's faith in him. Through the practice of samatha Sunakkhatta had attained jhana and divine eye. With his divine eye he had seen the gods and goddesses and as he wished to hear their voices he asked the Buddha about the way to the attainment of divine ear. But the Lord declined to fulfil his desire because his bad kamma stood in the way and he would blame the Lord for the non-attainment of divine ear. Nevertheless, he lost his faith in the Lord because he thought that it was envy that motivated the Lord to refuse his request. So the Buddha predicted the ascetic's fate to impress Sunakkhatta and salvage his faith.

Sunakkhatta informed the ascetic of the Lord's prediction and warned him against overeating. The ascetic fasted for six days but on the seventh day he could not resist the temptation any longer. He wolfed down the food provided by a lay follower and died of indigestion that very night.

His fellow ascetics dragged his dead body to dump it in any place other than the cemetery specified in the Buddha's prediction. They got to a cemetery but found it to be the very place they wished to avoid for it had the kind of grass predicted by the Buddha. They tried to drag the body away but the creeper-rope snapped and all their efforts to remove it were in vain. So they had to abandon the corpse there.

Sunakkhatta heard the news but still he hoped to prove the falsity of the latter part of the Lord's prediction. He went to the cemetery and rapping the dead man asked about his abode. The corpse arose and after saying that he was in Kalakamjika asura abode fell back on the ground. Kalakamjika is the lowest asura abode. Asura is a kind of peta with a monstrous body and a mouth which is so small that it cannot drink and eat well.

According to the commentary, it was the Buddha's psychic power that made the dead body possessed by the asura peta. Given the ability of some sorcerers to raise the dead, there is no need to have any doubt about the resurrection of the dead ascetic through the psychic power (iddhi) of the Buddha.

Sunakkhatta came back crestfallen and had to admit that the Lord's prophecy had come wholly true. Even so, he did not have complete faith in the Buddha. Later on he left the holy order and disparaged the Lord.

Other Silabbata Practices

Besides the mode of life of cows and dogs there are other practices that can be described as silabbata. Some people emulate the elephants, horses, and so forth. In other words, they worship animals. The commentary refers to king-worshippers which may mean in Burma people who worship various nats. Nat-worship among Burmese people is not motivated by the desire for liberation from samsara (life cycle). It stems from the hope for material benefits here and now and as such it does not fall within the scope of silabbatupadana, but it is upadana over the belief that leads some people to make animal sacrifice in their worship of the nats.

There are also fire-worship, naga-worship, moon-worship, sun-worship, spirit-worship and so forth. If the object in any kind of worship is to have happiness or spiritual liberation after death, it is silabbatupadana. In short, all practices divorced from the Four Noble Truths and the Noble Eightfold Path are labelled silabbata and attachment to them as the way to salvation is silabbatupadana.

The yogi who has attained at least the sotapanna stage through the contemplation of nama-rupa is well aware of the right path to Nibbana and so he has freed himself from the belief in silabbata. He knows empirically that the way to the end of suffering is only through the introspection of nama-rupa and the practice of the Noble Eightfold Path.

For example, if you know from experience how to go from this meditation centre to Shwedagon pagoda, you will not be misled by anyone who points out the wrong way. Likewise, the yogi at the sotapanna stage knows the right way to Nibbana and so he has no illusion about the beliefs and practices such as belief in God, nat worship or asceticism that pass for the way to salvation.

Those who do not know the right path are not free from such illusion. They may have acquired it from their ignorant parents, teachers or friends; or because of their poor basic knowledge, they might have been misguided by books that advocate false beliefs and practices. The ordinary man (puthujjana) is ignorant of the right path to Nibbana and so he will have to reckon with many teachers and practices through his samsaric existence. If he falls for a false teacher or a false practice, he is in for a lot of suffering. Thus the practice of austerities will only cause hardships and pain and the performance of animal sacrifice will certainly lead to the lower worlds.

It is also upadana over silabbata to believe that rupajhana or arupajhana means complete salvation. In short, even the moral perfection or jhanic attainment in the mundane sphere, though commendable, may lead to silabbatupadana if it is divorced from the holy path of vipassana and regarded as the total liberation. Udaka sutta of Samyutta nikaya refers to the rishi Udaka, who having attained the arupa world through his arupajhana declared that he had uprooted the cause of dukkha and made an end of it. This was also the illusion of another rishi called Alara. This illusion or upadana led to their good kamma which in turn led to their rebirth in the arupa worlds.

So in his discourse to Baka brahma, the Buddha says: "I see the dangers of birth, old age, death, etc., inherent in the three worlds of sensuality, rupa and arupa. I see those who seek Nibbana still bound to existence. So I do not approve of any kind of existence. I have repudiated all attachment to existence."

Like the two rishis, those who do not know the Buddha's teaching never attain their goal. Although they seek permanent happiness, they follow the wrong path of silabbata and remain entangled in the samsaric existence of dukkha. So we can hardly over-emphasize the importance of right effort on the right path as pointed out by the Buddha.

(4) Attavadupadana (Clinging To Belief In Soul)

Attavadupadana is a compound of attavada and upadana. Attavada means belief in soul entity and attavadupadana is attachment to the view that every person is a living soul.

Attachment to the ego-belief is of two kinds, viz., ordinary attachment and deep-rooted attachment. Ordinary attachment that prevails among ignorant Buddhists is not harmful to progress on the holy path. The belief is not deeply entrenched because Buddhists accept the Buddha's teaching which denies the permanent soul and recognizes nama-rupa as the only reality behind a living being. Intelligent Buddhists are still less vulnerable to the belief. For they know that seeing, hearing, etc., involve only the sense-organs (eye, ear, etc.), the corresponding sense-objects (visual form, sound, etc.) and the corresponding states of consciousness.

But most people are not wholly free from the ego-belief. Even the yogi who practises vipassana may at times fall for it and it is likely to attract every man who has not attained the holy path.

In fact those who taught ego-belief described the ego as the owner of the five khandhas, as an independent entity, possessing free-will and self-determination. It was this view of atta (soul) that the Buddha questioned in his dialogue with the wandering ascetic Saccaka. Said the Buddha, "You say that this physical body is your atta. Then can you always keep it well, free from anything unpleasant?" Saccaka had to answer in the negative. Further questioning by the Lord elicited from him the reply that he had in fact no control over any of the five khandhas.

So the ancient Buddhist teachers translate "rupam anatta" as "the physical body is subject to no control", etc. In fact it is the denial of the "samiatta" or the false view of atta as a controlling entity. Every ordinary person holds this view and believes in free-will. He can overcome it completely only through vipassana contemplation.

The attavada teachers also say that atta exists permanently in the physical body. In other words, it means the personal identity that is said to persist through the whole existence.

Again, they say that atta is the subject of all actions, thus identifying it with sankharakkhandha. It is the illusion that creates the belief: "It is I that see, hear, etc."

They also say that atta is the living entity that feels; that it is atta that is happy or unhappy. In other words, they describe atta or soul in terms of vedana or feeling.

Thus, although the Atmanists (attavadi) insist that atta has nothing to do with the five khandhas, they credit it with ownership of the body, etc., permanent residence in the body, subjectivity and feeling: and, hence, in effect they identify it with the five khandhas. The ego-illusion is rooted in the khandhas and a man can free himself completely from it only when he becomes aware of the real nature of khandhas through contemplation.

Of the four upadana, the first upadana (clinging to sensuality) is the developed form of craving (tanha). The other three upadanas differ only as regards their objects; basically they all relate to beliefs, viz., belief in ego, belief in the efficacy of practices other than those of the Eightfold Path, and any false belief other than those in the category of the other two upadana. All false beliefs arise in connection with craving. Men cling to a belief because they like it. Thus there is no doubt that all the four upadanas stem from craving and hence the Buddha's teaching: "From tanha there arises upadana."

In point of fact, craving is the cause and clinging is the effect. Craving for sensual pleasure, ego-belief, or practices irrelevant to the holy path or other false beliefs is the cause, and this craving develops into clinging to sensuality, ego-belief, etc., and thus becomes effects.

Clinging Leads To Becoming

Upadana leads to bhava (becoming). There are two kinds of bhava, viz., kammabhava and upapattibhava.

(1) Kammabhava

Kammabhava means the kamma that leads to rebirth. The Buddha describes it as the punnabhi, apunnabhi and anenjabhi sankharas that lead to lower sensual world or the higher material and immaterial worlds. He also identifies kammabhava with all kammas that give rise to new existence.

Of the three sankharas, punnabhi sankhara comprises the eight wholesome volitions (cetana) in sensual sphere and five wholesome volitions in the material (rupa) sphere. Apunnabhi sankhara is the group of twelve unwholesome volitions. Anenjabhi sankhara means the four wholesome volitions in immaterial sphere. Also leading to rebirth are the kammas that arise together with the wholesome volitions in sensual sphere, viz., having no covetous thoughts or designs about another's possessions, having no design against another person's life and holding right views. These kammas are implicit in punnabhi sankhara. In short, kammabhava is the good or bad volition that leads to rebirth.

(2) Upapattibhava

Upapattibhava is of nine kinds. (1) kammabhava means the nama-rupas of living beings in the sensual world. In other words, kammabhava refers to existences in the hell and the worlds of devas, mankind, animals and petas. (2) rupabhava - the khandhas of brahmas with rupas. (3) arupabhava - namakhandhas of brahmas with no rupas. (4) sannibhava - nama-rupas of beings with gross perceptions, that is beings in 29 abodes other than asanni nevasanni abodes. (5) asanaribhava - nama-rupa of asanni-brahmas. (6) Nevasanninasanni - namakhandhas of higher brahmas. (7) ekavokarabhava - the bhava with only rupakkhandha. (8) catuvokarabhava - the bhava with four namakhandhas. (9) pancavokarabhava - of bhava with five nama-rupakkhandhas.

In short, upapattibhava means the nama-rupas of the new existence that results from kamma. It comprises the vinnana, nama-rupa, salayatana, phassa and vedana.

The bhava that arises from upadana is basically kammabhava, the other upapattibhava being merely its by-product.

From contact with six pleasant or unpleasant sense-objects there arise six pleasant or unpleasant feelings.

Feelings lead to craving and craving develops into clinging; clinging to sensual objects may become excessive to the point of craving for union with one's family in a future life or attainment of Nibbana hand in hand with one's beloved. The excessive degree of a man's upadana is evident in the story of the merchant Mendaka.

Story Of Mendaka

Mendaka was a rich merchant in a previous life. In the face of a famine, his stock of provisions gradually ran out and at last he had to send away his attendants and was left with his wife, a son, his daughter-in-law and a slave. His wife had cooked rice that was barely enough for their consumption, and they were about to eat it when a paccekabuddha appeared to receive food.

At the sight of the paccekabuddha, the merchant thought of his bad kamma, that is, lack of dana in a previous life that had now brought about his starvation. He then offered his share of rice to the paccekabuddha and prayed for abundant supply of food and reunion with the members of his household in his future lives. His wife too donated her share of rice and expressed a similar wish in her prayer. The son and his wife followed suit and prayed in the same vein, that is, for unlimited supply of food and money as well as reunion with the same wife, husband, parents and slaves.

The prayers of the merchant and his family clearly point to the powerful influence of upadana in the sensual sphere and most people today are no less subject to the same kind of attachment. But more appalling is the upadana of the slave Punna. After offering his share of rice, he prayed for abundance of food and rebirth as the slave of the same family! It never occurred to him to pray for rebirth as a king or a merchant; his attachment to his masters and mistresses was so strong that he wanted only to be their slave hereafter.

Once there was a village headman who stood well with Government officials. Those were the days when under British rule most of the high ranking officials were Englishmen. The headman took much delight in paying respect to them. He said that he enjoyed saying, Phaya, "Yes, my Lord," when he was called by an officer. His attachment was essentially the same as that of Punna.

The paccekabuddha blessed them and departed. By means of his psychic power they saw him fly back to the Himalayas and share the food with five hundred other fellow buddhas.

On that very day, the merchant and his family found their acts of dana bearing fruit wonderfully. They found the rice pot full of rice. They ate to their hearts' content, but the pot was always full of rice. They found their granaries, too, overflowing with grains.

Their prayers were fulfilled in the lifetime of the Buddha-Gotama for they became members of the same household in Baddiya, a city of the Magadha country. The news of the fulfilment of their prayers was so unusual and amazing that the king made an inquiry through a minister and found that it was indeed true. This story is mentioned in Vinaya pitaka.

Upadana And Kammabhava

When the sensual desire for an object develops into an intense craving, a person becomes desperate and tries to secure it by fair means or foul. Thefts, robberies, frauds, murders and so forth that are rampant nowadays stem from upadana. Some crimes are rooted in sensual upadana while others arise from one of the three kinds of illusion based on upadana. People commit crimes not only because of their unwholesome desire but also because of their blind attachment to wives, husbands, etc.

The following is a story illustrative of the evil kammabhava resulting from sensual upadana.

Puppharatta Jataka

Long ago, there was a poor man in Benares. He had only a suit of thick clothes. He washed it to wear during the Tazaungdine festival, but his wife disliked the white clothes and craved for a garment of pink colour. All his efforts to reason with her being in vain, the man at last sneaked into the royal garden at night to steal the flower that was to be used for dyeing his wife's garment. He fell into the hands of the guards and was ordered by the king to be impaled. He suffered terribly with the crows pecking at his eyes. Yet he murmured that his physical pain was nothing when compared to the mental suffering that overwhelmed him when he thought of the non-fulfilment of his wife's desire and his inability to enjoy the festival together with her. So crying over his ill-luck, he died and landed in hell.

Today, there may be many people who do evil due to the pressure of those whom they love. All these evil deeds comprise kammas stemming from upadana and leading to the lower worlds. So Visuddhimagga says: "Under the influence of sensual upadana, people do evil in deeds, words and thought because of their craving for sensual objects in the present life and their desire to preserve the objects in their possession. Such evil deeds usually lead to the lower worlds."

Right And Wrong Good Kamma

Some good deeds are right but some are wrong. The so-called good deeds that some people do are harmful and as such they are evil kammas. For example, some people believe that it is a good deed to put an end to the suffering of some animals by cutting short their span of life. Every living being is afraid to die or suffer pain and it is certainly wrong to cause pain and death to animals.

Some people also consider it a good deed to bring about the speedy death of a person who is suffering from an incurable, painful disease. But the patient does not want to die although he wants to be free from pain. Even if he expresses the desire to die, it is wrong from the Buddhist point of view to cause the death of a living being and if one directly or indirectly causes the premature death of a parent by "mercy killing", it is a grave kammic offence that leads to hell.

"Craving for the sensual pleasures of the human and deva-worlds, and misled by false teachings, etc., some people do misdeeds such as killing for the attainment of their object. But as a result of their evil kamma, they land in the lower worlds after death."

According to the commentary, misconceptions of those people arise from false teachers, lack of good kamma in the past and the failure to guard oneself. Reliance on evil teachers leads to evil kamma, much evil kamma in the previous life makes it easy to acquire evil views and evil habits, and lack of self-vigilance makes one an easy prey to temptation.

True religion is called saddhamma "the religion of the good man". Those who follow the true religion hear good teachings, avoid evil deeds, evil words and evil thoughts, hold right views about the future life, kamma and its fruits, etc., cultivate good thoughts and practise dana, sila and bhavana for their welfare.

The practice of alms-giving, morality and mental development is true and good dhamma because it is harmless and acceptable to everybody. Nobody will blame a man who avoids killing, stealing, abusing and other misdeeds. The good deeds which we do for our welfare here and now or hereafter are wholesome kammas that stem from upadana in the sensual sphere. These kammas lead to rebirth in the human or deva worlds. So the Visuddhimagga says: "Those who hear the true teaching believe in kamma and the efficacy of good deeds as passport to better life in the sensual worlds of rich men, aristocrats or divine beings. So they do good deeds under the influence of kamupadana and are reborn in the human and deva worlds."

Kamma and Rebirth

As it is said, "Bhava paccaya jati," rebirth occurs in the human and deva worlds or in the lower worlds because of good or evil kamma-process. So rebirth stems from kammas which result from clinging (upadana) and craving that is rooted in the contact between the six sense-objects and the corresponding sense-organs (ayatana).

In other words, there arise vinnana, nama-rupa, salayatana, phassa and vedana in the present life as the avijja sankhara, etc., in a previous existence and now on top of that, tanha and upadana give rise to new kamma, thereby providing the ground for new rebirth. The situation is like that of a man who has committed a crime while he is in prison for a previous conviction, or that of a man who has incurred new debt before he has fully settled his old debt.

Such new kammas accumulate by the thousands in a single lifetime. Under certain conditions one of these kammas becomes a death-bed vision and leads to rebirth while other kammas will create rebirth at other times in the life-cycle. If there are residual kammas from the previous lives that possess great force, they take precedence over present kamma, appear as death-bed visions and create rebirth in the lower or higher worlds. The post-mortem destiny of the person in such cases is determined by the nature of kamma.

Four Kinds Of Kamma

Kamma is of four kinds, according to the way in which it bears fruit. (1) //garukamma// - weighty kamma, (2) //bahula or acinnaka kamma// - habitual kamma, (3) //asanna kamma// - death proximate kamma and (4) //katatta// kamma - stored-up kamma.

//Garukamma// is killing parents or an Arahat or causing injury to a Buddha or causing a schism in the Sangha. As for the good //garukammas//, there are the good kammas of the material and non-material worlds. The //garukammas// head off the fruition of other kammas and lead to rebirth, rupa and arupa jhanas among them leading to rupa and arupa rebirth.

The evil garukammas lead direct to hell after death; hence, the term //pancanantriyakammas// - the five great evil kammas leading invariably to hell. The man who kills his father or mother unknowingly or knowingly can never attain jhana or the path and fruition (maggaphala) in the present life; he is bound to land in hell after his death. He cannot attain jhana or the path nor can any good kamma save him from hell. This is evident in the story of Ajatasattu.

Story Of Ajatasattu

Ajatasattu was the son of Bimbisara, the king of Magadha state, a devoted follower of the Buddha. Prior to the birth of the prince, the queen had the desire to drink the blood from the right arm of the king. When the king learnt this, he had the blood taken out and fulfilled her desire. The soothsayers then predicted that the child in the queen's womb would become the king's enemy. Hence the name Ajatasattu - the potential enemy of the father while still in the mother's womb.

The queen tried to abort the child but as the king's kamma and the child's kamma would have it otherwise, she did not succeed in her attempt. The king had her pregnancy well protected and the child was born. When he came of age, he was appointed heir-apparent.

Then the young prince fell into the clutches of the evil-minded Devadatta who misused his psychic power for his selfish ends. Turning himself into a boy with a snake coiled around his waist, he appeared before Ajatasattu and then showed himself as a bhikkhu. The prince was deeply impressed, and no wonder for people are very much interested in miracles and they have blind faith in anyone who can perform them. The prince held Devadatta in high esteem and became his devoted follower.

Then Devadatta made another move for the success of his evil design. He told the prince that since people did not live long, he (the prince) should kill his father and become king while still in the prime of his life; and that he (Devadatta) on his part would kill the Buddha. The prince failed in his attempt on the life of the king but when the latter learnt of his desire, he handed over his kingship to his son.

The transfer of power nonetheless came short of Devadatta's scheme. On his advice, Ajatasattu imprisoned his father and starved him. The queen was the only person who was permitted to visit the prison and see the king. She secretly brought food for the king by various means and at last she was forbidden to visit the prison. From that day, the king got nothing to eat but still he managed to keep himself in good physical condition by pacing on the floor. Then by the king's order, the barbers caused such injury to the feet of his father as to make it impossible for him to walk. According to the commentary, he was thus injured because in a previous life he walked with footwear on the platform of a pagoda and trod with unwashed feet on a mat meant for the bhikkhus.

King Bimbisara died probably at the age of 67. His son Ajatasattu was not evil-minded at heart. His good nature was evident in his devotion to the Buddha after he had wronged his father, his adoration and enshrinement of the Buddha relics and whole-hearted support which he gave to the First Council. It was his association with the evil teacher that led him astray to the point of patricide. His life affords us a lesson that we should specially bear in mind.

On the very day of his father's death, his wife gave birth to a son. On hearing the news, he became excited and overwhelmed with great affection for his child. This reminded him of his father and he ordered the release of the imprisoned king, but it was too late. When later on he learnt from his mother how much he was loved and cared for by his father in his childhood, he was seized with remorse. His life became wretched and miserable. He could not sleep at night, haunted by the visions of hell and smitten by conscience for his crime against his father, a devout lay disciple of the Buddha at that.

So led by the physician Jivaka, he went to see the Buddha. At that time the Lord was surrounded by over a thousand bhikkhus. But as they were in a contemplative mood, all was quiet with none speaking or making any movement of their hands or feet. Being deeply impressed, the king said, "May my son Udayabaddha be blessed with the kind of serenity which these bhikkhus possess!" Perhaps he feared lest his son should come to know how he seized power and try to follow in his father's footsteps. But later his fear did become a reality for down to his great grandson, the sons ascended the throne after killing their fathers.

King Ajatasattu asked the Buddha about the immediate benefits of the life in the holy order. The Lord enlarged on the benefits accruing from the holy life - the lay follower's reverence for the bhikkhu, moral purity, the first jhana and other higher states of consciousness in the mundane sphere, psychic powers, extinction of defilements and the attainments of the holy path.

After hearing the sermon, Ajatasattu formally declared himself a disciple of the Buddha. He would have attained the first stage on the path but for his patricide. Nevertheless, from that time he had peace of mind and after his death, he was spared the terrors of Avici hell that would have been in store for him had he not met the Buddha.

Habitual And Death-Bed Kammas

The other three weighty kammas, viz., killing an Arahat, causing injury to the Buddha and wilfully causing a schism in the Sangha are also bound to drag the offender to hell.

The other type of kamma that bears fruit is habitual kamma, called //bahula or acinna kamma//. Failure to lead a good moral life may become habitual if no step is taken to remove it, and it will have evil kammic effect in a future life. So laymen should live up to the five precepts and in case of any breach verbally affirm the will to guard one's moral life more vigilantly. Moral purity is equally vital to the life of a bhikkhu.

Failure to make amends for any deliberate or unintentional violation of a vinaya rule will create habitual kamma and so the bhikkhu should seek to regain moral purity through confession and reaffirmation of his will to preserve it.

Alms-giving, reverence for parents and teachers, contemplation of the Buddha, practice of meditation and so forth, which one does daily are also habitual kammas that tend to bear immediate fruits.

In the absence of habitual kamma, what we do at the last moment of our life (//asanna kamma//: death-bed kamma) produces kammic results. In one Abhidhamma book, it is described as being more potent than habitual kamma but perhaps this is true only in exceptional cases. As the commentaries say, the habitual kammas probably take precedence and bear fruits.

Nevertheless, in the light of stories in ancient Buddhist literature we can certainly rely on death-bed kamma. A dying man who had killed people for over 50 years attained the deva-world after offering food to Sariputta and hearing his discourse. This story finds an echo in the experience of a. Sinhalese fisherman who landed in the deva world after his encounter with a thera just before his death.

As productive as the positive death-bed kamma is its negative counterpart. A Sinhalese layman who practised meditation for many years was disappointed as he had never seen even the light. He then concluded that the Buddha's teaching was not the way to liberation and because of this false view he landed in the peta world after his death.

Failure to encounter the light, etc., in the practice of meditation may be due to wrong method, wrong effort or lack of basic potential (parami). In the time of the Buddha, a monk called Sunakkhatta attained divine eye but not the divine-ear because he did not have the potential for it and, besides, there was his bad kamma as a hindrance.

So the yogi need not be disheartened if his practice does not produce the desired effect. By and large, practice along the right path leads to unusual experiences.

With tranquillity and purity of mind, the material object of contemplation and the contemplating consciousness become clearly distinct as do their causal relation and their ceaseless, rapid arising and dissolution. At that time, the yogi sees the light but even if he does not see it clearly he experiences joy, ecstasy, etc., for joy, ecstasy, tranquillity, equanimity, etc., form the links of enlightenment (//bojjhanga//) that are so vital to the development of vipassana insight. Reflection on namarupa by itself does not lead to these higher states of consciousness.

In the absence of habitual or death-bed kamma, there is kattata kamma which means the kamma that one has done once in a lifetime.

Birth And Suffering

The role of kamma in the chain of causation is underscored in the teaching sankhara paccaya vinnanani -

"From sankhara there arises rebirth consciousness", which we have already explained in detail. The dying person is attached to the signs and visions relating to his kamma and so on his death there follow kamma-based rupas together with rebirth-consciousness conditioned by his death-bed attachment.

Contact with the sense-objects gives rise to feeling which in turn produces desire. It does not matter whether the feeling is pleasant or unpleasant. Pleasant feeling creates attachment to pleasant objects while unpleasant feeling makes us crave for pleasant objects. When the desire becomes strong and develops into frantic craving (upadana), it results in activity or effort for its fulfilment. People do good or bad deeds which they hope will help to satisfy their needs and desires. It is this kammabhava rooted in craving that gives rise to rebirth. Rebirth is bound up with suffering regardless of the world in which it takes place.

There is no need to dwell on the sufferings in the animal and other lower worlds. Among human beings, too, suffering is an inescapable fact of life. A man's suffering begins while he is in the mother's womb. He has to work hard for his living, he is harassed by bullies and tyrants. Even if he escapes from the dukkha inherent in the struggle for survival, he will finally have to face old age, sickness and death. From the time of his conception, man is headed towards these inevitable evils of life. He is approaching them at every moment. He may live an apparently care-free, happy life but his namarupas are forever in the process of ageing and disintegration.

There is an Indian story which stresses the inevitability of old age, sickness and death. A man being afraid of old age rose into the air with the elixir of life in his mouth and hid in the sky. Another man hid under the sea to escape sickness and still another hid in a cave in Himalayas to avoid death. When their sons searched for them they found that the first man had become old with all the ugly signs of decrepitude, the second man was sick unto death and the third man was dead.

Everyone is subject to old age, sickness and death. Once a man is reborn, there is nothing that will protect him from these evils of existence. Hence, the Buddha's saying in the Dhammapada that there is no place in the sky, on land or in the sea, where one can escape death.

Grief And Lamentation

Death and the other two evils of life are inevitable so long as rebirth takes place within the framework of disintegrating nama-rupa. Rebirth leads also to grief, anxiety, lamentations and anguish.

We grieve when a member of the family dies. The grief is overwhelming when we lose someone, e.g. parents or a husband on whom we have to depend or someone, e.g. a son or a daughter whom we love dearly. Another cause for grief is the loss of material possessions through evil-minded officials, robbers, thieves, destructive fires, floods, cyclones, and hated heirs. Grief is also caused by the affliction of disease and decline of health. Some sick persons are so much depressed that their mental states become a hindrance to their recovery. In the case of morally scrupulous monks and laymen, any damage to moral life gives rise to anxiety. Thus, the rishi Isisinga suffered terrible anguish when his moral integrity was undermined by the seduction of a goddess. Anxiety and repentance also torment those who realize their mistakes after having rejected the right view in favour of a wrong one under the guidance of a false teacher.

Besides, there are many other misfortunes in life, e.g. accidents, viz., victimization by robbers, etc., hardship in earning one's living and, securing the necessities of life and so forth that occasion grief, anguish and lamentation.

There is no need to dwell on the physical sufferings in hell and the animal and peta-worlds. Because of his consciousness, man also suffers anguish whenever he is in contact with unpleasant sense-objects. As he has thus to suffer mentally into the bargain, it is for him something like adding insult to injury. This does not apply to the Arahat or the noble one at the anagami stage, for being free from irritation (dosa) he remains unperturbed in the face of physical suffering and so does the mindful yogi who is free from ego-illusion that tends to add to the sense of self-pity. Hence, the importance of the Buddha's teaching that we should be aware of unpleasant feeling when we suffer from it.

People are unhappy when they think of the frustrations and misfortunes that beset them in the past or at present or that may beset them in future. They feel bitter and upset when they find themselves in distress and burdened with misfortunes.

All these sufferings are rooted in rebirth. Life is all suffering without the ego and without anything good even if there were such ego to enjoy it.

According to the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada, the only thing that links one existence with another is the cause-and-effect relationship. From craving, kammic effort, etc., based on ignorance in one existence, there arise five effects, viz., consciousness, body and mind, sense-organs, contact, and feeling. These effects begin with rebirth and end in death with old age, anxiety and other sufferings in between them.

This teaching of the Buddha will not appeal to common people who harbour illusions of happiness and ego-entity. But impersonality and suffering are the unmistakable facts of existence and life in the deva-world is no exception. Some earth-bound devas have to struggle hard for survival and are more miserable than human beings. They are called //vinipatika// devas and they comprise ghosts, devils, etc., that belong to lower order of devas. Some devas in heavens are not happy because they do not have good abodes and enough attendants. Even Sakka, the king of devas, admitted to the elderly thera Mahakassapa that he was not very much luminous as his attainment of deva-world was due to the good kamma which he did long before the proclamation of Buddha-dhamma and that he had to hide himself when he saw the devas who outshone him as they had done good kamma in the time of the Buddha.

Thus, Sakka was not always happy and so were his female attendants who told Mahakassapa that they were wretched and miserable since they counted for little among the high-ranking queen-goddesses. Some devas become unhappy on the approach of death that is heralded by the withering of their bedecked flowers, the sweating from their armpits and other signs of senility. Some devas die suddenly while indulging in celestial pleasure just like a man whose life is cut off by stroke. Death may be a matter of seconds like the extinction of the flame of a candle. This is borne out by the story of Subrahma deva.

Story Of Subrahma Deva

Subrahma deva was having a good time when his attendants, the goddesses who were singing and plucking flowers on the tree died suddenly and landed in hell. Subrahma deva saw them suffering in hell and at the same time he foresaw that he too would die in a few days and share the fate of his attendants. Being much frightened, he came to the Buddha and asked the Lord to show him the place where he could live without fear. The Lord then says that he sees no way to salvation for every living being other than the practice of //bojjhanga// dhamma (links of enlightenment such as mindfulness), the //dhutanga// (ascetic practices) and //sammappadhana// (right exertion), that serve to put an end to defilements, the control of senses (indriyasamvarasile), the control that helps to keep off the defilements and Nibbana which means renunciation of everything.

On hearing this, the deva and his attendants attained the first stage on the holy path. What we should note here is the sudden death of the goddesses. The fate of those who thus die suddenly while engaged in the pursuit of pleasure is indeed terrible for they are likely to land in hell as a result of unwholesome kammic impulses. If there is any sign that heralds the approach of death, it creates fear and adds to their suffering.

Suffering that stems from attachment to pleasure is not confined to the sensual sphere. For it is the lot, too, of the Brahmas in their immaterial or formless (arupa) world. In the Brahma world there is no pleasure of sex or any other sensual pleasure. The Brahmas only see, hear or think and the objects of their seeing, etc., have no sexual overtones. But as Visuddhimagga says, some people develop a craving for the sensual pleasures of the Brahma world because they believe either through hearsay or speculation that such pleasures are superior to those of the human and deva-worlds. It is no other than their sensual craving that leads to the attainment of rupajhana, arupajhana, samapatti and finally lands them in the rupa or arupa brahma worlds.

It is not surprising that some people think or speak of the sensual pleasure in the Brahma world. Those who are well aware of the true teachings of the Buddha will reject the idea but it probably appeals to ignorant people. The Indian religious books portray Brahma with his wife and some regard even Nibbana as a heavenly abode with celestial mansions where we can dwell with our families and attendants.

Kamaupadana Means All Kinds Of Excessive Craving

Kamaupadana here means not only the excessive craving for sensual pleasure. It means also the developed forms of craving for the material and immaterial (rupa and arupa) worlds. Hence, according to Visuddhimagga, the yogi can do away with this inordinate craving only at the last stage of the holy path and it is this craving that lies at the root of every effort to attain rupa or arupa jhana. For ordinary people such jhana means rupa or arupa kammic effort based on sensual craving and this leads to rebirth in rupa or arupa world of Brahmas. From the time of rebirth there arises the ceaseless ageing (jara) of nama-rupa or either of the two phenomena of life. The senility of the Brahma is not apparent like that of a human being but still it leads to decay, and when his course is run, he cannot avoid death.

Being free from hatred, the life of a Brahma is not subject to grief, worry, anxiety and so forth; and the lack of physical sensitivity makes him free from physical suffering. He cannot, however, escape birth, old age and death that are inherent in every kind of existence.

So escape from old age and death presupposes the effort to rule out the possibility of rebirth. In order to avoid rebirth, we must seek to avoid wholesome or unwholesome kamma and negation of kammic existence calls for negation of attachment and craving. For this purpose, the mental process must end in feeling and stop short of developing the desire for anything. This denial of desire through the contemplations, anicca, dukkha and anatta of everything arising from the senses is the only way to avoid craving, rebirth and other links in the causal sequence that leads to old age and death. This means the temporary extinction of suffering which the yogi can overcome once and forever when he develops vipassana insight on the holy path.

Attachment To Belief As The Cause Of Rebirth

Ditthupadana means the attachment to the view which rejects future life and kamma. Hence, ucchedaditthi which insists on annihilation after death is a kind of ditthupadana. A person who holds such a belief will have no need to do good or avoid evil. He will do nothing for other-worldly welfare and seek to enjoy life as much as possible by fair means or foul. As he has no moral scruples, most of his acts are unwholesome kammas that create death-bed visions and lead him to the lower worlds. This is evident in the story of Nandaka peta.

Nandaka was a general in the time of king Pingala who ruled Surattha country that lay north of the present province of Bombay in West India. He clung to false views e.g. that it was useless to give alms and so forth. After his death he became a peta on a banyan tree, but when his daughter offered food to a monk and shared her merit with him, he had an unlimited supply of celestial drinks and food. He then realized the truth of the kammic law and repented of his adherence of false views in his previous life. One day, he led king Pingala to his abode and entertained the king and his followers to a celestial feast. The king was much surprised and in response to his inquiry, the peta gave an account of his rebirth in the lower worlds as a kammic result of his false views, immorality and vehement opposition to alms-giving; and the sudden change of his fortune following his sharing of merit acquired by his daughter. He also described the suffering that he would have to undergo after his death, the terrible suffering in hell that he was to share with those who held wrong views and vilified the holy men during their earthly existence.

The moral of the story is that attachment to wrong views (e.g. that an act has no kammic result, etc.) leads to unwholesome acts and rebirth in the lower worlds.

The commentary also says that clinging to uccheda (annihilation) belief leads to deva or Brahma worlds if annihilation is supposed to follow demise on those higher planes of existence, but devas and Brahmas apparently do not believe in their annihilation after death. By and large, the belief in annihilation makes people prone to misdeeds.

Kammic deeds may also be motivated by eternity belief (sassataditthi). The belief creates the illusion of personal identity, the illusion which makes a man believe that it is his permanent self that will have to bear the consequences of his good or bad deeds in a future life. So he devotes himself to what he regards as good deeds. Some of his deeds may be bad in fact, but in any case his deeds, whether good or bad, that arise from eternity belief lead to rebirth and suffering.

Still, another mainspring of kammic deed is superstitious belief. There are many superstitions, for example, that seeing a man of low class brings about misfortune, that the beehive or a guana in a house is a sure omen of poverty. Under the influence of such beliefs, a person may do evil, such as treating an outcaste cruelly or killing the bees. This is borne out by the Cittasambhuta jataka.

In the jataka the bodhisatta was a man of low chandala class called Citta. Ananda was then his cousin named Sambhuta. They made their living by dancing with bamboos. One day, the daughter of a merchant and the daughter of a high-caste brahmin who were very superstitious went for a picnic with their attendants. At the sight of the two dancers, they considered it an ill omen and returned home. Their irate followers then beat the two men for denying them the pleasure of the picnic.

The two dancers then went to Taxila and disguised as brahmins, they devoted themselves to learning. Citta became a student leader by virtue of his intelligence. One day, their teacher sent them to a place where they were required to recite the brahmanical parittas. There having got his mouth burnt by drinking hot milk unmindfully, Sambhuta uttered, "Khalu, Khalu" in his dialect and Citta was so absent-minded as to say, "niggala, niggala" ("spit out, spit out"); these slips of the tongue led to their undoing for their high caste brahmin students found out their secret. They were beaten and expelled from school.

On the advice of their teacher they became rishis (forest ascetics or hermits). After their death they passed on to the animal world, first as two deers and as two eagles in their next existence. Then Citta became the son of the chief Brahmin and remembered his three previous lives. He led the life of a hermit and attained jhana and psychic powers. Sambhuta became a king, he remembered his low caste life as a chandala and spent his time in the pursuit of sensual pleasure.

By means of his psychic power, Citta knew his brother's spiritual immaturity and after waiting for 50 years he came to the king's garden. The king recognized the hermit as his brother in a previous life and was prepared to share royal pleasures with him. But being aware of the kammic effects of good and bad deeds, the bodhisatta had pledged himself to a life of self-restraint, renunciation and detachment. He reminded the king of their close associations in their previous lives, to wit, as low-caste chandalas, as deers and as birds. His object was to point out the erratic course of kammic life and to urge the king to become an ascetic for further spiritual progress. But it was hard for Sambhuta to give up his worldly pleasures. So the bodhisatta returned to the Himalayas. Then the king became disenchanted with his worldly pleasures and went to the Himalayas where he was welcomed by the hermit. There, as a hermit he devoted himself to spiritual exercises and attained jhana and psychic powers.

Superstition And Evil Rebirth

What we wish to emphasize in this story is the evil kammas that arise from superstitions. The role of superstition as the cause of evil deeds is also evident in the story of Koka, the hunter.

In the time of the Buddha, there was a hunter called Koka in a certain village. One day he set out with his dogs to hunt in the forest. On the way he met a monk who was out on his begging round. The hunter considered this encounter an omen that boded no good. As luck would have it, he did not get any animal for food on that day. On his return he again met the monk. Now blind with fury and ill-will, he set his dogs on the monk. The monk had to run and climb up a tree.

He sat on a branch that was not very high. The hunter poked at the feet of the monk with the sharp end of an arrow. The latter had to lift his feet one after the other and at last his robe got loose and slipped down. It fell upon the hunter and seeing him thus wrapped up in the robe, the dogs mistook him for the monk and attacked him. Thus, he was killed by his own dogs. Then realizing that they had killed their master, the dogs ran away.

The monk got down from the tree and reported the matter to the Buddha. Thereupon, the Lord says, "The foolish man wrongs a person who has never wronged another. He wrongs a person who is free from defilements, but his evil deed boomerangs on him just like the particle of dust that returns to us when we throw it against the wind."

Here, the hunter's terrible death, his rebirth in the lower worlds and suffering arise from an evil deed that in turn is rooted in his superstition. Some people get alarmed when an astrologer says that the position of planets bodes no good for them. So they offer flowers and candles to the Buddha image, give dana to the monks, hear the sermons and practise meditation. Some have the parittas recited by monks to stave off the impending evil that they associate with their unpleasant dreams. Their good deeds lead to good rebirth, but like the other rebirths that stem from evil deeds, it too is fraught with suffering.

Some ignorant people do evil to keep off the misfortunes that might befall them. The jatakas mention the animal sacrifice of some kings that involves the killing of four goats, four horses, four men and so forth as propitiatory offerings to gods. On one occasion, this kind of rite was planned by king Kosala in the time of the Buddha.

The king had taken a fancy to a married woman and so one day he sent her husband on an errand to a distant place. Should he fail to accomplish the task entrusted to him and return to the capital on the same day, he was to be punished. The man carried out the king's order and returned before sunset, but the city gate was closed and so being unable to enter the city, he spent the night at Jetavana monastery.

Overwhelmed with lust and evil desire, the king could hardly sleep in his palace. He heard the voices of the four men who were suffering in hell for having committed adultery in their previous lives. It was perhaps by virtue of the Buddha's will and psychic power that the king heard these voices from hell. The king was frightened and in the morning, he sought the advice of the Brahmin counsellor. The Brahmin said that the voices portended imminent misfortune and that in order to stave it off, the king should sacrifice elephants, horses, etc., each kind of animals numbering a hundred.

The king made preparations for the animal sacrifice. How cruel is human nature that dictates the sacrifice of thousands of lives to save one's own life. Among the potential victims there were human beings, and hearing their cries, queen Mallika approached the king and asked him to seek the advice of the Buddha.

The Buddha assured the king that the voices had nothing to do with him. They were the voices of four young men who, having seduced married women in the time of Kassapa Buddha, were now suffering in Lohakumbhi hell. They were now repentent and belatedly trying to express their desire to do good after their release from hell. The king was very much frightened and vowed never to lust for another man's wife. He told the Buddha how the previous night had seemed very long because he could not sleep. The man who had fetched what the king wanted said too that he had travelled one yojana the previous day. Thereupon, the Buddha uttered the verse: "To one who cannot sleep, the night seems long; to the weary traveller, a yojana is a long distance. Similarly, for the foolish man who does not know the true dhamma, the life-cycle is long."

After hearing this gatha, many people attained sotapanna and other stages on the holy path. The king ordered the release of all living beings that were to be sacrificed. But for the Buddha's words, he would have done unwholesome kammas, and this story shows how superstitious beliefs lead to evil deeds.

Fanaticism Or Religious Upadana

Good or evil kammas are also born of religious attachments. By and large, people believe that theirs is the only true religion, that all other religions are false. So they try to spread their religion, convert other people by force or otherwise persecute the non-believers. All these evils had their origin in religious upadana or fanaticism.

Again kammic deeds may stem from attachment to ideology or views on worldly matters. Some people seek to impose their creed on other people by every means in their power; they propagate it in various ways and they discredit or slander or undermine the unity of those who do not agree with them. All these efforts and activities form the kammabhava due to upadana.

In short, all obsessions with practices, and beliefs other than the ego-belief mean excessive attachment to views that leads to kammic deeds.

Silabbatupadana - Attachment To Wrong Practices

Some people believe that they can attain salvation through certain practices that have nothing to do with the Four Noble Truths. Such a belief is called silabbatupadana. It is silabbatupadana, too, to worship animals, to adopt the animal way of life, to perform certain rites and ceremonies in the hope of attaining salvation.

According to Visuddhimagga, some people rely on these practices as the way to salvation and do kammic deeds that lead to rebirth in the human world, the deva world and the material (rupa) and immaterial (arupa) worlds.

The Visuddhimagga refers only to kammas leading to the human and other higher worlds. It makes no mention of the kammas leading to the lower worlds. It does not follow, however, that silabbatupadana does not give rise to bad kammas. The commentary does not mention the evil kamma arising from silabbatupadana only because it is too obvious to need allusion. It is said in the Kukkuravatika and other suttas that a man is reborn as an ox or a dog if he lives to the letter like those animals in deed, word or thought or he is reborn in hell or animal world if he accepts the false belief but does not practise it fully. Needless to say, the killing of animals as a sacrifice to gods that arises from this upadana leads to the lower worlds, and so do other misdeeds resulting from the upadana that is bound up with certain forms of worship, rites and ceremonies.

In short, every belief in the efficacy of a practice as an antidote to evil is silabbatupadana. According to the commentaries on Visuddhimagga it is silabbatupadana even to rely entirely on conventional morality and mundane jhana as the way to liberation. The arupa jhanas attained by Alara and Udaka originated in this upadana and so do the deeds of many people that are based on faith in God. All these upadanas leads to rebirth and suffering.

Attavadupadana - Attachment To Ego-Belief

The last upadana (attavadupadana) is attachment to ego-belief. It is the strong conviction about the ego entity, the firm belief that the ego exists permanently, that it is the agent of every deed, speech and thought.

Few people are free from this upadana. The average man believes that it is "I" who sees, hears, moves, etc. This illusion of ego-entity is the mainspring of self-love and concern about the welfare of one's self. The universality and omnipotence of self-love are underscored in Queen Mallika's reply to king Kosala.

Mallika was originally the daughter of a flower vendor. One day she met the Buddha on the way and offered her food. After eating the food, the Lord told Ananda that the girl would become the queen of king Kosala. On that very day, king Kosala who was defeated in the battle, fled on horseback. Utterly exhausted and forlorn, the king rested in the flower-garden where he was tenderly attended on by Mallika. Being much pleased, the king took her to the palace and made her his chief queen. The Buddha's prophecy came true because of her recent good kamma and her good deed in the past existence.

But Mallika was not as good looking as other lesser queens. Moreover, as a woman born of a poor family, she felt ill at ease among the courtiers. So in order to cheer her the king one day asked her whom she loved most. The answer which he expected was "Your Majesty, I love you most." He would then tell her that he too, loved her more than anyone else and this demonstration of his love would, so he thought, increase their intimacy and make her more at home in the palace.

Nevertheless, as an intelligent woman who had the courage of conviction, Mallika replied frankly that there was no one whom she loved more than herself. She asked the king whom he loved most. The king had to admit that he too loved himself more than anyone else. He reported this dialogue to the Buddha. Then the Lord said, "There is no one in this world who loves another person more than himself. Everyone loves himself or herself most. So everyone should have sympathy and avoid ill-treating another person."

In this saying of the Buddha, the word "self" or in Pali, atta, does not mean the atta or atman of the ego-belief. It refers only to self in its conventional sense or the self that a man speaks of to distinguish his own person from other living beings. But the ego-belief is also a source of self-love. The more powerful the belief is, the greater is the love of oneself.

We do not love anyone more than our own selves. One loves one's wife or husband or child only as a helpmate, an attendant or a support. Marital or parental love is no more real than love of precious jewellery. So if a person says that his love of someone is greater than his love of himself, his words must be taken with a large grain of salt. In cases of life-and-death crisis, even a mother will not care for her child.

Once a woman travelling with a caravan across the desert was left behind with her child as she was asleep when the caravan departed. As the sun rose higher in the sky, the sands became hotter and she had to place her basket and then her clothes under her feet. Still the heat became more unbearable till at last she was forced to put down her child under her body. Hence, the saying that even a mother will sacrifice her child for self-preservation.

Because of this self-love based on ego-belief, man seeks his welfare or the welfare of his family by fair means or foul. He does not hesitate to do evil that serves his interests. But the belief in a permanent self also leads to good kammas. Some people are motivated by the belief and so they practise sila, dana, jhana, etc., for their welfare in afterlife. As a result they land in deva and Brahma worlds, but there they have to face again old age, death, and other evils of existence.

In short, every effort to seek one's welfare in the present life or hereafter is rooted in ego-belief. Such kammic effort differs from that arising from kamupadana only in that its mainspring is obsession with personal identity whereas in the case of the latter the driving-force is craving for sensual pleasure. Nevertheless, for those who are strongly attached to ego-belief, egoism is closely bound up with sensual desire.

As for the Ariyas who are wholly free from ego-belief, they are motivated only by kamupadana when they do good. Thus, the dana, sila and bhavana of Anathapindika, Visakha, Mahanama and others on the holy path may stem from their desire for better life in the human and deva-worlds or for the attainment of higher stages on the path.

Story Of Ugga

The anagami Ariyas do good presumably because of their desire for the bliss in material and immaterial spheres and arahatship. It is, of course, arahatship that can help remove sensual craving. The desire for arahatship as the motivation for doing good in the case of anagami yogi is evident in the story of Ugga.

Ugga was a householder in Vesali city. The Buddha spoke of the eight wonderful attributes possessed by Ugga. In response to the inquiry by a monk about the Lord's reference to his attributes, Ugga said that he knew nothing about it but that he had eight distinctive qualities which were as follows.

l. When he saw the Buddha for the first time, he concluded decisively that Gotama was the real, all-Enlightened Buddha.

2. He attained anagami insight into the Four Noble Truths when he heard the Buddha's discourse. He observed the five precepts that included abstinence from sexual intercourse.

3. He had four young wives. He told them about his sexual abstinence and permitted them to return to their parents' homes or to marry the men of their own choice. At the request of his eldest wife, he willingly performed the wedding ceremony before giving her away to the man she loved.

4. He had resolved to spend all his wealth on giving alms to holy men of high moral character.

5. He approached the bhikkhus respectfully.

6. He heard the bhikkhus' sermon respectfully. He preached if the bhikkhus did not give a sermon.

7. The devas came to him and said, "The doctrine of the Buddha is very good." He replied that the Dhamma was a good doctrine whether or not they said so about it. He did not feel conceited for his dialogue with the devas.

8. He found himself free from the first five attachments that lead to the lower, sensual worlds.

One day Ugga, the householder who possessed these eight qualities and had attained the anagami stage on the path, offered food and robes which he liked very much to the Buddha. The Lord commented on the nature of alms-giving as follows:

"One who offers anything that pleases him or that he prizes highly gets something which he adores. One who offers to the Ariyan Noble who is of high moral character is doing an act of dana that it is hard for ordinary people to do and therefore he gets what he wants very much."

Some years later, Ugga died and passed on to the Suddhavasa brahma-world. Before long he came and paid respect to the Buddha. He said that he had attained Arahatship that was indeed the object of his aspiration when he offered his much beloved food to the Lord in his previous existence. The Buddha again commented on the nature of kammic benefits of alms-giving - how the giver got what he prized most if he offered his much-prized object, how he attained a rare object if he offered rare things, how he attained to a much extolled stage if he offered much-extolled objects.

The moral of this story is that one may even attain Arahatship, the summum bonum of the holy life as the kammic result of giving away one's much prized and precious objects. Ugga's alms-giving was motivated by the desire for Arahatship and it is this desire, or kamupadana that formed his driving force. Some people may object to making the term kamupadana synonymous with the desire for Arahatship and label it rather kusalachanda (wholesome desire) but then they will have to explain what kind of upadana it is that gives rise to good acts of Ariya such as dana, sila, etc.

Vipassana Practice And Upadana

The practice of vipassana, too, is to be attributed to kamupadana of a person who seeks permanent deliverance from evils of existence. Ordinary people have to contemplate to be free from the four upadanas while the Ariyas have to contemplate to overcome kamupadana. Thus, vipassana practice stands for the conquest of upadana. According to Visuddhimagga and another commentary, viz., Sammohavinodani, avijja is indirectly the cause of good acts in that one has to do good for liberation from avijja and it is also said that bhavana or vipassana practice is one of the good acts in the sensual world which one has to do for such liberation.

The question then arises as to whether vipassana practice can lead to rebirth. The commentaries on Anguttara Nikaya and Patthana point to such a possibility. According to the commentary on Anguttara Nikaya, the first three right views lead to good rebirth, the last two right views, viz., the view that is born of fruition on the path (phala-sammaditthi) and the view that results from vipassana practice tend to liberate the yogi from life-cycle (samsara). It says, however, on the authority of a learned thera (Culabhaya) that the yogi is subject to rebirth for seven times before he attains Arahatship. According to Patthana, contemplation of appamana (conditions of existence) leads to rebirth in sensual sphere, and the commentary defines appamana-cetana as maturity (gotrabhu cetana). Hence, it is reasonable to assume that vipassana practice can give rise to rebirth before Arahatship is won.

But vipassana can ensure freedom from samsara through insight into anicca, dukkha and anatta of all sense-objects - an insight that keeps off the defilement of craving for them. This non-arising of craving means non-arising of kamma and rebirth. Thus, vipassana insight helps to offset kamma and its samsaric consequences by tadangapahana (overcoming by opposite).

Moreover, through inductive generalization, the yogi realizes the anicca, dukkha and anatta of other phenomena that he has contemplated. Thus, he keeps off the defilements and their kammic potentials by repression (vikkhambhana pahana). Then, there follows the Ariyan insight on the path that helps to root out the defilements. The emergence of this insight may be likened to the signing of an official letter by the head of a government department. The act of the officer-in-charge is, in fact, to give the finishing touch to the lot of work done by his subordinates. We cannot ignore the major contribution of vipassana practice in the pursuit of spiritual enlightenment any more than we can ignore the work of office staff or the cumulative effect of repeated use of a saw that makes it finally possible for the woodcutter to exterminate the tree once and forever. As the sub-commentary on Visuddhimagga says:

"Transcendent insight on the path helps to stamp out, root and branch only the defilements which the yogi has done his utmost to overcome through mundane vipassana insight."

Those who do not contemplate, labour under the illusion of bliss and ego-entity. The illusion leads to craving, kammic efforts, rebirth and all the sufferings that are inherent in life-cycle.

Life-Cycle And Three Time Dimensions

The doctrine of Paticcasamuppada describes twelve causes and effects viz., (1) ignorance, (2) kamma formations, (3) consciousness, (4) mind and body, (5) six senses, (6) sense-contact, (7) feeling, (8) craving, (9) clinging, (10) becoming (bhava), (11) birth (jati), (12) old age and death.

According to the doctrine, ignorance and craving are the two main sources of suffering. There are two life-cycles, the anterior life-cycle and the posterior life-cycle. The anterior life-cycle begins with ignorance as its main source and ends with feeling, while the posterior life-cycle begins with craving and ends with death. In the former life-cycle, ignorance (avijja) and kamma formations (sankhara) in the past life leads to rebirth, while in the latter life-cycle, craving (tanha) and clinging (upadana) cause rebirth in future. The two life-cycles show how a man's lifetimes are linked with one another through cause and effect.

Again, if the doctrine of dependent origination is to be described on time-scale, avijja and sankhara are two links in the past life, the links from vinnana to kammabhava concern the present life, while birth, old age and death are the links that future has in store for us. Thus, the doctrine refers to three time dimensions.

Five Causes In The Past

The doctrine describes the past cause only in terms of avijja and sankhara but in point of fact avijja is invariably followed by tanha and upadana and sankhara too always lead to kammabhava. So Patisambhidamagga comments on the doctrine as follows.

"Avijja is ignorance that dominates us while doing a kammic deed. Sankhara means collection and exertion of effort. Tanha is the craving for the results of an action in the present life and hereafter. Upadana is obsession with action and its result. Kammabhava is volition. These five factors in the past constitute the cause of present rebirth."

Thus, we have to consider all these five links viz., avijja, tanha, upadana, sankhara and kammabhava if we are to describe the past cause fully. Of these, avijja, tanha and upadana are labelled kilesavatta (cycle or round of defilements). Sankhara and kammabhava are called kammavatta (cycle of actions). The commentary makes a distinction between sankhara and kammabhava, describing the prior effort, planning, etc., preparatory to an act as sankhara and the volition at the moment of doing the act as kammabhava. Thus, seeking money, buying things, etc., prior to an act of dana comprise sankhara while the state of consciousness at the time of offering is kammabhava. Preliminary activities leading to an act of murder are sankhara while cetana or volition at the time of killing is kammabhava.

Distinction Between Sankhara And Kammabhava

The other kind of distinction between sankhara and kammabhava is based on impulse-moments. It is said that an act of murder or alms-giving involves seven impulse-moments. The first six impulse-moments are called sankhara while the last is termed kammabhava.

The third way of making the distinction is to describe volition (cetana) as kammabhava and other mental states associated with volition as sankhara.

The last method of classification is helpful when we speak of good deeds in rupa and arupa spheres. All the three methods apply in the case of good or bad acts in sensual world, but the first method is most illuminating for those who are not well informed.

Alternatively, Visuddhimagga attributes rebirth to flash-backs, visions and hallucinations that hold a dying person's attention at the last moment of his life. So according to this commentary, kammabhava may be defined as the volition (cetana) that motivated his good or bad acts in the past and the sankhara as the mental state conditioned by his death-bed experiences.

Present Effect Due To Past Cause

Thus, owing to the rounds of defilements and kamma comprising the five causes in the past, there arises rebirth-consciousness together with mind-body, six bases, impressions and feeling. These five effects are collectively called vipaka vatta (round of effects). Because of their ignorance, common people have the illusion of pleasantness about every sense-object and mind-object. They develop craving, thereby starting again the vicious cycle of causes and effects that represent their rounds of suffering.

Consciousness, the six sense bases, etc., arise as the kammic result of past kammas. It is a matter of cause-and-effect relationship just like all other phenomena. This leaves no room for ego, God or Prime Mover. The only difference is the moral law governing this relationship, the nature of feeling, whether pleasant or unpleasant, being dependent on the good or bad sankhara in the past. In reality there is no person who has pleasant or unpleasant feeling nor any being who causes him to have such an experience. Life is only the continuum of consciousness, impression, etc., as conditioned by five factors, viz., ignorance, craving, etc.

Knowledge For Vipassana Practice

Those who have a smattering of Paticcasamuppada or Abhidhamma say that it is impossible to practise meditation without a knowledge of these teachings. But, in fact the yogi who practises under the guidance of a learned teacher need not bother about higher Buddhist philosophy for he can follow the teacher's instructions if he knows only that life is a mental and physical process characterized by impermanence, suffering and insubstantiality. The adequacy of this simple knowledge to meet the intellectual need of the yogi who is bent on Arahatship is borne out by the Buddha in Culatanha-sankhaya sutta. There the Lord goes on to talk about vipassana practice. In the sutta, the yogi's understanding of nama-rupa is termed "abhijanati" which, says the commentary, means full comprehension and refers to nama-rupa paricchedanana and paccayapariggahanana.

Through contemplation, the yogi knows all phenomena analytically as anicca, dukkha and anatta (parijanati). Here, the Pali terms refer to sammasananana and other vipassana insights.

As regards Paticcasamuppada, a knowledge of the conditionality and cause-effect relationship in life that rules out a being ego or self is sufficient. It is not necessary to know the twelve links or the twenty main points of the doctrine thoroughly. If the practice of vipassana presupposes such a comprehensive knowledge, it would be unthinkable for a man of low intelligence like, say, thera Culapanna. The thera's memory was so poor that he could not remember a few gathas that he had learnt for four months. Nevertheless, he attained Arahatship in a few hours when he practised contemplation as instructed by the Buddha.

Another laywoman, Matikamata by name, attained the third stage (anagami) on the holy path in advance of some bhikkhus who were her meditation teachers. She did not know much about Abhidhamma and Paticcasamuppada. There were many other yogis like this woman and Culapanna thera. So it is possible for a yogi to attain the holy path if he contemplates even though he may not have thoroughly learnt the higher teachings of the Buddha.

Not to know the real nature of pleasant or unpleasant feeling is avijja (ignorance). It is tanha to like a sense-object and it is upadana to have craving for it. To seek the object of one's desire, to do good or evil for one's happiness or welfare in the present life or hereafter means sankhara and kammabhava. These five factors are the present causes and they give rise to rebirth after death. The doctrine of Paticcasamuppada mentions only three causes, viz., vedana, tanha and upadana but in reality these three factors imply two other causes, viz., avijja and sankhara since these two are the mainsprings of tanha and kammabhava respectively. So Patisambhidamagga describes all these five factors as causes of rebirth in future.

Removing The Present Causes

Every good or evil act means the complete conjunction of these five present causes and occasions for such a conjunction in a single lifetime may number by thousands. Under certain circumstances these causes may lead to rebirth after death or two or three rebirths successively. Every existence is bound up with old age, grief, death, etc., and if we wish to avoid these sufferings, we will have to remove the present causes.

To this end we should note all physical phenomena, "seeing", "hearing", etc., at the moment of their arising. With the development of concentration, we note their instant passing away and become aware of their impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and unreliability. This awareness helps us to overcome ignorance and illusion that fuel craving, attachment and kammic effort: we thus keep the five present causes inoperative and inactive, thereby forestalling rebirth and consequent suffering.

This method of removing the causes is labelled //tadangapahana// - overcoming some defilements through contemplation. By this method, the yogi attains //tadanganibbuti// - partial extinction of defilements through contemplation. Later on, there arises the insight on the Ariyan path which means the extinction of all sankhara and the realization of Nibbana (//samucchedapahana//).

The defilements and kammas are then done away with, once and forever. The yogis who attain sotapatti stage overcome the defilements and kammas that lead to the lower worlds, and those that may cause good rebirth for more than seven lifetimes, the yogis at the sakadagami stage overcome those that may cause more than two rebirths while the yogis at the anagami stage remove those that lead to rebirth in sensual worlds. Finally, the yogi who attains arahatta stage eradicates the remaining defilements and kamma. In other words, he becomes an Arahat, the Noble one who is worthy of honour because he is wholly free from defilements.

Arahat's Outlook On Life

The arahat has no illusion about the nature of sense-objects. He is aware of their unwholesomeness and this means he realizes the truth of dukkha because he is free from ignorance (avijja). So he has no craving for anything. Inevitably, he has to fill the biological needs of his physical body such as eating, sleeping, etc., but he regards them as conditioned (sankhara) dukkha and finds nothing that is pleasant to him.

The question arises as to whether he should long for speedy death to end such suffering. But the desire for early death or dissolution of the physical body too is a destructive desire and the Arahat is free from it. So there is an Arahat's saying in the Theragatha that he has neither the wish to die nor the wish to live.

The Arahat does not wish to live a long life for life means largely the burden of suffering inherent in khandha. Although the burden of khandha needs constant care and attention, it is not in the least reliable. To many middle-aged or old people, life offers little more than frustration, disappointment and bitterness. Living conditions go from bad to worse, physical health declines and there is nothing but complete disintegration and death that await us. Yet, because of ignorance and attachment many people take delight in existence. On the other hand, the Arahat is disillusioned and he finds life dreary and monotonous. Hence, his distaste for life.

But the Arahat does not prefer death either. For death-wish is an aggressive instinct which he has also conquered. What he wants is to attain Nibbana, a longing that is somewhat analogous to that of a worker who wishes to get his daily or monthly wage.

The worker does not like to face hardship and privations for he has to work inevitably just to make his living but he does not want to lose his job either. He wants only money and looks forward to pay-day. Likewise, the Arahat waits for the moment when he should attain Nibbana without anything left of his body-mind complex. So when they think of their life-span, the Arahats wonder how long they will have to bear the burden of nama-rupa khandha. Because of his disillusionment, the Arahat's life-stream is completely cut off after Nibbana, hence it is called //anupadisesanibbana//.

Not Annihilation But Extinction Of Suffering

Those who believe in ego or soul deprecate Nibbana as eternal death of a living being. In reality, it is the total extinction of suffering that results from the non-recurrence of psycho-physical phenomena together with their causes viz., kamma and defilements. So the Buddha points out the cessation of upadana arising from the complete cessation of craving, the process of becoming (bhava) ceasing to arise due to cessation of upadana and so on. With the non-arising of rebirth, there is the complete cessation of old age, death and other kinds of suffering.

Here, the popular view is that birth, old age and death are evils that afflict living beings but, in point of fact, these evils characterize only the psycho-physical process and have nothing to do with a living entity. Since there is no ego or soul, it makes no sense to speak of the annihilation of a living being with the cessation of rebirth and suffering.

So those who regard Nibbana as annihilation are not free from the illusion of ego-entity. To the intelligent Buddhist, Nibbana means only cessation of suffering. This is evident in the story of bhikkhu Yamaka in the time of the Buddha.

Story Of Yamaka

Yamaka believed that the Arahat was annihilated after his death. He clung to his view although other bhikkhus pointed out its falsity. Then, Sariputta summoned him. Questioned by the elder thera, Yamaka admitted that all the five khandhas are impermanent and suffering, that it would be a mistake to regard them as one's possession or self. Sariputta told him to see the five khandhas as they really are. He would then become disillusioned, detached and liberated.

While hearing the sermon, Yamaka attained the sotapanna stage. He was now free from false beliefs. Sariputta then questioned him again. In response to the thera's questions, Yamaka said that he did not identify the Arahat with the physical body, the perception, the feeling, conformations (sankhara) or the consciousness. Nor did he believe that the Arahat existed elsewhere without the rupa, vedana or any other khandha. Therefore, since the Arahat or a living entity is not to be found in the five khandhas even before death, it makes no sense to speak of the Arahat's annihilation after his parinibbana.

Yamaka confessed his mistaken view. He was now free from it and he knew what to say about the destiny of the Arahat. If someone were to ask him, "What happens when the Arahat passes away?", he would answer, "The death of the Arahat means the complete cessation of suffering inherent in the impermanent five khandhas."

This statement about the Arahat was confirmed by Sariputta. The thera likened the khandhas to the murderer who poses as a friend and said that identifying the khandhas with atta is like welcoming the murderer, etc.

Here, the thera Yamaka at first believed that the Arahat was annihilated after death, that there was nothing left. This belief presupposes the illusion of ego-entity and so the annihilation view of Nibbana is called ucchedaditthi, the view that Nibbana means the negation of atta after death. When he realized the truth and attained sotapanna, Yamaka said that the death of the Arahat means the complete extinction of suffering inherent in the impermanent five khandhas.

To sum up the way to the cessation of suffering, failure to note seeing, hearing and other psycho-physical phenomena leads to the arising of avijja, tanha, upadana, kamma, and sankhara that in turn cause birth, old age and death in future. Mindfulness of all phenomena forestalls the five present causes viz., avijja, etc., and the five consequences that involve suffering.

Bhikkhuni Vajira On The Nature Of Khandhas

Moreover, it is the extinction of suffering that is underscored in the famous saying of bhikkhuni Vajira. While she was sitting under a tree near Jetavana monastery, Mara appeared and in order to scare and discomfit her, asked her,"Hey, bhikkhuni! Who created a living being? Where is the creator? How did a living being originate and how would he come to an end?"

Bhikkhuni Vajira replied, "O, Mara! What do you think is a living being? Is not your belief in a living being an illusion? What you regard as a living being is nothing but a heap of sankhara. No being is to be found in this heap, a living being (sattava) is merely a term for the collection of five khandhas viz., rupa, vedana, etc.,

just as "chariot" is the term for the combination of wheel, axle, etc.; there is no being but only the group of five khandhas: That cause suffering - in fact, it is only suffering (dukkha) that arises, exists and ends. There is no arising and extinction of anything other than dukkha."

Therefore, a living being is to be understood only in the popular acceptation of the term. It does not exist in the absolute sense; there is only the psycho-physical process which comprises ignorance, craving, attachment, kamma and kammic effort as causes and consciousness, body-mind, sense bases, impression and feeling as effects. These effects in turn become causes that give rise to rebirth and suffering.

Four Layers, Three Links And Twenty Factors

Paticcasamuppada refers to four groups of factors involved in the chain of causation viz., the first group of causes in the past, the second group of effects in the present life, the third group of causes in the present and the last group of effects in the future. The groups are labelled //sangaha// or //sankhepa// in Pali. They may also be translated as layers.

There are three links for the four layers - the link between the past and the present involving sankhara as cause and vinnana as effect, the link between the present effect and present cause with vedana and tanha as cause and effect, and the third link between present cause and future with bhava as cause and jati (birth) as effect.

Then, there are twenty factors (akara) involved in the psycho-physical process viz., five causes in the past, five effects in the present, five causes in the present and five effects in the future.

Three Cycles

Again the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada deals with three cycles or rounds (vattas) viz., the cycles of defilements, kamma and fruits. The first cycle comprises ignorance, desire and attachment (upadana), the second (kamma cycle) comprises kammic effort and kammic existence (bhava), and the third vipaka cycle involves consciousness, mind-body, sense bases, impression and feeling.

The third vipaka cycle again leads to the cycle of defilement, the cycle of defilement again gives rise to kamma cycle and so on, each of the three cycles occurring one after another ceaselessly in a vicious circle. The three cycles form the samsaric round of suffering. Samsara means continuum of nama-rupa (psycho-physical) process occurring in terms of cause-effect relationship.

In order to liberate ourselves from the samsaric cycle of suffering, we do good deeds. We become familiar with the Buddha's teaching about the Four Noble Truths. We practise contemplation at the moment of seeing, hearing, etc. We realize the ceaseless arising and dissolution of psycho-physical phenomena. This vipassana insight forestalls illusion and frees us from craving and attachment that leads to rebirth and suffering.

Visuddhimagga describes the contribution of kamma to the cycle of defilement. A certain yogi sees how mind-body complex is born of kammic cycle and vipaka (kammic fruits) cycle. He realizes that there are only kamma and its fruits: As a result of kamma in the past, there arise nama-rupa in the present life; nama-rupa is the cause of present kamma; it gives rise to kammic deeds in present life. These kammic deeds lead to rebirth. In this way there is the arising (becoming) of nama-rupa (being) without cessation.

Here, the arising or becoming of nama-rupa means the arising of phenomena from the senses e.g. seeing, hearing, etc. These lead to defilement, kamma, and rebirth successively. Thus, the nama-rupa process is conditioned by the cycle of kamma and its fruit. According to Visuddhimagga, this insight-knowledge means paccayapariggahanana and kankhavitarana visuddhi (Purity of Escape from all Doubt).

Four Aspects Of Paticcasamuppada

There are four aspects of the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada that we should bear in mind. The first is the individual character of the psycho-physical process that comprises the three successive existences. Although the doctrine stresses the conditionality of all phenomena, it is a mistake to believe that avijja, tanha and other causes concern one person, while vinnana, nama-rupa and other causes concern one person, and while vinnana, nama-rupa and other effects concern another person for this belief implies the total extinction of a living being after death, the annihilation - view which Buddhism rejects. In reality, the nama-rupa process is analogous to, say, the evolution of a mango tree. The mango seed becomes a seedling, the seedling turns into a young plant and the plant grows into a tree. Here the seed, the young plant and the tree form a continuous, unbroken line of cause and effect relationship so that strictly speaking, it is impossible to distinguish between the tree and the plant.

Likewise, avijja, sankhara, vinnana, etc., occur in unbroken succession in terms of cause and effect and so it is reasonable to speak of a particular person involved in the process. It was Devadatta, for example, who committed schism and it is Devadatta who is now suffering in hell. The merchant Anathapindika did good deeds and it was he himself who landed in the deva-world after his death.

The False View Of Sati

This identification of the doer of kammic deed with the bearer of its fruit makes it possible for us to avoid the annihilation-view. On the other hand, some people believe in the transmigration of a living being as a whole from one life to another. This mistaken view called sassataditthi (eternity-belief) was held by bhikkhu Sati in the time of the Buddha.

It was the Jatakas that led bhikkhu Sati to this view. He learnt how the Buddha identified himself with the leading characters in these birth stories. So he reasoned thus: the physical body of the bodhisatta disintegrated after his death and there was nothing of it that passed on to his last existence. It was only the consciousness that survived physical dissolution and that formed the hard core of the bodhisatta's personality in each of his existence. The same may be said of every other living being. Unlike the physical body, consciousness is not subject to disintegration. It passes on from one body to another and exists forever.

But the Jatakas underscore only the continuity of the cause and effect relationship in terms or the doer of kamma and the bearer of kammic fruit. They do not imply the transfer of vinnana or any other attribute intact from one life to another. Everything passes away but because of the causal connection, we have to assume that the hero of a Jataka story finally became Prince Siddhattha. So after questioning Sati, the Buddha says that vinnana is conditioned, that it cannot arise in the absence of its relevant cause.

The Buddha cites the simile of a fire which is designated according to its origin. The fire that originates with wood is called wood-fire, that which starts with grass is called grass-fire and so on. Likewise, consciousness is conditioned by something and it is labelled according to that which conditions it. Thus, the consciousness that arises from eye and visual form is called visual consciousness (cakkhu-vinnana), that which stems from ear and sound is called auditory consciousness (sota-vinnana) and so forth. In short, the consciousness is specified according to the sense-object and the sense-organ which together give rise to it. When the cause of a fire changes so does its designation. A grass-fire becomes a bush-fire when the fire spreads to the bush. In the same way, consciousness changes its label according to the sense-object and the sense-organ on which it is dependent. In the case of the same sense-object and the same sense-organ, too, it is the new consciousness that occurs at every moment in the mental process. Thus, to realize the truth about mental process is to be free from annihilation-belief whereas a false view of it leads to eternity-belief.

Distinctive Character Of Each Phenomenon

Another aspect of the doctrine is the distinction between the different phenomena constituting the chain of causation. Thus avijja is a distinct phenomenon that conditions sankhara; sankhara is another different phenomenon that leads to rebirth and so on. To differentiate these phenomena is to realize their cause-and-effect relationship and this realization makes us free from eternity-belief. It helps us to do away with the illusion of a permanent, unchanging self that survives death and passes on to another existence.

In fact the eternity-belief or the annihilation-belief stems from the fact that people tend to over-emphasize either the connection between the mental states in two successive lives or the distinction between them. If we unintelligently identify ourselves with the nama-rupa in the present life and that in the previous life, we will be inclined to the belief in immortality. On the other hand, if we overstress the dichotomy of the nama-rupas, we are likely to fall into the trap of annihilation-view. The right attitude is to recognize the unbroken stream of nama-rupa that flows from one life to another in terms of cause and effect. This point of view gives us the impression of the individual character of nama-rupa and, as such, it clarifies the working out of kamma. It does not, however, imply the transfer of old nama-rupa or ego. It assumes the cessation of old nama-rupa and the arising of new nama-rupa in the present life on the basis of past kamma.

This view is crucial in vipassana practice. To the yogi who contemplates nama-rupa at every moment of their arising, these two aspects of the doctrine are apparent. He becomes aware of the stream of cause and effect comprising avijja, tanha, upadana and so forth. He is aware of the continuity, and the uninterrupted flow of nama-rupa process and, therefore, he rejects the annihilation view completely.

Furthermore, being aware of the new phenomenon that arises whenever he contemplates, he discriminates between the sense-object and his consciousness. Contemplation brings to light feeling, craving, clinging, effort, consciousness, etc., as distinct phases of the mental process. And because he is well aware of the arising of new phenomena, he frees himself from eternity-belief.

Absence Of Effort (Avyapara)

Another aspect of Paticcasamuppada is the absence of effort (avyapara). Avijja causes sankhara without striving and sankhara does not strive to create rebirth. Knowledge of this fact means insight into the non-existence of any agent or being (karaka-puggala) who hears, sees, etc., and as such it makes us free from ego-belief. But as Visuddhimagga says, it lends itself to misinterpretation and turns one into a moral sceptic who accepts determinism and denies moral freedom.

The non-volitional nature of conditioned psycho-physical phenomena is apparent to the yogi who contemplates their ceaseless arising and dissolution for he realizes clearly that since nama-rupa is conditioned, his mind and body do not always act according to his desire.

Relevancy Of Cause To Effect

The last aspect of Paticcasamuppada is the one-to-one correspondence between cause and effect (evam dhammata). Every cause leads only to the relevant effect; it has nothing to do with the irrelevant effect. In other words, every cause is the sufficient and necessary condition for the corresponding effect. This fact leaves no room for belief in chance or moral impotency (akiriyaditthi) but, as Visuddhimagga says, for those who misunderstand it, it provides the basis for rigid determinism (niyatavada). As for the contemplating yogi, he clearly sees the relevancy of each effect to its cause and so he has no doubt about their one-to-one correspondence and the reality of moral freedom.

I have dwelt at length on noteworthy facts about Paticcasamuppada. These will be clear to the yogis who consider them on the basis of their experience but as the doctrine is profound, they will not be able to grasp some facts that are beyond their intellectual level. It is of course only the omniscient Buddha who knew everything thoroughly. The yogi should make it a point to know fully as far as possible within the scope of his intellect. To this end, he should learn from the discourses of bhikkhus, reflect over what he has learnt and enrich his understanding through the practice of mindfulness.

Of the three methods of study, the third method (bhavanamaya) is the most important for the yogi who gains insight-knowledge by this method, attains the holy path and is liberated from the dangers of the lower worlds.

Conclusion

Now we will conclude the discourse on Paticcasamuppada with a commentary on Arahant, the chief attribute of the Buddha.

The formula about the dependent origination consists of twelve links beginning with ignorance and ending in death. It has ignorance and craving as two root-causes and two life-cycles. The anterior cycle begins with ignorance and ends in feeling, while the posterior cycle begins with craving and ends in death and old age. Since anxiety, grief and the like do not occur in the Brahma world, they do not necessarily stem from birth (jati) and, as such, are not counted among the links of the dependent origination.

Furthermore, the anterior life-cycle explicitly shows only avijja and sankhara; but avijja implies tanha-upadana and sankhara implies kammabhava. So all these five links form the past causes, while vinnana, nama-rupa, ayatana, phassa and vedana form the present effects. These vinnana, etc., are the wholesome or unwholesome kammic fruits that are clearly experienced at the moment of seeing, etc. The posterior life-cycle directly concerns tanha, upadana and kammabhava but these three causes imply avijja and sankhara, and so as in the past avijja, tanha, upadana, sankhara and kammabhava represent the five present causes that lead to birth, old age and death in future. These effects are the same as those of vinnana, nama-rupa, etc. Thus, like the present effects, the future effects are also five in number.

So there are altogether four groups of layers of five past causes, five present effects, five present causes and five effects in the future. The layers represent three causal relations viz., the relation between the past causes and the present effects; the relation between the present effects and present causes; and the conditionality of phenomenal existence is evident in these layers or the twenty links of cause and effect which are termed //akara//. These links may be grouped in terms of vatta or cycles or rounds of defilements, viz., the cycle of defilements, the cycle of kamma and the cycle of kammic fruits which we have already explained before.

Those who have done good kammas pass through human, deva or Brahma worlds while those who have done evil are doomed to rebirth in the lower worlds. Living beings confined to life-cycle (samsara) get the chance to do good only when they have a good teacher. A good teacher is hard to come by and so many people are largely prone to evil deeds and subject to their kammic effects in terms of suffering. It is then said that they are overtaken by Nemesis, that they have to pay for their round of kamma. Once established on the Ariyan path, they cannot land in hell but as for the cycle of kammic fruits, even the Buddhas and Arahats are not spared kammic retribution.

Cutting Off The Cycle Of Defilements

If we wish to end the threefold cycle, we will have to remove its cause viz., the cycle of defilements. Defilements originate with seeing, hearing, etc., and so we must practise mindfulness to prevent their arising when we see, hear, etc. The practice of concentration and mindfulness makes the yogi aware of the impermanence and insubstantiality of all phenomena. This means he has no more illusion and is free from the cycle of defilements, kammas and kammic fruits.

Now, to sum up the way to the total conquest of the threefold cycle of defilement, kammas and kammic results with reference to the attributes of the Buddha.

Arahan And The Attributes Of The Buddha

The Buddha's special designation is Arahan and this word points to the following attributes of the Buddha.

(1) The Buddha was free from defilements. So were the Arahats but they were not free from the habits that continued to dominate them even after the attainment of their spiritual goal. This is evident in the story of thera Pilindavaccha. Pilinda was an Arahat, beloved of the devas and extolled by the Buddha. Yet he was in the habit of addressing his fellow bhikkhus or laymen rather rudely. Some bhikkhus complained to the Buddha about the thera's rudeness. The Buddha attributed this unpleasant habit to his having spent several lifetimes in the Brahmin families but said that being an Arahat, the thera was pure and good at heart.

As for the Buddha, from the time of his attainment of supreme enlightenment, he became free from all the habits or hangovers of defilements that were carried over from past lives. This distinctive mark of the Buddha's Arahatship should be borne in mind when we contemplate the Lord's attributes. The complete extinction of cycles means total liberation from the three cycles of defilements, kamma and kammic fruits.

(2) The Buddha was called Arahan because of his conquest of defilements. People fear only the external enemy such as robbers, snakes, etc. They do not bother about the internal enemy, that is, defilements that are more terrible. In point of fact, they have to suffer because of their mind-body complex and defilements. The root-cause is the defilements that give rise to repeated rebirths and sufferings. The defilements are ten in number viz., craving, hatred, ignorance, pride, illusion, doubt, lassitude, restlessness, shamelessness and lack of conscience.

(3) By virtue of his outstanding moral integrity, wisdom and enlightenment, the Buddha was worthy of reverence and offerings. People who revered or made offerings to the Buddha have their wishes fulfilled.

(4) Since he had conquered the defilements completely, the Buddha was pure at heart whether in public or solitude. Many people play the hypocrite, posing as good men or women in public but doing evil when there is no-one to see or hear them. In reality, there is no place where one can do evil secretly. Even though the evil-doer is not seen by men and gods, he cannot help having qualms of conscience. His conscience is the most infallible witness to his misdeeds and it forms the basis for death-bed visions that point to unpleasant life that future has in store for him.

As for the Buddha, having wholly conquered all the defilements, his mind was always pure and he had absolutely no desire or intention to do evil either publicly or secretly.

(5) The Buddha had destroyed the spokes of the wheel with the sword of the Arahatship. Here, the wheel means the cycle of life as described in the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada and the sword means the insight-knowledge of the Arahat. The axle of the wheel represents avijja, the root-cause; the fringe of the wheel stands for old age and death, while the spokes stand for the middle links, viz., sankhara, etc. Just as the removal of spokes makes it impossible for the wheel to move, so also the destruction of the middle links in the chain of conditioned phenomena means the end of the cycle of life.

Story Of Baka Brahma

The first thing to do to end the life-cycle is to remove its root-cause viz., ignorance, for ignorance is invariably followed by sankhara, vinnana, etc., down to jaramarana (old age and death). This is true in the sensual worlds as well as in the material world of Brahmas.

Once there was a great Brahma called Baka. He outlived many world-systems (kappa); indeed he lived so long that at last he forgot his previous existences and became convinced of his immortality without old age or death.

The Buddha went to his abode to remove his illusion. The Brahma welcomed the Lord and bragged about his eternal life. The Buddha said that his ignorance was appalling in that he denied impermanence, old age and death. He revealed the good deeds that had led to the Brahma's longevity and it was this fabulous longevity that had made him oblivious of his previous lives and created the illusion of his immortality. On hearing this, Baka Brahma had second thoughts about his omnipotence. Still, he was conceited and in order to show his power, he tried to vanish out of sight of the Buddha and other Brahmas but it was in vain. Because of the power of the Lord, he remained visible.

Then the Buddha uttered the following verse:

Bhavevaham bhayam disva bhavan ja vibhavesinam bhavam nabhivadim kinci nandincana upadiyim:

I do not extol any existence because I see danger in it. I have renounced the craving for existence because I am aware of its evil.

Baka Brahma and other Brahmas had lived so long that they considered their existence and their abode eternal. Likewise, the evils of life escape the notice of those who have the blessings of a good life such as health, wealth, prestige, success and so forth. But life is subject to suffering on all its three planes: sensual plane, material plane and immaterial plane. A Brahma or a rishi on the material or immaterial planes of existence may live for aeons but they too have to die eventually.

Sammasambuddha

It is insight knowledge that leads to the destruction of ignorance which is the root-cause of suffering. For the Buddha, this means the attribute of sammasambuddha. Sammasambuddha is one who knows the Four Noble Truths rightly, thoroughly and independently. Here the twelve links of Paticcasamuppada may be differentiated in terms of the Four Noble Truths.

Thus, old age and death together means the first truth of suffering and rebirth means the truth about the cause of suffering. The cessation of this cause and this effect means the truth about the cessation (nirodha) and, knowledge of this cessation means the truth about the path to it (magga).

The same may be said of rebirth and kammic cause, kammic cause and clinging, clinging and craving, craving and feeling, feeling and contact, contact and six senses, the senses and nama-rupa, nama-rupa and consciousness, consciousness and sankhara, and sankhara and ignorance. In short, what immediately precedes a link is termed its cause (samudaya) and what immediately follows is called its effect (dukkha sacca). We can even make ignorance (avijja), the origin of life-cycle, synonymous with truth about suffering (dukkha sacca); if we regard it as an effect of the attachment (asava) viz., attachment to sensual pleasure, existence, belief and ignorance.

Here, the identification of tanha with dukkha may not be acceptable to some people. But it is reasonable if we remember the fact that all nama-rupa including tanha means dukkha since it is subject to impermanence. The commentary does not describe avijja as dukkha, but we can say it is dukkha arising from asava (biases). There are four asavas that have their sources in sensual craving, attachment to life, false belief and ignorance. It is a matter of ignorance in the past again giving rise to ignorance in the present. Hence, the asavas may be regarded as the cause of avijja.

So having realized the Four Noble Truths and attained Nibbana, through his own enlightenment, the Buddha earned the unique and glorious title of Sammasambuddha. He knew that all the phenomena covered by the doctrine of Paticcasamuppada are the real dukkha and the causes of dukkha. He was disenchanted, had no attachment and achieved liberation from all fetters. So according to Visuddhimagga, he was called Arahan because he managed to destroy completely all the supports of the wheel of life.

The Fame Of The Buddha

The fame of the Buddha pervaded the whole universe. It spread to all parts of the universe through the inhabitants of some realms who came to hear the Buddha's sermons or through the sermons which the Buddha himself gave in some realms or through the former disciples who had landed in some higher realms after hearing the sermons.

We need not dwell on the first way in which the fame of the Buddha spread. As regards the other two ways, in the course of his long wanderings in samsara, the bodhisatta had been to all the realms except the five suddhavasa realms which are meant only for those who have attained anagami stage. The bodhisatta usually attains all the four stages on the path only in his last existence. So the Buddha had never been to suddhavasa realm before and on one occasion he paid a visit to it by means of his psychic powers. On arriving there, he received the homage of millions of brahmas, who told him about the former Buddhas and their landing in suddhavasa realm as the result of their attainment of anagami stage. Among these brahmas, there were also those who had practised the dhamma as disciples of Gotama Buddha.

The Buddha visited all the five suddhavasa realms. It is easy to see how he became famous in the realms that were the abodes of his former disciples. But the question arises as to how his fame spread to the formless (arupa) realms. It was not possible for the formless brahmas to come to the Buddha or for the Buddha to go to them. Those who practised the Buddha-dhamma in the sensual or the material world, attaining the first three stages on the path and dying with arupa (formless) jhana might land in the formless worlds if they so desired. These noble ones were aware of the sublime attributes of the Buddha and the possibility of attaining new insights through the practice of mindfulness. So through mindfulness of all mental events, they finally became Arahats and passed away in vinnanancayatana realm or akincannayatana realm or the highest realm called Nevasannanasannayatana. In this way, the fame of the Buddha spread throughout the whole universe.

The Four Noble Truths In Brief

We have dealt in detail with the Buddha's knowledge of the Four Noble Truths vis-a-vis his attribute of Sammasambuddha. We will now repeat the four truths briefly. According to the scriptures, all the nama-rupa in the sensual, material and immaterial worlds, exclusive of tanha, constitute dukkha. This is the first truth. Tanha as the cause of dukkha is the second truth. Nibbana as the cessation of dukkha is the third truth, and the Ariyan path as the way to cessation is the fourth truth. These Four Noble Truths are realized experientially by the yogi through the practice of vipassana. From experience he knows that all that is arising and passing away mean dukkha, attachment to them is the cause, that cessation of both the dukkha and its cause is Nibbana, and that its attainment is the path.

Sammasambuddha And Buddhahood

Both of the two Pali terms viz., Buddha and Sammasambuddha mean omniscience or knowledge of all the dhammas. This raises the question of how to make a distinction between the two attributes connected by the two terms. By the attribute of sammasambuddha, we are to understand that the bodhisatta attained Buddhahood on the basis of independent reflection, and effort and the realization of the Four Noble Truths through insight on the path of Arahatship. Buddhahood means the thorough and exhaustive knowledge of all the conditioned and the unconditioned dhammas on the basis of the unique attributes possessed by the Buddha such as omniscience (sabbannutanana), etc.

These unique attributes of the Buddha consist in knowledge of the Four Noble Truths, four kinds of analytical knowledge and six kinds of knowledge that are not to be found among disciples (asadharananana). The six asadharananana are: (1) knowledge of the different moral and spiritual levels of living beings, (2) knowledge of the desires, inclinations and latent tendencies (anusaya) of living beings, (3) the power to create super-miracles (yamakapatihariyanana), (4) infinite compassion for all living beings, (5) omniscience, and (6) knowledge without any hindrance or obstruction of anything which the Buddha wants to know and which he brings into the focus of his attention.

Now a few words about the conditioned (sankhara) and unconditioned (asankhara) dhammas. The sankharas are the nama-rupa or the five aggregates of khandhas that arise owing to the harmonious combination of relevant factors. In other words, they are the phenomena conditioned by favourable circumstances. Thus, sound is produced when there is friction between two hard objects such as sticks or iron bars. Here sound is sankhara. As opposed to sankhara is asankhara which has nothing to do with causes. The only ultimate reality (paramattha) in the category of asankhara dhammas is Nibbana. Of the non-paramattha asankharas there are many kinds of names such as names of shapes, figures and so forth.

The Buddha's sabbannutanana is so called because it encompasses the whole range of conditioned and unconditioned dhammas. It is also described in terms of the five neyyadhamma viz., the sankhara, the distinctive qualities of certain rupas (nipphanna), the conditioned characteristics of nama-rupa, Nibbana and names.

The first two attributes of the Buddha forming the knowledge of the different spiritual levels, inclinations and latent tendencies of living beings are labelled Buddha-eye (Buddha-cakkhu). With this all-seeing eye, the Buddha chose the living beings who ought to be enlightened, and preached to them the appropriate dhamma at the appropriate moment.

We conclude the discourse on the Paticcasamuppada with the commentary on the attributes of the Buddha (Arahan) because we wish to inspire the readers with faith in the Blessed One. We hope that they will find the source of inspiration too, in the Arahats who also possess the Arahan attribute. The Arahat is wholly free from defilements, he has destroyed the framework of life-cycle; there is no secret place where he will do evil and so he is worthy of honour. These are the qualities that make up his Arahan attribute although this attribute as possessed by the ordinary Arahat is below the superlative Arahan attribute of the Buddha.

So you should try to overcome defilements through mindfulness of the nama-rupa processes that arise at the six sense-doors, destroy the supports of the wheel of life and keep your mind pure all the time in order that you may eventually become Arahats and earn the glorious title of Arahan.

SUMMARY

From the two root-causes referred to in the two noble truths there arise four layers, three cycles, three connections, twelve links, three time-dimensions, twenty phenomena and five nama-rupa processes. One who watches these present resultant processes effectively does not have craving that is rooted in feeling and so he will put an end to life-cycle completely.

In other words, the yogi watches every psycho-physical event that occurs at the six senses clearly in terms of its impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and egolessness.

Through such effective practice of mindfulness, the yogi gains insight into the nature of the sense-object such as sound, visual form, etc., and overcomes the attachment to it by the opposite (tadanga), that is, he overcomes it by opposing it with the knowledge that undercuts it. The cessation of attachment rules out the arising of the other phenomena e.g. clinging, process of becoming, rebirth, etc. After this cessation through vipassana insight, the yogi overcomes the latent attachment completely through destruction (samuccheda) when he attains the insight knowledge on the Ariyan path. At this moment the other phenomena e.g. clinging, etc., also become totally extinct.

There is no teaching which says that with the extinction of feeling, craving too ceases to exist. This is no wonder for even the Arahats do not have any control over their feelings that arise from contact with the six senses.

There are certain psycho-physical phenomena that have to be watched and noted as they really are i.e. in terms of anicca, dukkha and anatta if the yogi wants to remove the present causes such as tanha etc., the future results and end the cycle of suffering. These phenomena with their Pali terms are explained below.

(1) Vinnana: consciousness, which is of six kinds viz., eye-consciousness, ear-consciousness, nose-consciousness, tongue-consciousness, body-consciousness and mind-consciousness.

(2) Nama: mental factors (cetasikas) that arise together with consciousness. Rupa: the physical phenomena that arises together with that consciousness. Nama-rupa may be translated as mind and matter.

(3) Salayatana: the six bases of mental activity, that is, the six internal bases comprising the consciousness and the five physical sense-organs viz., eye, ear, nose, tongue and body and the six external bases viz., visible object, sound, odour, sap or gustative object, body-impression and mind-object.

(4) Phassa: contact or impression, which is of six kinds viz., visual impression, impression of hearing, of smelling, of tasting, bodily impression and mental impression.

(5) Vedana: feelings which is of three kinds viz., pleasant feeling, unpleasant feeling and indifferent feeling. We may also distinguish six kinds of feelings: feelings associated with seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, body-impression and mental impression.

1. Two root-causes:

Ignorance (avijja) and craving (tanha).

2. Two truths:

Truth about the cause (craving) and truth about suffering (dukkha).

3. Four layers:

(1) The layer of the past cause - ignorance, kamma formations (sankhara), craving, clinging and becoming.

(2) The layer of present result - consciousness, mind-body complex, six bases of mental activity, impression, feeling.

(3) The layer of present cause - craving, clinging, kamma, becoming, ignorance, kamma formations (sankhara).

(4) Future result - birth, old age, death, consciousness, etc.

4. Three cycles:

(1) The cycle of defilements - ignorance, craving, clinging.

(2) The cycle of kamma - kamma formations (sankhara), kamma and becoming.

(3) The cycle of kammic results - consciousness, mind-body complex, six bases of mental activity, impression, feeling, birth, old age and death.

5. Three connections:

(1) The connection between the past kamma formations (sankhara) as the past cause and consciousness as the present result.

(2) The connection between feeling as the present result and craving as the present cause.

(3) The connection between becoming as the present cause and birth as the future result.

6. Twelve links:

(1) ignorance
(2) kamma formations
(3) consciousness
(4) mental and physical phenomena
(5) six bases
(6) impression
(7) feeling
(8) craving
(9) clinging
(10) becoming
(11) rebirth
(12) old age and death

7. Three time-dimensions:

(1) The infinite past - ignorance and kamma formations.

(2) The infinite present - consciousness, mind-body complex, six bases, impression, feeling, craving, clinging, kamma-process.

(3) The infinite future - rebirth, old age and death.

8. Twenty elements:

(1) Five elements of the causative process in the past existence.

(2) Five elements of the resultant process in the present existence.

(3) Five elements of the causative process in the present existence.

(4) Five elements of the resultant process in the future existence.

<end of file>

ÚÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ¿
³ MANGALA SUTTANTA ³
ÀÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÙ

Mangala Suttanta- Discourse on Blessings
ÄÄÄ Thus have I heard: On one occasion the Blessed One was dwelling at the monastery of Anathapindika in Jeta's Grove near Savatthi. Now when the night was far spent, a certain deity whose surpassing splendour illuminated the entire Jeta Grove, came to the presence of the Blessed One, and, drawing near, respectfully saluted him and stood at one side.

Standing thus, he addressed the blessed One in verse:

Many deities and men, Yearning after good,
have pondered on Blessings.
Pray, Tell me the Highest Blessings!

.PA

Mangala Sutta (continued)
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ

Not to associate with fools,
To associate with the wise,
and honour those who are worthy of honour-
This is the Highest Blessing.

To reside in a suitable locality,
to have done meritorious actions in the past,
And to set oneself in the right course-
This is the Highest Blessing.

Vast-learning, perfect handicraft,
a highly trained discipline,

and pleasant speech-
This is the Highest Blessing.

The support of father and mother,
The cherishing of wife and children, and peaceful occupations-
This is the Highest Blessing.

.PA

Liberality, Righteous conduct,
The helping of relatives,
and blameless actions-
This is the Highest Blessing.

To cease and abstain from evil,
Forbearance with respect to intoxicants, and steadfastness in virtue-
This is the Highest Blessing.

Reverence, humility,
Contentment, gratitude, and oppurtune hearing of the Dhamma-
This is the Highest Blessing.

Patience, obedience,
Sight of Samanas (ascetics), and religious discussions at due season-
This is the highest Blessing.

.PA

He whose mind does not flutter,
By contact with worldly contingencies,
Sorrowless, Stainless, and Secure-
This is the highest Blessing.

To them, fulfilling matters such as these,

Everywhere invincible,
In every way moving happily-
These are the Highest Blessings.

The Mahamangala Sutta indicates not only the course of prepartory training but it also guides the individual through the journey of life and ultimately leads him to liberation.

It can be divided into 4 stages:

.PA

The Mangala Sutta (continued)
ÄÄÄ

.PA

The Mangala Sutta (continued)
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ

II) WAYFARING IN THE WORLD
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ

1. Basic responsibilities (11) The supporting of one's parents
   (12) Cherishing of wife and children
   (13) Peaceful occupations

2. Social obligations: (14) Giving
   (15) Righteous conduct
   (16) The helping of relatives
   (17) Blameless actions

3. Self-protection: (18) Ceasing evil
   (19) Abstaining from evil
   (20) Avoiding intoxicants

4. Conservation of personal progress: (21) Diligence in virtuous practices

.PA
The Mangala Sutta (continued)
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ
II) WAYFARING IN THE WORLD

5. Cultivation of higher qualities: (22) Reverence
   (23) Humility
   (24) Contentment
   (25) Gratitude
   (26) Timely hearing of the Dhamma

III) SPIRITUAL PROMOTION
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ

1. Spiritual eligibility: (27) Patience
(28) Obedience

2. Contact with Religious Life: (29) The seeing of spiritual persons (30) Timely discussions on the Dhamma

.PA

Mangala Sutta (continued)
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ
III SPIRITUAL PROMOTION

3. On the Path: (31) Austerity
(32) The Holy Life
(33) Seeing the Noble Truths
(34) The realisation of Nibbana

4. The Fruit: (35) A mind unshakeable when touched by the changes of worldly states
(36) Sorrowless
(37) Stainless
(38) Secure

IV) THE GLORIOUS CONCLUSION OF LIFE
ÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄÄ

MANTENIENDO LA MENTE EN LA RESPIRACION

Por

Ajaan Lee Dhammadharo

Traducido del ingles por
Joan B. Llorens

(Original English translation of the Thai by Thanissaro Bhikkhu)

Copyright 1994 Metta Forest Monastery

DharmaNet Edition 1994

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

M e t o d o 2

Hay siete pasos basicos:

1. Empezar con tres o siete largas respiraciones, pensando "bud" cuando respire hacia adentro, y "dho" cuando respire hacia afuera.

Mantenga la duracion de la silaba de meditacion tanto tiempo como la respiracion.

2. Sea claramente consciente de cada respiracion hacia adentro y hacia afuera.

3. Observe como entra y sale la respiracion, notando si es comoda o incomoda, ancha o estrecha, obtruida o sin obstruccion, rapida o lenta, larga of corta, calida o fresca. Si la respiracion no es comoda, cambiela hasta que lo sea. Por ejemplo, si la respiracion larga hacia dentro y hacia fuera es incomoda, pruebe la respiracion corta hacia dentro y afuera. Tan pronto como note una respiracion comoda , deje que esa sensacion se esparza por todo el cuerpo.

Empiece dejando que la respiracion se centre en la base del craneo, y deje que fluya hasta la base de la espina dorsal. Luego, si es varon, deje que se disemine por la pierna derecha hasta la planta del pie, las puntas de los dedos, y hacia el aire. Inhale la sensacion de la respiracion en la base del craneo otra vez y deje que baje por la espina dorsal, por la pierna izquierda hasta las puntas de los dedos de los pies y hacia el aire. (Si es mujer, empiece con el lado izquierdo primero, porque el sistema nervioso del hombre y de la mujer son diferentes.)

Luego deje que la respiracion se esparza de la base del craneo hacia los hombros, mas alla de los codos, de las puntas de los dedos y se disuelva en el aire.

Deje que la respiracion se esparza de la base de la garganta hacia abajo por el sistema nervioso central de enfrente del cuerpo pasando por los pulmones y el higado, hasta la vejiga y el colon.

Inhale la respiracion en el centro del pecho y dejela bajar hasta los intestinos.

Deje que todas estas sensaciones de la respiracion se esparzan y conecten, y sentira un gran bienestar.

4. Aprenda cuatro formas de ajustar la respiracion:

a. larga hacia adentro y hacia afuera,
b. corta hacia adentro y hacia afuera,
c. corta hacia adentro larga hacia afuera,
d. larga hacia adentro corta hacia afuera

Respire de la forma mas confortable. O, incluso mejor todavia, aprenda a respirar comodamente en las cuatro formas, porque su condicion fisica y su respiracion cambian constantemente.

5. Familiaricese con las bases o puntos centricos de la mente -- los puntos de descanso de la respiracion -- y centre su conciencia en el mas comodo.

Algunas de las bases son:

a. La punta de la nariz,

b. En medio de la cabeza,
c. El paladar,
d. La base de la garganta,
e. La punta del esternon,
f. El ombligo (o un poco mas arriba)

Si sufre de frecuentes dolores de cabeza o problemas nerviosos, no se concentre en un punto mas arriba de la base de la garganta. Y no intente forzar la respiracion o ponerse en trance.

Respire libre y naturalmente. Deje que la mente este comoda con la respiracion -- pero no hasta el punto de que se escape.

6. Esparza su conocimiento -- sensaciones de sentimientos de conciencia por todo el cuerpo.

7. Una las sensaciones de la respiracion por todo el cuerpo, y deje que se propaguen comodamente, conservando su conciencia tan ancha como le sea posible. Una vez sea totalmente consciente de todos los aspectos de la respiracion que Ud. conoce en su cuerpo, llegara a conocer toda clase de otros aspectos tambien. La respiracion, por su naturaleza, tiene muchas facetas: sensaciones de la respiracion fluyendo por los nervios, alrededor de los nervios, y de los nervios hasta cada poro. Sensaciones beneficas y daninas de la respiracion se mezclan por su naturaleza.

Para resumir: (a) Por razones de mejorar la energia existente en cada parte del cuerpo, para que pueda luchar contra enfermedades y dolor; y (b) para que pueda clarificar el conocimiento ya dentro de Ud., para que ello pueda ser la base de sus habilidades y la liberacion y pureza de su corazon -- Ud. siempre debe mantener en la mente estos siete pasos, porque son absolutamente basicos a cada aspecto de la meditacion de la respiracion.

Cuando los haya haya dominado, habra abierto el camino principal. Los caminos secundarios -- los incidentes de la meditacion respiratoria -- hay cantidad de ellos, pero no son tan importantes. Ud. se sentira perfectamente seguro si se aferra a los siete pasos y los practica tanto como pueda.

Una vez haya aprendido a poner en orden la respiracion, es como si todo en su casa estuviera en orden. Los incidentes de la meditacion de respiracion son como la gente fuera de su casa -- i.e. invitados. Una vez la gente de su casa se comporte bien, sus invitados tendran que seguir la misma linea.

Los "invitados" aqui son los signos (//nimitta//) y respiraciones vagabundas que tienden a pasar dentro del alcance de su respiracion del momento: los varios signos que aparezcan y que sean imagenes -- luces resplandecientes, gente, animales, Ud. mismo, otros; o sonidos -- voces de gente, algunos que Ud. reconoce -- otros que no. En algunos casos los signos aparecen a traves de olores -- fragantes o putrefactos como un cadaver. A veces la respiracion le hace sentirse tan lleno por todo el cuerpo que no siente hambre o sed. A veces la respiracion puede hacerle sentir sensaciones de calor, frio o hormigueo por todo el cuerpo. A veces puede causar cosas que nunca ocurrieron antes de surgir en la mente repentinamente.

Todas estas cosas son clasificadas como invitados. Antes de recibir a los invitados debe poner su respiracion y su mente en orden, hacer que sea estable y segura. Al recibir a estos invitados, tiene que ponerles bajo su control. Si no los puede controlar, no tenga nada que ver con ellos: Ellos le pueden apartar de su camino. Pero si Ud. los puede controlar, ellos le pueden ayudar mas tarde.

El ponerlos a traves de los pasos significa el cambiarlos a su voluntad, a traves del poder de su pensamiento (//patibhaga nimitta//) -- haciendolos pequenos, grandes,enviandolos lejos, regresarlos cerca, hacerlos aparecer y desaparecer, sacarlos fuera y volverlos a entrar. Solamente entonces podra usarlos en el entrenamiento de la mente.

Una vez los haya conquistado, estos signos le ayudaran a desarrollar altos poderes sensoriales: la habilidad de ver sin abrir los ojos; la habilidad de escuchar sonidos a larga distancia o de oler distantes aromas; la habilidad de catar los varios elementos que existen en el aire y que pueden ayudar al cuerpo a superar sensaciones de hambre y deseo; la habilidad de hacer aparecer ciertos sentimientos por voluntad -- sentirse fresco cuando se quiera sentir fresco,caliente si quiere sentirse caliente; fuerte cuando necesite fortaleza -- porque los elementos en el mundo que puedan serle fisicamente utiles apareceran en su cuerpo.

La mente, tambien, se elevara, y tendra el poder para desarrollar el ojo de la intuicion (//nana-cakkhu//): la habilidad para recordar vidas pasadas, la habilidad de saber donde los seres humanos vuelven a nacer despues de morir: la habilidad de limpiar el corazon de las emanaciones de profanacion). Si tiene la inteligencia, puede recibir estos invitados y ponerlos a trabajar en su casa.

Estos son algunos de los incidentes de la meditacion de respiracion. Si Ud. tropieza con ellos en su practica, examinelos detenidamente. No se conforme con lo que aparezca. No se enfade o trate de negar lo que le aparezca. Mantenga la mente en equilibrio. Quedese neutral. Sea circunspecto. Considere detenidamente lo que aparezca, para ver si puede confiar en ello o no. De otro modo, le puede llevar a asumir equivocadamente. Lo bueno y lo malo, lo justo y lo injusto, lo alto y lo bajo: Todo depende de si su corazon (astuto o lerdo) y en los recursos que posea. Si Ud. es torpe, incluso las cosas altas pueden aparecer bajas, y las cosas buenas, malas.

Una vez conozca los varios aspectos de la respiracion y sus incidentes, Ud. puede ganar el conocimiento de las cuatro Nobles Verdades. Ademas, puede rebajar los dolores fisicos segun aparezcan en el cuerpo. La conciencia es el ingrediente activo en la medicina; la respiracion adentro y afuera, el disolvente. La conciencia puede limpiar y purificar la respiracion. La respiracion pura puede limpiar la sangre de todo el cuerpo, y cuando la sangre esta limpia, puede mejorar muchas enfermedades y dolores. Si Ud. sufre desordenes nerviosos, por ejemplo, ellos desapareceran. Lo que es mas, podra fortalecer el cuerpo y se sentira mucho mejor y sano.

Cuando el cuerpo se siente bien, la mente se relaja y descansa. Y cuando la mente esta descansada, Ud. gana fortaleza: la habilidad de dejar todas las sensaciones de dolor mientras sentado medita, y puede meditar sentado por horas. Cuando el cuerpo se libera del dolor, la mente esta libre de estorbos (//nivarana//). El cuerpo y mente son fuertes. Esto se llama //Samadhi balam // -- la fuerza de la concentracion.

Cuando su concentracion es fuerte, puede dar paso al discernimiento: la habilidad de ver el estres, su causa, su desaparicion y el camino de su desaparicion, todo claramente dentro de la respiracion. Esto se puede explicar de la forma siguiente: La respiracion adentro y afuera es estres -- la respiracion hacia adentro, el estres sube; la respiracion hacia afuera, el estres sube; la respiracion hacia afuera el estres que desaparece. No estar consciente de la respiracion que entra y sale, no conocer las caracteristicas de la respiracion, cuando sale, el conocer sus caracteristicas. Claramente -- i.e. el mantener su punto de vista en linea con la verdad de la respiracion -- es el Punto Verdadero, parte del Noble Camino. Saber que formas son incomodas y saber como cambiar la respiracion; saber. Esa forma de respirar es incomoda; tendre que respirar de otra forma para sentirme mejor. Esta es la Actitud Verdadera. Los factores mentales que piensan correctamente y evaluan todos los aspectos de la respiracion son el Habla Verdadera. Saber formas diferentes de mejorar la respiracion; respirar, por ejemplo, profundo hacia adentro y afuera, profundo adentro, corto afuera, hasta que encuentre la respiracion mas comoda para Ud.: Esto es el Empeno Verdadero. El saber como usar la respiracion para purificar la sangre, como dejar que la sangre purificada alimente los musculos del corazon; como ajustar la respiracion para que relaje el cuerpo y alivie la mente; como respirar para sentirse lleno y refrescado en cuerpo y mente: Esto es Subsistencia Verdadera. Intentar ajustar la respiracion hasta que alivie el cuerpo y mente; y seguir intentando hasta que se sienta completamente relajado, es el Esfuerzo Verdadero. Ser consciente de la respiracion adentro y afuera; conocer los diferentes aspectos de la respiracion, como sube y baja, en el estomago, en los intestinos, el los musculos y en cada poro -- mantenerse atento a estas cosas con cada respiracion: Esta es la Referencia Verdadera. La mente con intencion en los casos de la respiracion, sin atraer a otros objetos que interfieran, hasta que la respiracion este refinada, para que aparezca en absorcion fija y despues el conocimiento interior. Esta es la Concentracion Verdadera.

El pensar en la respiracion se determina //vitakka//, el pensamiento dirigido. El ajustar la respiracion y esparcirla se llama //vicara//, evaluacion. Cuando todos los aspectos de la respiracion se esparcen libremente por el cuerpo, uno se siente lleno y refrescado en cuerpo y mente: Esto es //piti//, ruptura. Cuando el cuerpo y mente estan descansando, uno se siente sereno y tranquilo: Esto es //sukha//, placer. Inmediatamente que siente placer, la mente debe agarrarse a una sola preocupacion, y no perseguir otras: Esto es //ekaggata//, precision. Estos cinco factores forman el comienzo de la Concentracion Verdadera.

Cuando todas las partes del Noble Camino -- virtud, concentracion y discernimiento -- se juntan con madurez en el corazon, uno gana vision en todos los aspectos de la respiracion, sabiendo que " El respirar asi da paso a buenos estados mentales. El respirar de otra forma da paso a malos estados mentales. " Uno no es aprisionado por estos factores -- i.e. la respiracion en todos sus aspectos -- que modelan el cuerpo, que modelan el habla, que modelan la mente, ya sea para el bien o el mal, deje que esten en orden con su naturaleza inherente: Esto es la desaparicion del estres.

Otra forma mas concisa de expresar las Cuatro Nobles Verdades: La respiracion hacia dentro y afuera es la verdad del estres. No ser consciente de la respiracion hacia adentro, no ser consciente de la respiracion hacia afuera: Esto es causa del estres -- obscurecido, deludido conocimiento. Ver todos estos aspectos de la respiracion tan claramente que pueda dejarlos partir sin sentir atraccion es la disolucion del estres. Ser mentalmente constante y consciente de todos los aspectos de la respiracion es el camino de la disolucion del estres.

Cuando pueda hacer esto, puede decir que sigue correctamente el camino de la meditacion de la respiracion. Su consciente esta sin obscuridad. Tiene la habilidad de saber las Cuatro Verdades claramente. Puede conseguir la libertad. Libertad es la mente que no se aferra a las causas bajas o efectos bajos -- i.e. estres y su causa: o a las causas y efectos altos -- la disolucion del estres y el camino a su desaparicion. Es una mente independiente de las cosas que le causan el saber, independiente del conocimiento, del saber. Cuando puede separar estas cosas, ha dominado la habilidad de soltar -- i.e. cuando sabe que forma el comienzo, que forma el final y lo que hay en medio, dejando que sean como son solos, en linea con la frase

//Sabbe dhamma anatta//:

Todos los fenomenos no son el yo

Estar atados a las cosas que nos causan el saber -- los elementos, khundha, los sentidos y sus objetos -- se llama atarse a la sensualidad (//kamupadana//). Estar atado al conocimiento se llama estar atado a opiniones (//ditthupadana//) Desconocer el conocimiento puro dentro de uno mismo (//buddha//) se llama estar atado a los preceptos y procedimientos (//silabbatupadana//). Y cuando uno esta atado de esta forma, es estar atado a estados que desilusionan por los factores que modelan el cuerpo, el habla y la mente, todo lo que aparece del conocimiento obscurecido.

El Buddha fue maestro completo de ambos, causa y efecto, sin estar atado a las causas bajas y efectos bajos o a las causas altas y a los efectos altos. El estaba por arriba de la causa y del efecto. El estres y la desaparicion estaban a su alcance, pero el no estaba atado a ninguno. El conocia totalmente el bien y el mal, estaba equipado con los dos el yo y el no yo, pero no estaba atado a ninguna de las dos cosas. El tenia a su disposicion los objetos que pueden actuar como bases para la causa del estres, pero no estaba atado a ellas. El camino del discernimiento -- estaba tambien a su disposicion: El sabia como aparecer ignorante o astuto, y como cesar la ignorancia y la astucia en su mision de propagar la religion. Y para la desaparicion del estres, el lo tenia a su disposicion, pero no se aferraba a ello, por eso se puede decir que verdaderamente tenia control completo.

Antes de que el Buddha pudiera deshacerse de cosas de esta forma, primero tuvo que trabajar en hacerlas subir a su poder. Solamente entonces pudo el apartarlas. El dejo la abundancia, al contrario de la gente comun quienes la dejan por culpa de la pobreza. Aunque dejo estas cosas, todavia estaban a su alcance. El nunca dejo la virtud, la concentracion y discernimiento los que habia trabajado para perfeccionar hasta el dia de su Despertamiento. El continuo usando cada aspecto de la virtud, concentracion y el discernimiento hasta el dia en que entro en Total Liberacion (//parinibbana//). Incluso en el momento en que iba a alcanzar "nibbana", el practicaba el control de la concentracion total -- i.e. su liberacion total ocurrio cuando el estaba entre los niveles de lo fisico y lo no fisico de //Jhana//.

Asi es que no debemos descartar la virtud, concentracion y el discernimiento. Hay gente que no observa los preceptos, porque estan temerosos de atarse a ellos. Hay gente que no quiere practicar la concentracion porque tienen miedo a volverse ignorantes o locos. La verdad es que normalmente ya somos ignorantes, locos, y el practicar el centrar la mente es lo que acabara nuestra ignorancia y curara nuestra locura. Una vez nos hayamos preparado adecuadamente, nosotros alcanzaremos el puro discernimiento, que como joya cortada da luz de su propia naturaleza. Esto es lo que cualifica como el verdadero discernimiento. Aparece individualmente, y se llama //paccattam//: Nosotros lo podemos desarrollar, conocer, solo por si solos.

La mayoria de nosotros, tendemos a no comprender la naturaleza del dicernimiento. Tomamos el discernimiento de imitacion, adulterado con conceptos, y lo usamos para esconder lo real, como el hombre que pinta un cristal con mercurio para ver su reflexion y las de los otros, pensando que ha encontrado una forma ingeniosa de observar la verdad. En realidad, el no es mas que un chimpance mirandose en un espejo. Un chimpance se vuelve en dos, y seguira jugando con su reflexion hasta que se gaste el mercurio, al llegar a ese punto se desanima, no sabiendo de donde vino la reflexion. Asi es cuando alcanzamos la imitacion del discernimiento, sin conciencia, pensando, en conjetura, en linea con las cosas que pensamos que hemos percibido: Vamos camino de la tristeza cuando la muerte nos encuentre cara a cara.

El factor crucial es el discernimiento natural que alcanzamos solamente al entrar la mente a ser como un diamante que de su propia luz rodeado por su brillo en sitios oscuros o en sitios con mucha luz. Un espejo se usa solamente en sitios con mucha luz. Si lo llevas a un sitio oscuro no puede ver su propia reflexion. Pero la joya cortada da su propia luz y brillo en todas partes. Esto es lo que Buddha enseno; que no hay sitios secretos o cerrrados en el mundo donde no pueda entrar el discernamiento. Esta joya del discernimiento es lo que nos permitira destruir los insaciabilidad, la dependencia y la conciencia oscurecida, y donde conseguiremos la mas alta excelencia. La liberacion, libre de dolor, muerte, aniquilacion y extincion -- existiendo naturalmente a traves de la realidad de la inmortalidad (//amata-dhamma//).

Por la mayor parte, tendemos a estar interesados solamente en el discernimiento y el escape: En el momento, queremos empezar en las ensenanzas del estres, inconstancia y el no-yo -- y cuando este es el caso, nunca llegaramos a ningun sitio. Antes de que Buddha ensenara que las cosas son inconstantes, el ya habia trabajado en saberlas hasta que rebelaron su constancia. Antes de ensenar que las cosas son tensas el ya habia transformado esa tension en placer y tranquilidad. Y antes de ensenar que las cosas no son uno, el se habia vuelto lo que no es el yo , asi que pudo ver lo que era constante y verdad, el esconderse en lo inconstante, estres y el no yo. El punto de todas estas cualidades en una. El recogio todo lo que es inconstante, estres y no en una misma cosa: modelamientos (//sankhara//) vistos en terminos del mundo,una sola clase igual a traves del mundo . Y lo que es constante, placentero y uno, esto es otra clase: modelamientos vistos en terminos del Dhamma. Y entonces el dejo las dos clases, sin quedarse en lo "constante" o "inconstante", estres, facilidad, el yo y el no yo. Por esto podemos decir que hemos obtenido la separacion, pureza y liberacion, porque el no tenia la necesidad de agarrarse a los modelamientos -- en forma alguna.

Esta era la naturaleza de la practica del Senor Buddha.

Pero en nuestra practica individual, actuamos como si supieramos todo de antemano, y hubieramos tenido exito incluso antes de empezar. En otras palabras, queremos simplemente dejarlo ir y alcanzar la paz y la libertad. Pero no hemos hecho la base total, la separacion no tiene lo necesario: Nuestra paz tiende a ser un proyecto, nuestra liberacion equivocada. Aquellos de nosotros que sinceramente queremos hacer el mas alto bien deberiamos preguntarnos: Hemos puesto la fundacion solida, porque de no ser asi como podemos liberarnos?

El Buddha enseno que la virtud puede superar la contaminacion, las faltas que ocurren a traves del dicho y del hecho; esa concentracion puede superar la contaminacion intermedia del deseo sensual, voluntad, torpeza, desasosiego e incertidumbre; y ese discernimiento puede superar la contaminacion como la insaciabilidad, apego y el conocimiento oscuro. Aunque alguna gente cree que su discernimiento es agudo, que puede explicar puntos sutiles de doctrina, no pueden deshacerse de las mas comunes contaminaciones que incluso la virtud puede superar. Esto nos muestra que algo les falta en su virtud, concentracion y discernimiento. Sus virtudes son probablemente solamente en la superficie, su concentracion manchada y ensuciada, su discernimiento untado sobre el brillo -- como el cristal pintado de mercurio -- la razon por la que no pueden alcanzar su meta. Sus acciones concuerdan con el dicho: Conservar la espada fuera de la funda. i.e. tener la facilidad de palabra y teorias, pero no el punto central para la mente; el poner un huevo fuera del nido -- el buscar lo bueno solamente afuera, sin entrenar la mente a estar centrada; poner la fundacion sobre la arena -- buscando la seguridad en las cosas y no en la sustancia. Todas estas cosas nos traen la desilusion. Esa gente no ha encontrado un refugio valioso.

Asi que deberiamos poner los cimientos y poner las causas en buen funcionamiento, porque todo lo que tenemos que alcanzar nos viene de estas causas.

//Attana codoyattanam patimanse tamattana//

Despierte. Entrene su propio corazon.
Empiece a juzgar su propia respiracion adentro y afuera.

* * *

Ahora resumiremos los metodos de la meditacion de respiracion bajo los encabezamientos de Jhana.

Jhana significa estar absorto o enfocado en un solo objeto o preocupacion, como cuando nos ocupamos de la respiracion.

1. El primer nivel de Jhana tiene cinco factores:

(a) Pensamiento dirigido (//vitakka//): Piense en la respiracion hasta que pueda reconocerla claramente sin distraccion. (b) Concentracion en unidad(//ekaggatarammana//): Mantenga la mente en la respiracion. No deje que se pierda en otros objetos. Espie sus propios pensamientos para que ellos solo se centren en la respiracion hasta el punto de que la respiracion se vuelva confortable. (La mente se vuelva una, con la respiracion). (c) Evaluacion (//vicara//): Consiga que la sensacion de la respiracion se esparza y coordine con la sensacion de la respiracion en otras partes del cuerpo. Deje que la sensacion de la respiracion se esparza por todo el cuerpo hasta que todo se junte. Una vez el cuerpo se haya calmado por la respiracion, las sensaciones de dolor se calmaran. El cuerpo se llenara de buena energia de respiracion. (La mente esta enfocada exclusivamente en las cuestiones de la respiracion).

Estas cualidades deben juntarse para aguantar el mismo flujo de la respiracion para que el primer nivel de Jhana aparezca. Este flujo entonces le puede llevar hasta el cuarto nivel de Jhana.

El pensamiento dirigido, concentracion en unidad, la evaluacion actuan como las causas. Cuando las causas estan maduras, resultados apareceran -- (d) ruptura (//piti//): una sensacion de lleno y refrescamiento por todo el cuerpo y mente, directamente al corazon: independiente del resto. (e) El placer (//sukha//): el relajo fisico aparece por el cuerpo inmovil y sin estorbo (//kaya-passaddhi//); el contenido mental que aparece al estar comodo consigo mismo, sereno y exulto (//citta-passaddhi//).

La ruptura y el placer son los resultados . Los factores del primer nivel de Jhana, provienen simplemente de dos fuentes: Causas y resultados.

La ruptura, placer se fortalece, la respiracion se hace mas sutil. Cuanto mas tiempo permanezca enfocada y absorta, mas poderosos seran los resultados. Esto deja dirigir su pensamiento y evaluacion, la limpieza preliminar de base a un lado, y enforzarse solamente en un solo factor, un punto de concentracion -- entonces se entra a el segundo nivel de Jhana (//magga-citta, phala-citta//).

El segundo nivel de Jhana tiene tres factores: ruptura, placer y concentracion en un punto (//magga-citta//). Esto se refiere al estado mental que ha probado los resultados que vienen del primer nivel de Jhana. Una vez haya entrado en el segundo nivel, ruptura y placer se fortalecen porque se basan en una sola causa, concentracion en un punto, que supervisa el trabajo en adelante: enfocarse en la respiracion hasta que se vuelva mas y mas refinada, inmovil y con un sentido de refrescamiento y calma para el cuerpo y la mente. La mente es mas estable y enfocada que antes. Segun continue su enfocamiento, la ruptura y placer se fortalecen, se expanden y retraen. Continue enfocandose en la respiracion, mueva la mente mas profundamente a un nivel de ruptura y placer y entrara en el tercer nivel de Jhana.

3. El tercer nivel de Jhana tiene dos factores: El placer y la concentracion en un punto. El cuerpo esta tranquilo, inmovil y solitario. No aparecen sensaciones de dolor a estorbarlo. La mente esta solitaria e inmovil. La respiracion esta refinada, sin restricciones y ancha. Un resplandor -- blanco como el algodon -- le llena todo el cuerpo, inmovilizando todas las sensaciones fisicas de incomodidad mental. Mantengase enfocado en nada mas que en la ancha y refinada respiracion. La mente esta libre: No hay pensamientos del pasado o futuro que la estorban . La mente se sostiene sola. Las cuatro propiedades -- tierra, agua, fuego y viento -- estan en harmonia por todo el cuerpo. Uno podria decir que estan puras por todo el cuerpo, porque la respiracion tiene la fuerza de controlar y cuidar las otras propiedades, manteniendolas en harmonia y coordinacion. El conocimiento se junta con la concentracion en un punto, que actua como causa. La respiracion llena el cuerpo. El conocimiento llena el cuerpo.

Enfoquese en: La mente es brillante y poderosa, el cuerpo es ligero. Las sensaciones de placer inmoviles. Su sensacion del cuerpo en equilibrio estatico, sin deslices en sus conocimientos para que pueda dejar su sensacion de placer. Las manifestaciones de placer se vuelven inmoviles, porque las cuatro verdades, propiedades equilibradas y sin movimiento, en concentracion en unidad, la causa, tienen la fuerza de enfocar mas pesadamente, llevandole al cuarto nivel de Jhana.

4. El cuarto nivel de Jhana tiene dos factores: ecuanimidad (//upekkha//) la concentracion en un punto. El cuerpo esta tranquilo, inmovil y solitario.

Ecuanimidad y concentracion en un punto en el cuarto nivel de Jhana estan enfocados fuertemente -- solidos, estables y seguros. El elemento de la respiracion esta totalmente quieto libre de remolinos y huecos. La mente, neutral y quieta, se aparta de las preocupaciones con el pasado y el futuro. La respiracion, que forma el presente, esta quieta, como el oceano o el aire cuando estan libres de las corrientes o las olas. Pueden conocer el paisaje y los sonidos lejanos, porque la respiracion esta igualada y regulada, y actua como pantalla de cine que da una reflexion clara de lo que se proyecta en ella. El conocimiento aparece en la mente: Uno sabe quedarse inmovil y quieto. La mente esta neutral y quieta; la respiracion neutral y quieta; el pasado, presente y el futuro estan todos neutrales y quietos. Esto tambien ocurre con la concentracion en un punto, enfocada en la impertubable inmobilidad de su respiracion. Todas las partes del cuerpo conectadas para poder respirar por todos los poros. No tiene que respirar por la nariz, porque la respiracion hacia fuera y adentro y los otros aspectos de la respiracion en el cuerpo forman un sola totalidad. todos los aspectos de la energia de la respiracion estan igualados y llenos. Las cuatro propiedades todas tienen las mismas caracteristicas. La mente esta completamente inmovil.

El enfoque es fuerte; la luz encendida.
Esto es conocer el gran marco de referencia.
La mente emana una luz brillante -- como la luz del sol, la cual sin obstruccion de las nubes o neblina, ilumina la tierra con sus rayos.

La mente emana luz en todas direcciones. La respiracion es radiante, debido al enfoque del conocimiento.

El enfoque es fuerte; la luz, encendida....

La mente tiene autoridad y poder. Los cuatro marcos de referencia estan congregados en uno. No hay el sentido de, esto es el cuerpo ...Esto es un sentimiento... Esto es la mente....Eso es una cualidad mental. No tiene sentido de que sean cuatro. Esto se llama el gran marco de referencia, porque ninguno de los cuatro esta de algun modo separado.

La mente esta firmemente intencionada, centrada y verdadera, debido a la fuerza de su enfoque.

El conocimiento y la autopercepcion convergen en uno: Esto es lo que se llama una senda.

El conocimiento y la autopercepcion se convergen en uno: Esto es lo que significa un solo camino (//ekayana-magga//) -- la concordancia entre las propiedades de referencia, cuatro en uno, lo que produce la gran energia y el despertar, la purificacion del fuego interno (//tapas//) que hace desaparecer la oscuridad.

Segun se enfoque mas intensamente en lo radiante de la mente, el poder que nos llega al dejar todas las preocupaciones deja que la mente se aguante sola. Es como la persona que ha subido a la cima de una montana y tiene el derecho a ver en todas direcciones. La morada de la mente -- la respiracion que apoya la libertad de la mente -- esta en un estado mas alto, y la mente puede ver todas las cosas modeladas (//sankhara//) claramente en terminos de Dhamma, i.e. como elementos khandha, y percibe el medio (//ayatana//). Igual que la persona que sube una camara a un avion y puede tomar fotos de practicamente todo debajo, una persona que ha alcanzado este estado (//lokavidu//) puede ver el mundo y el Dhamma como verdaderamente son.

Ademas, la percepcion de cualquier forma, en el area de la mente, -- llamada liberacion interna; o habilidad de soltarse -- tambien aparecen. Los elementos o propiedades del cuerpo adquieren potencia (//kaya-siddhi//); la mente, poder resiliente. Cuando quiera conocimiento del mundo o del Dhamma, enfoque la mente pesada y firmemente en la respiracion. Cuando el poder concentrado de la mente golpee al elemento puro, el conocimiento intuitivo aparecera en ese elemento, como la aguja de un tocadiscos, al ponerse en contacto con el disco, producira los sonidos. Una vez la percepcion este enfocada en un objeto puro, entonces si quiere imagenes, apareceran imagenes, si quiere sonidos, sonidos, cerca o lejos, los asuntos del mundo o el Dhamma, concernientes a Ud. o a otros, pasado, presente o futuro -- lo que quiera saber.

Segun se enfoque, piense en lo que quiera saber y aparecera. Esto es //nana // -- sensibilidad intuitiva capaz de saber el pasado, presente y futuro -- un nivel importante de percepcion que solamente Ud. puede saber. Los elementos son como las ondas de radio atravesando el aire. Si su mente y percepcion son fuertes, y sus habilidades altamente desarrolladas, puede usar esos elementos para ponerse en contacto con el mundo entero, para que el conocimiento aparezca dentro de Ud.

Cuando haya conseguido alcanzar el cuarto nivel de Jhana, puede actuar como la base para las ocho habilidades:

1. //Vipassana-nana//: Intuicion interna clara mental y fenomenos fisicos segun aparezcan, permanezcan o desaparezcan. Esto es una forma especial de percepcion, que viene solo del entreno de la mente. Ocurre de dos formas: (a) saber sin haber pensado en el tema y (b) saber habiendo pensado en el tema -- pero sin haber pensado mucho, como en el caso del conocimiento ordinario. Pensar por un instante y inmediatamente aparecer claramente -- como el algodon impregnado de gasolina, cuando se acerca la cerilla, se enciende inmediatamente. La intuicion y percepcion son muy rapidas, y difieren del discernimiento ordinario.

2. //Manomayiddhi//: la habilidad de usar la mente para influir eventos.

3. //Iddhividhi//: la habilidad de mostrar poderes supra-normales, i.e. crear imagenes en ciertos instantes que cierto grupos de gente puedan ver.

4. //Dibbasota//: la habilidad de escuchar sonidos distantes.

5. //Cetopariya-nana//: la habilidad de conocer el nivel -- del bien o el mal, alto o bajo -- de las mentes de otra gente.

6. //Pubbenivasanussati-nana//: la habilidad de recordar previas vidas. (Si consigue esta habilidad, no se tendra que preguntar si la muerte es seguida por anniquilacion o el renacer.)

7. //Dibbacakkhu//: la habilidad de ver asquerosas o sutiles imagenes, ambas cerca y lejos.

8. //Asavakkhaya-nana//: la habilidad de reducir y eliminar eflluentes o contaminaciones en el corazon.

Estas ocho habilidades vienen exclusivamente de centrar la mente, la razon por la cual yo he escrito esta guia condensada de concentracion y Jhana, basada en la tecnica de mantener la mente en la respiracion. Si aspira al bien que viene de estas cosas, tiene que enfocar su atencion en entrenar su corazon y su mente.

[end of file]

A HAPPY MARRIED LIFE

A Buddhist Perspective

by
Dr. K. Sri Dhammananda

Published by The Buddhist Missionary Society
123 Jalan Berhala, 50470 Kuala Lampur
Malaysia

All rights reserved.
Copyright 1987 by the Author

ISBN 967-9920-33-X

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription: Mark Blackstad
Proofreading & Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

CONTENTS

1. INTRODUCTION
2. THE NATURE OF LOVE AND PLEASURE
    Love
    Sex
    The Buddha's Explanation
    Pleasure
3. THE REALITY OF MARRIED LIFE
    Problems
    Sharing and Trust
    Blinded by Emotions
    Material Needs
    Pre-marriage Advice
4. THE BUDDHIST CONCEPT OF MARRIAGE
    Role of Religion
5. THE RELIGIOUS DILEMMA
    Individual Rights
    Post-marriage Blues
    The Ceremony
6. SECURITY, RESPECT AND RESPONSIBILITIES
    Sense of Insecurity
    Husband and Wife
    The Past
    Modern Society
    Divorce
    Responsibility towards the Children
    Buddhist Views
7. POLYGAMY OR MONOGAMY
8. NEW TECHNOLOGY
    Family Planning
    Test-tube Babies
9. MORALITY
    Premarital Sex
    Sexual Misconduct
    Irresponsible Sexual Behavior
10. THE EAST AND THE WEST
11. CELIBACY

What is Celibacy?
Significance of Celibacy
Celibacy versus Responsibility
The Buddha's Experience
12. SUMMARY
APPENDIX
I -- The Affectionate Mother
II -- Moral Code

* * * * * * * *

FOREWORD

From time immemorial, man has been preoccupied with the pursuit of happiness in life, from the cradle to the grave. He works and struggles very hard to attain happiness, very often without knowing exactly what happiness means because of his ignorance of the nature of life. Although all religions provide advice and guidelines for their adherents to practice in order to attain happiness in life, more often than not, these advices and guidelines are ignored owing to man's craving, hatred and illusion. Many people who experienced frustrations and sufferings hope and pray to find happiness for present life and here after; others, though enjoying a large measure of happiness on earth, are still not contented and crave for eternal bliss in heaven after leaving this world. For the ordinary man, as for the child, it is difficult to make a distinction between happiness and pleasure. To him, that which gives pleasure give happiness, and to be happy is to experience pleasure.

Very often, we consider childhood days to be a period of happiness. In reality, as children we do not understand what happiness is. Under the protection of our parents, we pass our days in a perpetual round of enjoyment which undoubtedly gives us pleasure. As we enter adolescence, changes take place in the mind and physical body causing us to become aware of the existence of the opposite sex and we begin to experience a new kind of attraction giving rise to disturbing emotions. At the same time, curiosity drives us to find out about the fats of life, through peer discussion and book reading. Before long, we find ourselves on the threshold of adulthood, the crucial time in our life when we look for a suitable life-partner to begin a relationship that will put to the test all the qualities that we have acquired earlier in life. Love, sex, and marriage then become matters of great importance that will determine the quality of the married life we will have.

Young people today are exposed to a large variety of "Western" influences which are disseminated through the mass media such as books and magazines, television, video cassettes and movies, resulting in the acquisition of distorted ideas regarding love, sex, and marriage. The age-old "Eastern" moral virtues and values are being gradually eroded in the face of these influences. Practices unheard of and never carried out by the older generation have become common place among young people today. Are the "Western" influences really responsible for this state of affairs or should the parents be blamed for the misdeeds of their children for not exercising proper control and supervision over them? In this book, it is explained that most television programs and movies do not represent the way most decent people in the West think or behave and that there is a vast "silent majority" of decent couples who are as deeply religious and "conservative" about love, sex and marriage as any "Eastern" couple. If young people want to ape the West, they are advised to ape this "silent majority" who are no different from their decent neighbor who lives next door to them.

Modern life is fraught with all kinds of tension and stress. Doubtless, very often it is tension and stress that creates problems in many a marriage. If a proper analysis is made into the root causes of such social problems as pre-marital sex, teenage pregnancies, unhappy marriages and divorces, child-abuse and wife-battering, we inevitably discover that it is due mainly to selfishness and lack of patience, tolerance and mutual understanding. In the //Sigalovada Sutta//, the Buddha gives good advice on how to maintain peace and harmony in the home between husband and wife in order to achieve a happy married life. Parental responsibilities for children and the children's duties toward parents are also clearly mentioned in the Sutta as useful guidelines for the attainment of a happy home. In this book, the Ven. Author stresses the important point that marriage is a partnership of two individuals and that this partnership is enriched and enhanced when it allows the personalities involved to grow. In the Buddhist perspective, marriage means understanding and respecting each other's beliefs and privacy. The present time is most opportune for a book of this nature to be published to provide the followers of the Buddhist religion, in particular the young, with a clear understanding of life's important matters like love, sex and marriage which will not only help them to live a happy married life but also assist them to lead peaceful and contented lives.

On behalf of the Buddhist Missionary Society I wish to express our sincere gratitude and appreciation to many of our devoted members for all the help and services rendered in the preparation of this book. Our special thanks are due to: Mr. Vijaya Samarawickrama for undertaking the editorial work, Mr. Teh Thean Choo, Miss Quah Pin Pin and Mrs. Chong Hong Choo for their valuable assistance and Mr. Paw Oo Thett of Burma for the cover design.

Tan Teik Beng
JSM, SMS, KMN, PKT
Vice President, Buddhist Missionary Society
Former Director, Department of Education, Selangor.
20 December 1986

* * * * * * * *

1. INTRODUCTION

From the Buddhist point of view, marriage is neither holy nor unholy. Buddhism does not regard marriage as a religious duty nor as a sacrament that is ordained in heaven. A cynic has said that while some people believe that marriage is planned in heaven, others say that it is recorded in hell also! Marriage is basically a personal and social obligation, it is not compulsory. Man and woman must have freedom either to get married or to remain single. This does not mean that Buddhism is against marriage. Nobody in this world would say that marriage is bad and there is no religion which is against marriage.

Practically all living things come into being as a result of sex life. Among human beings, the institution of marriage has come about so that society guarantees the perpetuation of the human species and also ensures that the young would be cared for. This is based on the argument that children born through the pleasure of sex must be the responsibility of the partners involved, at least until they have grown up. And marriage ensures that this responsibility is upheld and carried out.

A society grows through a network of relationships which are mutually inter-twined and inter-dependent. Every relationship is a whole-hearted commitment to support and to protect others in a group or community. Marriage plays a very important part in this strong web of relationships of giving support and protection. A good marriage should grow and develop gradually from understanding and not impulse, from true loyalty and not just sheer indulgence. The institution of marriage provides a fine basis for the development of culture, a delightful association of two individuals to be nurtured and to be free from loneliness, deprivation and fear. In marriage, each partner develops a complementary role, giving strength and moral courage to one another, each manifesting a supportive and appreciative recognition of the other's skill in caring and providing for a family. There must be no thought of either man or woman being superior -- each is complementary to the other; marriage is a partnership of equality, gentleness, generosity, calm and dedication.

In Buddhism, one can find all the necessary advice which can help one to lead a happy married life. One should not neglect the advice given by the Enlightened Teacher if one really wants to lead a happy married life. In His discourses, the Buddha gave various kinds of advice for married couples and for those who are contemplating marriage. The Buddha has said, "If a man can find a suitable and understanding wife and a woman can find a suitable and understanding husband, both are fortunate indeed."

* * *

2. THE NATURE OF LOVE AND PLEASURE

Love

There are different kinds of love, and these are variously expressed as motherly love, brotherly love, sensual love, emotional love, sexual love, selfish love, selfless love and universal love.

If people develop only their carnal or selfish love towards each other, that type of love cannot last long. In a true love relationship, one should not ask how much one can get, but how much one can give.

When beauty, complexion and youth start to fade away, a husband who considers only the physical aspects of love may think of acquiring another young one. That type of love is animal love or lust. If a man really develops love as an expression of human concern for another being, he will not lay emphasis only on the external beauty and physical attractiveness of his partner. The beauty and attractiveness of his partner should be in his heart and mind, not in what he sees. Likewise, the wife who follows Buddhist teachings will never neglect her husband even though he has become old, poor or sick.

> "I have a fear that the modern girl loves to be Juliet to have a dozen Romeos. She loves adventure . . . . . The modern girl dresses not to protect herself from wind, rain and sun, but to attract attention. She improves upon nature by painting herself and looking extraordinary."

-- Gandhi

Sex
~~~
Sex by itself is not "evil," although the temptation and craving for it invariably disturbs the peace of mind, and hence is not conducive to spiritual development.

In the ideal situation, sex is the physical culmination of a deeply satisfying emotional relationship, where both partners give and take equally.

The portrayal of love by commercial groups through the mass media in what we call "western" culture is not "real" love. When an animal wants to have sex, it shows its "love," but after having experienced sex, it just forgets about love. For animals, sex is just an instinctive drive necessary for procreation. But a human being has much more to offer in the concept of love. Duties and responsibilities are important ingredients to maintain unity, harmony and understanding in a relationship between human beings.

Sex is not the most important ingredient for happiness in a married life. Those who have become slaves to sex would only ruin love and humanity in marriage. Apart from that, a woman must cease to consider herself as the object of a man's lust. The remedy is more in her hand than in a man's. She must refuse to adorn herself simply to please a man, even if he is her husband. If she wants to be an equal partner with a man, she should dress so that her dignity is enhanced, and she does not become a sex symbol. Marriage for the satisfaction of the sexual appetite is no marriage. It is concupiscence. (Gandhi)

Love may indeed be a product of sex, but the reverse is likewise true: sex is an expression of love. In the ideally happy married life, both love and sex are inseparable.
~~~

The Buddha's Explanation

We can study the Buddha's teaching regarding the feelings that man and woman have for each other. The Buddha says that he had never seen any object in this world which attracts man's attention more than the figure of a woman. At the same time the main attraction for the woman is the figure of a man. It means that by nature, woman and man give each other worldly pleasure. They cannot gain happiness of this kind from any other object. When we observe very carefully, we notice that among all the things which provide pleasure, there is no other object that can please all the five senses at the same time beside the male and female figures.

The ancient Greeks knew this when they said that originally man and woman were one. They were separated and the two parts that were divided are constantly seeking to be re-united as man and woman.

Pleasure

Young people by nature like to indulge in worldly pleasures which can include both good and bad things. Good things, like the enjoyment of music, poetry, dance, good food, dress and similar pursuits do no harm to the body. They only distract us from seeing the fleeting nature and uncertainty of existence and thereby delay our being able to perceive the true nature of the self.

The faculties and senses of young people are very fresh and alert; they are very keen to satisfy all the five senses. Almost everyday, they plan and think out ways and means to experience some form of pleasure. By the very nature of existence, one will never be completely satisfied with whatever pleasure one experiences and the resultant craving in turn only creates more anxieties and worries.

When we think deeply about it, we can understand that life is nothing but a dream. In the end, what do we gain from attachment to this life? Only more worries, disappointments and frustrations. We may have enjoyed brief moments of pleasure, but in the final analysis, we must try to find out what the real purpose of our lives is.

When one ceases to crave for sensual pleasure and does not seek to find physical comfort in the company of others, the need for marriage does not arise. Suffering and worldly enjoyment are both the outcome of craving, attachment and emotion. If we try to control and suppress our emotions by adopting unrealistic tactics we create disturbances in our mind and in our physical body. Therefore we must know how to handle and control our human passion. Without abusing or misusing this passion, we can tame our desires through proper understanding.

* * *

3. THE REALITY OF MARRIED LIFE

John J. Robinson in his book "Of Suchness" gives the following advice on love, sex and married life. "Be careful and discreet; it is much easier to get married than unmarried. If you have the right mate, it's heavenly; but if not, you live in a twenty-four-hour daily hell that clings constantly to you, it can be one of the most bitter things in life. Life is indeed strange. Somehow, when you find the right one, you know it in your heart. It is not just an infatuation of the moment. But the powerful urges of sex drive a young person headlong into blind acts and one cannot trust his feelings too much. This is especially true if one drinks and get befuddled; the most lousy slut in a dark bar can look like a Venus then, and her charms become irresistible. Love is much more than sex though; it is the biological foundation between a man and a woman; love and sex get all inter-twined and mixed up."

Problems

Almost everyday we hear people complaining about their marriages. Very seldom do we hear stories about a happy marriage. Young people reading romantic novels and seeing romantic films often conclude that marriage is a bed of roses. Unfortunately, marriage is not as sweet as one thinks. Marriage and problems are interrelated and people must remember that when they are getting married, they will have to face problems and responsibilities that they had never expected or experienced hitherto.

People often think that it is a duty to get married and that marriage is a very important event in their lives. However, in order to ensure a successful marriage, a couple has to harmonize their lives by minimizing whatever differences they may have between them. Marital problems prompted a cynic to say that there can only be a peaceful married life if the marriage is between a blind wife and a deaf husband, for the blind wife cannot see the faults of the husband and a deaf husband cannot hear the nagging of his wife.

Sharing and Trust

One of the major causes of marital problems is suspicion and mistrust. Marriage is a blessing but many people make it a curse due to lack of understanding.

Both husband and wife should show implicit trust for one another and try not to have secrets between them. Secrets create suspicion, suspicion leads to jealously, jealousy generates anger, anger causes enmity and enmity may result in separation, suicide or even murder.

If a couple can share pain and pleasure in their day-to-day life, they can console each other and minimize their grievances. Thus, the wife or husband should not expect to experience only pleasure. There will be a lot of painful, miserable experiences that they will have to face. They must have the strong will power to reduce their burdens and misunderstandings. Discussing mutual problems will give them confidence to live together with better understanding.

Man and woman need the comfort of each other when facing problems and difficulties. The feelings of insecurity and unrest will disappear and life will be more meaningful, happy and interesting if there is someone who is willing to share another's burden.

Blinded by Emotions

When two people are in love, they tend to show only the best aspects of their nature and character to each other in order to project a good impression of themselves. Love is said to be blind and hence people in love tend to become completely oblivious of the darker side of each other's natures.

In practice, each will try to highlight his or her sterling qualities to the other, and being so engrossed in love, they tend to accept each other at "face value" only. Each lover will not disclose the darker side of his or her nature for fear of losing the other. Any personal shortcomings are discreetly swept under the carpet, so to speak, so as not to jeopardize their chances of winning each other. People in love also tend to ignore their partner's faults thinking that they will be able to correct them after marriage, or that they can live with these faults, that "love will conquer all."

However, after marriage, as the initial romantic mood wears off, the true nature of each other's character will be revealed. Then, much to the disappointment of both parties, the proverbial veil that had so far been concealing the innermost feelings of each partner is removed to expose the true nature of both partners. It is then that disillusion sets in.

Material Needs

Love by itself does not subsist on fresh air and sunshine alone. The present world is a materialistic world and in order to meet your material needs, proper financing and budgeting is essential. Without it, no family can live comfortably. Such a situation aptly bears out the saying that "when poverty knocks at the door, love flies through the window." This does not mean that one must be rich to make a marriage work. However, if one has the basic necessities of life provided through a secure job and careful planning, many unnecessary anxieties can be removed from a marriage.

The discomfort of poverty can be averted if there is complete understanding between the couple. Both partners must understand the value of contentment. Both must treat all problems as "our problems" and share all the "ups" and "downs" in the true spirit of a long-standing life partnership.

Pre-marriage Advice

The Anguttara Nikaya contains some valuable advice which the Buddha gave to young girls prior to their marriage. Realizing that there could be difficulties with the new in-laws, the girls were enjoined to give every respect to their mothers-in-law and fathers-in-law, serving them lovingly as their own parents. They were expected to honor and respect their husband's relatives and friends, thus creating a congenial and happy atmosphere in their new homes.

They were also advised to study and understand their husbands' natures, ascertain their activities, characters and temperaments, and to be useful and cooperative at all times in their new homes. They should be polite, kind and watchful of their husbands' earnings and see to it that all household expenditures were properly administered. The advice given by the Buddha more than twenty five centuries ago is still valid even today.

* * *

4. THE BUDDHIST CONCEPT OF MARRIAGE

In view of what has been said about "birth and suffering," some people have criticized Buddhism saying that is against married life. They are wrong. The Buddha never spoke against married life. However, he pointed out all the problems, difficulties and worries that people would have to face when they take on the responsibility of marriage. Just because he warned one against problems in marriage does not mean that the Buddha condemned marriage.

The act of marriage itself implies that a person is still more attached to the physical world and since our mental faculties are influenced by craving, attachment and human emotions, it is but natural that problems would arise. This happens when we have to consider the need of others and to give in to what others need.

Role of Religion

A deep analysis of the nature of self is important to help us to understand the origin of our problems, worries, miseries and how to overcome them. Here, religious advice is important for maintaining a tranquil life. However, a man should not become a slave to any religion. Man is not for religion, religion is for man. That means man must know how to make use of religion for his betterment and for his happiness in a respectable way. Simply by following certain religious vows, precepts or commandments with blind faith or by force, thinking that we are duty-bound to observe them will not develop proper understanding.

One important aspect of Buddhism is that the Buddha did not impose any religious laws or commandments. The Buddha was a unique teacher who had set out a number of disciplinary codes for us to uphold according to our way of life. Those who follow the precepts observe them voluntarily but not as obligatory religious laws. It is up to us to follow the advice through our own understanding and experience of what is good for us and for others. Through trial and error, we will learn to follow the advice which will give us just peace and happiness.

One should try to understand the nature of the worldly life. By knowing that you have to face problems, you will be able to strengthen your mind and be more prepared to face the problems that could arise if you get married. Religion is important to help you overcome your problems. Whatever you learned about religious principle when you were young can be adopted to avoid misunderstanding, disappointment and frustration. At the same time, certain good qualities such as patience and understanding which we learned through religion are important assets to help us to lead a peaceful married life.

Normally, it is due to a lack of mutual understanding that many married couples lead miserable lives. The result of this is that their innocent children also have to suffer. It is better to know how to handle your problems in order to lead a happy married life. Religion can help you to do this.

* * *

5. THE RELIGIOUS DILEMMA

Individual Rights

One of the causes of greatest concern among those who do not belong to the non-semitic religions is the problem of conversion before marriage. While Buddhists and Hindus never demand that a couple must belong to the same religion before a marriage can be solemnized, many others tend to take advantage of this tolerance.

Marriage, contrary to what many romantic novels say, does not mean the total and absolute merging of two people to the extent that each loses his or her own identity. When a religion demands that both partners must have the same religious label, it denies the basic human right of an individual to believe what he or she wants. Societies throughout history have proved that "Unity in Diversity" is not only possible but desirable. Out of diversity comes greater respect and understanding. This should apply to marriage also. There are many living examples all over the world where the husband and wife maintain their own beliefs and yet are able to maintain their happy married life without confronting each other.

Buddhists do not oppose the existence of other religions even within the same household. Unfortunately this generous attitude has been exploited by unscrupulous religionists who are out to gain converts by all means.

Intelligent Buddhists must be aware of this stratagem. No self-respecting intelligent human being who really understands what he believes according to his own conviction should give up his beliefs merely to satisfy the man-made demands of another religion. Buddhists do not demand that their partners embrace Buddhism. Neither should they surrender their own beliefs.

Post-marriage Blues

When young people are in love, they are prepared to make many sacrifices so long as they can get married. But after a few years, when the real task of building a successful marriage begins, frustrations begin to set in. When a partner who had given up his deep-seated religious beliefs for "love" begins to regret having done so, unnecessary misunderstandings arise. These provide added tensions at a period when there is boredom in a marriage. There will be quarrels. And normally, one of the main causes of these quarrels will be the question of which religion the children should belong to.

Therefore, it is most important for one to know that if there is a process of conversion involved, it must be based on true conviction and not mere convenience or compulsion. Buddhists maintain the freedom of the individual to choose. This principle should be respected by all.

The Ceremony

There is no specific Buddhist ritual or procedure to conduct a marriage. Buddhism recognizes the traditions and cultures practiced by people in different countries. Hence, Buddhist religious ceremonies differ from one country to another.

In general practice, a religious service for blessing and to give advice to the couple is customarily performed either in the temple or at home to give a greater significance to the marriage. Nowadays, in many countries, besides the blessing service, religious organizations also have been given the authority to solemnize and register marriages together with the issuance of legal marriage certificates.

By and large, the most important point is that the couple should be utterly sincere in their intention to cooperate with and understand each other not only during times of happiness but also whenever they face difficulties.

* * *

6. SECURITY, RESPECT AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Sense of Insecurity

In the past, there was no such thing as a legal registration of marriages. A man and woman mutually decided to accept each other as husband and wife and thereafter they lived together. Their marriage was carried out in the presence of the community, and separation was rare. The most Important thing was that they developed real love and respected their mutual responsibilities.

A legal registration of marriage is important today to ensure security and to safeguard property and children. Due to the sense of insecurity, a couple performs legal marriages to ensure that they are legally bound not to neglect their duties and not to ill-treat each other. Today, some couples even draw up a legal contract on what would happen to their property if they are divorced!

Husband and Wife

According to Buddhist teaching, in a marriage, the husband can expect the following qualities from his wife:

- -- love
- -- attentiveness
- -- family obligations
- -- faithfulness
- -- child-care
- -- thrift
- -- the provision of meals
- -- to calm him down when he is upset
- -- sweetness in everything

In return, the wife's expectation from husband is:

- -- tenderness
- -- courtesy
- -- sociability
- -- security
- -- fairness
- -- loyalty
- -- honesty
- -- good companionship
- -- moral support

Apart from these emotional and sensual aspects, the couple will have to take care of day-to-day living conditions, family budget and social obligations. Thus, mutual consultations between the husband and wife on all family problems would help to create an atmosphere of trust and understanding in resolving whatever issues that may arise.

The Buddha's Advice to a Couple

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

I. The Wife

In advising women about their role in married life, the Buddha appreciated that the peace and harmony of a home rested largely on a woman. His advice was realistic and practical when he explained a good number of day-to-day characteristics which a woman should or should not cultivate. On diverse occasions, the Buddha counseled that a wife should:

a) not harbor evil thoughts against her husband;
b) not be cruel, harsh or domineering;
c) not be spendthrift but should be economical and live within her means;
d) guard and save her husband's hard-earned earnings and property;
e) always be attentive and chaste in mind and action;
f) be faithful and harbor no thought of any adulterous acts;
g) be refined in speech and polite in action;
h) be kind, industrious and hardworking;
i) be thoughtful and compassionate towards her husband, and her attitude should equate that of a mother's love and concern for the protection of her only son;
j) be modest and respectful;
k) be cool, calm and understanding -- serving not only as a wife but also as a friend and advisor when the need arises.

In the days of the Buddha, other religious teachers also spoke on the duties and obligations of a wife towards her husband -- stressing particularly on the duty of a wife bearing an off-spring for the husband, rendering faithful service and providing conjugal happiness.

Some communities are very particular about having a son in the family. They believe that a son is necessary to perform their funeral rites so that their after-life will be a good one. The failure to get a son from the first wife, gives a man the liberty to have another wife in order to get a son. Buddhism does not support this belief.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

According to what the Buddha taught about the law of Karma, one is responsible for one's own action and its consequences. Whether a son or a daughter is born is determined not by a father or mother but the karma of the child. And the well-being of a father or grandfather does not depend upon the action of the son or grandson. Each is responsible for his own actions. So, it is wrong for men to blame their wives or for a man to feel inadequate when a son is not born. Such Enlightened Teachings help to correct the views of many people and naturally reduce the anxiety of women who are unable to produce sons to perform the "rites of the ancestors."

Although the duties of a wife towards the husband were laid down in the Confucian code of discipline, it did not stress the duties and obligations of the husband towards the wife. In the //Sigalovada Sutta//, however, the Buddha clearly mentioned the duties of a husband towards the wife and vice versa.

II. The Husband

The Buddha, in reply to a householder as to how a husband should minister to his wife declared that the husband should always honor and respect his wife, by being faithful to her, by giving her the requisite authority to manage domestic affairs and by giving her befitting ornaments. This advice, given over twenty five centuries ago, still stands good for today.

Knowing the psychology of the man who tends to consider himself superior, the Buddha made a remarkable change and uplifted the status of a woman by a simple suggestion that a husband should honor and respect his wife. A husband should be faithful to his wife, which means that a husband should fulfill and maintain his marital obligations to his wife thus sustaining the confidence in the marital relationship in every sense of the word. The husband, being a bread-winner, would invariably stay away from home, hence he should entrust the domestic or household duties to the wife who should be considered as the keeper and the distributor of the property and the home economic-administrator. The provision of befitting ornaments to the wife should be symbolic of the husband's love, care and attention showered on the wife. This symbolic practice has been carried out from time immemorial in Buddhist communities. Unfortunately it is in danger of dying out because of the influence of modern civilization.

The Past

In the past, since the social structure of most communities was different from that we find today, a husband and wife were interdependent on each other. There was mutual understanding, and the relationship was stable because each knew exactly what his or her role was in the partnership. The "love" that some husbands and wives try to show others by embracing each other in public does not necessarily indicate true love or understanding. In the past, although married couples did not express their love or inner feeling publicly, they had a deep even unspoken understanding and mutual respect for each other.

The ancient customs which people had in certain countries that the wife must sacrifice her life after her husband's death and also the custom which prevents a widow from remarrying is foreign to Buddhism. Buddhism does not regard a wife as being inferior to a husband.

Modern Society

Some women feel that for them to concentrate on the upbringing of the family is degrading and conservative. It is true that in the past women had been treated very badly, but this was due more to the ignorance on the part of men than the inherent weakness in the concept of depending on women to bring up children.

Women have been struggling for ages to gain equality with men in the field of education, the professions, politics and other avenues. They are now at par with men to a great extent. The male generally tends to be aggressive by nature and the female more emotional. In the domestic scene, particularly in the East, the male is more dominant as head of the family whilst the female tends to remain as passive partner. Please remember, "passive" here does not mean "weak." Rather it is a positive quality of "softness" and "gentleness." If man and woman maintain their masculine and feminine qualities inherited from nature and recognize their respective strengths, then, that attitude can contribute towards a congenial mutual understanding between the sexes.

Gandhi's remarks:

> "I believe in the proper education of woman. But I do believe that woman will not make her contribution to the world by mimicking or running a race with man. She can run the race, but she will not rise to the great heights she is capable of by mimicking man. She has to be the complement of man."

Parental Responsibilities

The basis of all human society is the intricate relationship between parent and child. A mother's duty is to love, care and protect the child, even at extreme cost. This is the self-sacrificing love that the Buddha taught. It is practical, caring and generous and it is selfless. Buddhists are taught that parents should care for the child as the earth cares for all the plants and creatures.

Parents are responsible for the well-being and up-bringing of their children. If the child grows up to be a strong, healthy and useful citizen, it is the result of parents' efforts. If the child grows up to be a delinquent, parents must bear the responsibility. One must not blame others or society if children go astray. It is the duty of parent to guide children on the proper path.

A child, at its most impressionable age, needs the tender love, care and attention of parents. Without parental love and guidance, a child will be handicapped and will find the world a bewildering place to live in. However, showering parental love, care and attention does not mean pandering to all the demands of the child, reasonable or otherwise. Too much pampering would spoil the child. The mother, in bestowing her love and care, should also be strict and firm in handling the tantrums of a child. Being strict and firm does not mean being harsh to the child. Show your love, but temper it with a disciplined hand -- the child will understand.

Unfortunately, amongst present-day parents, parental love is sadly lacking. The mad rush for material advancement, the liberation movements and the aspiration for equality have resulted in many mothers joining their husbands, spending their working hours in offices and shops, rather than remaining at home tending to their off-spring. The children, left to the care of relations or paid servants, are bewildered on being denied tender motherly love and care. The mother, feeling guilty about her lack of attention, tries to placate the child by giving in to all sorts of demands from the child. Such an action spoils the child. Providing the child with all sorts of modern toys such as tanks, machine guns, pistols, swords and such like equipment as an appeasement is not psychologically good.

Loading a child with such toys is no substitute for a mother's tender love and affections. Devoid of parental affection and guidance, it will not be surprising if the child subsequently grows up to be a delinquent. Then, who is to be blamed for bringing up a wayward child? The parents of course! The working mother, especially after a hard day's work in an office to be followed by household chores, can hardly find time for the child that is yearning for her care and attention.

Parents who have no time for their children should not complain when these same children have no time for them when they are old. Parents who claim that they spend a lot of money on their children but are too busy should not complain when their "busy" children in turn leave them in expensive Homes for the Aged!

Most women work today so that the family can enjoy more material benefits. They should seriously consider Gandhi's advice for men to seek freedom from greed rather than freedom from need. Of course, given today's economic set-up we cannot deny that some mothers are forced to work. In such a case, the father and mother must make extra sacrifices of their time to compensate for what their children miss when they are away. If both parents spend their non-working hours at home with their children, there will be greater understanding between parents and children.

In his discourses, the Buddha has listed certain primary duties and functions as essential guidelines for parents to observe. One of the primary guidelines is, by precept, practice and action, to lead the children away from things that are evil and through gentle persuasion, to guide them to do all that is good for the family, for society and for the country. In this connection, parents would have to exercise great care in dealing with their children. It is not what the parents profess but what they really are and do, that the child absorbs unconsciously and lovingly. The child's entry to the world is molded by emulating parental behavior. It follows that good begets good and evil begets evil. Parents who spend much time with their children will subtly transmit their characteristics to their offspring.

Duties of Parents

It is the duty of parents to see to the welfare of their children. In fact the dutiful and loving parents shoulder the responsibilities with pleasure. To lead children on the right path, parents should first set the example and lead ideal lives. It is almost impossible to expect worthy children from unworthy parents. Apart from the Karmic tendencies children inherit from previous births, they invariably inherit the defects and virtues of parents too. Responsible parents should take every precaution not to transmit undesirable tendencies to their progeny.

According to the //Sigalovada Sutta//, there are five duties that should be performed by parents:

1. The first duty is to dissuade children from evil

Home is the first school, and parents are the first teachers. Children usually take elementary lessons in good and evil from their parents. Careless parents directly or indirectly impart an elementary knowledge of lying, cheating, dishonesty, slandering, revenge, shamelessness and fearlessness for evil and immoral activities to their children during childhood days.

Parents should show exemplary conduct and should not transmit such vices into their children's impressionable minds.

2. The second duty is to persuade them to do good
~~~
~~~

4. The fourth duty is to see that they are married to suitable individuals

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Marriage is a solemn act that pertains to the whole lifetime; this union should be one that cannot be dissolved easily. Hence, marriage has to be viewed from every angle and in all its aspects to the satisfaction of all parties before the wedding.

According to Buddhist culture, duty supersedes rights. Let both parties be not adamant, but use their wise discretion and come to an amicable settlement. Otherwise, there will be mutual cursing and other repercussions. More often than not the infection is transmitted to progeny as well.

5. The last duty is to hand over to them, at the proper time, their inheritance

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Parents not only love and tend their children as long as they are still in their custody, but also make preparations for their future comfort and happiness. They hoard up treasures at personal discomfort and ungrudgingly give them as a legacy to their children.

The Religion of Compassion

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Buddhism is the religion of compassion, and the parents should never forget to present it to the children as such. The Buddha taught the Dhamma out of compassion for the world. Parents should practice the "Four Sublime States of Mind" taught by the Buddha in raising their children. They are:

Metta -- loving kindness or goodwill Karuna -- compassion
Mudita -- sympathetic joy
Upekkha -- equanimity or "even-mindedness"
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

These four states, well practiced will help parents remain calm throughout the difficult period of child-rearing.

This is the right or ideal way of conduct towards living beings. These four attitudes of mind provide the framework for all situations arising from social contact. They are the great removers of tension, the great peacemakers in social conflict, the great healers of wounds suffered in the struggle for existence; levelers of social barriers, builders of harmonious communities, awakeners of slumbering magnanimity long forgotten, revivers of joy and hope long abandoned, promoters of human brotherhood against the forces of egotism.

Perhaps the greatest challenge that a married couple has to face is the proper upbringing of a child. This is another aspect which distinguishes us from animals. While an animal does care for its offspring with great devotion, a human parent has a greater responsibility, which is the nurturing of the mind. The Buddha has said that the greatest challenge a man faces is to tame the mind. Ever since a child is born, from infancy through adolescence to maturity, a parent is primarily responsible for the development of a child's mind. Whether a person becomes a useful citizen or not depends mainly on the extent to which its mind has been developed. In Buddhism, a good parent can practice four great virtues to sustain him or her and to overcome the great frustrations which are so closely related with parenthood.

When a child is yet a toddler, unable to express its needs, it is quite prone to indulge in tantrums and crying. A parent who practices the first virtue of loving kindness can maintain peace within herself or himself to continue to love the child while it is being so difficult. A child who enjoys the effects of this loving kindness will himself learn to radiate it spontaneously.

As the child becomes more mature as an adolescent, parents should practice //karuna// or Compassion towards him. Adolescence is a very difficult time for children. They are coming to terms with adulthood and therefore are rebellious, with a great deal of their anger and frustrations directed at their parents. With the practice of Compassion, parents will understand that this rebelliousness is a natural part of growing up and that children do not mean to hurt their parents willfully. A child who has enjoyed loving kindness and compassion will himself become a better person. Having not had hate directed at him, he will only radiate love and compassion towards others.

Just before he becomes an adult, a child will probably meet with some success in examinations and other activities outside the home. This is the time for parents to practice sympathetic joy. Too many parents in modern society use their children to compete with their associates. They want their children to do well for selfish reasons; it is all because they want others to think well of them. By practicing sympathetic joy, a parent will rejoice in the success and happiness of his or her child with no ulterior motive. He is happy simply because his child is happy! A child who has been exposed to the effects of sympathetic joy will himself become a person who does not envy others and who is not overly competitive. Such a person will have no room in his heart for selfishness, greed or hatred.

When a child has reached adulthood and has a career and family of his own, his parents should practice the last great virtue of equanimity (//upekkha//). This is one of the most difficult things for Asian parents to practice. It is hard for them to allow their children to become independent in their own right. When parents practice equanimity, they will not interfere with the affairs of their children and not be selfish in demanding more time and attention than the children can give. Young adults in the modern society have many problems. An understanding parent of a young couple should not impose extra burdens by making unnecessary demands on them. Most importantly, elderly parents should try not to make their married children feel guilty by making them feel that they have neglected their filial obligations. If parents practice equanimity they will remain serene in their old age and thereby earn the respect of the younger generation.

When parents practice these four virtues towards their children, the children will respond favorably and a pleasant atmosphere will prevail at home. A home where there is loving kindness, compassion, sympathetic joy and equanimity will be a happy home. Children who grow up under such an environment will grow up to be understanding, compassionate, willing workers and considerate employers. This is the greatest legacy any parent can give to his child.

Parents in Modern Society

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

One of the saddest things about modern society is the lack of parental love which children in highly industrialized countries suffer from. When a couple gets married, they usually plan to have a number of children. And once the child is born, parents are morally obliged to care for him to the best of their ability. Parents are responsible to see that a child is not only satisfied materially; the spiritual and psychological aspects are very important too.

The provision of material comfort is of secondary importance when compared to the provision of parental love and attention. We know of many parents from the not-so-well-to-do families who have brought up their children well and with plenty of love. On the other hand, many rich families have provided every material comfort for their children but have deprived them of parental love. Such children will just grow up devoid of any psychological and moral development.

A mother should consider carefully whether she should continue to be a working mother of a housewife giving all the affection and care for the well-being of her child. (Strangely, some modern mothers are also being trained to handle guns and other deadly equipments when they should be cuddling their children and training them to be good and law-abiding citizens.)

The modern trend and attitude of working mothers towards their children also tends to erode the time-honored filial piety which children are expected to shower on their parents. The replacement of breast-feeding by bottle feeding could also be another factor which has contributed to the erosion of the affection between mother and child. When mothers breast-feed and cuddle babies in their arms, the tender affection between mother and child is much greater and the influence the mother had on the child for its well-being, is much more pronounced. Under such circumstances, filial piety, family cohesion and obedience are invariably present. These traditional traits are for the good and well-being of the child. It is up to the parents, especially the mother, to provide them. The mother is responsible for the child's being good or wayward. Mothers can reduce delinquency!
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Parental Control

Many parents try to keep their married children under their control. They do not give due freedom to them and tend to interfere with a young married couple's life. When parents try to control their married son or married daughter and want them to follow their way of life strictly, this will create a lot of misunderstanding between the two generations as well as unhappiness between the couple. Parents may be doing it in good faith due to love and attachment towards the children, but in so doing, they are inviting more problems to themselves and to the children.

Parents must allow their children to shoulder the responsibilities of their own lives and families. For example: if some seeds are dropped under a tree, plants might grow after sometime. But if you want those plants to grow healthy and independent you must transplant them to open ground somewhere else to grow separately, so that they are not hampered by the shade of the parent tree.

Parents should not neglect the ancient wisdom based on advice given by religious teachers, wise people and elders who have developed a knowledge of the world through their own trial and errors.

Divorce

Divorce is a controversial issue among the followers of different religions. Some people believe that marriage is already recorded in heaven, thus it is not right to grant a divorce. But, if a husband and wife really cannot live together, instead of leading a miserable life and harboring more jealousy, anger and hatred, they should have the liberty to separate and live peacefully

Responsibility Towards the Children

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

However, the separation of the couple must be done in an atmosphere of understanding by adopting reasonable solutions and not by creating more hatred. If a couple has children, they should try to make the divorce less traumatic for the children and help them to adjust to the new situation. And it is most important to ensure that their future and welfare will be taken. care of. It is an inhuman attitude if the couple desert their children and allow them to lead a miserable life.

The Buddhist View

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

In Buddhism, there is no law stating that a husband and wife should not be separated if they cannot live together harmoniously. But, if people follow the advice given by the Buddha to fulfill their duties towards each other, then, such unfortunate occurrences like divorce or separation will never happen in the first place.

In the past, where religious values were highly respected, there were greater efforts on the part of married couples -- in the east as well as in west -- to reach an amicable understanding to develop happy relationships based on respect, love, and regard for one another. Couples developed and made their marriages an important feature which they cherished in their hearts. Divorce cases were very rare, and were considered a disgrace because they indicated the selfishness of one party or the other.

It is a fact that until recently divorce cases were still rather rare in Buddhist countries. This is mainly because couples considered their duties and obligations towards each other, and also basically divorce is not approved by the community as a whole. In many cases, when married couples were in trouble, the community elders usually rallied round and played an important role to improve the situation.

Unfortunately, in the modern society of today, divorce has become such a common practice. In certain countries it has even become fashionable. Instead of regarding divorce as shameful or a failure to order their lives, some young couples seem to be proud of it. The main cause of the failure in marriage in modern society is the abuse of freedom and too much independence and individualism on the part of the partners. There must be a limit to their independent lives, or else both husband and wife will go astray very easily.

* * *

7. POLYGAMY OR MONOGAMY

To the question of whether Buddhists can keep more than one wife, the direct answer is not available in the Buddha's teaching, because as mentioned earlier, the Buddha did not lay down any religious laws with regard to married life although he has given valuable advice on how to lead a respectable married life.

Tradition, culture and the way of life as recognized by the majority of a particular country must also be considered when we practice certain things pertaining to our lives. Some religions say that a man can have only one wife whilst others say a man can have more than one wife.

Although the Buddha did not mention anything regarding the number of wives a man could have, he explicitly mentioned in His discourses that should a married man go to another woman out of wedlock, that could become the cause of his own downfall and he would have to face numerous other problems and disturbances.

The Buddha's way of teaching is just to explain the situation and the consequences. People can think for themselves as to why certain things are good and certain things are bad. The Buddha did not lay down rules about how many wives a man should or should not have which people are forced to follow. However, if the laws of a country stipulate that marriages must be monogamous, then such laws must be complied with, because the Buddha was explicit about His followers respecting the laws of a country, if those laws were beneficial to all.

* * *

8. NEW TECHNOLOGY

Family Planning

Some religions are not in favor of family planning. They say it is against the will of God. Buddhism does not interfere in this personal choice. Man is at liberty to follow any method in order to prevent conception. According to Buddhism, certain physical and mental conditions must be present for conception to take place. When any one of these conditions is absent (as when family planning is being practiced), no conception takes place, therefore a life does not come into being. But after conception, abortion is NOT acceptable in Buddhism because it means taking away a life that is already present in the form of fetus.

Test-tube Babies

Some people are interested in the moral implication or religious attitude with regard to test-tube babies. If a woman is unable to conceive a baby in the normal way, and if she is anxious to have a baby by adopting modern medical methods, there is no ground in Buddhism to say that it is either immoral or irreligious. Religions must give due credit to man's intelligence and to accommodate new medical discoveries if they are harmless and beneficial to mankind. As was mentioned earlier, so long as the conditions are right, conception can be allowed to take place, naturally or artificially.

* * *

9. MORALITY

Premarital Sex

Premarital sex is a problem which is much discussed in modern society. Many young people would like to know the opinion regarding this sensitive issue. Some religionists say it can be considered as committing adultery, while others say it is immoral and unjustifiable.

In the past, young boys and girls were not allowed by their parents to move around freely until they were married. Their marriages were also arranged and organized by the parents. Of course, this did cause unhappiness in some cases when parents chose partners on the basis of money, social status, family obligations and related issues. But generally, the majority of parents did try very hard to choose partners who would be acceptable to their children.

Today, young people are at the liberty to go out and find their own partners. They have a lot of freedom and independence in their lives. This is not a bad thing in itself, but some of these people are just too young and too immature to see the difference between sexual attraction and true compatibility. That is why the problem of pre-marital sex arises.

Too much laxity in matters concerning sex has also given rise to social problems in modern society. The sad part is that some societies do not express liberal attitudes towards unmarried mothers, illegitimate children and the divorcees while they are quite liberal about free sex. As a result, young people are being punished by the same society which encourages free mixing of the sexes. They become social outcasts and suffer much shame and humiliation. Many young girls have become victims of their own freedom and have ruined their future by violating age-old traditions which were valued in the east as well as in the west.

Pre-marital sex is a modern development which has come about as a result of excessive social freedom prevalent amongst present day young people. Whilst Buddhism holds no strong views either for or against such action, it is thought that all Buddhists, particularly people of both sexes in love and contemplating marriage, should adhere to the age-old traditional concept that they maintain chastity until the nuptial date. The human mind is unstable and forever changing, with the result that any illicit action or indiscretion may cause undue harm to either party if the legal marriage does not take place as expected. It must be remembered that any form of sexual indulgence before a proper marriage is solemnized will be looked down upon by the elders who are the guardians of the young people.

Sexual Misconduct

Laymen are advised in the Buddha's Teaching to avoid sexual misconduct. That means, if one wants to experience sex, he must do so without creating any violence or by using any kind of force, threat or causing fear. A decent sex life which respects the other partner is not against this religion; it accepts the fact that it is a necessity for those who are not yet ready to renounce the worldly life.

According to Buddhism, those who are involved in extra-marital sex with someone who is already married, who has been betrothed to someone else, and also with those who are under the protection of their parents or guardians are said to be guilty of sexual misconduct, because there is a rupture of social norms, where a third party is being made to suffer as a result of the selfishness of one or the other partner.

Irresponsible Sexual Behavior
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The Buddha also mentioned the consequences that an elderly man would have to face if he married without considering the compatibility of age of the other party. According to the Buddha, irresponsible sexual behavior can become the cause of one's downfall in many aspects of life.

All the nations of the world have clearly defined laws concerning the abuse of sex. Here again, Buddhism advocates that a person must respect and obey the law of the country if the laws are made for the common good.

* * *

10. THE EAST AND THE WEST

The following are extracts from a book by the celebrated Japanese author, Dr. Nikkyo Niwano. In his book "The Richer Life," Dr. Niwano deals with matters relating to love and marriage, both from the Eastern and Western points of view.

> "In the West, marriage on the basis of romantic love has often been considered natural and sometimes ideal. In Asia, in recent years, the number of young people who abandon the traditional arranged marriage and select partners out of romantic consideration has been growing. But in some cases, romantic marriages lead to separation and unhappiness within a short time, whereas the arranged marriage often produces a couple who live and work together in contentment and happiness.
>
> In spite of its emotional appeal, all romantic marriages cannot be called unqualified successes. Romantic love is like the bright flame of a wood-fire that leaps up and burns clear, but lasts only a short time. Love between man and wife burns quietly and slowly like the warming fire of burning coal. Of course, bright flaming Love can -- and ideally ought to -- eventually become the calm, enduring fire of mature affection. But too often the flame of romantic love is quickly extinguished, leaving nothing but ashes, which are a poor foundation for a successful married life!"
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

"Young people in love think of nothing but their emotions. They see themselves only in the light of the feeling of the moment. Everything they think and do is romantic and has little bearing on the practical affairs of the life they must lead after marriage. If the lovers are fortunate enough to have compatible personalities, to have sound and similar ideas about life, to share interests, to enjoy harmonious family relations on both sides and to be financially secure even after the first passion has calmed down, they will still have a basis for a good life together. If they are not so blessed, they may face marital failure."

"When the time of dates, emotional pictures, dances, and parties has passed, the young married couples will have to live together, share meals, and reveal to each other their defects as well as their merits. They will have to spend more than half of their life each day together; this kind of living makes demands that are different from the less exacting needs of dating and first love."

"Family relations become very important in married life. It is necessary to think about the personalities of the mother and father of the prospective marriage partner. Young people sometimes think that the strength of their love will enable them to get along well with the most quarrelsome, difficult in-laws; but this is not always true. In short, romance is a matter of a limited time and does not become rooted in actualities and must be regulated to conform to the needs of work and environment in order to bind the couple together in lasting devotion. The two kinds of love are different. To mistake one for the other invites grave trouble."

"Giving serious, dispassionate thought to the nature of the person one contemplates marrying, lessens the likelihood of failure. To prevent romance from vanishing after marriage, mutual understanding between the couple is indispensable. But the percentage of successful marriages is higher among young people whose choice of a partner agrees with the opinions of their parents. To live peacefully, it is necessary to realize the difference between romance and married love."

* * *

11. CELIBACY

What is Celibacy?

Celibacy is refraining from the pleasure of sexual activity. Some critics of Buddhism say that The Teaching goes against Nature and they claim that sex life is natural and therefore necessary.

Buddhism is not against sex, it is a natural sensual pleasure and very much a part of the worldly life. One may ask, why then did the Buddha advocate celibacy as a precept? Is it not unfair and against Nature? Well, the observance of celibacy for spiritual development was not a new religious precept at the time of the Buddha. All the other existing religions in India at that time also had introduced this practice. Even today, some other religionists, like the Hindus and Catholics do observe this as a vow.

Buddhists who have renounced the worldly life voluntarily observe this precept because they are fully aware of the commitments and disturbances which come along if one commits oneself to the life of a family person. The married life can affect or curtail spiritual development when craving for sex and attachment occupies the mind and temptation eclipses the peace and purity of the mind.

Significance of Celibacy

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

People tend to ask, "If the Buddha did not preach against married life, why then did He advocate celibacy as one of the important precepts to be observed and why did He advise people to avoid sex and renounce the worldly life?"

One must remember that renunciation is not compulsory in Buddhism. It is not obligatory to renounce the worldly life totally in order to practice Buddhism. You can adjust your way of life according to your understanding by practicing certain religious principles and qualities. You can develop your religious principles according to the needs of a lay life. However, when you have progressed and attained greater wisdom and realize that the layman's way of life is not conducive for the ultimate development of //spiritual values// and //purification of the mind//, you may choose to renounce the worldly life and concentrate more on spiritual development.

The Buddha recommended celibacy because sex and marriage are not conducive to ultimate peace and purity of the mind, and renunciation is necessary if one wishes to gain spiritual development and perfection at the highest level. But this renunciation should come naturally, and must never be //forced//. Renunciation should come through a complete understanding of the illusory nature of the self, of the unsatisfactory nature of all sense pleasures.

Celibacy versus Responsibility -- The Buddha's Experience

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

selfish and cruel and that it was not fair for him to desert his wife and child. In actual fact, the Buddha did not desert his family without a sense of responsibility.

He never had any misunderstanding with his wife. He too had the same love and attachment towards his wife and child as any normal man would have, perhaps even greater. The difference was that his love was not mere physical and selfish love; he had the courage and understanding to detach that emotional and selfish love for a good cause. His sacrifice is considered all the more noble because he set aside his personal needs and desires in order to //serve all of mankind for all time//.

The main aim of his renunciation was not only for his own happiness, peace or salvation but for the sake of //mankind//. Had he remained in the royal palace, his service would have been confined to only his own family or his kingdom. That was why he decided to renounce everything m order to maintain peace and purity to gain Enlightenment and then to enlighten others who were suffering in ignorance.

One of the Buddha's earliest tasks after gaining his Enlightenment was to return to his palace to enlighten the members of his family. In fact, when his young son, Rahula asked the Buddha for his inheritance, the Buddha said that Rahula was heir to the richest wealth, the treasure of the Dhamma. In this way, the Buddha served his family, and he paved the way for their salvation, peace and happiness. Therefore, no one can say that the Buddha was a cruel or selfish father. He was in fact more compassionate and self-sacrificing than anybody else. With his high degree of spiritual development, the Buddha knew that marriage was a temporary phase while Enlightenment was eternal and for the good of //all mankind//.

Another important fact was that the Buddha knew that his wife and son would not starve in his absence. During the time of the Buddha it was considered quite normal and honorable for a young man to retire from the life of a householder. Other members of the family would willingly look after his dependents. When he gained his enlightenment, he was able to give them something no other father could give -- the freedom from slavery to attachment.

* * *

12. SUMMARY

Marriage is a partnership of two individuals and this partnership is enriched and enhanced when it allows the personalities involved to grow. Many marriages fail because one partner tries to "swallow" another or when one demands total freedom. According to Buddhism, marriage means understanding and respecting each other's belief and privacy. A successful marriage is always a two-way path: "humpy, bumpy" -- it is difficult but it is always a mutual path.

Young people in this country and elsewhere sometimes think that "old fashioned ideas" are not relevant to modern society. They should be reminded that there are some eternal truths which can never become out-of-date. What was true during the time of Buddha still remains true today.

The so-called modern ideas we receive through the highly glamorous television programs do not represent the way most decent people in the west think or behave. There is a vast "silent majority" of decent couples who are as deeply religious and "conservative" about marriage as any Eastern couple. They do not behave in the manner that the mass media has portrayed them. Not all the people in the west run off to get a divorce or abortion after their first quarrel or dispute.

Decent people all over the world are the same; they are unselfish and care deeply about those whom they love. They make enormous sacrifices and develop love and understanding to ensure happy and stable marriages. So, if you want to ape the west ape the "silent majority": they are no different from your decent neighbor who lives next door to you.

Young people must also listen to their elders because their own understanding about married life is not mature. They should not make hasty conclusions regarding, marriages and divorces. They must have a lot of patience, tolerance and mutual understanding. Otherwise, their life can become very miserable and problematic. //Patience, tolerance and understanding// are important disciplines to be observed and practiced by all people in marriage.

A feeling of security and contentment comes from mutual understanding which is the SECRET of a HAPPY MARRIED LIFE.

* * *

APPENDIX

I. THE AFFECTIONATE MOTHER

In the Buddhist Jataka story -- Sonadanda, the Bodhisatta sings the virtues of a mother in the following strain:

Kind, Pitiful, our refuge she that fed us at her breast. A mother is the way to heaven, and thee she loveth best.
She nursed and fostered us with care; graced with good gifts is she,
A mother is the way to heaven, and best she loveth thee.
Craving a child in prayer she kneels each holy shrine before.
The changing season closely scans and studies astral lore.
Pregnant in course of time she feels her tender longings grow,
And soon the unconscious babe begins a loving friend to know.
Her treasure for a year or less she guards with utmost care, Then brings it forth and from that day a mother's name will bear.
With milky breast and lullaby she soothes the fretting child,
Wrapped in his comforter's warm arms his woes are soon beguiled.

Watching o'er him, poor innocent, lest wind or hear annoy,
His fostering nurse she may be called, to cherish thus her boy.
What gear his sire and mother have she hoards for him "May be,"
She thinks, "Some day, my dearest child, it all may come to thee."
"Do this or that, my darling boy," the worried mother cries,
And when he is grown to man's estate, she still laments and sighs,
He goes in reckless mood to see a neighbor's wife at night,
She fumes and frets, "Why will he not return while it is light?"
If one thus reared with anxious pains his mother should neglect, Playing her false, what doom, I pray, but hell can he expect?
Those that love wealth o'er much, 'tis said, their wealth will soon be lost
One that neglects a mother soon will rue it to his cost.
Those that love wealth o'er much, 'tis said, their wealth will soon be lost.
One that neglects a father soon will rue it to his cost.
Gifts, loving speech, kind offices together with the grace
Of calm indifference of mind shown in time and place --
These virtues to the world are as linchpin to chariot wheel.
These lacking, still a mother's name to children would appeal.
A mother like the sire should with reverent honor be crowned,
Sages approve the man in whom those virtues may be found.
Thus parents worthy of all praise, a high position own,
By ancient sages Brahma called. So great was their renown.
Kind parents from their children should receive all reverence due,
He that is wise will honor them with service good and true.
He should provide them food and drink, bedding and raiment meet,
Should bathe them and anoint with oil and duly wash their feet.
So filial services like these sages his praises sound
Here in this world, and after death in heaven his joys bound.

-- Jataka translation Vol. V pp. 173, 174

* * *

II. MORAL CODE

1. Social and Moral Code

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The most important element of the Buddhist reform has always been its social and moral code. That moral code taken by itself is one of the most perfect which the world has ever known. On this point all testimonials from hostile and friendly quarters agree; philosophers there may have been, religious preachers, subtle metaphysicists, disputants there may have been, but where shall we find such an incarnation of love, love that knows no distinction of caste and creed or colour, a love that overflowed even the bounds of humanity, that embraced the whole of sentient beings in its sweep, a love that embodied as the gospel of universal "Maitri" and "Ahimsa."

-- Prof. Max Muller, A German Buddhist Scholar

2. Morality is based on freedom

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Buddhist morality is based on freedom, i.e., on individual development. It is therefore relative. In fact there cannot be any ethical principle if there is compulsion or determination from an agent outside ourselves.

-- Anagarika B. Govinda, A German Buddhist Scholar

3. Knowledge and Morality

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

In Buddhism there can be no real morality without knowledge, no real knowledge without morality; both are bound up together like heat and light in a flame. What constitutes "Bodhi" is not mere intellectual, enlightenment, but humanity. The consciousness of moral excellence is of the very essence of "Bodhi."
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

-- Bhikkhu Dhammapala, A Netherland Buddhist Scholar

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: A Happy Married Life: A Buddhist Perspective
FILENAME: MARRIAGE.ZIP
AUTHOR: Dr. K. Sri Dhammananda
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: N/A
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: The Buddhist Missionary Society
123 Jalan Berhala
50470 Kuala Lumpur
Malayasia
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Dr. K. Sri Dhammananda
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1987
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: February 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

THE STORY OF PACCEKA BUDDHA MATANGA

by Sayagyi U Chit Tin

Ragan ca dosan ca pahaya moham
Sandalayitvana[1] samyojanani
Asantasam jivitasamkhayamhi
Eko care khaggavisanakappo.

Leaving behind passion, hatred, and delusion, having torn the fetters apart, not trembling at (the time of) the complete destruction of life,[2] one should wander solitary as a rhinoceros horn.

Sutta-nipata, v. 74 [3]

This //gatha// (verse) was uttered by Arahats, including the Buddha, on four separate occasions. It was Trst uttered by the Solitary Buddha Matanga and was only heard by him. Then, following the tradition of previous Paccekasambuddhas (perfectly awakened solitary Buddhas), he spoke the verse again at the Nandamulaka mountain slope in the Himalayas. Later, during the lifetime of Buddha Gotama, when Venerable Ananda requested him, the Lord himself gave this verse. Finally, at the First Council (Sangayana), which was held three months after the Great Demise (Mahaparinibbana) of the Buddha, five hundred Arahats were present as Sangitikarakas (recensionists of the Buddha's Teachings), and Ashin Ananda spoke this verse in answer to a question posed by the Pucchaka (questioner) and convener of the Council, Ashin Maha-Kassapa. It has been recited many times since then, notably at all the Councils up through the Sixth Buddhist Council (or Synod) in Myanmar. At those Councils, the verse was spoken in the presence of the Sangitikarakas.

Pacceka Buddha Matanga first spoke this verse as a solemn utterance (udana) when he was filled with great joy (piti) after attaining the knowledge of solitary awakening (pacceka-bodhi-nana). His //piti// was so great that this verse occurred to him spontaneously.

There is an ancient tradition in India of people turning their backs on life as a householder and taking up the life of an ascetic, carrying an alms bowl for their food and retiring to the forest, especially to the Himalayas in northern India. There, they follow their creed and adopt ascetic practices. This can happen whether the Teachings of a Buddha are available or not. If this is done during a period outside a Buddha-sasana, ascetics who possess the right perfections (parami) can attain the highest knowledge (nana), the Path and Fruition State of Arahatship (arahatta-magga, arahatta-phala). They accomplish this through understanding the Four Noble Truths, just as Fully Awakened Ones (or Teaching Buddhas, Sammasambuddhas) do. They are called Solitary Buddhas or Non-Teaching Buddhas (pacceka-buddhas). The difference between the two types of Buddhas is that //Sammasambuddhas// have developed their //paramis// over a longer period of time.

Everyone who is to reach Arahatship must develop the //paramis// for a certain time. The shortest time required is for a disciple of a Teaching Buddha who attains Arahatship but no more. "Great" disciples (maha-savakas) and the two leading disciples (agga-savakas) of a Teaching Buddha must work longer. Pacceka Buddhas work longer still. For Teaching Buddhas, there are four levels of developing the //paramis//. Our teacher, Sayagyi U Ba Khin, gave a table of these periods in his booklet //The Real Values of True Buddhist Meditation//:[4]

1.For Teaching Buddhas (Sammasambuddhas):
(a)a Viriyadhika Buddha (one who has effort as the predominating factor): 16 incalculables of world-cycles (asa_kheyya, a unit followed by 140 ciphers) plus 1000,000 world-cycles (kappa),
(b)a Saddhadhika Buddha (with faith as the predominating factor): 8 incalculables of world-cycles plus 100,000 world-cycles,
(c)a Pannadhika Buddha (with wisdom as the predominating factor): 4 incalculables of world-cycles plus 100,000 world-cycles.

2.For Pacceka Buddhas: 2 incalculables of world-cycles plus 100,000 world-cycles.

3.For an Agga-savaka (a leading disciple of a Teaching Buddha):
1 incalculable of world-cycles plus 100,000 world-cycles.

4.For a Maha-savaka (a great disciple of a Teaching Buddha):
100,000 world-cycles.

5.For an Arahat: 100 to 1,000 world-cycles.

Pacceka Buddha Matanga[5] was the last Pacceka Buddha to appear before the Teaching Buddha Gotama. The residents of Rajagaha who offered him alms food each day could not have known all the details of the attainments he had accomplished. They only saw peace and serenity in his face. That was sufficient for them to want to pay respects to him and offer him the best food they had before they ate themselves.

Pacceka Buddha Matanga resided in a cave in the Pandava foothill near Rajagaha. From there, he went on his alms rounds to Rajagaha and the surrounding villages, one after the other. His boundless compassion and boudlness //metta// led him to make alms rounds regularly through the residential areas of Rajagaha for the benefit and gain of many. Pacceka Buddha Matanga, like all Solitary Buddhas and Teaching Buddhas, had realized the Four Noble Truths on his own, without a teacher to show him the way. Pacceka Buddhas, however, do not develop the perfections for a long enough period to be able to teach others the Path to Awakening, so he was not able to lead others to the truth he had realized.

Pacceka Buddhas enjoy the attainment of the Fruition State (phala-sammapatti) at times and at other times they enter the attainment of cessation or suppression (nirodha). Even though they are in the world, there will be no knowledge in the human world of the Paths and Fruition States. This is because they will only live when there is no Buddha-sasana.

One day, Pacceka Buddha Matanga came out of the cessation state (nirodha) and on regaining the use of his senses he heard Deva voices saying, "Sir, sir, a future Buddha has been born in the world." These Devas had come to the human world to worship, venerate, and honour the Bodhisatta.

Pacceka Buddha Matanga had the ability to see into the future (anagatamsa-nana). If he had used this ability before going into the cessation state, he would have realized that twenty-nine years later to the day, the future Teaching Buddha, now born as the Bodhisatta Siddhattha, would come to the very spot where he was. Like him, Siddhattha would go on alms round in the city of Rajagaha and would return to that very place to eat the morning alms food given by the same residents of Rajagaha and the surrounding villages who gave to him.

The day that the Bodhisatta Siddhattha was born there were thrirt-two marvels in the world. Summer was over and the rains would soon come. With the thirty-two marvels, trees bore flowers out of season, etc., and the Himalayas were very beautiful. Pacceka Buddha Matanga did not see all this because he had entered the cessation state for seven days; all his senses were surpressed and sealed, and his body would be rigid until the predetermined period was over.

When he heard the voices of the Devas, Pacceka Buddha Matanga reflected, "A Bodhisatta has been born. He will be the future Buddha. //Sadhu, sadhu, sadhu//." He saw that the worlds of the Devas, Brahmas, and humans were filled with joy. Then he used his supernormal mental powers (abhinna) to see when his own life would come to an end. He found that he would attain Parinibbana that same day. So he went through the air to the mountain named Mahapapata, a mountain in the Himalayas where all Pacceka Buddhas attain Parinibbana.

The Burmese commentator describes the scene as follows: Pacceka Buddha Matanga realized that he was the last of the Pacceka Buddhas before the Sammasambuddha Gotama appeared in the world. He saw that he would no longer be in the world when the future Buddha came, so he directed his thoughts towards the destruction of his own life. Then he left the cave where he had resided for many years with the support of the residents of Rajagaha. He had no attachment to his supporters or to his cave. Going through the air, he passed over Rajagaha, which is surrounded by five mountains; he went over all of Magadha, headed for the north into the Himalayas. He went past seven mountain ranges to the Gandhamadana mountain range where the Nandamulaka (or Nandamu) mountain slope is found. On that slope there are three caves: the golden cave (Suvanna-guha), the ruby (or jewel) cave (Mani-guha), and the silver cave (Rajata-guha). Pacceka Buddha Matanga chose the ruby cave in the middle where the Manjusaka Deva tree grows at the entrance. There, he descended from the air, keeping in mind, "All conditioned states are transient, impermanent, //anicca, anicca, anicca// ...," as he saw the withered flowers of the Manjusaka tree that had fallen all around it like a huge carpet.

Pacceka Buddha Matanga remembered that this was the place where in the past all the Pacceka Buddhas living in the world assembled on full-moon days and new-moon days. At such times, they enjoyed the attainment of the Fruition State (phala-sammapatti) or of cessation (nirodha-sammapatti) together. When a new Pacceka Buddha came, he would take the last of the prepared seats because the Pacceka Buddhas were seated according to seniority. When the predetermined period of going into states was up, the eldest of the Pacceka Buddhas would ask the newly arrived Pacceka Buddha to explain how he attained solitary knowledge (pacceka-nana) and he would explain how he did so and would repeat the solemn utterance (udana) he made on attaining full awakening.

When Pacceka Buddha Matanga appeared in the world, there were no other Pacceka Buddhas, but he kept the tradition by coming to this place and speaking his verse alone. This was the second time that he spoke that verse. When he came back after learning about the birth of the future Teaching Buddha, he had come for the last time. It was time for him to follow in the footsteps of the previous Pacceka Buddhas. Although the actual footsteps had disappeared due to the wind, rain, and snow, they were still clear to him in his mind, and he followed the footsteps and approached a large, flat rock. He took the string of bones mixed with fragments of worn pieces of yellow robe of the Pacceka Buddha who had entered complete extinction before him and threw them into the nearby precipice.[6] Then he lay down on the flat rock.

As a Pacceka Buddha, Matanga had eliminated all craving. He had no craving for continued existence (bhava). He had no craving for anything. Whatever he did was in accordance with what should be done. There was no reaction in him as he always possessed functional consciousness (kiriya-citta), states of consciousness that do not give future results. There would be no more birth for him. When the light of a candle is extinguished, it disappears with no trace. We cannot say it has gone here or there. The same is true when the Pacceka Buddhas pass away into the sphere of Nibbana without a residue of substratum. They pass away after entering the concentration of the fire element (tejo-dhatu-samadhi). In this way, their bodies are consumed by fire.

Sayagyi U Chit Tin

FOOTNOTES:

[1] PTS edition: //sandalayitva//.

[2] "... the dissolution of life [= the complete destruction of life] means passing away, the breaking up of the mind; and not being frightened by this dissolution of life because of the fact that [the speaker] has eliminated the desire for life, in this way up till then having shown to himself the sphere of Nibbana with a residue of substratum, at the end of the verse he passed away into the sphere of Nibbana without a residue of substratum." Sn-a 129,12. We use the translation by Ria Kloppenborg, //The Paccekabuddha// (Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1974), p. 124, n. 163.

[3] We use the translation by K.R. Norman, GD.

[4] See //Dhamma Texts// (Dhamma Texts Series 1, revised ed., 1991), pp. 60f. See also //The Coming Buddha Ariya Metteyya// (Dhammadana Series 7, 1988), pp. 1-4 (references to Pali commentaries are given in the notes).

[5] Details concerning Pacceka Buddha Matanga are taken from a text in the Myanmar language by Ashin Wunnasiri, a Pali scholar of Myanmar. The text was published in //Dhammaramsi Buddhist Magazine//, n 15, March 1991.

[6] Ria Kloppenborg's statement (op. cit., p. 56) that Matanga went to Mount Mahapapata "the mountain from which //paccekabuddhas// can enter final nibbana by throwing themselves down from the rock" seems inaccurate.

It is the bones of the last Pacceka Buddha to enter final Nibbana that are thrown down from the rock. According to Sn-a 128f., it is at this moment that he repeated his solemn utterance.

Worldwide Contact Addresses in the Tradition of Sayagyi U Ba Khin

~~~~~~

AUSTRIA: International Meditation Centre, A-9064 St. Michael/Gurk 6, Austria;Tel: +43 4224 2820, Fax: +43 4224 28204
Email: CIS, IMC-Austria, 100425,3423

EASTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 2 Cessnock Road, Sunshine NSW 2264, Australia;
Tel: +61 49 705 433, Fax: +61 49 705 749

UNITED KINGDOM: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House, Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England;
Tel: +44 380 850 238, Fax: +44 380 850 833,
Email: CIS, IMC-UK,100330,3304

USA (East Coast): International Meditation Centre, 438 Bankard Road, Westminster MD 21158, USA;
Tel: +1 410 346 7889, Fax: +1 410 346 7133;
Email: CIS, IMC-USA, 74163,2452

WESTERN AUSTRALIA: International Meditation Centre, Lot 78 Jacoby Street, Mahogany Creek WA 6072, Australia;
Tel: +61 9 295 2644, Fax: +61 9 295 3435

CANADA: IMC-Canada, 336 Sandowne Drive, Waterloo, Ontario, N2K 1V8, Canada; Tel: +1 519 747 4762, Fax: +1 519 725 2781

GERMANY: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Christaweg 16, 79114 Freiburg, Germany, Tel: +49 761 465 42, Fax: +49 761 465 92
~~~~~~

JAPAN: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, Komatsuri-Cho 923,
Kishiwada-Shi, Osaka-Fu, 596 Japan, Tel: +81 724 45 0057

THE NETHERLANDS: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Stichting, Oudegracht 124, 3511 AW
Utrecht, The Netherlands,
Tel: +31 30 311 445, Fax: +31 30 340 612

SINGAPORE: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Association, 9 Penang Road #07-12, Park Mall, Singapore 0923
Tel: +65 338 6911, Fax: +65 336 7211

SWITZERLAND: Sayagyi U Ba Khin Gesellschaft, Greyerzstrasse 35, 3013
Bern, Switzerland;Tel: +41 31 415 233, Fax: +41 61 271 4184;
Email: CIS, 100256,3576

USA (West Coast): Contact Address: IMC-USA c/o Joe McCormack, 77 Kensington Rd., San Anselmo, CA 94960,U.S.A.
Tel: +1 415 459 3117, Fax: +1 415 459 4837

BELGIUM: Address as for the Netherlands, Tel: +32 2 414 1756

DENMARK: Contact Address: Mr. Peter Drost-Nissen, Strandboulevarden
117, 3th, 2100 Kopenhagen, Denmark. Tel: 031 425 636

ITALY: Contact address: Mr. Renzo Fedele, Via Euganea 94, 35033
Bresseo PD, Italy. Tel: +39 49 9900 752

Published by the Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, United Kingdom
Address as above, registered charity no. 280134

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: The Story of Pacceka Buddha Matanga
FILENAME: MATANGA.ZIP
AUTHOR: Sayagyi U Chit Tin
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: n/a
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: International Meditation Centre, Splatts House,
Heddington, Calne, Wiltshire SN11 OPE, England
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: The Sayagyi U Ba Khin Memorial Trust, U.K.
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1995
RIGHTS & RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: 16 February 1995
ORIGIN SITE: BODY DHARMA * Berkeley CA 510/836-4717 DharmaNet (96:101/33)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end of file]

BuddhaNetBBS (02) 660-3518
Buddha Dhamma Meditation Assoc Inc.
PO Box K1020 Haymarket, NSW 2000

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file]

[Last updated: 6 August 1993]

"EMOTIONS - WORKING WITH ANGER"

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Michelle McDonald, USA
Enquiries: The Editor, "Mind Moon Circle", Sydney Zen Centre, 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney, NSW 2038, Australia. Tel: + 61 2 660 2993

EMOTIONS - WORKING WITH ANGER
MICHELLE MCDONALD

Anger seems to be an emotion that people have a lot of difficulty with, so I'd like to talk about how to deal specifically when such an emotion occurs. Say you're sitting and anger appears and you think, "Oh no - anger!" - that's resistance. But what about, "Oh, great, anger!"? Do you see the difference? We are usually very accepting of the moment when the bird sings, but with anger it is more difficult.

I've exaggerated this over the years just to learn how to work with it, so that when anger appears, "Great, this is another opportunity to learn how to work with this and make friends with it, rather than try and batter it away into repression". Then there's no freedom, because we're always unable to work with it. If you're very clear, especially if you have a lot of energy, when anger arises and there's no resistance, it's very, very pure. The ability to just drop into the body and feel it as body sensations - there might be heat, or pressure or tightness, and you just get out of the way, it's like letting a volcano erupt if it's very extreme.

A few years ago, I did a retreat on the Big Island and during the retreat the volcano erupted and I'd never seen it before, it was like this liquid fire just pouring up into the air. It was the first time in my life that I actually had the sense of this energy and how to work with it, it's just like the energy the earth has, and if you step out of the way, you can just let this energy come and go. It's built up pressure usually, it's heat and it's fire, and it's pressure and it's wonderful if you can get out of the way. It's usually not that pleasant, but it can be joyous just to feel it as an energy and let it come and go. There's nothing more joyous because you're no longer a victim of it anymore, you no longer have to run from it anymore. This is a quote from Ryokan.
The rain has stopped, the clouds have drifted away,
and the weather is clear again.
If your heart is pure,
then all things in your world are pure.
Abandon this world, abandon yourself, then the moon and the flowers will guide you along the way.

If your heart is pure, anger isn't a problem. The word anger is just like the word Michelle, or rug or glass, they're just words, concepts, and the experience of it is very different from the word. What is your experience of anger? These things don't have to be a problem if you're willing to explore them, they are just energies. This first level of working with an emotion in this way is when we're very clear. We're not identified with it - when the anger when it comes, we just feel it very clearly as sensation, it goes.

The next level is when there's more thought involved with it. Often emotions can be seen like the recipe of a cake, so if you take flour and salt and eggs, sugar, cocoa, butter, and you mix it up and cook it, you get a cake. If you take a past experience and the memory of that and some thoughts about it and some body sensations, usually you'll get sadness or anger, and in this particular case, I'm talking about anger. Sometimes when an emotion is occurring there's a lot of thoughts that go with it. You might not be identified with it still, this is a level that is moving from feeling it as pure sensation to having a lot of thought with it, and if you see it as a recipe, if you see that it's just thoughts and feelings and sensations, coming and going, again you don't have to be identified with it, you can just notice the thoughts and the physical sensations. You might go back to the breath and let it come and go. Again, this takes a lot of clarity, this is a strong mind at work that notices it coming and going. It might not disappear very quickly, like in the first case I'm talking about, usually they come and go and don't stick around very long, in the second case, it's going to be a little more sticky, like bubble gum, but still you're not so identified with it, and it comes and goes.

The third level is when we get more identified with it, which is often the case. You know those signs that say, Beware of the dog. I always think, beware of content. With emotions, it's really like you need the sign, beware of content, because it's the story and believing the thoughts about it that makes us suffer so much. I'll give you an example of working with anger. One time I was sitting a retreat and this treacher from Burma came to this three month retreat I was doing. I'd done retreats for nine years before this, and we'd never used notebooks, but this teacher introduced this idea of writing down some of the things that had happened at the end of the sitting, so everybody in the hall had notebooks and pens. The idea was that you didn't write until the end. But this woman sitting next to me couldn't restrain herself and she'd write every few minutes and she used a pencil and so I'd be sitting there and just the anticipation of her picking up the pencil would drive me nuts, and she'd pick it up and it would be that scratchy pencil sound and I'd get completely swept away with anger. And I'd feel really right.

The hardest thing about anger is when you feel right. You're totally identified with it when you feel right. And there's always a good reason why we feel right. "She shouldn't be using the pencil, she shouldn't be writing during the hour", and I'd get angrier and angrier because I'd get righter and righter and she kept getting more wrong and more wrong. And I would just be a mess, just furious by the end of this sitting and then I'd have to go out to walk and come back and face it again and again and again, angrier and angrier, and finally, the white flag. I'm sure you know what I mean by the white flag. "Okay, there's nothing I can do but learn how to work with this, besides leaving the course?"

There's many things I want to say about this particular part of working with emotion. When you notice that you get very involved with the content, and for me in this case it was in being right, but it might be sadness, like "my mother died when I was eleven" - whenever there's a content going on and we're very identified in it, that's drowning in it, that's indulging. Usually I've discovered that that means we're avoiding the feeling.

When a thought pattern repeats itself a lot, and we all have our favourite top channels, channel four, seven, eight, over the time that you sit you'll notice there's certain tapes that repeat themselves endlessly. If you look closely, you might find there's a feeling there that you're avoiding. And the moment you feel it, it's like pulling this thorn out of the heart, it's usually very simple.

For most people I've noticed, it doesn't mean that that tape can occur and that they can just drop down and feel it and it's over, usually it takes some time and patience of not wanting it to appear, of not wanting it to get over, it's very tricky because these are feelings we haven't wanted to feel, and it takes a lot of compassion for yourself, so you might get a little taste of how to work with anger in one moment and that's great. And maybe a little while later you might get a taste of how to work with jealousy and that's great, and then over time, that white flag has tremendous power because we're at peace, we're not at war with what's happening. We're not afraid, we don't have to control, we don't have to push them away.

The thing that's wonderful about our minds and life, is that at any point we can wake up and see it clearly. We might be three years into avoiding something, or five lifetimes, whatever you believe in, and then in one moment you see it and you've learned it.

There's one other thing I want to mention about working with emotion and that is if you've been practising a long time, and there are very constant repeating thought patterns, sometimes it means looking at the content, and not necessarily during a retreat. Because going on a retreat is trying to do a very different thing, but if you notice that something repeats over years, it usually means that there's some change is needed in your life and that you actually need to look at the content. And this is very important because anything can be used negatively or positively. Meditation can be used to avoid, you don't have to use it that way, but often there can be a tendency to do that.

Besides patience, which is a very interesting thing, defined as "the ability to endure the desirable and undesirable" and it's said to manifest as tolerance, and it's a wonderful quality because I think it helps us to develop trust, there's our faith. I think our faith and patience are very connected, and it might be you learn this once in a sitting and you get overwhelmed a lot, or you repress it or indulge it, and then in another sitting you get a taste of how to work with it again. And in the case of working with my guilt, it really did take me ten years to learn how to work with it. Once you learn how to work with it one area, you can apply it to anything. It's the same story, it's that little white flag.

What's amazing about human beings is that we have these imaginary wars going on all the time. You think of this territory that we call our human body, and then there's a head that we all have, with its imaginary war. If there's an imaginary war going, it's really good to do whatever you can do to get out of it - it might mean, if you're sitting, do whatever you can do to stop it, it's just not worth it. You can't figure these things out. Content drives us nuts, you can spend lifetimes trying to figure these things out. It merely means dropping down to the feeling and feeling it and letting it go, and that's the place that's most important - learning to let it go. You can't let something go unless you feel it, or see it, but the whole emphasis in Buddhism is in letting go. That's the freedom.

There's one other thing I wanted to talk about. Last year there was a friend of mine who'd been practising about as long as me, and he came to me with a confession. He said for the first fifteen years of his meditation practice he was using the practice to feel adequate as a person, to get a sense of appreciation and approval from the teacher and to find a feeling of family that he'd never had in his own family. And I think that there's a big step missing in our culture, and it's spreading throughout the world, this missing step. In a culture that's spiritually healthy, when adolescence hits, there's usually some guide to help the person move from a child's psyche, which is unprotected and soft and needs to be guided. There's a step that women and men take in this process in their culture to feel good about themselves as men and women, a process where the child learns how to face the world and develop a mature psyche.

In the old days, any properly operating mythology would help a child move into the adult world and take a place there and feel like they belong there and have a lot of faith in that. I think most of the people I run into in terms of teaching have missed that step and therefore in a healthy culture what would happen is that once the adolescent finds that feeling of adequacy then the next step is searching for something deeper, looking deeper than life and death, that spiritual quest. Things are a little mixed up now because many of us never had that initial step.

I think we often expect meditation to yield more than is meant to. I don't think that meditation will solve all our problems, I don't think it is necessarily going to make one feel adequate as a man or a woman or provide a home for people and when we understand this I think that one can really go deeply into meditation and I think that's what prevents people from going deeply in this time, in this culture, because people are wanting it to yield more than it's meant to, so they go into retreat expecting so much and it's working on a very deep level. Meditation is meant to change our perspective on life completely, it's very deep, it's not working on those other levels, which are very important because it's how we function in the world of form and we bring back to that world of form all that we learn on retreat. The happiness in this meditation realm is very subtle.

I went to see the Miles Davis concert on Sunday night. He's really a master in that world of jazz, and what I noticed that was deeply moving to me was his use of silence. He had a muffler on his trumpet, it wasn't that he had a really loud trumpet, but he'd walk to the side of the stage and play the subtlest, lightest sounds that were so moving, but you had to be so still. When he was playing his most beautiful subtlest piece, people were leaving, they were just pouring out of the hall because they were afraid of a traffic jam I think, and he was playing the most amazing piece of music that you would hear in a lifetime. I don't think they were appreciating his subtlety. He would just play a few notes and there would be silence for fifteen seconds, it's like having your heart tickled, very light.

Meditation is bringing forth our inner potential or inner home, the happiness is like that, it's not based on experience, it's based on being free of experience so that no matter what's happening we don't get overwhelmed by it. The freedom is not getting overwhelmed by what happens but not having to go into a coccoon and die while you're still alive.

I'd like to end with a quote from Alexander Solzhenitsyen: "If only it were all so simple, if only there were evil people somewhere insidiously committing evil deeds and it were necessary only to separate them from the rest of us and destroy them. But the line dividing good and evil cuts through the heart of every human being, and who is willing to destroy a piece of his own heart?"

Michelle is a Vipassana teacher. This is an edited talk she gave at Koko An.
---
end of file

BuddhaNetBBS (02) 660-3518
Buddha Dhamma Meditation Assoc Inc.
PO Box K1020 Haymarket, NSW 2000

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file]

[Last updated: 9 August 1993]

"EMOTIONS"

This text addresses some of the most fundamental and delicate religious issues. Therefore, it should be read, quoted and analysed in a mindful way.

All copyrights to this document belong to Michelle McDonald, USA
Enquiries: The Editor, "Mind Moon Circle", Sydney Zen Centre, 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney, NSW 2038, Australia. Tel: + 61 2 660 2993

EMOTIONS

MICHELLE McDONALD

I was born in Massechusetts, I'm thirty-six years old. Four years ago, the emotion from a childhood trauma surfaced and the amount of terror I experienced was unimaginable. I felt like I was drowning, I nearly went under there for a while. I was basically terrifying myself, taking too big a dose. And it was a great teaching because with most of the things in my life, I just sort jump right in and work with it, and then I hit this terror and I had to learn this great respect. It's like these great big waves here in the Pacific, they're not like the little baby waves in the Atlantic. When those big waves hit, one has to learn how to work with them and respect them. It's like we take a little teeny bit of it, then a little bit more, and a little bit more, and then it's workeable. I tried to take terror in one big chunk and I just about drowned. It was an awful time. I was basically in a hell-realm for two years.

So I really recommend taking small doses and that means taking control. And this is where meditation is the great teacher because you don't have to be in it. An emotion happens, a thought happens, and the ability to pull out of that is essential, because that's the freedom. You're no longer a victim of it anymore. If you don't see it clearly in that moment, it's better to pull out, because you're just going to drown. If you see terror clearly, it's not a problem anymore, you just open to that feeling and it goes. But if you're identified with it, forget it, you drown. And that means getting totally into the content, or you're shaking so bad that you have to be held for five hours. It's just a matter of real time. If you're heart is pure, then all things in your world is pure, terror is okay, it's just like the sound of a bird, it's not a problem. It's easy to say, I spent two years in hell with this stuff, but it's very clear to me how it works now.

And some people don't have to go into that depth of suffering, that was my karma and everybody has their karma, and not everybody has to go through rage and terror. There are many people who don't have a lot of emotion come up in practice and that's fine. Some people hear me talk and they start thinking, "Oh my god, I've never had this come up." If you're not having it come up, that's great, enjoy it! It's not like, this is the road to freedom. If it's coming up, it's how to work with it. If it's not coming up, don't get out your shovel. Meditation isn't getting out your shovel. If you died tomorrow and you didn't know how to work with terror, that's not what meditation is all about. Freedom happens in a moment and it's not based on getting through all this stuff, or getting rid of all this stuff, it's working on a much deeper, more profound level. If you have a sense that you have to work all this stuff out, I think you become a packhorse. There's nothing heavier than having to work all this stuff out.

Every year I get older I keep getting a longer view. What's the hurry? When you start accepting it, that's when you can take the right dose, and when you're in a hurry that's when you take too big a dose. When there's a feeling of getting overwhelmed, it's because we're not feeling the feeling. The feeling is so intolerable that it's just too much. In the context of meditation, the content is almost irrevelant. And it's skilful to back off. I used to feel defeated when I backed off, but it's wisdom to know when to back off. And it will always be smaller than you think. Always take less than more when it comes to these very powerful feelings. Whenever you see something clearly, it's empty, and then it's very simple so the most primal emotion that you might be afraid of - terror or rage - there was probably a feeling as a child that it was going to kill you, which it would, and that's why you shut down and now as an adult, one can start learning how to open to that, if that's your particular karma, in the dose that you need to. As a child you have to shut down or you'll go crazy, you have a choice, you can shut down or go crazy, if you're not getting any help. But as an adult, you can start to open a little bit, you just can't rip the flower open, and shutting down isn't a defeat if you're aware that you're shutting down. If you're not aware that you're shutting down, and you're repressing it, then it's avoidance.

It's very easy to get sucked into the holidays that we all go on when when resistance is happening. But remember it's important to feel it as body sensations as much as possible. If it's too unpleasant to do that, I recommend you return to what you're doing with your practice, it might be with the breath. If it's too unpleasant, it's going to be too hard. Go back to the breath, then go to the resistance, because this force in the mind of resistance is so strong it tends to suck us right back into the fantasy land once again.

Q: A few weeks back I heard a criticism about Buddhism, many Buddhists that "know" don't do, and many people who don't "know", do. So I see something very positive in identification with emotion, this energy that you're talking about. Sometimes I think it is more important to take action and identify with rage or anger instead of letting it go.

A: I have two responses. The first is, I don't think identification is ever helpful. In any situation that feels unacceptable because it's harmful, say it's rape, or war or racial prejudice, and it's manifesting in action, I feel like it's really important to take responsibility for one's own feelings. Which means not identifying. So, say one becomes very angry because there's a nuclear power plant being built next door, one can feel that anger. You sit down and you feel that anger, then you let it go. Then you take action, and it will come from not an angry place but a pure, clear place. This is the difference between war and peace. Anybody who's into the whole anti-war thing and comes from an angry place is just reinforcing anger. It's the basis of non-violence and without it, we are reinforcing hatred. It doesn't mean we become this passive wimp, it means we can be very firm and direct, and the action has much more impact.

An example of this is any two human beings having a disagreement. I know if somebody comes to me and they're angry and they direct their anger at me, I don't like it, I get defensive. I naturally put up a block. I've learnt this especially over the years, living with someone. If I have a problem with something and I attack, I get a defense. It's natural, we don't like to be attacked, it hurts, we protect ourselves. But if somebody comes to me and says, what you did, your behaviour, upset me in this way, this is wrong, I don't want you to do this any more. then people can hear it, and it's the same whether it's one-to-one relationships, or group action, whatever it is, if the action comes from a very deep place of understanding, it has a tremendous capacity to make an effect. If it comes from anger, you'll always get a defense. I don't think it has much to do with tradition, whether it's Muslim, or Christian, or Zen or Theravadan, it's really a personal choice that people make and some people choose to make that stand and some people don't.

Q: By training I'm a clinical psychologist, and a lot of what you're saying, I think, yeah, that's what I'm doing - do you think there's something purely Buddhistic though about this way of looking at emotions?

A: Emotions usually manifest as physical sensations, and if you can stay with that moment to moment heat, pressure, burning, tingling, whatever it is, it's incredibly freeing, and stay away from the content as much as possible. I think that's a very different angle from most of Western psychology. There are three characteristics of existence in Buddhism, there's dukkha, that sense of unsatisfactoriness, there'sanicca, that all things are changing, and anatta, meaning there's no solid ego entity behind the process, so in turns of working with the emotion with individuals in terms of therapy versus Buddhism, if one is working with the perspective that there's nobody behind the process, it really is just like the sound of a person, to a body sensation, to a thought, to heat, it's just this changing process, and there's no identification with it, there's no "I" there, it's very different from most Western psychology and that's a very deep level.

But in terms of Western psychology, to give it its credit, as a child in terms of human development, one needs to learn that this is a zafu, this is a rug, this is a glass, there's boundaries, you're working in the world of form, this is a female, this is a male. In terms of human development, it's essential for a child to learn this, because it gives the child a sense of security and safety. If a child gets that protection and security and safety, then as one grows up and goes through adolescence, there's this security inside to explore and to be able to face anatta, to face that there's nobody there, and to have the strength to do that. If the child doesn't have that developed, they're not going to have the capacity to do that. And you see that with people who are very deeply troubled, who are in mental institutions. It's very hard for them to meditate, they don't have the inner strength. So Western psychology is very good at working to try and develop that sense of form, of boundary, and it can be quite helpful. I think that they stop at life becoming functional and that's important, that we can adjust to what's happening, but then there's something deeper that isn't even talked about.

Q: I was bothered by obsessive thoughts that have the nature of anger, and what I found myself doing this spring is making use of an experience of death as a counterweight. I've been aware that sometimes it's not been effective, it's a bit like the mechanism of a clock, wearing itself down. So I just wanted to ask you about this.

A: I have two responses. One is that when we're drowning I really believe that anything we can do to help us come up for air is essential because it's an imaginary war. If you even had those thoughts playing on a loud-speaker in the room where you're sitting would be amazingly embarrasing because you're just getting caught in this stuff and the reason we're getting caught in it is because we're not able to feel that feeling but there's usually good reasons for it. What's getting triggered is probably very deep. In the Buddha's teaching, he says that greed, desire and hatred have very deep roots in the mind and all the variations on that, even aversion, greed-hatred or greed-aversion, aversion to what's coming up has a very deep root in the mind so if you're drowning, I think reflecting on that has been the most helpful thing for me, any time, any place, because it cuts through it.

And the other response I have is that anything in this world that we can't meet up against and see clearly and let go of, anywhere that's occurring within us, and we all have those places within us where we're not free, we're imprisoned, and we're vulnerable because we're afraid. My own feeling is that that, like homeopathy, where you take just the right amount of the dose of what you're suffering from.

---

end of file

[This document can be acquired from a sub-directory coombspapers via anonymous FTP or COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU][Last updated: 14 April 1992]----------The Zen Buddhist texts listed below have been translated from Japanese and rendered into a thoughtful English by members, Honolulu, Hawaii headed by Robert Aitken Roshi. Although the basic work was d the 1980s translations of some of the texts are not final as they tend to continue to be impro refined. These texts are used with gratitude and delight by members of several affiliated Zer communities, including California Diamond Sangha, Santa Rosa and Berkeley, USA (heade Roshi); Sydney Zen Center, Australia, and the Zen Group of Western Australia, Perth, Aust authoritative version of the sutras - as translated in Dec 1991 by Robert Aitken Roshi can be the document called: diamond-sangha-zen-sutras.txt availablefrom the coombspapers at the address.]========== Z Centre, 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney NSW 2038, Australia==========Bu
Kapilavastu,Attained the way at Magadha, preached at Varanasi,Entered Nirvana at Kusina spread the bowls of Buddha TathagathaWe make our vows together with all beings.We and eating are vacant. NYAN NI SAN BOAN SU IN SHINYAN PIN DAI SHU NYANVairochana, p Buddha; Lochana, full and complete Sambogakaya Buddha; Shakyamuni, infinitel Nirmanakaya Buddha; Maitreya, Buddha still to be born;All Buddhas everywhere, past, p future;Mahayana, lotus of the subtle law;Manjusri, great wisdom Bodhisattva;Samantabhadr Bodhisattva;Avalokitesvara, Great compassion Bodhisattva;All venerated Bodhisattvas, Mah Prajna Paramita.  Porridge is effective in ten ways To aid the student of Zen. No l to the good result, Consumating eternal happiness. These three virtues and six flavo Are offered to the Buddha and Sangha May all beings of the universe Share alike this nourishment.First, we consider in detail the merit of this foodand remember how it came t we evaluate our own virtue and practice,lacking or complete, as we receive this offering;Thir careful about greed, hatred and ignorance,to guard our minds and to free ourselves from err take this good medicine to save our bodiesfrom emaciation;Fifth, we accept this food to achi theBuddha.()h, all you demons and spirits,We now offer this food to you.May all of you everywhereShare it with us together.The first portion is for the Three Treasures,The seco the Four Blessings;The third is for the Six Paths;Together with all we take this food.The first cut off all evil,The second is to practice all good,The third is to save all beings;May we all att Way of the Buddha.* * *We wash our bowls in this water,It has the flavour of ambrosial dew.
to all demons and spirits;May all be filled and satisfied.OM MAKULASAI SVAHA * * The w empty sky,The lotus does not adhere to water.Our minds, surpassing that in purity,We bow i thee most Exalted One. *
*----------end of file

This document was originally distributed on Internet as a part of the Electronic Buddhist Archives, available via anonymous FTP and/or COOMBSQUEST gopher on the node COOMBS.ANU.EDU.AU

The document's ftp filename and the full directory path are given in the coombspapers top level INDEX file.

This version of the document has been reformatted by Barry Kapke and is being distributed, with permission, via the DharmaNet Buddhist File Distribution Network.

[Last updated: 23 September 1993]

The Zen Buddhist texts listed below have been translated from Japanese and rendered into a thoughtful English by the Diamond Sangha members, Honolulu, Hawaii headed by Robert Aitken Roshi. Although the basic work was done in the 1970s and the 1980s translations of some of the texts are not final as they tend to continue to be improved on and refined.
These texts are used with gratitude and delight by members of several affiliated Zen centers and communities, including California Diamond Sangha, Santa Rosa and Berkeley, USA (headed by John Tarrant Roshi); Sydney Zen Center, Australia, and the Zen Group of Western Australia, Perth, Australia.

[The final authoritative version of the sutras - as translated in Dec 1991 by Robert Aitken Roshi can be now found in the document called:
diamond-sangha-zen-sutras.txt available from the coombspapers at the above internet address, or DIA-SANG.ZIP from DharmaNet.]

==========
ZEN BUDDHIST MEAL SUTRAS
Sydney Zen Centre, 251 Young St., Annandale, Sydney NSW 2038, Australia
==========

Buddha, born at Kapilavastu,
Attained the way at Magadha, preached at Varanasi, Entered Nirvana at Kusinagara.
Now as we spread the bowls of Buddha Tathagatha

We make our vows together with all beings.
We and this food and our eating are vacant.
NYAN NI SAN BO
AN SU IN SHI
NYAN PIN DAI SHU NYAN

Vairochana, pure and clear Dharmakaya Buddha;
Lochana, full and complete Sambogakaya Buddha;
Shakyamuni, infinitely varied Nirmanakaya Buddha;
Maitreya, Buddha still to be born;
All Buddhas everywhere, past, present, future;
Mahayana, lotus of the subtle law;
Manjusri, great wisdom Bodhisattva;
Samantabhadra, Mahayana Bodhisattva;
Avalokitesvara, Great compassion Bodhisattva;
All venerated Bodhisattvas, Mahasattvas,
The great Prajna Paramita.

***

Porridge is effective in ten ways
To aid the student of Zen.
No limit to the good result,
Consumating eternal happiness.

***

These three virtues and six flavours
Are offered to the Buddha and Sangha
May all beings of the universe
Share alike this nourishment.

***

First, we consider in detail the merit of this food and remember how it came to us;
Second, we evaluate our own virtue and practice, lacking or complete, as we receive this offering;

Third, we are careful about greed, hatred and ignorance,
to guard our minds and to free ourselves from error;
Fourth, we take this good medicine to save our bodies from emaciation;
Fifth, we accept this food to achieve the Way of the Buddha.

***

Oh, all you demons and spirits,
We now offer this food to you.
May all of you everywhere
Share it with us together.

***

The first portion is for the Three Treasures,
The second is for the Four Blessings;
The third is for the Six Paths;
Together with all we take this food.
The first taste is to cut off all evil,
The second is to practice all good,
The third is to save all beings;
May we all attain the Way of the Buddha.

* * *

We wash our bowls in this water,
It has the flavour of ambrosial dew.
We offer it to all demons and spirits;
May all be filled and satisfied.
OM MAKULASAI SVAHA

* * *

The world is like an empty sky,
The lotus does not adhere to water.
Our minds, surpassing that in purity,
We bow in veneratlon to thee most Exalted One.

* * *

---

end of file

"MEDITATION"

Would you like to participate in an experiment in meditation? First, look to your posture: arrange the legs in the most comfortable position; set the backbone straight as an arrow. Place your hands in the position of meditative equipoise, four finger widths below your navel, with the left hand on the bottom, right hand on top, and your thumbs touching to form a triangle. This placement of the hands has connection with the place inside the body where inner heat is generated. Bending the neck down slightly, allow the mouth and teeth to be as usual, with the top of the tongue touching the roof of the mouth near the top teeth. Let the eyes gaze downwards loosely -- it is not necessary that they be directed to the end of the nose; they can be pointed toward the floor in front of you if that seems more natural. Do not open the eyes too wide nor forcefully close them; leave them open a little. Sometimes they will close of their own accord; that is all right. Even if your eyes are open, when your mental consciousness becomes steady upon its object, these appearances to the eye consciousness will not disturb you.

For those of you who wear eye glasses, have you noticed that when you take off your glasses, because of the unclarity there is less danger from the generation of excitement and more danger of laxity? Do you find that there is a difference between facing and not facing the wall? When you face the wall, you may find that there is less danger of excitement of scattering. These kinds of things can be determined through your own experience.

Within meditations that have an object of observation, there can be two types of objects: external or internal. Now, instead of meditating on the mind itself, let us meditate on an external object of observation -- for instance, the body of a Buddha for those who like to look at a Buddha or a cross for those who like that, or whatever symbol is suitable for you. Mentally visualize that the object is about four feet in front of you, at the same height as the eyebrows. The object should be approximately two inches high and emanating light. Try to conceive of it as being heavy, for this will prevent excitement. Its brilliance will prevent laxity. As you concentrate, you must strive for two factors: first, to make the object of observation clear, and second, to make it steady.

Has something appeared to your mind? Are the sense objects in front of your eyes bothering you? If that is the case, it is all right to close them, but with the eyes closed, do you see a reddish appearance? If you see red with the eyes closed or if you are bothered by what you see when your eyes are open, you are too involved with the eye consciousness and thus should try to withdraw attention from the eye consciousness and put it with the mental consciousness.

That which interferes with the steadiness of the object of observation and causes it to fluctuate is excitement or, in a more general way, scattering. To stop that, withdraw your mind more strongly inside so that the intensity of the mode of apprehension begins to lower. To withdraw the mind, it helps to think about something that makes you more sober, a little sad. These thoughts can cause your heightened mode of apprehension of the object, the mind's being too tight, to lower or loosen somewhat whereby you are better able to stay on the object of observation.

It is not sufficient just to have stability. It is necessary also to have clarity. That which prevents clarity is laxity, and what causes laxity is an over-withdrawal, excessive declination, of the mind. First of all, the mind becomes lax; this can lead to lethargy in which, losing the object of observation, you have as if fallen into darkness. This can lead even to sleep. When this occurs, it is necessary to raise or heighten the mode of apprehension. As a technique for that, think of something that you like, something that makes you joyous, or go to a high place or where there is a vast view. This technique causes the deflated mind to heighten in its mode of apprehension.

It is necessary within your own experience to recognize when the mode of apprehension has become too excited or too lax and determine the best practice for lowering or heightening it.

The object of observation that you are visualizing has to be held with mindfulness. Then, along with this, you inspect, as if from a corner, to see whether the object is clear and stable; the faculty that engages in this inspection is called introspection. When powerful steady mindfulness is achieved, introspection is generated, but the uncommon function of introspection is to inspect from time to time to see whether the mind has come under the influence of excitement or laxity. When you develop mindfulness and introspection well, you are able to catch laxity and excitement just before they arise and prevent their arising.

Briefly, that is how to sustain meditation with an external object of observation.

Another type of meditation involves looking at the mind itself. Try to leave your mind vividly in a natural state, without thinking of what happened in the past or of what you are planning for the future, without generating any conceptuality. Where does it seem that your consciousness is? Is it with the eyes or where is it? Most likely you have a sense that it is associated with the eyes since we derive most of our awareness of the world through vision. This is due to having relied too much on our sense consciousness. However the existence of a separate mental consciousness can be ascertained; for example, when attention is diverted by sound, that which appears to the eye consciousness is not noticed. This indicates that a separate mental consciousness is paying more attention to sound heard by the ear consciousness than to the perceptions of the eye consciousness.

With persistent practice, consciousness may eventually be perceived or felt as an entity of mere luminosity and knowing, to which anything is capable of appearing and which, when appropriate conditions arise, can be generated in the image of whatsoever object. As long as the mind does not encounter the external circumstance of conceptuality, it will abide empty without anything appearing in it, like clear water. Its very entity is that of mere experience. Let the mind flow of its own accord without conceptual overlay. Let the mind rest in its natural state, and observe it. In the beginning, when you are not used to this practice, it is quite difficult, but in time the mind appears like clear water. Then, stay with the unfabricated mind without allowing conceptions to be generated. In realizing this nature of the mind, we have for the first time located the object of observation of this internal type of meditation.

The best time for practicing this form of meditation is in the morning, in a quiet place, when the mind is very clear and alert. It helps not to have eaten to much the night before nor to sleep too much; this makes the mind lighter and sharper the next morning. Gradually the mind will become more and more stable; mindfulness and memory will become clearer.

See if this practice makes your mind more alert throughout the day. As a temporary benefit your thoughts will be tranquil. As your memory improves, gradually you can develop a kind of special perception and understanding, which is due to an increase of mindfulness. As a long term benefit, because your mind has become more alert and sharp, you can utilize it in whatever field you want.

If you are able to do a little meditation daily, withdrawing this scattered mind on one object inside, it is very helpful. The conceptuality that runs on thinking of good things, bad things, and so forth and so on will get a rest. It provides a little vacation just to set a bit in non-conceptuality and have a rest.

There is yet another method of meditation which enables on to discern the ultimate natural of phenomena. This type of mediation involves analytical introspection. Generally, phenomena are divided into two types: the mental and physical aggregates -- or phenomena that are used by the I -- and the I that uses them. To determine the nature of this I, let us use an example. When we say John is coming, there is some person who is the one designated by the name John. Is this name designated to his body? It is not. Is it designated to his mind? If it were designated to his mind, we could not speak of John's mind. Mind and body are things used by the person. It almost seems that there is an I separate from mind and body. For instance, when we think, "Oh, my lousy body!" or "My lousy mind!", to our own innate mode of appearance the mind itself is not the I, right?

Now, what John is there who is not his mind or body? You also should apply this to yourself, to your own sense of I -- where is this I in terms of mind and body?

When my body is sick, though my body is not I, due to the body's being sick it can be posited that I am sick. In fact, for the sake of the well-being and pleasure of the I, it sometimes even becomes necessary to cut off part of the body. Although the body is not the I, there is a relationship between the two: the pain of the body can serve as the pain of the I. Similarly, when the eye consciousness sees something it appears to the mind that the I perceives it.

What is the nature of the I? How does it appear to you? When you do not fabricate or create any artificial concept in your mind, does it seem that your I has an identity separate from your mind and body? But if you search for it, can you find it? For instances, someone accuses you, "You stole this." or "You ruined such and such," and you feel, "I didn't do that." At that time, how does the I appear? Does it appear as if solid? Does some solid, steady, and strong thing appear to your mind when you think or say, "I didn't do that?"

This seemingly solid, concrete, independent, self-instituting I under its own power that appears at such a time actually does not exist at all, and this specific non-existence is what is meant by selflessness. In the absence of analysis and investigation, a mere I as in, "I want such and such," or "I am going to do such and such," is asserted as valid, but the non-existence of an independent or self-powered I constitutes the selflessness of the person. This selflessness is that is found when one searches analytically to try to find the I.

Such non-inherent existence of the I is an ultimate truth, a final truth. The I that appears to a non-analytical conventional awareness is the dependently arisen I that serves as the basis of the conventions of action, agent and so forth; it is a conventional truth. In analyzing the mode of subsistence or that status of the I, it is clear that although it appears to exist inherently, it does not, much like an illusion.

That is how the ultimate nature of the I -- emptiness -- is analyzed.

Just as the I has this nature, so all other phenomena that are used by the I are empty of inherent existence. When analyzed, they cannot be found at all, but without analysis and investigation, they do exist. Their nature is the same as the I.

The conventional existence of the I as well as of pleasure and pain make it necessary to generate compassion and altruism, and because the ultimate nature of all phenomena is this emptiness of inherent existence, it is also necessary to cultivate wisdom. When these two aspects -- compassion and wisdom -- are practiced in union, wisdom grows more profound, and the sense of duality diminishes. Due to the mind's dwelling in the meaning of emptiness, dualistic appearance becomes lighter, and at the same time the mind itself becomes more subtle. As the mind grows even more subtle, reaching the subtlest level, it is eventually transformed into the most basic mind, the fundamental innate mind of clear light, which at once realizes and is of one taste with emptiness in meditative equipoise without any dualistic appearance at all, mixed with emptiness. Within all having this one taste, anything and everything can appear; this is known as "All in one taste, one taste in all."

These are a few of the types of meditation practiced in the Tibetan tradition. Of course there are many other techniques such as mantra and so forth. Perhaps now we could have some discussion.

~~~
~~~

is much sharper in the morning.

~~~
~~~

only a short time has passed. If it seems that you have spent a long time in meditation even though you have spent only a little, this is a sign that you should shorted the length of the session. This can be very important at the beginning.

~~~
~~~

unclear; therefore, here the withdrawal of the mind is to be accompanied by very strong clarity of alertness. In brief, the mind must have stability staying firmly on its object, great clarity of the object, and alert, clear, sharp tautness.

~~~
~~~

independent self-existence of an object finds ascertainment of its lack of independent self-nature through valid reasoning, and thus this kind of understanding does have a valid foundation. Like a debate in court, one perception is based on reason and truth, while the other one is not. When the evidence is sufficient, in such a debate the true view eventually overpowers the other because it can withstand analysis.

It is impossible for the mind simultaneously to apprehend one object in contradictory ways. With respect to one object, therefore, as you get used to understanding its non-inherent nature, not only is it impossible at that time to generate a conception of inherent nature but also as strong as the correct realization becomes, so much, in general, does conception of its opposite weaken in force.

To generate such wisdom we engage in meditation because our minds, as they are now, are not very powerful. Our mind is presently scattered; its energies need to be channeled like the way water in a hydroelectric plant is channeled to create great force. We achieve this with the mind through meditation, channeling it such that it becomes very forceful, at which point it can be utilized in the direction of wisdom. Since all the substances for enlightenment exist within ourselves, we should not look for Buddahood somewhere else.

~~~
~~~

Question: Would you please say something about the nature of //mandalas//?

DL: //Mandala//, in general, means that which extracts the essence. There are many usages of the term //mandala// according to context. One type of mandala is the offering of the entire world system, with the major and minor continents mentally constructed, to high beings. Also, there are painted mandalas, mandalas of concentration, those made out of colored sand, mandalas of the conventional mind of enlightenment, mandalas of the ultimate mind of enlightenment, and so forth. Because one can extract a meaning from each of these through practicing them, they are called mandalas.

Although we might call these pictures and constructed depictions mandalas, the main meaning is for oneself to enter into the mandala and extract an essence in the sense of receiving blessing. It is a place of gaining magnificence. Because one is gaining a blessing and thereupon developing realizations it is called an extraction or assumption of something essential.

~~~
~~~

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

~~~
~~~

BUDDHIST MEDITATION

by Francis Story
(The Anagarika Sugatananda)

Bodhi Leaves No. 15

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY SRI LANKA

Enlarged Edition 1963
Second Edition 1970
Third Edition 1977
Reprinted 1986

Copyright 1986, 1995 Buddhist Publication Society

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription: Myra Fox
Proofreading & Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

Buddhist Meditation

The mental exercise known as meditation is found in all religious systems. Prayer is a form of discursive meditation, and in Hinduism the reciting of slokas and mantras is employed to tranquilize the mind to a state of receptivity. In most of these systems the goal is identified with the particular psychic results that ensue, sometimes very quickly; and the visions that come in the semi-trance state, or the sounds that are heard, are considered to be the end-result of the exercise. This is not the case in the forms of meditation practiced in Buddhism.

There is still comparatively little known about the mind, its functions and its powers, and it is difficult for most people to distinguish between self-hypnosis, the development of mediumistic states, and the real process of mental clarification and direct perception which is the object of Buddhist mental concentration. The fact that mystics of every religion have induced on themselves states wherein they see visions and hear voices that are in accordance with their own religious beliefs indicates that their meditation has resulted only in bringing to the surface of the mind and objectifying the concepts already embedded in the deepest strata of their subconscious minds. The Christian sees and converses with the saints of whom he already knows; the Hindu visualizes the gods of the Hindu pantheon, and so on. When Sri Ramakrishna Paramahamsa, the Bengali mystic, began to turn his thoughts towards Christianity, he saw visions of Jesus in his meditations, in place of his former eidetic images of the Hindu Avatars.

The practiced hypnotic subject becomes more and more readily able to surrender himself to the suggestions made to him by the hypnotiser, and anyone who has studied this subject is bound to see a connection between the mental state of compliance he has reached and the facility with which the mystic can induce whatever kind of experiences he wills himself to undergo. There is still another possibility latent in the practice of meditation; the development of mediumistic faculties by which the subject can actually see and hear beings on different planes of existence, the Devalokas and the realm of the unhappy ghosts, for example. These worlds being nearest to our own are the more readily accessible, and this is the true explanation of the psychic phenomena of Western Spiritualism.

The object of Buddhist meditation, however, is none of these things. They arise as side-products, but not only are they not its goal, but they are hindrances which have to be overcome. The Christian who has seen Jesus, or the Hindu who has conversed with Bhagavan Krishna may be quite satisfied that he has fulfilled the purpose of his religious life, but the Buddhist who sees a vision of the Buddha knows by that very fact that he has only succeeded in objectifying a concept in his own mind, for the Buddha after his Parinibbana is, in his own words, no longer visible to gods or men.

There is an essential difference, then, between Buddhist meditation and concentration and that practiced in other systems. The Buddhist embarking on a course of meditation does well to recognize this difference and to establish in his own conscious mind a clear idea of what it is he is trying to do.

The root-cause of rebirth and suffering is //avijja// conjoined with and reacting upon //tanha//. These two causes form a vicious circle; on the one hand, concepts, the result of ignorance, and on the other hand, desire arising from concepts. The world of phenomena has no meaning beyond the meaning given to it by our own interpretation.

When that interpretation is conditioned by //avijja//, we are subject to the state known as //vipallasa//, or hallucination. //Sanna-vipallasa//, hallucination of perception; //citta-vipallasa//, hallucination of consciousness, and //ditthi-vipallasa//, hallucination of views, cause us to regard that which is impermanent (//anicca//) as permanent, that which is painful (//dukkha//) as a source of pleasure, and that which is unreal (//anatta//), or literally without any self existence, as being a real, self-existing entity. Consequently, we place a false interpretation on all the sensory experiences we gain through the six channels of cognition, that is, the eye, ear, nose, tongue, sense of touch and mind //cakkhu, sota, ghana, jivha, kaya// and //mano (ayatana)//. Physics, by showing that the realm of phenomena we know through these channels of cognition does not really correspond to the physical world known to science, has confirmed this Buddhist truth. We are deluded by our own senses. Pursuing what we imagine to be desirable, an object of pleasure, we are in reality only following a shadow, trying to grasp a mirage. It is //anicca, dukkha, anatta// -- impermanent, associated with suffering, an insubstantial. Being so, it can only be the cause of impermanence, suffering and insubstantiality, since like begets like; and we ourselves, who chase the illusion, are also impermanent, subject to suffering and without any persistent ego-principle. It is a case of a shadow pursuing a shadow.

The purpose of Buddhist meditation, therefore, is to gain more than an intellectual understanding of this truth, to liberate ourselves from the delusion and thereby put an end to both ignorance and craving. If the meditation does not produce results tending to this consummation -- results which are observable in the character and the whole attitude to life -- it is clear that there is something wrong either with the system or with the method of employing it. It is not enough to see lights, to have visions or to experience ecstasy. These phenomena are too common to be impressive to the Buddhist who really understands the purpose of Buddhist meditation. There are actual dangers in them which are apparent to one who is also a student of psychopathology.

In the Buddha's great discourse on the practice of mindfulness, the Maha-Satipatthana Sutta, both the object and the means of attaining it are clearly set forth. Attentiveness to the movements of the body, to the ever-changing states of the mind, is to be cultivated in order that their real nature should be known. Instead of identifying these physical and mental phenomena with the false concept of "self," we are to see them as they really are: movements of a physical body, an aggregate of the four elements, (//mahabhutas//) subject to physical laws of causality on the one hand, and on the other, a flux of successive phases of consciousness arising and passing away in response to external stimuli. They are to be viewed objectively, as though they were processes not associated with ourselves but belonging to another order of phenomena.

From what can selfishness and egotism proceed if not from the concept of "self" (//sakkayaditthi//)? If the practice of any form of meditation leaves selfishness or egotism unabated, it has not been successful. A tree is judged by its fruits and a man by his actions; there is no other criterion. Particularly is this true in Buddhist psychology, because the man //is// his actions. In the truest sense they, or the continuity of kamma and //vipaka// which they represent, are the only claim he can make to any persistent identity, not only through the different phases of this life but also from one life to another. Attentiveness with regard to body and mind serves to break down the illusion of self; and not only that, it also cuts off craving and attachment to external objects, so that ultimately there is neither the "self" that craves nor any object of craving. It is a long and arduous discipline, and one that can only be undertaken in retirement from the world and its cares.

Yet even a temporary retirement, a temporary course of this discipline, can bear good results in that it establishes an attitude of mind which can be applied to some degree in the ordinary situations of life. Detachment, objectivity, is an invaluable aid to clear thinking; it enables a man to sum up a given situation without bias, personal or otherwise, and to act in that situation with courage and discretion. Another gift it bestows is that of concentration -- the ability to focus the mind and keep it steadily fixed on a single point (//ekaggata//, or one-pointedness), and this is the great secret of success in any undertaking. The mind is hard to tame; it roams here and there restlessly as the wind, or like an untamed horse, but when it is fully under control, it is the most powerful instrument in the whole universe. He who has mastered his own mind is indeed master of the Three Worlds.

In the first place he is without fear. Fear arises because we associate mind and body (//nama-rupa//) with "self"; consequently any harm to either is considered to be harm done to oneself. But he who has broken down this illusion by realizing that the five //khandha// process is merely the manifestation of cause and effect, does not fear death or misfortune. He remains equable alike in success and failure, unaffected by praise or blame. The only thing he fears is demeritorious action, because he knows that no thing or person in the world can harm him except himself, and as his detachment increases, he becomes less and less liable to demeritorious deeds. Unwholesome action comes of an unwholesome mind, and as the mind becomes purified, healed of its disorders, bad kamma ceases to accumulate. He comes to have a horror of wrong action and to take greater and greater delight in those deeds that are rooted in //alobha//, //adosa//, and //amoha// -- generosity, benevolence and wisdom.

Anapana Sati

~~~~~~~~~~~~

One of the most universally-applicable methods of cultivating mental concentration is //anapanasati//, attentiveness on the in-going and out-going breath. This, unlike the Yogic systems, does not call for any interference with the normal breathing, the breath being merely used as a point on which to fix the attention, at the tip of the nostrils. The attention must not wander, even to follow the breath, but must be kept rigidly on the selected spot. In the initial stages it is advisable to mark the respiration by counting, but as soon as it is possible to keep the mind fixed without this artificial aid, it should be discontinued and only used when it is necessary to recall the attention.

As the state of mental quiescence (//samatha//) is approached, the breath appears to become fainter and fainter, until it is hardly discernible. It is at this stage that certain psychic phenomena appear, which may at first be disconcerting. A stage is reached when the actual bodily //dukkha//, the sensation of arising and passing away of the physical elements in the body, is felt. This is experienced as a disturbance, but it must be remembered that it is an agitation that is always present in the body but we are unaware of it until the mind becomes stabilized. It is the first direct experience of the //dukkha// (suffering) which is inherent in all phenomena -- the realization within oneself of the first of the Four Noble Truths, //Dukkha Ariya Sacca//. When that is passed there follows the sensation of //piti//, rapturous joy associated with the physical body. The teacher of //vipassana//, however, is careful never to describe to his pupil beforehand what he is likely to experience, for if he does so, there is a strong possibility that the power of suggestion will produce a false reaction, particularly in those cases where the pupil is very suggestible and greatly under the influence of the teacher.
~~~~~~~~~~~~

Devices in Meditation

In //kammattana//, it is permissible to use certain devices, such as the earth or colour //kasina//, as focal points for the attention. A candle flame, a hole in the wall, or some metal object can also be used, and the method of using them is found in the Pali texts and the //Visuddhi-magga//. In the texts themselves it is to be noted that the Buddha gave objects of meditation to disciples in accordance with their individual characteristics, and his unerring knowledge of the right technique for each came from his insight into their previous births. Similarly with recursive meditation, a subject would be given which was easily comprehensible to the pupil, or which served to counteract some strong, unwholesome tendency in his nature. Thus, to one attracted by sensual indulgence, the Buddha would recommend meditation on the impurity of the body, or the "cemetery meditation." Here the object is to counterbalance attraction by repulsion, but it is only a "skillful means" to reach the final state, in which attraction and repulsion both cease to exist. In the Arahant there is neither liking nor disliking: he regards all things with perfect equanimity, as did Thera Maha Moggallana when he accepted a handful of rice from a leper.

Beads

The use of the rosary in Buddhism is often misunderstood. If it is used for the mechanical repetition of a set formula, the repeating of so many phrases as an act of piety, as in other religions, its value is negligible. When it is used as means of holding the attention and purifying the mind, however, it can be a great help. One of the best ways of employing it, because it calls for undivided attention, is to repeat the Pali formula of the qualities of Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha, beginning "//Iti'pi so Bhagava -- //" with the first bead, starting again with the second and continuing to the next quality: "//Iti'pi so Bhagava, Arahan -- //" and so on until with the last bead the entire formula is repeated from beginning to end. This cannot be carried out successfully unless the mind is entirely concentrated on what is being done. At the same time the recalling of the noble qualities of Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha lifts the mind to a lofty plane, since the words carry with them a meaning the impresses itself on the pattern of the thought-moments as they arise and pass away. The value of this in terms of Abhidhamma psychology lies in the wholesome nature of the //cittakkhana//, or "consciousness-moment" in its //uppada// (arising), //thiti// (static) and //bhanga// (disappearing) phases. Each of these wholesome //cittakkhana// contributes to the improvement of the //sankhara//; or aggregate of tendencies; in other words, it directs the subsequent thought-moments into a higher realm and tends to establish the character on that level.

Samatha Bhavana

//Samatha bhavana//, the development of mental tranquility with concentration, is accompanied by three benefits; it gives happiness in the present life, a favorable rebirth, and the freedom from mental defilements which is a prerequisite for attainment of insight. In //samatha// the mind becomes like a still, clear pool completely free from disturbance and agitation, and ready to mirror on its surface the nature of things as they really are, the aspect of them which is hidden from ordinary knowledge by the restlessness of craving. It is the peace and fulfillment which is depicted on the features of the Buddha, investing his images with a significance that impresses even those who have no knowledge of what it means. Such an image of the Buddha can itself be a very suitable object of meditation, and is, in fact, the one that most Buddhists instinctively use. The very sight of the tranquil image can calm and pacify a mind distraught with worldly hopes and fears. It is the certain and visible assurance of Nibbana.

Vipassana Bhavana

//Vipassana bhavana// is realization of the three signs of being, //anicca//, //dukkha//, and //anatta//, by direct insight. These three characteristics, impermanence, suffering and non-self, can be grasped intellectually, as scientific and philosophical truth, but this is not in itself sufficient to rid the mind of egoism and craving. The final objective lies on a higher level of awareness, the direct "intuitional" plane, where it is actually experienced as psychological fact. Until this personal confirmation is obtained, the sphere of sense perception (//ayatana//) and sensory-responses remain stronger than the intellectual conviction; the two function side by side on different levels of consciousness, but it is usually the sphere dominated by //avijja// which continues to determine the course of life by volitional action. The philosopher who fails to live according to his philosophy is the most familiar example of this incompatibility between theory and practice. When the direct perception is obtained, however, what was at its highest intellectual level still merely a theory becomes actual knowledge, in precisely the same way that we "know" when we are hot or cold hungry or thirsty. The mind that has attained it is established in the Dhamma, and //panna//, wisdom, has taken the place of delusion.

Discursive meditation, such as that practiced in Christian devotion, is entirely on the mental level, and can be undertaken by anyone at any time. It calls for no special preparation or conditions. For the more advanced exercises of //samatha// and //vipassana//, however, the strictest observance of //sila//, the basic moral rules, becomes necessary. These techniques are best followed in seclusion, away from the impurities of worldly life and under the guidance of an accomplished master. Many people have done themselves psychic harm by embarking on them without due care in this respect. It is not advisable for anyone to experiment on his own; those who are unable to place themselves under a trustworthy teacher will do best to confine themselves to discursive meditation. It cannot take them to enlightenment but will benefit them morally and prepare them for the next stage.

The Practice of Metta Bhavana

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

//Metta bhavana// is the most universally beneficial form of discursive meditation, and can be practiced in any conditions. Thoughts of universal, undiscriminating benevolence, like radio waves reaching out in all directions, sublimate the creative energy of the mind. With steady perseverance in //metta bhavana// a point can be reached at which it becomes impossible even to harbor a thought of ill-will. True peace can only come to the world through minds that are at peace, If people everywhere in the world could be persuaded to devote half an hour daily to the practice of //metta bhavana//, we should see more real advance towards world peace and security than international agreements will ever bring us. It would be a good thing if, in this new era of the Buddha Sasana, people of all creeds could be invited to take part in a world-wide movement for the practice of //metta bhavana// and pledge themselves to live in accordance with the highest tenets of their own religion, whatever it may be. In so doing they would be paying homage to the Supreme Buddha and to their own particular religious teacher as well, for on this level all the great religions of the world unite. If there is a common denominator to be found among them, it is surely here, in the teaching of universal loving-kindness which transcends doctrinal differences and draws all being together by the power of a timeless and all-embracing truth.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The classic formulation of //metta// as an attitude of mind to be developed by meditation is found in the //Karaniya Metta Sutta// (Sutta Nipata, Khuddaka-patha) [See appendix]. It is recommended that this sutta be recited before beginning meditation, and again at its close, a practice which is invariably followed in the Buddhist countries. The verses of the sutta embody the highest concept to which the thought of loving-kindness can reach, and it serves both as a means of self-protection against unwholesome mental states and as a subject of contemplation (//kammatthana//).

It is taught in Buddhism that the cultivation of benevolence must begin with oneself. There is a profound psychological truth in this, for no one who hates or despises himself consciously or unconsciously can feel true loving-kindness for others. To each of us the self is the nearest object; if one's attitude towards oneself is not a wholesome one, the spring of love is poisoned at its source. This does not mean that we should build up an idealized picture of ourselves as an object of admiration, but that, while being fully aware of our faults and deficiencies, we should not condemn but resolve to improve ourselves and cherish confidence in our ability to do so.

//Metta bhavana//, therefore, begins with the thought: "May I be free from enmity; may I be free from ill-will; may I be rid of suffering; may I be happy."

This thought having been developed, the next stage is to apply it in exactly the same form and to the same degree, to someone for whom one has naturally a feeling of friendship.

In so doing, two points must be observed: the object should be a living person, and should not be one of the opposite sex. The second prohibition is to guard against the feeling of //metta// turning into its "near enemy," sensuality. Those whose sensual leanings have a different orientation must vary the rule to suit their own needs.

When the thought of //metta// has been developed towards a friend, the next object should be someone towards whom one has no marked feelings of like or dislike. Lastly, the though of //metta// is to be turned towards someone who is hostile. It is here that difficulties arise. They are to be expected, and the meditator must be prepared to meet and wrestle with them. To this end, several techniques are described in the //Visuddhimagga// and elsewhere. The first is to think of the hostile personality in terms of //anatta// -- impersonality. The meditator is advised to analyze the hostile personality into its impersonal components -- the body, the feelings, the perceptions, the volitional formations and the consciousness. The body, to begin with, consists of purely material items: hair of the head, hair of the body, skin, nails, teeth and so on. There can be no basis for enmity against these. The feelings, perceptions, volitional formations and consciousness are all transitory phenomena, interdependent, conditioned and bound up with suffering. They are //anicca//, //dukkha// and //anatta//, impermanent, fraught with suffering and void of selfhood. There is no more individual personality in them than there is in the physical body itself. So towards them, likewise, there can be no real ground for enmity.

If this approach should prove to be not altogether effective, there are others in which emotionally counteractive states of mind are brought into play, as for example regarding the hostile person with compassion. The meditator should reflect: "As he (or she) is, so am I. As I am, so is he. We are both bound to the inexorable Wheel of Life by ignorance and craving. Both of us are subject to the law of cause and effect, and whatever evil we do, for that we must suffer. Why then should I blame or call anyone my enemy? Rather should I purify my mind and wish that he may do the same, so that both of us may be freed from suffering."

If this thought is dwelt upon and fully comprehended, feelings of hostility will be cast out. When the thought of loving-kindness is exactly the same, in quality and degree, for all these four objects -- oneself, one's friend, the person toward whom one is neutral, and the enemy -- the meditation has been successful.

The next stage is to widen and extend it. This process is a threefold one: suffusing //metta// without limitation, suffusing it with limitation, and suffusing it in all of the ten directions, east, west, north, south, the intermediate points, above and below.

In suffusing //metta// without limitation (//anodhiso-pharana//), the meditator thinks of the objects of loving-kindness under five heads: all sentient beings; all things that have life; all beings that have come into existence; all that have personality; all that have assumed individual being. For each of these groups separately he formulates the thought: "May they be free from enmity; may they be free from enmity; may they be free from ill will; may they be rid of suffering; may they be happy. For each object he specifies the particular group which he is suffusing with //metta//: "May all sentient beings be free from enmity, etc... May all things that have life be free from enmity, etc." This meditation embraces all without particular reference to locality, and so is called "suffusing without limitation."

In suffusing //metta// with limitation (//odhiso-pharana//), there are seven groups which form the objects of the meditation. They are: all females; all males; all Noble Ones (those who have attained any one of the states of Sainthood); all imperfect ones; all Devas; all human beings; all beings in states of woe. Each of the groups should be meditated upon as described above: "May all females be free from enmity, etc." This method is called "suffusing //metta// with limitation" because it defines the groups according to their nature and condition.

Suffusing with //metta// all beings in the ten directions is carried out in the same way. Directing his mind towards the east, the meditator concentrates on the thought: "May all beings in the east be free from enmity; may they be free from ill will; may they be rid of suffering; may they be happy!" And so with the beings in the west, the north, the south, the north-east, south-west, north-west, south-east, above and below.

Lastly, each of the twelve groups belonging to the unlimited and limited suffusions of //metta// can be dealt with separately for each of the ten directions, using the appropriate formulas.

It is taught that each of these twenty-two modes of practicing //metta bhavana// is capable of being developed up to the stage of a //appana-samadhi//, that is, the concentration which leads to jhana, or mental absorption. For this reason it is described as the method for attaining release of the mind through //metta// (//metta cetovimutti//). It is the first of the Four Brahma Viharas, the sublime states of which the Karaniya Metta Sutta: "//Brahmam etam viharam idhamahu//" -- "Here is declared the Highest Life."

//Metta//, //karuna//, //mudita//, //upekkha//: [Nyanaponika Thera, //The Four Sublime States//, WHEEL 6.] loving-kindness, compassion, sympathetic joy and detachment, these four states of mind represent the highest levels of mundane consciousness. One who has attained to them and dwells in them is impervious to the ills of life. Like a god he moves and acts in undisturbed serenity, armored against the blows of fate and the uncertainty of worldly conditions. And the first of them to be cultivated is //metta//, because it is through boundless love that the mind gains its first taste of liberation.

* * *

APPENDIX

Lovingkindness as a Contemplation

10. //Metta Sutta//

//From the Sutta-nipata, verses 143-52 (Spoken by the Buddha)//

What should be done by one skillful in good
So as to gain the State of Peace is this:

Let him be able, and upright, and straight.

Easy to speak to, gentle, and not proud,
Contented, too, supported easily.
With few tasks, and living very lightly,
His faculties serene, prudent, and modest,
Unswayed by the emotions of the clans;
And let him never do the slightest thing
That other wise men might hold blamable.

(And let him think:) "In safety and in bliss
May creatures all be of a blissful heart.
Whatever breathing beings there may be,
No matter whether they are frail or firm,
With none excepted, be they long or big
Or middle sized, or be they short or small
Or thick, as well as those seen or unseen,
Or whether they are dwelling far or near,
Existing or yet seeking to exist,
May creatures all be of a blissful heart.

Let no one work another one's undoing
Or even slight him at all anywhere;
And never let them wish each other ill
Through provocation or resentful thought.

And just as might a mother with her life
Protect the son that was her only child,
So let him then for every living thing
Maintain unbounded consciousness in being,
And let him too with love for all the world
Maintain unbounded consciousness in being Above, below, and all round in between,
Untroubled, with no enemy or foe.
And while he stands or walks or while he sits
Or while he lies down, free from drowsiness,
Let him resolve upon this mindfulness
This is Divine Abiding here, they say.
But when he has no trafficking with views,
Is virtuous, and has perfected seeing,

And purges greed for sensual desires.
He surely comes no more to any womb."

* * *

For further reading on MINDFULNESS and MEDITATION:

* The Foundations of Mindfulness (Satipatthana Sutta) (The Wheel 19)
* The Power of Mindfulness. Nyanaponika Thera (The Wheel 121/122)
* Buddhist Meditation and Depth Psychology. Dr. D. M. Burns (The Wheel 88/89)
* The Practice of Loving-Kindness (Metta) Nyanamoli Thera (The Wheel 7)
* Practical Advice of Meditators. Bhikkhu Khantipalo (The Wheel 116)
* The Buddha on Meditation and Higher States of Consciousness. Dr. Daniel Goleman (The Wheel 188-189)
* The Way of Mindfulness. (The Satipatthana Sutta with its full Commentary, and explanatory notes) Soma Mahathera
* Practical Insight Meditation (Basic and Progressive Stages). Mahasi Sayadaw

We recommend:

THE HEART OF BUDDHIST MEDITATION
A Handbook of Mental Training based on the Buddha's Way of Mindfulness
Nyanaponika Thera
(Rider and Company, London)

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage.

Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: Buddhist Meditation (Bodhi Leaves #B15)
FILENAME: BODHI015.ZIP
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

AUTHOR: Francis Story
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: N/A
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1986, 1995)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1986
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: May 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

THE LIVING MESSAGE OF THE DHAMMAPADA

by Bhikkhu Bodhi

Bodhi Leaves No. 129

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY SRI LANKA

Copyright 1993 Buddhist Publication Society

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription: Joseph Crea
Proofreading & Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

The Dhammapada is a work familiar to every devout Buddhist and to every serious student of Buddhism. This small collection of 423 verses on the Buddha's doctrine is so rich in insights that it might be considered the perfect compendium of the Dhamma in its practical dimensions. In the countries of Theravada Buddhism the Dhammapada is regarded as an inexhaustible source of guidance and spiritual inspiration, as the wise counselor to which to turn for help in resolving the difficult moral and personal problems inescapable in daily life. Just as the Buddha is looked upon as the human //kalyanamitta// or spiritual friend par excellence, so the Dhammapada is looked upon as the scriptural //kalyanamitta// par excellence, a small embodiment in verse of the boundless wisdom and great compassion of the Master.

To draw out the living message of any great spiritual classic, it is not enough for us merely to investigate it in terms of questions that might be posed by scientific scholarship. We have to take a step beyond scholarly examination and seek to make an application of those teachings to ourselves in our present condition. To do this requires that we use our intelligence, imagination and intuition to see //through// the limiting cultural contexts out of which the work was born, and to see //into// those universal features of the human condition to which the spiritual classic being studied is specifically addressed. With these stipulations in mind we will examine the Dhammapada in order to discover what this ancient book of wisdom regards as the fundamental and perennial spiritual problems of human life and to learn what solutions it can propose for them that may be relevant to us today. In this way we will uncover the //living message// of the Dhammapada: the message that rings down through the centuries and speaks to us in our present condition in the fullness of our humanity.

When we set out to make such an investigation, one difficulty that we meet at the outset is the great diversity of teachings contained in the Dhammapada. It is well known that during his teaching career the Buddha always adjusted his discourses to fit the needs and capacities of his disciples. Thus the prose discourses found in the four main Nikayas display richly variegated presentations of the doctrine, and this diversity becomes even more pronounced in the Dhammapada, a collection of utterances spoken in the intuitive and highly charged medium of verse. We even find in the work apparent inconsistencies, which may perplex the superficial reader and lead to the supposition that the Buddha's teaching is rife with self-contradiction. Thus in many verses the Buddha commends certain practices to his disciples on the ground that they lead to heaven, while in others he discourages disciples from aspiring for heaven and praises the one who takes no delight in celestial joys. Often the Buddha enjoins works of merit, yet elsewhere in the work he enjoins his disciples to go beyond both merit and demerit.

To make sense out of such contrary statements, to find a consistent message running through the Dhammapada's diversified pronouncements, let us begin with a statement the Buddha makes in another small but beautiful book of the Pali Canon, the Udana: "Just as the great ocean has but one taste, the taste of salt, so this doctrine-and-discipline has but one taste, the taste of freedom." Despite their variety in meaning and formulation, the Buddha's teachings all fit together into a perfectly coherent system which gains its unity from its final goal. That goal is freedom (//vimutti//), which here means spiritual freedom: the liberation of the mind from all bonds and fetters, the liberation of our being from the suffering inseparable from wandering in samsara, the cycle of rebirths. But while the Buddha's teachings fit together harmoniously through the unity of their final goal, they are addressed to people standing at different levels of spiritual development and thus must be expressed in different ways determined by the needs of the people to be taught. Here again water provides a fitting analogy. Water has one essence -- chemically, it is a union of two hydrogen atoms with one oxygen atom -- but it takes on the different shapes of the vessels into which it is poured; similarly, the Dhamma has a single essence -- deliverance from suffering -- but it assumes varying expressions in accordance with the dispositions of those who are to be instructed and trained. It is because the different expressions lead to a single end, and because the same end can be reached via teachings that are differently expressed, that the Dhamma is said to be //sattha sabyanjana//, "good in meaning and good in formulation."

To make sense out of the various teachings found in the Dhammapada, to grasp the vision of human spirituality expressed by the work as a whole, I would like to suggest a schematism of four levels of instruction set forth in the Dhammapada. This fourfold schematism develops out of three primary and perennial spiritual needs of man: first, the need to achieve welfare and happiness in the present life, in the immediately visible sphere of human relations; second, the need to attain a favourable future life in accordance with a principle that confirms our highest moral intuitions; and third, the need for transcendence, to overcome all the limits imposed upon us by our finitude and temporality and to attain a freedom that is boundless, timeless, and irreversible. These three needs give rise to four levels of instruction by distinguishing two levels pertaining to the third need: the level of path, when we are on the way to transcendence, and the level of fruit, when we have won through to transcendence.

Now let us examine each of these levels in turn, illustrating them with citations of relevant verses from the Dhammapada.

1. The Human Good Here And Now

The first level of instruction in the Dhammapada is addressed to the need to establish human welfare and happiness in the immediately visible domain of personal relation. The aim at this level is to show us the way to live at peace with ourselves and our fellow human beings, to fulfil our family and social responsibilities, and to remove the conflicts which infect human relationships and bring such immense suffering to the individual, society and the world as a whole.

The guidelines appropriate to this level of instruction are largely identical with the basic ethical injunctions proposed by most of the great world religions. However, in the Buddha's teaching these ethical injunctions are not regarded as fiats imposed by an all-powerful God. Rather, they are presented as precepts or training rules grounded upon two directly verifiable foundations: concern for one's own personal integrity and considerations for the welfare of those whom one's actions may affect.

The most general advice the Dhammapada gives is to avoid all evil, to cultivate good, and to cleanse one's own mind; this is said to be the counsel of all the Enlightened Ones (v. 183). More specific directives, however, are also given. To abstain from evil we are advised to avoid irritation in deed, word and thought and to exercise self-control over body, speech and mind (vv. 231-234). One should adhere scrupulously to the five moral precepts: abstinence from destroying life, from stealing, from sexual misconduct, from lying and from intoxicants (vv. 246-247). The disciple should treat all beings with kindness and compassion, live honestly, control his desires, speak the truth, and live a sober upright life. He should fulfil all his duties to parents, to immediate family, to friends, and to recluses and brahmins (vv. 331-333).

A large number of verses pertaining to this first level are concerned with the resolution of conflict and hostility. From other parts of the Sutta Pitaka we learn that the Buddha was a keen and sensitive observer of the social and political developments that were rapidly transforming the Indian states he visited on his preaching rounds. The violence, hatred, cruelty and sustained enmity that he witnessed have persisted right down to the present, and the Buddha's answer to this problem is still the only answer that can work. The Buddha tells us that the key to soving the problem of violence and cruelty is the ancient maxim of using oneself as the standard for deciding how to treat others. I myself tremble at violence, wish to live in peace and do not want to die. Thus, putting myself in the place of others, I should recognize that all other beings tremble at violence, that all wish to live and do not want to die. Recognizing this, I should not intimidate others, harm them, or cause them to be harmed in any way (vv. 129-130).

The Buddha saw that hatred and enmity continue and spread in a self-expanding cycle: responding to hatred by hatred only breeds more hatred, more enmity, more violence, and feed the whole vicious whirlpool of vengeance and retaliation. The Dhammapada teaches us that the true conquest of hatred is achieved by non-hatred, by forbearance, by love (v. 5). When wronged by others we must be patient and forgiving. We must control our anger as a driver controls a chariot; we must bear angry words as the elephant in battle bears the arrows shot into its hide; when spoken to harshly we must remain silent like a broken bell (vv. 222, 320, 134).

According to the Dhammapada, the qualities distinguishing the superior human being (//sapurisa//) are generosity, truthfulness, patience and compassion. By following these ideals we can live at peace with our own conscience and in harmony with our fellows. The scent of virtue, the Buddha declares, is sweeter than the scent of flowers and perfume; the good man or woman shines from afar like the Himalayan mountains; just as the lotus flower rises up in all its beauty above the muck and mire of the roadside refuse heap, so does the disciple of the Buddha rise up in splendor of wisdom above the masses of ignorant worldlings (vv. 54, 304, 59).

2. The Good in Future Lives

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The basic empahasis in the first level of teaching in the Dhammapada is ethical, a concern which arises from a desire to promote human well-being here and now. However, the teachings pertaining to this level give rise to a profound religious problem, a dilemma that challenges the mature thinker. The problem is as follows: Our moral intuition, our innate sense of moral justice, tells us that there must be some principle of compensation at work in the world whereby goodness meets with happiness and evil meets with suffering. But everyday experience shows us exactly the opposite. We all know of highly virtuous people beset with every kind of hardship and thoroughly bad people who succeed in everything they do. We feel that there must be some correction to this imbalance, some force that will tilt the scales of justice into the balance that seems right, but our daily experience seems to contradict this intuition totally.

However, in his teachings the Buddha reveals that there is a force at work which can satisfy our demand for moral justice. This force cannot be seen with the eye of the flesh nor can it be registered by any instruments of measurement, but its working becomes visible to the supernormal vision of sages and saints, while all its principles in their full complexity are fathomed by a Perfectly Enlightened Buddha. This force is called //kamma//. The law of kamma ensures that our morally determinate actions do not disappear into nothingness, but rather continue on as traces in the deep hidden layers of the mind, where they function in such a way that our good deeds eventually issue in happiness and success, our evil deeds in suffering and misery.
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The word kamma, in the Budha's teaching, means volitional action. Such action may be bodily or verbal, when volition is expressed in deed or speech, or it may be purely mental, when volition remains unexpressed as thoughts, emotions, wishes and desires. The actions may be either wholesome or unwholesome: wholesome when they are rooted in generosity, amity and understanding; unwholesome when they spring from greed, hatred and delusion. According to the principle of kamma, the willed actions we perform in the course of a life have long-term consequences that correspond to the moral quality of the original action. The deeds may utterly fade from our memory, but once performed they leave subtle impressions upon the mind, potencies capable of ripening in the future to our weal or our woe.

According to Buddhism, conscious life is not a chance by-product of molecular configurations or a gift from a divine Creator, but a beginningless process which repeatedly springs up at birth and passes away at death, to be followed by a new birth. There are many spheres besides the human into which rebirth can occur: heavenly realms of great bliss, beauty and power, infernal realms where suffering and misery prevail. The Dhammapada does not give us any systematic teaching on kamma and rebirth. As a book of spiritual counsel it presupposes the theoretical principles explained elsewhere in the Buddhist scriptures and concerns itself with their practical bearings on the conduct of life. The essentials of the law of kamma, however, are made perfectly clear: our willed actions determine the sphere of existence into which we will be reborn after death, the circumstances and endowments of our lives within any given form of rebirth, and our potentials for spiritual progress or decline.

At the second level of instruction found in the Dhammapada the //content// of the message is basically the same as that of the first level: it is the same set of moral injunctions for abstaining from evil and doing good. The difference lies in the //viewpoint// from which these precepts are issued and the //purpose// for which they are taken up. At this level the precepts are prescribed to show us the way to achieve long-range happiness and freedom from sorrow, not only in the visible sphere of the present life, but far beyond into the distant future in our subsequent transmigration in samsara. Despite the apparent discrepancy between action and result, an all-embracing law ensures that ultimately moral justice triumphs. In the short run the good may suffer and the evil may prosper. But all willed actions bring their appropriate results: if one acts or speaks with an evil mind, suffering follows just as the wheel follows the foot of the draught-ox; if one acts or speaks with a pure mind, happiness follows like a shadow that never departs (vv.1-2). The evil-doer grieves here and hereafter; he is tormented by his conscience and destined to planes of misery. The doer of good rejoices here and hereafter, he enjoys a good conscience and is destined to realms of bliss (vv. 15-18). To follow the law of virtue leads upwards, to happiness and joy and to higher rebirths; to violate the lead leads downwards, to suffering and to lower rebirths. The law is inflexible. Nowhere in the world can the evil-doer escape the result of his evil kamma, "neither in the sky nor in mid-ocean nor by entering into mountain clefts" (v. 127). The good person will reap the rewards of his or her good kamma in future lives with the same certainty with which a traveller, returning home after a long journey, can expect to be greeted by his family and friends (v. 220).

3. The Path to the Final Good

~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

The teaching on kamma and rebirth, with its practical corollary that we should perform deeds of merit with the aim of obtaining a higher mode of rebirth, is not by any means the final message of the Buddha or the decisive counsel of the Dhammapada. In its own sphere of application this teaching is perfectly valid as a preparatory measure for those who still require further maturation in their journey through samsara. However, a more searching examination reveals that all states of existence in samsara, even the highest heavens, are lacking in genuine worth; for they are all impermanent, without any lasting substance, incapable of giving complete and final satisfaction. Thus the disciple of mature faculties, who has been prepared sufficiently by previous experience by previous experience in the world, does not long even for rebirth among the gods (vv. 186-187).
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

Having understood that all conditioned things are intrinsically unsatisfactory and fraught with danger, the mature disciple aspires instead for deliverance from the ever-repeating round of rebirths. This is the ultimate goal to which the Buddha points, as the immediate aim for those of developed spiritual faculties and also as the long-term ideal for those who still need further maturation: Nibbana, the Deathless, the unconditioned state where there is no more birth, aging and death, and thus no more suffering.

The third level of instruction found in the Dhammapada sketches the theoretical framework for the aspiration for final liberation and lays down guidelines pertaining to the practical discipline that can bring this aspiration to fulfillment. The theoretical framework is supplied by the teaching of the Four Noble Truths, which the Dhammapada calls the best of all truths (v. 273): suffering, the origin of suffering, the cessation of suffering, and the Noble Eightfold Path leading to the cessation of suffering. The four truths all centre around the problem of //dukkha// or suffering, and the Dhammapada teaches us that //dukkha// is not to be understood only as experienced pain and sorrow but more widely as the pervasive inadequacy and wretchedness of everything conditioned: "There is no ill like the aggregates of existence; all conditioned things are suffering; conditioned things are the worst suffering (vv. 202, 278, 203). The second truth points out that the cause of suffering is craving, the yearning for pleasure, possessions and being which drives us through the round of rebirths, bringing along sorrow, anxiety and despair. The Dhammapada devotes an entire chapter (ch. 24) to the theme of craving, and the message of this chapter is clear: so long as even the subtlest thread of craving remains in the mind, we are not beyond danger of being swept away by the terrible flood of existence. The third noble truth spells out the goal of the Buddha's teaching: to gain release from suffering, to escape the flood of existence, craving must be destroyed down to its subtlest depths. And the fourth noble truth prescribes the means to gain release, the Noble Eightfold Path, which again is the focus of an entire chapter (ch. 20).

At the third level of instruction a shift in the practical teaching of the Dhammapada takes place, corresponding to the shift in doctrine from the principles of kamma and rebirth to the Four Noble Truths. The stress now no longer falls on basic morality and purified states of mind as a highway to more favourable planes of rebirth. Instead it falls on the cultivation of the Noble Eightfold Path as the means to destroy craving and thus break free from the entire process of rebirth itself. The Dhammapada declares that the eightfold path is the only way to deliverance from suffering (v. 274). Its says this, not as a fixed dogma, but because full release from suffering comes from the purification of wisdom, and this path alone, with its stress on right view and the cultivation of insight, leads to fully purified wisdom, to complete understanding of liberating truth. The Dhammapada states that those who tread the path will come to know the Four Noble Truths, and having gained this wisdom, they will end all suffering. The Buddha assures us that by walking the path we will bewilder Mara, pull out the thorn of lust, and escape from suffering. But he also cautions us about our own responsibility: we ourselves must make the effort, for the Buddhas only point out the way (vv. 275, 276).

In principle the practice of the Noble Eightfold Path is open to people in any walk of life, householders as well as monks and nuns. However, application to the development of the path is most feasible for those who have relinquished all worldly concerns in order to devote themselves fully to living the holy life. For conduct to be completely purified, for the mind to be trained in concentration and insight, the adoption of a different lifestyle becomes advisable, one which minimizes distractions and stimulants to craving and orders all activities around the aim of liberation. Thus the Buddha established the Sangha, the Order of bhikkhus and bhikkhunis, as the field of training for those ready to devote themselves fully to the practice of the path.

In the Dhammapada we find the call to the monastic life resounding throughout. The entry way to the monastic life is an act of radical renunciation spurred on by our confrontation with suffering, particularly by our recognition of our inevitable mortality. The Dhammapada teaches that just as a cowherd drives the cattle to pasture, so old age and death drive living beings from life to life (v. 135). There is no place in the world where one can escape death, for death is stamped into the very substance of our being (v. 128). The body is a painted mirage in which there is nothing lasting or stable; it is a mass of sores, a nest of disease, which breaks up and ends in death; it is a city built of bones containing within itself decay and death; the foolish are attached to it, but the wise, having seen that the body ends as a corpse, lose all delight in mundane joys (vv. 146-150).

Having recognized the transience and hidden misery of mundane life, the thoughtful break the ties of family and social relationships, abandon their homes and sensual pleasures, and enter upon the state of homelessness: "Like swans that abandon the lake, they leave home after home behind... Having gone from home to homelessness, they delight in detachment so difficult to enjoy" (vv. 91, 87). Withdrawn to silent and secluded places, the renunciants seek out the company of wise instructors, who point out their faults, who admonish and instruct them and shield them from wrong, who show them the right path (vv. 76-78, 208). Under their guidance, they live by the rules of the monastic order, content with the simplest material requisites, moderate in eating, practicing patience and forbearance, devoted to meditation (vv. 184-185). Having learned to still the restless waves of thought and to gain one-pointed concentration, they go on to contemplate the arising and falling away of all formations: "The monk who has retired to a solitary abode and calmed the mind, comprehends the Dhamma with insight, and there arises in him a delight that transcends all human delights. Whenever he sees with insight the rise and fall of the aggregates, he is full of joy and happiness (vv. 373, 374).

The life of meditation reaches its peak in the development of insight, and the Dhammapada succinctly enunciates the principles to be seen with the wisdom of insight: "All conditioned things are impermanent ... All conditioned things are suffering ... All things are not self. When one sees this with wisdom, then one turns away from suffering. This is the path of purification" (vv. 277-279). When these truths are penetrated by direct vision, the fetters of attachment break asunder, and the disciple rises through successive stages of realization to the attainment of full liberation.

4. The Highest Goal

The fourth level of teaching in the Dhammapada does not reveal any new principles of doctrine or approach to practice. This level shows us, rather, the fruit of the third level. The third level exposes the path to the highest goal, the way to break free from all bondage and suffering and to win the supreme peace of Nibbana. The fourth level is a celebration and acclamation of those who have gained the fruits of the path and won the final goal.

The stages of definite attainment along the way to Nibbana are enumerated in the Pali Canon as four: stream-entry, when one enters irreversibly upon the path to liberation; once-returning, when one is assured that one will return to the sense sphere of existence only one more time; non-returning, when one will never return to the sense sphere at all but will take a spontaneous birth in a celestial plane and there reach the end of suffering; and Arahantship, the stage of full liberation here and now. Although the Dhammapada contains several verses referring to those on the lower stages of attainment, its primary emphasis is on the individual who has reached the fourth and final fruit of liberation, the Arahant, and the picture it gives us of the Arahant is stirring and inspiring.

The Arahant is depicted in two full chapters: in chapter 7 under his own name and in chapter 26, the last chapter, under the name "Brahmana," the holy man. We are told that the Arahant is no longer troubled by the fever of the passions; he is sorrowless and wholly set free; he has broken all ties. His taints are destroyed: he is not attached to food; his field is the void and unconditioned freedom. For ordinary worldlings the Arahant is incomprehensible: his path cannot be traced, like that of birds in the sky. He has transcended all obstacles, passed beyond sorrow and lamentation, become peaceful and fearless. He is free from anger, devout, virtuous, without craving, self-subdued. He has profound knowledge and wisdom; he is skilled in discriminating the right path and the wrong path; he has reached the highest goal. He is friendly amidst the hostile, peaceful amidst the violent, and unattached amidst the attached.

In this very life the Arahant has realized the end of suffering, laying down the burden of the five aggregates. He has transcended the ties of both merit and demerit; he is sorrowless, stainless and pure; he is free from attachment and has plunged into the Deathless. Like the moon he is spotless and pure, serene and clear. He has cast off all human bonds and transcended all celestial bonds; he has gotten rid of the substrata of existence and conquered all worlds. He knows the death and rebirth of beings; he is totally detached, blessed and enlightened. No gods, angels or human beings can find his tracks, for he clings to nothing, has no attachment, holds to nothing. He has reached the end of births, attained the perfection of insight, and reached the summit of spiritual excellence. Bearing his last body, perfectly at peace, the Arahant is the living demonstration of the truth of the Dhamma. By his own example he shows that it is possible to free oneself from the stains of greed, hatred and delusion, to rise above suffering, and to win Nibbana in this very life.

The Arahant ideal reaches its optimal exemplification in the first and highest of the Arahants, the Buddha, and the Dhammapada makes a number of important pronouncements about the Master. The Buddha is the supreme teacher who depends on no one else for guidance, who has reached perfect enlightenment through his own self-evolved wisdom (v. 353). He is the giver of refuge and is himself the first of the three refuges; those who take refuge in the Buddha, his Doctrine, and his Order are released from all suffering, after seeing with proper wisdom the Four Noble Truths (vv.190-192). The Buddha's attainment of perfect enlightenment elevates him to a level far above that of common humanity: the Enlightened One is trackless, of limitless range, free from worldliness, the conqueror of all, the knower of all, in all things untainted (vv. 179, 180, 353). The sun shines by day, the moon shines by night, the warrior shines in his armour, the brahmin shines in meditation, but the Buddha, we are told, shines resplendent all day and all night (v. 387).

* * *

This will complete our discussion of the four basic levels of instruction found in the Dhammapada. Interwoven with the verses pertaining to these four main levels, there runs throughout the Dhammapada a large number of verses that cannot be tied down exclusively to any single level but have a wider application. These verses sketch for us the world view of early Buddhism and its distinctive insights into human existence. Fundamental to this world view, as it emerges from the text, is the inescapable duality of human life. Man walks a delicate balance between good and evil, purity and defilement, progress and decline; he seeks happiness, he fears suffering, loss and death. We are free to choose between good and evil, and must bear full responsibility for our decisions. Again and again the Dhammapada sounds this challenge to human freedom: we are the makers and masters of ourselves, the protectors or destroyers of ourselves, we are our own saviours and there is no one else who can save us (vv. 160, 165, 380). Even the Buddha can only indicate the path to deliverance; the work of treading it lies with the disciple (vv. 275- 276). In the end we must choose between the way that leads back into the world, to the round of becoming, and the way that leads out of the world, to Nibbana. And though this last course is extremely difficult, the voice of the Buddha speaks words of assurance confirming that it can be done, that it lies within our power to overcome all barriers and to triumph even over death itself.

The chief role in achieving progress in all spheres, the Dhammapada states, is played by the mind. The Dhammdapada opens with a clear assertion that the mind is the forerunner of all that we are, the maker of our character, the creator of our destiny. The entire Buddhist discipline, from basic morality to the attainment of Arahantship, hinges upon training the mind. A wrongly directed mind brings greater harm than any enemy; a rightly directed mind brings greater good than any relative or friend (vv. 42-43). The mind is unruly, fickle difficult to subdue, but by effort, mindfulness and self-discipline, one can master the mind, escape the flood of passions, and find "an island which no flood can overwhelm" (v. 25). The person who conquers himself, the victor over his own mind, achieves a conquest that can never be undone, a victory greater than that of the mightiest warriors (vv. 103-105).

What is needed most to train and subdue the mind, according to the Dhammapada, is a quality called heedfulness (//appamada//). Heedfulness combines critical self-awareness and unremitting energy in a process of constant self-observation in order to detect and expel the defilements whenever they seek an opportunity to come to the surface. In a world where we have no saviour except ourselves, and where the means to deliverance lies in mental purification, heedfulness becomes the crucial factor for ensuring that we keep straight to the path of training without deviating due to the seductive lure of sense pleasures or the stagnating influences of laziness and complacency. The Buddha declares that heedfulness is the path to the Deathless, and heedlessness the path to death. The wise who understand this distinction abide in heedfulness and attain Nibbana, "the incomparable freedom from bondage" (vv. 21-23).

* * * * * * * *

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage.

Write to:

The Hony. Secretary
BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka

or

The Barre Center for Buddhist Studies
Lockwood Road
Barre, MA 01005 USA
Tel: (508) 355-2347

* * * * * * * *

DISTRIBUTION AGREEMENT
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

TITLE OF WORK: The Living Message of the Dhammapada (Bodhi Leaves #B129)
FILENAME: BODHI129.ZIP
AUTHOR: Bhikkhu Bodhi
AUTHOR'S ADDRESS: c/o Buddhist Publication Society
PUBLISHER'S ADDRESS: Buddhist Publication Society
P.O. Box 61
54, Sangharaja Mawatha
Kandy, Sri Lanka
~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~~

COPYRIGHT HOLDER: Buddhist Publication Society (1993)
DATE OF PUBLICATION: 1993
RIGHTS AND RESTRICTIONS: See paragraph below.
DATE OF DHARMANET DISTRIBUTION: July 1995
ORIGIN SITE: Access to Insight BBS, Pepperell MA * (508) 433-5847 (96:903/1)

The copyright holder retains all rights to this work and hereby grants electronic distribution rights to DharmaNet International. This work may be freely copied and redistributed electronically, provided that the file contents (including this Agreement) are not altered in any way and that it is distributed at no cost to the recipient. You may make printed copies of this work for your personal use; further distribution of printed copies requires permission from the copyright holder. If this work is used by a teacher in a class, or is quoted in a review, the publisher shall be notified of such use. See the title page of this work for any additional rights and restrictions that may apply.

It is the spirit of dana, freely offered generosity, which has kept the entire Buddhist tradition alive for more than 2,500 years. If you find this work of value, please consider sending a donation to the author or publisher, so that these works may continue to be made available. May your generosity contribute to the happiness of all beings everywhere.

DharmaNet International, P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley, CA 94704-4951

[end]

ÉÍÍÍ

Looking at this in terms of the time of the Buddha's appearance, the period around the fifth and sixth centuries B.C. saw in many parts of the world an intellectual awakening with a religio-cultural vibrancy. Teachings of Confucius and Lao tze held sway in China, influencing the lives of the people to a greater or lesser degree. Very few, or hardly any of these, except Buddhism, continue to guide the lives of the people of the world today. Time has swallowed up nearly every one of them. It shall be our endeavour today to reflect on the magnitude of this influence of Buddhism over our contemporary human society.

Starting at the nearer end of history, at the tail end of the twentieth century, i.e.nearly twentyfive centuries after the birth of the Buddha in Lumbini and the emergence of Buddhism thirtyfive years after that event, we have a proud record to place before the world. Comparable to Neil Armstrong's vision of this planet from the moon, there are many thinkers and philosophers of the world today who as non-Indians, viewing Buddhism completely from outside, make a universal appraisal, i.e. an assessment regarding the universal applicability, of Buddhism and make it known to the world for the good of mankind.

More than thirteen years ago, a high-ranking official of the UNESCO, the late Dr.Raphaelo M. Salas of the Philipines, who was the population expert at the United Nations, in a Special Convocation address at the University of Colombo in 1979, appealed to the people of Sri Lanka to offer to the world as a gift for the twentyfirst century, this special message of Buddhism. It runs as

He who overcomes in this world this base and unruly craving, from him all sorrows fall away like drops of water from a lotus leaf.

Referring to the Buddha as a wise old man of India, he was quoting verse no.336 of the Dhammapada which runs as follows.

Yo c'etam sahate jammim tanham loke duraccayam

sokƒ tamhƒ papatanti udabind–'va pokkharƒ

Buddhism ranks high as a religion in the world today because of its highly efficient salvation scheme. There are two unique features which account for this success. Via this system of Buddhist thinking and living, man is enabled to taste and partake of this transcendental bliss of release,here and now: dittheva dhamme sayam abhi¤¤ƒ sacchikatvƒ (M.I.35). An arhant, i.e. a fully liberated person according to Buddhism, partakes of the bliss of nirvƒna in this very life. He is a jŒvan mukta in other words, and is seen rejoicing over his release. Behold here Thera Angulimala, giving expression to such joy : Atha kho ƒyasmƒ angulimƒlo rahogato patisallƒno vimuttisukham patisamvedŒ tƒyam velƒyam imam udƒnam udƒnesi (M.II.104). As one who has attained the goal of his striving in this very existence (Bhikkhu araham khŒnƒsavo anuppattasadattho (M.I.4) the arhant has terminated the painful birth and death process of samsƒra. This is referred to in Pali as khŒnƒ jƒti as well as parikkhŒnabhavasamyojano (ibid.). Such a person is aware of his achievement and exults over it: vimuttasmim vimuttan'ti ¤ƒnam hoti... nƒparam itthattayƒ'ti pajƒnƒti (M.I.297). For him, it is no leap in the dark. Secondly, this psycho-ethical way of life-correction in pursuit of nirvƒna makes the world around us a richer and happier place for man and animals to live in. How gloriously true then is the statement that the birth of Buddhas is bliss to the world: sukho buddhƒnam uppƒdo (Dhp.v.194) ? The word of the Buddhas, i.e. the teachings of Buddhism, re-sets as it were, the tempo of the world. The world is thereby made a richer and happier place. ^page; The truth of this statement that the birth of Buddhas is bliss to the world perhaps never came out in such sharp focus as in Joseph Goldstein's 1991-92 Wit Lectures delivered at the Divinity School of the Harvard University. Understanding Buddhism, and with a total commitment to it, Goldstein has, before learned audiences in the west, given eloquent expression to the worth of Buddhism in the world today. The Harvard Divinity Bulletin (Harvard University - The Divinity School. 1992. Volume 21 Number 3) reporting the event thus, puts it beautifully.

In his first lecture, " Transforming the Mind, Healing the World, " Goldstein discussed what he called a triangle of three spiritual values: love, compassion and wisdom. He explained that it is possible to attain the state of loving kindness, known as mettƒ in Pali or maitrŒ in Sanskrit, which is free from the desire and attachment that characterize love as we usually understand it. When we are filled with loving kindness, we wish others to be happy, at peace, and free from suffering, without any expectation of return or even of acknowledgment.

Here we see Goldstein as a conveyer of a message to the world and in it we see his commitment to Buddhism. What strikes us most here is Goldstein's awareness as to what truly is the message of Buddhism. That Buddhism, through its primary salvific message, makes better men of men and makes the world a happier and much more wholesome place to live in. And in the process, the goal of Buddhism is attained. Meet Goldstein again at his second lecture and see him reported in this manner in the Harvard Divinity Bulletin quoted earlier.

The Buddha talked of three trainings on the path: morality, concentration and mindful awareness, and wisdom. Morality is the commitment to non-harming, Goldstein said, and we can train ourselves in it through several methods. One is to be aware of the effect of our actions on our minds.

We should note here the charm with which Goldstein brings before a competitively aggressive world the most profound teachings of Buddhism with a down-to-earth simplicity that grips our minds. He has immersed us in the doctrine of threefold training or tisso sikkhƒ of sŒla, samƒdhi and pa¤¤ƒ. And he has challengingly brought us face to face with the doctrine of karma, in speaking of `the effect of our actions on our minds'. We cannot but admire his keenly sensitive follow up which he does with perfect coherence. Here it is.

The five Buddhist precepts also foster moral development:

not killing, not stealing, not committing sexual misconduct, not using wrong speech, and not taking intoxicants that confuse the mind. Goldstein emphasized the rewards that can come out of attention to each precept. For example, watching our own speech can disclose how much of what we say is judgmental both of ourselves and of others. Training in morality is a practice, he said and is the foundation of a spiritual life. "Our practice is not to follow the heart, it is to train the heart," he quoted a well known aphorism.

We wish to state here that we can trace back this observation of Goldstein to a remark of Venerable Sariputta made to Venerable Moggallana, describing a Buddhist disciple whom he considers to be a distinguished person of very high calibre.

> Idh'ƒvuso Moggallƒna bhikkhu cittam vasam vatteti no ca cittassa vasena vattati... Evarupena kho ƒvuso Moggallƒna bhikkhunƒ Gosingasƒlavanam sobheyyƒ'ti.
>
> Mahagosingasutta M.I.214

> O Moggallana, herein a monk keeps his mind under control. He is not under the control of the mind. Such a monk, O Moggallana, lends distinction to this Sala Grove of Gosinga.

I am convinced that while you hear me quote from Goldstein's lectures you would be agreeing with the Divinity School Bulletin's observations about the lecturer himself.

> Goldstein's personal presence embodies the tranquility and peace that vipassanƒ promises.

We have indeed no doubt about this comment. Bhƒvanƒ of Buddhism is a living process of culture and a person who has taken to it in earnest does reflect it in his own life.

Now as I stand before you in this sacred city of Baranasi my mind goes back to beyond twentyfive centuries of ancient history. The Buddha, in his enlightenment, transcended the world and rose above it - tinno loke visattikam (M.I.175). This means that he freed himself from the stranglehold of the world, the world that taints and corrupts : anƒpƒthagato bhikkhave pƒpimato (ibid.). This he did by his own personal grasp of the nature of the world, that is the nature of the beings therein, one and all including himself. He knows why they are in samsƒra, in this cycle of births and deaths and why they continue to do so.

This knowledge he reveals to us in his basic teachings of the Four Noble Truths and the Chain of Dependent Origination which are known to all Buddhists under the name of caturƒrya satya and pratŒtya samutpƒda. The Buddha's salvific way is a challenge of the world, a challenge of its nature, and therefore his teachings came to be called `moving against the current': patisotƒgami. And for this same reason, he is said to have been very reticent to deliver his message to a world of shallow interests and petty quarrelsomeness. Such worldlings would find it difficult to grasp my teachings well, he argued: rƒgadosaparetehi nƒyam dhammo susambudho (M.I.168). Arguing further, he added that the veil of ignorance (avijjƒ) which prevents people from seeing the truth must be torn asunder as is implied in statements like avijjam dƒlayissami (Thag.v.544) and tamokkhandho padƒlito (S.I.130). He left the people of the world completely free to accept his teachings on their own choice. Compulsion was not within the framework of his thinking. He prefaced his proclamation with these words:

> `Open for them are the doors to deathlessness. They who have ears to hear, let them put forth faith'.

This idea is found expressed in Pali as > Apƒrutƒ tesam amatassa dvƒrƒ ye sotavanto pamu¤cantu saddham

> (M.I.169)

Another characteristic feature of the teachings of the Buddha that went along with this is that the Buddha's dhamma is for those who have the capacity to stop and think, for those endowed with pa¤¤ƒ: pa¤¤avatƒyam dhammo no duppa¤¤assa (A.IV.229). For the faculty of pa¤¤ƒ or wisdom is born of clear logical thinking. Such wisdom must be gradually built up and acquired. It is nurtured through faith and trust (saddhƒ), zealous application (viriya), mindful culture (sati) and complete mastery over the mind as a major component of life (samƒdhi). These are among the faculties latent in us (pa¤ca indriya) which are to be developed and turned into strengths (pa¤ca bala) for the production of the final tool of wisdom (pa¤¤ƒ) which is indispensable for the acquisition of liberation. The Buddha himself declares that he who does not get beyond the preliminary stage of faith and trust (saddhƒ), gathers no more than the peripheral benefit of birth in a happy state of existence or sagga.

> yesam mayi saddhƒmattam pemamattam sabbe te saggaparƒyanƒ. Alagadd–pamasutta
> M.I.142

In the eyes of some hasty critics this observation would appear to be a very severe acid test at the entry point to the religion of the Buddha. But a sobre analysis and judgement would reveal that the gradually acquired and developed states like saddhƒ, viriya, sati and samƒdhi are pre-requisites which finally assure the acquisition of pa¤¤ƒ, almost at the final stage of the liberation process. For there is no release in the absence of pa¤¤ƒ. It is by virtue of this gradual development process, from the grosser to the finer, that the entire liberation process of Buddhism has come to be called the GRADUAL WAY : anupubbasikkhƒ anupubbakiriyƒ anupubbapatipadƒ (M.I.479f.). The KŒtƒgiri sutta where this idea is beautifully clarified says that the acquisition of this wisdom does not take place with a bang, as it were, at the very commencement of the liberation process.

> Nƒhamƒ bhikkhave ƒdikeneva a¤¤ƒrƒdhanam vadƒmi.
> Api ca bhikkhave anupubbasikkhƒ anupubbakiriyƒ

anupubbapatipadƒ a¤¤ƒrƒdhanƒ hoti. (M.I.479 f.)

Papa¤cas–danŒ, the Commentary of Buddhaghosa Thera on the Majjhima Nikƒya, explaining this further, says that one does not get to the state of arhant, i.e. acquire that wisdom at the very first instance like the movement of a frog leaping from one place to another. These words are placed in the mouth of the Buddha himself in this manner.

> Aham bhikkhave pathamam eva mand–kassa uppatitvƒ gamanam viya a¤¤ƒrƒdhanam arahatte patitthƒnam na vadƒmi. (MA.III.193)

The presentaion in this manner of the gaining of wisdom for final release in Buddhism (note pa¤¤ƒya parisujjhati. Sn.v.184 and pa¤¤ƒya c'assa disvƒ ƒsavƒ parikkhŒnƒ honti. M.I.477) gives it an acquirability which brings it within the reach of every being who even in a slow process spread through a shorter or a longer period of time could build for himself that watch-tower of wisdom from where he would be enabled to scan the entire horizon of life. This situation is clearly envisaged in Buddhist texts. Dhammapada verse no.28 puts it as > Pamƒdam appamƒdena yadƒ nudati pandito pa¤¤ƒpƒsƒdamƒruyha asoko sokinim pajam pabbatattho'va bhummatthe dhŒro bƒle avekkhati.

> A wise man rids himself of slackness and heedlessness through diligent application. Such a man of strength (dhŒro) who is freed from grief, ascends the Mansion of Wisdom, and beholds the grieving low-quality worldlings, like a man on a cliff top who sees the men on the ground below.

This vision of the world referred to here is obviously the most triumphant moment in the spiritual quest of Buddhism. Being a personal achievement within oneself, it is not only gloriously attractive and blissful, but verifiably attainable here and now (not being a state to be expected in a life beyond the present), but only with the proviso of diligent application (pamƒdam appamƒdena) as the Dhammapada verse quoted above insists.

The reference to it in the Buddha's own autobiographical sutta, Ariyapariyesana, is even more vivid.

> Sele yathƒ pabbatamuddhanitthito yathƒ'pi passe janatam > samantato tath–pamam dhammamayam sumedha > pƒsƒdamƒruyha samantacakkhu sokƒvatinnam janatam > apetasoko avekkhassu jƒtijarƒbhibh–tam. (M.I.168)

Just as a man perched high on a cliff top sees the people all around him, so may you, O Lord, as the all-seeing wise one ascend the Mansion of Truth (dhammamayam pƒsƒdam), and freed as you are from all grief, behold the people who are plunged in sorrow, being tormented by birth and decay.

Such a heart-warming concept of a compassionate Buddha who looks upon mankind with pity for their suffering, formulated and presented by Mahƒ Brahmƒ as is alleged (see Ariyapariyesana sutta M.I.168), apparently gained wide popularity. The Bodirƒjakumƒra sutta (M.II.91-97) refers to this same incident and this same concept of the compassionate Buddha via a report said to have been made by the Buddha himself.

I venture to suggest here that this very picture of an All-seeing Compassionate Lord conjures up before our eyes the forerunner of the Bodhisattva Avalokitesvara who emerges at a later date in the SaddharmapundarŒka S–tra (Ch.xxiv. Smantamukhaparivartah) as the harbinger of the Mahayana doctrine of salvation by faith. Note here the Chinese rendering of this name Avalokitesvara as Kuan Yin : the Seeing Lord (the word being broken as avalokita + Œsvara). The Chinese also have a rendering Kuan Shih Yin which could be translated as the Lord who sees and hears (the supplications of the grieving world). Here they apparently break the word as avalokita + svara.

It is interesting to note what Ludwig Bachhofer in his A Short History of Chinese Art (1944) says of these Kuan Yin statues of China (Plates 1 & 2).

> All these things create the illusion that Kuan Yin in flesh and blood has descended to hear the plights of the worried. A few words must be said about the expression. Though all these Kuan Yins show compassion and sympathy, every one of them seems to differ from the other in intelligence and temperament... They are no longer variants of a single type as were the Bodhisattvas of classic times.

The Japanese, picking up the more correct rendering Kuan Yin, have it as Kannon/Kwannon. We should also note here such usages as Kuze Kannon (World-saving Kannon) (Plates 3 & 4), Koyasu Kannon or Kannon of Easy Deliverance i.e. Kuan Yin as a divinity presiding over pregnancy as well as safe and easy delivery of babies at birth, sitting at times with a baby in her hands (See Gods of Northern Buddhism - Alice Getty, p 96) and Kudara Kannon, the most delightfully artistic statue of Kuan Yin from Korea (Plate 5). What is most remarkable here is the gradual evolution from a once vigorous male divinity of the Indian and Central Asian regions into a very graceful lady-like divinity in China and Japan. This new mother-like concept of the divinity has now fittingly come to be called the Goddess of Mercy. In the earlier male form of the divinity there was apparently the need for him to possess a thousand eyes in order to be the All-seeing One. Here we should remind ourselves that the Ariyapariyesana sutta, or more precisely Brahmƒ Sahampati in the Ariyapariyesana sutta, says that the Buddha is samantacakkhu or has eyes on all sides. This, in turn, led to the development of a thousand arms for Avalokitesvara in the palms of which those eyes came to be conveniently located (Plate 6). Kuan Yin's popularity (so also of Kannon) in the Far East is all too well known, particularly to a distinguished audience like you, to need further elaboration.

Thus Buddhism from its earliest phase, with its message of love and concern for the unenlightened and underprivileged beings of the world, with also the hint of benevolently looking upon them (avekkhassu jƒtijarƒbhibh–tam) seems to have carried with it an open invitation to all those who needed to be cared and loved and looked after, without any discrimination of being affluent or elite, of being privileged or outcast, or being of the chosen people or not. There was in the words of the Buddha, a message and comfort for everyone, to each according to his need. Angulimala, as the conceited brigand needed, in his own interest, to have his pride crushed (M.II.97-100). Patacara had to be told, even in a circuitous way, of the reality of death, particularly when it happened to be that of her beloved first born child (Thig.vv.127-132). Sunita who was despised on account of being a municipal scavenger, carrying the ^page; city's dirt-load on a pole on his shoulder, found admission into the monastic order of the Buddha without any reservations. He found therein the solace of his life (Thag.vv.620-631). So were many others in the degraded grades of prostitutes and courtezans. Little wonder then about the wide popularity of Buddhism among all ranks of human society right from its inception, in all places where Buddhism found its way.

Inspite of this inherent vigour and vitality of Buddhism, the few centuries which preceded the Asokan era had witnessed a lamentable degree of deterioration of the Buddhist dispensation. But very fortunately for all mankind, enough was still left in India for Asoka to rediscover the whole of true Buddhism, in spirit and letter, in theory and practice. The renowned third Buddhist Council of Pataliputra, convened by him under the able direction and guidance of Thera Moggaliputta Tissa, preserved for posterity the authentic Buddhist texts of the Canon, including the Abhidhamma. Almost under imperial command, he ordered a re-institution of the activities of the Buddhist Sangha, including the observance of the uposatha. Combining his devotion to Buddhism and his dedication and determination to propagate it everywhere in the world with his politics and his diplomacy, he achieved a victory unparalleled anywhere in history. Of this,

Shri Nehru says the following in his Discovery of India.

His messengers and ambassadors went to Syria, Egypt, Macedonia, Cyrene, and Epirus, conveying his greeting and Buddha's message. They went to Central Asia and to Burma and Siam and he sent his own son and daughter, Mahendra and Sanghamitra, to Ceylon in the south. Everywhere an appeal was made to the mind and the heart; there was no force or compulsion. Ardent Buddhist as he was, he showed respect and consideration for all other faiths...

Buddhism spread rapidly in India from Kashmir to Ceylon. It penetrated into Nepal and later reached Tibet and China and Mongolia. In India, one of the consequences of this was the growth of vegetarianism and abstention from alchoholic drinks. Till then both Brahmins and Ksatriyas often ate meat and drank wine. Animal sacrifice was forbidden. Discovery of India p.123.

Thanks to the missionary zeal of Asoka to which Shri Nehru refers here and the consequent spread of Buddhism outside India, both in eastern and western directions, Buddhism reached almost the shores of the Caspian Sea. Here it may well be to recall what Abu'l - Rayhan Muhammad al Bir–ni said nearly a thousand years ago about the success of Buddhism in that region.

In former times Khorasan, Persia, Iraq, Mosul, the country up to the frontier of Syria, was Buddhistic, but then Zarathustra went forth from Ždharbƒyjƒn and preached Magism in Balkh (Baktra)... The succeeding kings made their religion (i.e. Zoroastrianism) the obligatory state religion of Persia and Iraq. In consequence, the Buddhists were banished from those countries and had to emigrate to the countries east of Balkh. B.A.Litvinsky in Encyclopaedia of Buddhism. Vol.IV.Fasc.I.p.21.

More specifically about Buddhism's contribution to early Iranian culture note what historians of today , independently have to say.

In the words of Barthold, " neither the Sassanian state nor its official religion, Zoroastrianism, ever comprised the entire Iranian world. In the later-period cultural life of the Iranian world, Buddhist Iran played a part of no less importance than Zoroastrian Iran." Recent archaeological discoveries in Western Turkestan lend a truly prophetic ring to these words. Ibid.p.51

As proof of the popularity, prestige and power of Buddhism in western Asia around the beginning of the Christian era there stand massive monuments in stone, sculptures showing incidents from the life of the Buddha etc. Coming from Shotorak in Afghanistan and dating back to the third century A.D. is an admirably touching scene of the historical Buddha Gotama as ascetic Sumedha in one of his earlier births, seeking an assurance from the very ancient Buddha DŒpamkara about his own attainment of Buddhahood at a later date (Plate 7. See also Jataka Vol.1 p.15) This single stone carving belonging to such an early date could be declared a volume of history on the development of Buddhist civilization and culture. It in indeed a thesis on Buddhalogy. So is the Buddha in the Miracles of Sravasti from Paitava in Afghanistan (Plate 8). Equally formidable is the giant Buddha statue of Bamian standing at 175 feet in height (Plate 9). Belonging to this same later period of 6th - 7th centuries are also excellent remains of Buddhist paintings of Bodhisattvas from places like Bamian, both in Iranian style and in Indo - Chinese style of Central Asia (Plate 10). + About Asoka's leanings on Buddhism and his deep convictions regarding its teachings, we entertain no doubts. We are inclined to believe that he was an ardent Buddhist, as Shri Nehru puts it. Viewing it from Sri Lanka's end, see how the Mahavamsa, our Grand Chronicle, records it. Put in the mouth of Asoka himself, it reads as follows.

> I have taken refuge in the Buddha, his Doctrine and his Order. I have declared myself a lay-disciple in the religion of the Sakya's son; seek then even thou, O best of men, converting thy mind with believing heart refuge in these best of gems. Mahƒvamsa XI.vv.34-35

Asoka's remarkable turn from war to peace must certainly be sought here. Killing for the propagation of religions or expansion of kingdoms must come to an end today, today itself and not tomorrow. And after the bitter lessons of war, even from more recent history including Hiroshima, we are confident that the twentyfirst century would crown Asoka once more, as a great monarch with great sensitivity to lessons learnt through experience of life. If men of the world of today have anything which may be called sense or sanity, twenty centuries of world history should be rich enough to teach them that men and animals of the world are not to be staked to please and appease hungry and angry gods above, including those raised to divinity in more recent times. Destruction in the name of religious or political ideologies or racial supremacies has definitely to be a thing of the stupid past.

Before I bring this address to a close today, I owe it as a duty to say also a few words in appreciation of the great service renderd to the cause of Buddhism by the Mahabodhi Society of India and the persons connected with it. Buddhists all over the world must legitimately feel proud to have been able to witness the centenary celebrations of the Mahabodhi Society, a hundred years of fruitful existence. The Sambhasa, the Centenary Commemorative Volume brought out on this occasion is monumental not only in terms of the scholarship it reflects but also in terms of the immense unstinted service of devoted men which has spread through a hundred years. Both the scholars for their contribution and the editorial staff for their ceaseless work must be lauded and congratulated. It would be correct to say that it has remained the main beacon of light in Mahabodhi Society's activities. What the Mahabodhi has retrieved and restored in terms of the heritage of Buddhism is inestimable.

We should also at this stage remember how under the guidance and inspiration of Buddhist thinking, the late Dr. Ambedkar worked ceaselessly in the area of social reform in India. Putting to the fore, as it were, the Buddhist norm of na jacƒ vasalo hoti na jacƒ hoti brƒhmano, namely that it is not by birth that a man becomes high or low in social esteem, Dr. Ambedkar stood up to fight for the redemption of his own caste whose ill-treatment in India, which even social decency of the world today would condemn in no uncertain terms. Let alone any other norm of judgement. We feel legitimately proud that the Mahabodhi Society provided Dr. Ambedkar the necessary battlement for his crusade.

As for the person behind it, Anagarika Dharmapala, all that we need to say is that his name is indelibly carved in the history of the Buddhist world. A hundred years ago, the visit of a young Sri Lankan at the age of twentyseven saw the birth of the Mahabodhi in India. Today, a hundred years later, I come to you at the age of seventytwo, a much older man, to reiterate the glory of Buddhism in the twentyfirst century.

I have always held that the greatest achievement in the life of Anagarika Dharmapala was his final renunciation to become the Buddha's true sr*f*vaka, Bhiksu Devamitra. And today, this indeed is the happiest moment of my life to have done exactly as he did, in my renunciation of the world and to stand before you in this very place where he stood and plead for a respread of Buddhist values in the world of the twentyfirst century.

Venerable Professor Dhammavih*f*ri
Siri Vajiranana Dharm*f*yatanaya
Maharagama, Sri Lanka

METTA
The Philosophy and Practice of Universal Love

by Acharya Buddharakkhita

The Wheel Publication No. 365/366

ISBN 955-24-0036-8

Copyright 1989 by Acharya Buddharakkhita

BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
KANDY SRI LANKA

* * *

DharmaNet Edition 1995

Transcription & Proofreading: Jane Yudelman
Formatting: John Bullitt

This electronic edition is offered for free distribution
via DharmaNet by arrangement with the publisher.

DharmaNet International
P.O. Box 4951, Berkeley CA 94704-4951

* * * * * * * *

Introduction

The Pali word //metta// is a multi-significant term meaning loving-kindness, friendliness, goodwill, benevolence, fellowship, amity, concord, inoffensiveness and non-violence. The Pali commentators define metta as the strong wish for the welfare and happiness of others (//parahita-parasukha-kamana//). Essentially metta is an altruistic attitude of love and friendliness as distinguished from mere amiability based on self-interest. Through metta one refuses to be offensive and renounces bitterness, resentment and animosity of every kind, developing instead a mind of friendliness, accommodativeness and benevolence which seeks the well-being and happiness of others. True metta is devoid of self-interest. It evokes within a warm-hearted feeling of fellowship, sympathy and love, which grows boundless with practice and overcomes all social, religious, racial, political and economic barriers. Metta is indeed a universal, unselfish and all-embracing love.

Metta makes one a pure font of well-being and safety for others. Just as a mother gives her own life to protect her child, so metta only gives and never wants anything in return. To promote one's own interest is a primordial motivation of human nature. When this urge is transformed into the desire to promote the interest and happiness of others, not only is the basic urge of self-seeking overcome, but the mind becomes universal by identifying its own interest with the interest of all. By making this change one also promotes one's own well-being in the best possible manner.

Metta is the protective and immensely patient attitude of a mother who forbears all difficulties for the sake of her child and ever protects it despite its misbehavior. Metta is also the attitude of a friend who wants to give one the best to further one's well-being. If these qualities of metta are sufficiently cultivated through //metta-bhavana// -- the meditation on universal love -- the result is the acquisition of a tremendous inner power which preserves, protects and heals both oneself and others.

Apart from its higher implications, today metta is a pragmatic necessity. In a world menaced by all kinds of destructiveness, metta in deed, word and thought is the only constructive means to bring concord, peace and mutual understanding. Indeed, metta is the supreme means, for it forms the fundamental tenet of all the higher religions as well as the basis for all benevolent activities intended to promote human well-being.

The present booklet aims at exploring various facets of metta both in theory and in practice. The examination of the doctrinal and ethical side of metta will proceed through a study of the popular //Karaniya Metta Sutta//, the Buddha's "Hymn of Universal Love." In connection with this theme we will also look at several other short texts dealing with metta. The explanation of metta-bhavana, the meditation on universal love, will give the practical directions for developing this type of contemplation as set forth in the main meditation texts of the Theravada Buddhist tradition, the //Visuddhimagga//, the //Vimuttimagga// and the //Patisambhidamagga//.

* * *

1.
The Karaniya Metta Sutta
Hymn of Universal Love

1

Karaniyam atthakusalena
Yan tam santam padam abhisamecca
Sakko uju ca suju ca
Suvaco c'assa mudu anatimani

Who seeks to promote his welfare,
Having glimpsed the state of perfect peace,
Should be able, honest and upright,
Gentle in speech, meek and not proud.

2

Santussako ca subharo ca
Appakicco ca sallahukavutti
Santindriyo ca nipako ca
Appagabbho kulesu ananugiddho

Contented, he ought to be easy to support,
Not over-busy, and simple in living.
Tranquil his senses, let him be prudent,
And not brazen, nor fawning on families.

3

Na ca khuddam samacare kinci
Yena vinnu pare upavadeyyum
Sukhino va khemino hontu
Sabbe satta bhavantu sukhitatta

Also, he must refrain from any action
That gives the wise reason to reprove him.
(Then let him cultivate the thought:)
May all be well and secure,
May all beings be happy!

4

Ye keci panabhut'atthi
Tasa va thavara va anavasesa
Digha va ye mahanta va
Majjhima rassakanukathula

Whatever living creatures there be,
Without exception, weak or strong,

Long, huge or middle-sized,
Or short, minute or bulky,

5

Dittha va yeva adittha
Ye ca dure vasanti avidure
Bhuta va sambhavesi va
Sabbe satta bhavantu sukhitatta

Whether visible or invisible,
And those living far or near,
The born and those seeking birth,
May all beings be happy!

6

Na paro param nikubbetha
Natimannetha katthacinam kanci
Byarosana patighasanna
Nannamannassa dukkham iccheyya

Let none deceive or decry
His fellow anywhere;
Let none wish others harm
In resentment or in hate.

7

Mata yatha niyam puttam
Ayusa ekaputtam anurakkhe
Evampi sabbabhutesu
Manasam bhavaye aparimanam

Just as with her own life

A mother shields from hurt
Her own son, her only child,
Let all-embracing thoughts
For all beings be yours.

8

Mettan ca sabba-lokasmim
Manasam bhavaye aparimanam
Uddham adho ca tiriyanca
Asambadham averam asapattam

Cultivate an all-embracing mind of love
For all throughout the universe,
In all its height, depth and breadth --
Love that is untroubled
And beyond hatred or enmity.

9

Titthan caram nisinno va
Sayano va yavat'assa vigatamiddho
Etam satim adhittheyya
Brahmam etam viharam idhamahu

As you stand, walk, sit or lie,
So long as you are awake, Pursue this awareness with your might:
It is deemed the Divine State here.

10

Ditthinca anupagamma silava
Dassanena sampanno
Kamesu vineyya gedham

Na hi jatu gabbhaseyyam punar eti'ti

Holding no more to wrong beliefs,
With virtue and vision of the ultimate,
And having overcome all sensual desire,
Never in a womb is one born again.

* * *

2. The Background to the Metta Sutta

The historical background which led the Buddha to expound the //Karaniya Metta Sutta// is explained in the commentary written by Acariya Buddhaghosa, who received it from an unbroken line of Elders going back to the days of the Buddha himself.

It is told that five hundred monks received instructions from the Buddha in the particular techniques of meditation suitable to their individual temperaments. They then went to the foothills of the Himalayas to spend the four months of the rains' retreat by living a life of withdrawal and intensive meditation. In those days, a month or two before the rains' retreat started, monks from all parts of the country would assemble wherever the Buddha lived in order to receive direct instruction from the Supreme Master. Then they would go back to their monasteries, forest dwellings or hermitages to make a vigorous attempt at spiritual liberation. This was how these five hundred monks went to the Buddha, who was staying at Savatthi in Jeta's Grove in the monastery built by Anathapindika.

After receiving instructions they went in search of a suitable place, and in the course of their wandering they soon found a beautiful hillock at the foothills of the Himalayas. This, according to the commentary, "appeared like a glittering blue quartz crystal: it was embellished with a cool, dense, green forest grove and a stretch of ground strewn with sand, resembling a pearl net or a silver sheet, and was furnished with a clean spring of cool water." The bhikkhus were captivated by the sight. There were a few villages nearby, and also a small market-town ideal as alms-resort. The monks spent a night in that idyllic grove and the next morning went to the market-town for alms.

The residents there were overjoyed to see the monks, since rarely did a community of monks come to spend the retreat in that part of the Himalayas. These pious devotees fed the monks and begged them to stay on as their guests, promising to build each a hut near the grove on the sandy stretch so that they could spend their days and nights plunged in meditation under the ancient boughs of the majestic trees. The bhikkhus agreed and the devotees of the area soon built little huts in the fringe of the forest and provided each hut with a wooden cot, a stool and pots of water for drinking and washing.

After the monks had settled down contentedly in these huts, each one selected a tree to meditate under, by day and by night. Now it is said that these great trees were inhabited by tree-deities who had a celestial mansion built, appropriately using the trees as the base. These deities, out of reverence for the meditating monks, stood aside with their families. Virtue was revered by all, particularly so by deities, and when the monks sat under the trees, the deities, who were householders, did not like to remain above them. The deities had thought that the monks would remain only for a night or two, and gladly bore the inconvenience. But when day after day passed and the monks still kept occupying the bases of the trees, the deities wondered when they would go away. They were like dispossessed villagers whose houses had been commandeered by the officials of visiting royalty and they kept watching anxiously from a distance, wondering when they would get their houses back.

These dispossessed deities discussed the situation among themselves and decided to frighten the monks away by showing them terrifying objects, by making dreadful noises and by creating a sickening stench.

Accordingly, they materialized all these terrifying conditions and afflicted the monks. The monks soon grew pale and could no longer concentrate on their subjects of meditation. As the deities continued to harass them, they lost even their basic mindfulness, and their brains seemed to become smothered by the oppressing visions, noise and stench. When the monks assembled to wait upon the seniormost Elder of the group, each one recounted his experiences. The Elder suggested: "Let us go, brethren, to the Blessed One and place our problem before him. There are two kinds of rains' retreat -- the early and the late. Though we will be breaking the early one by leaving this place, we can always take upon ourselves the late one after meeting the Lord." The monks agreed and they set out at once, it is said, without even informing the devotees.

By stages they arrived at Savatthi, went to the Blessed One, prostrated at his feet, and related their frightful experiences, pathetically requesting another place. The Buddha, through his supernormal power, scanned the whole of India, but finding no place except the same spot where they could achieve spiritual liberation, told them: "Monks, go back to the same spot! It is only by striving there that you will effect the destruction of inner taints. Fear not! If you want to be free from the harassment caused by the deities, learn this sutta. It will be a theme for meditation as well as a formula for protection (paritta).

Then the Master recited the //Karaniya Metta Sutta// -- the Hymn of Universal Love -- which the monks learned by rote in the presence of the Lord. Then they went back to the same place.

As the monks neared their forest dwellings reciting the //Metta Sutta//, thinking and meditating on the underlying meaning, the hearts of the deities became so charged with warm feelings of goodwill that they materialized themselves in human form and received the monks with great piety. They took their bowls, conducted them to their rooms, caused water and food to be supplied, and then, resuming their normal form, invited them to occupy the bases of the trees and meditate without any hesitation or fear.

Further, during the three months of the rains' residence, the deities not only looked after the monks in every way but made sure that the place was completely free from any noise. Enjoying perfect silence, by the end of the rainy season all the monks attained to the pinnacle of spiritual perfection. Every one of the five hundred monks had become an Arahat.

Indeed, such is the power intrinsic in the //Metta Sutta//. Whoever with firm faith will recite the sutta, invoking the protection of the deities and meditating on metta, will not only safeguard himself in every way but will also protect all those around him, and will make spiritual progress that can be actually verified. No harm can ever befall a person who follows the path of metta.

* * *

3. Three Aspects of Metta

The //Metta Sutta// consists of three parts, each of which focuses on a distinct aspect of metta. The first part (lines 3 to 10) covers that aspect which requires a thorough and systematic application of loving-kindness in one's day-to-day conduct. The second part (lines 11 to 20) expresses loving-kindness as a distinct technique of meditation or culture of mind leading to //samadhi// -- higher consciousness induced by absorption. And the third part (lines 21 to 40) underlines a total commitment to the philosophy of universal love and its personal, social and empirical extensions -- loving-kindness through all bodily, verbal and mental activities.

Metta has been identified as that specific factor which "ripens' the accumulated merit (//punna//) acquired by the ten ways for the acquisition of merit (//dasapunna-kiriyavatthu//), such as the practice of generosity, virtue, etc. Again, it is metta which brings to maturity the ten exalted spiritual qualities known as "perfections" (//paramita//).

The practice of metta thus can be likened to bringing into being a great tree, from the time the seed is sown to the time the tree is heavily laden with luscious fruits and sends forth its sweet odor far and wide, attracting myriads of creatures to it to enjoy its tasty and nutritious bounty. The sprouting of the seed and the growth of the plant are, as it were, brought about by the first part of the sutta. In the second part the tree, robust and developed, is fully covered with fragrant and beautiful flowers, riveting all eyes upon it.

As a pattern of behavior, the first aspect of metta makes one's life grow like a tree, useful, generous and noble. Metta, as meditation, effects that spiritual efflorescence whereby one's entire life becomes a source of joy for all. The third part envisages in this imagery the fruition of that process of spiritual development whereby one brings about an all-embracing application of spiritual love which can powerfully condition society as a whole and lead one to the heights of transcendental realization.

The human mind is like a mine holding an inexhaustible storehouse of spiritual power and insight. This immense inner potential of merit can be fully exploited only by the practice of metta, as is clear from the description of metta as that "maturing force" which ripens the dormant merits. In the //Mangala Sutta// it is said that only after one has effected an elevating interpersonal relationship (by resorting to good company, etc.) does one choose the right environment for the merits of the past to find fruition. This finding of fruition is exactly what metta does. Mere avoidance of wrong company and living in a cultured environment is not enough; the mind must be cultivated by metta. Hence the allusion to the fruition of past merit.

* * *

4. The Ethics of Metta

Ethics, in the Buddhist context, is right conduct, which brings happiness and peace of mind, and never gives rise to remorse, worry or restlessness of mind. This is the immediate psychological benefit. Right conduct also leads to a happy rebirth, enabling an aspirant to progress further on the onward path to spiritual liberation. It is also the basis for progress in Dhamma here and now. In other words, right speech, right action and right livelihood of the Buddha's Noble Eightfold Path constitute right conduct in the best sense.

Buddhist ethics is twofold: fulfillment of certain virtues (//caritta//), and precepts of abstinence (//varitta//). Caritta, as found in the Metta Sutta, is as follows:

> [He] Should be able, honest and upright,
> Gentle in speech, meek and not proud.
> Contented, he ought to be easy to support,
> Not over-busy, and simple in living.
> Tranquil his senses, let him be prudent,
> And not brazen, nor fawning on families.

Varitta is covered by the next gatha:

> Also, he must refrain from any action
> That gives the wise reason to reprove him.

Caritta and varitta are thus practiced through metta expressed in bodily and verbal action; the resultant inner happiness and altruistic urge is reflected by the aspirant's metta of mental action, as found in the conclusion of the stanza:

> May all be well and secure,
> May all beings be happy!

The ethics of metta thus provides not only subjective well-being, or the opportunity to progress in Dhamma here and now and to enjoy a happy rebirth in the future, but it means the giving of fearlessness and security -- //abhayadana// and //khemadana//.

An analysis of the behavior-pattern and traits commended by the Metta Sutta for meaningful interaction, both with reference to persons individually and to society as a whole, provides ample insight into the great implications of the sutta for mental health.

Ability is not just mere efficiency or skill, but means doing a thing well, out of consideration for others, so that one may not cause inconvenience to others. As an able man can become very conceited, the practitioner is advised to be "honest and upright," while being "gentle in speech, meek and not proud" -_ indeed a perfect synthesis and an equilibrium of traits.

He who is //contented// is "easy to support." Frugality, from consideration of others, is a noble trait. To the extent that one's own needs are cut down as an example to others and as a means not to inconvenience them, to that extent one shows refinement. The more gross and materialistic a person becomes, the more his needs increase. The yardstick to judge the mental health of a given society is thus the diminution of needs, that is to say, the element of satisfaction.

A materialistic and egocentric life is characterized not only by an increase in wants but also by //restlessness//, showing itself in being over-busy and overactive and lacking in moderation and self-restraint. Metta, which promotes the well-being of all, naturally has to be built on such qualities of sober humanism as are reflected in having a few meaningful and select tasks which conduce to the maximum well-being of all concerned.

Living a //simple life// as an expression of metta involves a reorientation of one's outlook and conduct, even in our competitive, pleasure-seeking and possession-minded world. A man of simple living is gentle, yet efficient and effective, and has restraint over his sense-faculties, being moderate, frugal and controlled. Mental culture through meditation for such a person becomes natural and effortless: hence the attribute "tranquil in his senses."

Metta in conduct includes the exercising of //prudence//, that is to say, practical wisdom. It is only a sagacious and wise person who can really practice metta in all its varied forms in daily life, and through all modes of human relationship. Self-righteousness, arising from a sense of being better or more devout than others, can be (and often is) a masquerade of spiritual practice. To be "not brazen, nor fawning on families" thus is a pointer for the person of metta not to indulge in self-righteousness of any form.

Further, the practitioner of metta is advised //to refrain from any action//, even social conventions, //for which a wise man may reprove him// as lacking in prudence or propriety. It is not good enough that one should be good, but one should also appear to be good, in consideration not only of one's own well-being but also of others' well-being. An exemplary life is to be lived for the benefit of all, for the welfare of society.

A person living thus now plunges into the cultivation of the all-embracing mind of metta through definite techniques of meditation as envisaged in the remaining part of the sutta.

Metta is also called a //paritta// -- a spiritual formula capable of safeguarding one's well-being, protecting one against all dangers, and rescuing one from mishaps and misfortunes.

When the monks could not stay and meditate in that beautiful forest provided with all facilities because the deities were hostile to them, they had to leave the place. And when they were armed with the protection of the Metta Sutta, which they recited and meditated upon throughout their journey, by the time they reached the place, the deities were full of friendly feelings and already waiting for them. Hostility had been turned into hospitality.

The protection of paritta works both subjectively and objectively. Subjectively, as metta cleanses and strengthens the mind, it also awakens the dormant potentials, resulting in the spiritual transmutation of the personality. Transformed by metta, the mind is no longer haunted by greed, hatred, lust, jealousy and those other mind-polluting factors which are one's real enemy and source of misfortune.

Objectively, metta as a thought-force is capable of affecting any mind anywhere, developed or undeveloped. The radiation of metta can not only calm a person or remove the darts of hate from within him, but in some cases can even cure him of severe illness. It is a common experience in Buddhist countries to see how people are cured from all sorts of diseases and freed from misfortunes through the recitation of paritta. Thus metta is a real healing power. In this way does metta act as a paritta, a healing formula affording safeguards.

* * *

5. The Psychology of Metta

The Pali commentaries explain:

One loves all beings:

(a) by the non-harassment of all beings and thus avoids harassment;

(b) by being inoffensive (to all beings) and thus avoids offensiveness;

(c) by not torturing (all beings) and thus avoids torturing;

(d) by the non-destruction (of all life) and thus avoids destructiveness;

(e) by being non-vexing (to all beings) and thus avoids vexing;

(f) by projecting the thought, "May all beings be friendly and not hostile";

(g) by projecting the thought," May all beings be happy and not unhappy";

(h) by projecting the thought, "May all beings enjoy well-being and not be distressed."

In these eight ways one loves all beings; therefore, it is called universal love. And since one conceives (within) this quality (of love), it is of the mind. And since this mind is free from all thoughts of ill-will, the aggregate of love, mind and freedom is defined as //universal love leading to freedom of mind//.

From the above passage it will be seen that metta implies the "outgrowing" of negative traits by actively putting into practice the correlative positive virtues. It is only when one actively practices non-harassment towards all beings that one can outgrow the tendency to harass others. Similarly, it is with the other qualities of inoffensiveness, non-tormenting, non-destroying and non-vexing in deed, word and thought that one can outgrow the negative traits of being offensive, of tormenting others, of destructiveness and of vexatiousness. Over and above such positive conduct and principled way of life, one further cultivates the mind through that specific technique of meditation called //metta-bhavana//, which generates powerful thoughts of spiritualized love that grow boundless, making consciousness itself infinite and universal.

Thoughts that wish all beings to be friendly and never hostile, happy and never unhappy, to enjoy well-being and never be distressed, imply not only sublimity and boundlessness, but also utter freedom of mind. Hence the appropriateness of the expression "universal love leading to freedom of mind."

As for the meanings of the five aspects opposed by metta, //harassment// is the desire to oppress or damage; //offensiveness// is the tendency to hurt or injure; //torturing// is a synonym of the sadistic tendency to torment, subjecting others to pain or misery; //destructiveness// is to put an end to or to finish, the trait of the extremist and the iconoclast; //vexing// is to tax, trouble or cause others worry and strain. Each of these tendencies is rooted in antipathy and malevolence, and provides a contrast with metta, both as a mode of conduct and as a psychological state or attitude of mind.

The substitution of a negative trait by the opposed positive course implies a very developed and mature approach to life. The ability to remain non-harassing, inoffensive, non-torturing, non-destructive and non-vexing means a very refined, beautiful and loving mode of behavior in a world where interaction between human beings creates so much tension and misery.

According to the //Visuddhimagga//, metta is a "solvent" that "melts" not only one's own psychic pollutants of anger, resentment and offensiveness, but also those of others. Since it takes the approach of friendship, even the hostile one turns into a friend.

Metta is characterized as that which "promotes welfare." Its function is to "prefer well-being" rather than ill. It manifests as a force that "removes annoyance" and its proximate cause is the tendency to see the good side of things and beings and never the faults. Metta succeeds when it loves, and it fails when it degenerates into worldly affection.

It will be clear from this analysis that only when one tends to see the good in people, and prefers the welfare of others, and accordingly is inoffensive (to remove any annoyance or hurt) and actively promotes well-being, does metta function as a solvent. It is said that the ultimate purpose of metta is to attain transcendental insight, and if that is not possible, it will at least effect a rebirth in the sublime sphere of the Brahma world, apart from bringing inner peace and a healthy state of mind here and now. Hence the Buddha's assurance in the //Metta Sutta//:

Holding no more to wrong beliefs,
With virtue and vision of the ultimate,
And having overcome all sensual desire,
Never in a womb is he born again.

Love wards off ill-will, which is the most damaging of emotions. Hence it is said: "For this is the escape from ill-will, friends, that is to say, the freedom of mind wrought by universal love" (Digha Nikaya, III. 234).

In the practice of metta it is important to understand the emotions which nullify metta either by being similar or being dissimilar. The //Visuddhimagga// calls them "the two enemies -- the near and the remote." Greed, lust, worldly affection, sensuality -- all these are said to be the "near enemies" because they are similar in tendencies. The lustful also sees the "good side" or "beauty," and therefore gets involved. Love should be protected from it lest the masquerades of these emotions deceive the meditator.

Ill-will, anger and hatred, being dissimilar emotions, therefore constitute the "remote enemy." The remote enemy can easily be distinguished so one need not be afraid of it, but one should overcome it by projecting a higher force, that of love. But one has to be wary of the near enemy because it creates self-deception, which is the worst thing that can happen to an individual.

It is said that metta begins only when there is zeal in the form of a desire to act. Having commenced through earnest effort, it can be continued only when the five mental hindrances -- sensual desire, ill-will, sloth and torpor, restlessness and worry, and doubt -- are put down. Metta reaches consummation with the attainment of absorption (//jhana//).

* * *

6. Meditation on Metta

There are various ways of practicing metta-bhavana, the meditation on universal love. Three of the principal methods will be explained here. These instructions, based on canonical and commentarial sources, are intended to explain the practice of metta-meditation in a clear, simple and direct way so that anyone who is earnest about taking up the practice will have no doubts about how to proceed. For full instructions on the theory and practice of metta-bhavana the reader is referred to the //Visuddhimagga//, Chapter IX.

METHOD 1

Sit down in a comfortable posture in a quiet place -- a shrine room, a quiet room, a park, or any other place providing privacy and silence. Keeping the eyes closed, repeat the word "metta" a few times and mentally conjure up its significance -- love as the opposite of hatred, resentment, malevolence, impatience, pride and arrogance, and as a profound feeling of good will, sympathy and kindness promoting the happiness and well-being of others.

Now visualize your own face in a happy and radiant mood. Every time you see your face in the mirror, see yourself in a happy mood and put yourself in this mood during meditation. A person in a happy mood cannot become angry or harbor negative thoughts and feelings. Having visualized yourself in a happy frame of mind, now charge yourself with the thought; "May I be free from hostility, free from affliction, free from distress; may I live happily." As you suffuse yourself in this way with the positive thought-force of love, you become like a filled vessel, its contents ready to overflow in all directions.

Next, visualize your meditation teacher, if living; if not, choose some other living teacher or revered person. See him in a happy frame of mind and project the thought: "May my teacher be free from hostility, free from affliction, free from distress; may he live happily."

Then think of other people who are to be revered, and who are also living -- monks, teachers, parents and elders, and intensely spread towards each one of them the thought of metta in the manner mentioned already: "May they be free from hostility, free from affliction, free from distress; may they live happily."

The visualization must be clear and the thought-radiation must be "willed" well. If the visualization is hurried or the wishing is performed in a perfunctory or mechanical way, the practice will be of little avail, for then it will be merely an intellectual pastime of //thinking about// metta. One must clearly understand that to //think about// metta is one thing, and to //do// metta, to actively project the will-force of loving-kindness, is quite another.

Note that only a living person is to be visualized, not a dead one. The reason for this is that the dead person, having changed form, will be out of the focus of metta-projection. The object of metta always is a living being, and the thought-force will become ineffective if the object is not alive.

